Welfare cheat says $2,400 a month 'easy to get'

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

She started cheating on welfare at the age of 17, and for seven years she kept it up—most of the time getting two checks at the same time.

She has no children, yet she was paid for having anywhere from two to four.

She was getting paid for being single—yet she wasn't.

The fraud was so easy that when she was cut off—after someone had informed on her—it took her only a day to get back on the welfare rolls.

"If you quit your job today," she says, "In two days I could get you more money from welfare than you're making now. You could be pulling in $2,400 a month at least."

And she knows how. She's done it.

"One of my friends—in fact she's a relative—is collecting welfare for herself and three kids she doesn't have . . . she's working as a secretary and her husband works on the docks. They are collecting about $2,600 a month.

"They could be making more, if they'd apply for more than one welfare check.

"But they don't need the money right now."

Speaking is an articulate 26-year-old woman who comes from an upper-middle-class Long Beach family and is currently being prosecuted in Los Angeles for welfare fraud. Her identity could jeopardize her chances for paying only retribution, something she feels she will be required to do to forstall going to prison. Now married, she voluntarily left the welfare rolls two years ago, yet because of an angry former friend, her arrest came only last month.

"I can show you three people right now, who live within a block of here, who are collecting welfare illegally. But it's so easy to do. I'm surprised there aren't more people on welfare."

She first applied for welfare in San Francisco, she says, on the advice of a friend.

"I borrowed a little girl and walked into the welfare office. I told them I had moved from a different state and she gave me a check that day—but it was easier then; now you have to wait a day."

She collected her checks for 2½ months until she was asked to produce a birth certificate for her "child."

"I didn't know how to make a birth certificate then, so I took off."

She moved to Los Angeles and subsequently learned to use white tape and a xerox machine and in one case used a birth certificate out of the back of an issue of Baby Talk Magazine to document her nonexistent children.

She found work as a secretary, but continued to receive welfare checks amounting to $1,200 a month.

At one point a friend turned enemy and reported her to welfare officials and one of her checks was cut off.

Carter, Ford down to wire

By R.W. APPLE Jr.
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — President Ford has drawn almost even with Jimmy Carter in one of the closest presidential races of this century, leaving the Georgia Democrat with only a precarious advantage as the campaign entered its climactic 48 hours.

In a half-dozen crucial states, the candidates' own polls showed them only a percentage point or two apart. The chief tacticians in both camps agreed that the election was poised on a knife-edge, and analysts across the country were unwilling to hazard predictions.

The final national survey by the New York Times and CBS News gave Carter a slight lead, but for the first time in the campaign the contest was too close to be certain who was really ahead. A poll by Louis Harris of ABC News showed Carter clinging to an even narrower lead of 1 percentage point.

"THERE IS NOW a real possibility that Ford could win," conceded Robert S. Strauss, the Democratic national chairman. "But it's hard to make a three-horse parlay, and that's what the President needs — all the close ones. I'd still bet on Carter, although I wouldn't bet the family farm."

The Times-CBS News poll, which was completed Wednesday, indicated that Ford's comeback, one of the most striking in modern American political history, had been built on his ability to swing vacillating independents behind him.

With both camps increasingly nervous, rival strategists were pondering four factors that hold the key: Momentum, turnout, the distribution of the undecided voters and electoral vote.

Momentum: Although Ford has unquestionably gained ground in the past few days, his gains have not been uniform (Michigan, for example, has been moving away from him). To win, he needs to make his advances more general and to keep gaining right up until the polls open on Tuesday.

Turnout: Because theirs is the majority party, the Democrats usually benefit from large turnouts. Despite numerous signs of apathy earlier in the campaign, late registration figures and growing crowds suggest that the campaign is catching on at last. Organized labor and black leaders will try to turn out the voters that Carter needs most.

Undecided voters: The Times-CBS News poll indicates that the undecided group exceeds 10 per cent, an extraordinarily high figure for this stage. As many as half of these may not vote, according to the survey. The more who do, probably the better for Carter, since they tend to be relatively poor (63 per cent earn less than $12,000 a year), relatively ill-educated (47 per cent did not finish high school) and relatively Democratic in habit.

Campaign torrid in big states

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press

Running neck and neck with just days to go, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter campaigned hard Saturday in states with the fat electoral bounties that make presidents. Ford said he'll win; Carter's people said they saw promise in their own vote projections.

"I had not been confirmed by your ballots, but since have been supported by your prayers," said Ford, who preceded Carter into Texas by hours. "I ask you on Tuesday, Nov. 2, not only to support me with your prayers, but to support me with your ballots."

He saw encouragement in the crowd of 6,000 that heard him in Houston. "With a rally like this in Texas," Ford said, "I feel we're going to win and win overwhelmingly on Tuesday."

Carter, cognizant of the delicately balanced polls, made no such claim. But his press secretary, Jody Powell, said Carter's own vote projections are "certainly encouraging."

Powell said if Carter wins the southern and border states, as well as the traditional Democratic states, he would need to carry only three of nine states that are rated tossups. Among those are New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio—all late targets of both campaigns.

Stopping over in New Orleans on his way to Texas, Carter was greeted by 12,000 to 15,000 people who jammed the narrow streets of the French Quarter. He rode in an open-top convertible for five blocks, then walked another two to the accompaniment of Dejan's Olympic Brass Band.

"I think it's time we had a southerner back in the White House again," he said.

If you forgot, it's not as late as you think

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — In case you forgot again, daylight savings time ended this morning at 2 a.m. when it was time for clocks to "fall back" an hour. You won't have to worry about it again for six months — unless Congress changes things.

Time ran out this year on congressional efforts to stretch daylight saving, or advanced time, to seven months, but it was a near miss. Several proposals to expand — and some to contract — daylight saving are expected to be introduced when Congress reconvenes in January.

Near the end of this congressional session, a bill reached the House floor that would have placed the nation on daylight saving from the third Sunday in March through the third Sunday of October. Earlier in the year, the Senate had approved legislation that would have turned clocks ahead one hour on the second Sunday of March and back on the second Sunday of October.

But the House measure — which its backers said the Senate would accept — was brought up under a short-cut procedure that requires approval by two-thirds, instead of a simple majority. When the bill mustered only a one-vote margin in a preliminary test, it was withdrawn rather risk its defeat.

Many stress deaths laid to joblessness

By NANCY HICKS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A congressional study released Saturday suggests that a substantial number of the suicides, murders and other deaths from 1970 to 1975 were traceable to an increase of 1.4 percentage points in unemployment in 1970.

The Joint Economic Committee released the study, which said that at least 26,000 deaths from the stress-related diseases of stroke and kidney and heart ailments, at least 1,500 of the suicides and 1,700 of the homicides during that five-year period were related to unemployment.

The stress-related deaths were 2.7 per cent of the total deaths from those diseases, the suicides 5.7 per cent of the total and the homicides 8 per cent.

THE COMMITTEE findings are based on the work of Prof. M. Harvey Brenner of Johns Hopkins University, who has been studying the relationship between unemployment and certain health indicators for almost 15 years. His work has been expanded in this study for the committee to give it a way to estimate the cost in human suffering of people being out of work.

"Overall, it is evident that significant relationships exist between economic policy and measures of national well-being," said Brenner of his study, which included an analysis of 40 years of statistics for the United States, studies of the patterns of health and unemployment in three states and the relationships between such factors in other developed countries.

"The study indicates that actions which influence national economic activity — especially unemployment rates — have substantial bearing on physical health, mental health and criminal aggression," his summary says.

Commissioned for the committee by the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress, the study uses techniques drawn from the public-health sector in finding "risk factors" for total mortality; deaths caused by stroke and heart and kidney diseases; homicides; suicides; deaths from liver cirrhosis, an alcohol-related illness; admission to mental hospitals, and increases in state-prison populations.

Although it tries to filter out causes unrelated to economic factors for such increases, the study shows a statistical correlation but not a direct cause-and-effect relation, its author and sponsor warn.

The committee's announcement says, however, that the study shows "a direct link between

Alaska gas pipeline worth fighting for

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

If freshmen and senior members of the new 95th Congress can anticipate anything next year, it will be what bureaucrats and energy company executives are billing as a winner-take-all battle of the lobbyists over an energy delivery system little understood by the American public.

The first volley has already been fired at the White House.

President Ford signed a bill Oct. 22 greasing the ways for choosing a route for delivery of natural gas from Alaska to the "lower 48."

The Alaska Natural Gas Transportation Act was passed Oct. 1 in the waning hours of the 94th Congress, supported by all three corporations thirsting after the delivery license.

With one eye fixed on Tuesday's election results, Ford has likened the Gas Transportation Act to another 10 yards in his downfield drive toward the nation's energy-independent goal line.

Opposed until a late hour by Frank G. Zarb, the federal energy administrator, the bill prefaces an ambitious project — bigger, costlier and far more necessary than the much-touted Alaskan oil pipeline.

Alaska's popularized resources were once gold and now oil. These riches pale next to the vast amounts of natural gas known to exist beneath the frozen tundra.

Geologists are certain there are 26 trillion cubic feet of gas in proven reserves beneath Alaska. Threshold reserves could be 30 trillion cubic feet, and the educated guess is that there is even more offshore under the polar cap and in the Canadian Arctic Islands.

Zarb and some Interior Department officials said they disapproved of the Gas Transportation Act because it reserves to Congress the final decision on a route and it mandates deliveries of Alaskan natural gas both east and west of the Rocky Mountains.

It also strengthens the power of the Council on Environmental Quality to influence the decision, another thorn in Zarb's side.

The Federal Power Commission (FPC) has until May 1, 1977, to send its recommendation on which of three delivery plans it favors. The President then has up to 180 days to pass on the FPC

Smiling HHH quits hospital

Combined News Services

NEW YORK — Smiling and shaking hands down the line, Sen. Hubert Humphrey left Memorial Sloan Kettering Hospital "feeling wonderful" and anxious to get back on the job.

The Minnesota Democrat told reporters crowded into the lobby of the hospital Saturday afternoon, "The doctors say I'm in good shape, and they say that I'm in better shape than I ought to be."

Humphrey flew to Washington, where he said said he would rest for a few days. He said he anticipated "campaigning, walking, swimming," adding with a chuckle, "and God only knows I'll be out talking."

He plans to use his time "preparing for the Senate — that is, if the votes are right on Tuesday."

Humphrey, who is favored to win his bid for re-election although he hasn't been able to campaign because of his hospitalization, said he is sure he can serve another six-year term.

He also said he still plans to seek the post of Senate majority leader.

The former vice president underwent a six hour operation on Oct. 7 for removal of a cancerous bladder, regional lymph nodes and much of the uretha.

A hospital spokesman said that Humphrey will continue chemotherapy treatment at a local hospital in Washington.

Liz returns to U.S.

Actress Elizabeth Taylor was warmly greeted in Washington by her fiance, former government official John Warner, and his daughter Mary Saturday when she returned to the U.S. after working on a film in Vienna, Austria.

There has been speculation that Miss Taylor and Warner would soon wed. But the couple refused to disclose their plans and Miss Warner also said that the wedding plans had not been completed. Warner will be Miss Taylor's sixth husband.

Both Miss Taylor and Warner seemed reluctant to talk with reporters. As she emerged from an airplane whose arrival at Dulles International Airport had been delayed 50 minutes, Miss Taylor said: "I'm just happy to be on the ground again."

Warner's comment was: "I just want to get back to the farm with my bride."

Warner is a former head of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration and a former secretary of the Navy.

Pope meets Lutherans

The Vatican said Saturday that Pope Paul VI had accepted from a delegation of Lutherans a facsimile edition of the Bible translated by Martin Luther, the German Protestant leader excommunicated by Roman Catholicism in 1521.

The Pope's acceptance of the copy of the 1545 Luther Bible and the three-day visit by a delegation from the Lutheran World Federation were seen as steps toward improving relations between the two religious groups.

It was not believed that the eight-member Lutheran delegation raised the issue of the excommunication of the Reformation figure.

Recently some elements within the Catholic Church have suggested reviewing the excommunication. They hold the idea of it being possibly lifted one day in a grand gesture of ecumenism, along the lines of the Orthodox and Catholic reconciliation after the Vatican Ecumenical Council in 1965.

Korean denies bribes

South Korean businessman Park Tong-sun Saturday denied allegations that he had bribed U.S. congressmen and government officials and had misused Food for Peace aid funds.

"Absolutely not," Park replied when asked if it was true he had offered gifts in an effort to favorably influence American policy and actions toward South Korea.

Park was interviewed while he waited for a flight to London after arriving in Paris on a flight from Tokyo, via Moscow.

Asked about the alleged misuse of Food for Peace funds, Park replied: "Those questions will be eventually answered when I return to the States." He said he would be going back "as soon as my business is over," but did not specify a date.

Park and other South Koreans in the United States are said to be the focus of a wide-ranging U.S. Justice Department investigation into South Korean lobbying activities.

According to some accounts, South Korean agents have dispensed $500,000 to $1 million yearly since 1970 in cash and gifts to congressmen and U.S. officials. As many as 90 present and former members of Congress are reportedly under investigation.

Colorado kids can't forget

Killer flood a lingering nightmare

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Eleven-year-old Rory Adams weeps at night for his dad. Schoolmate Kevin Bray still thinks about his dead girlfriend. Doug Nolde can't forget carrying out the bodies.

For the children of the Big Thompson Elementary School, the flood that crushed many of their homes last July 31 is a nightmare.

At least 139 persons died when rain swelled the normally placid Big Thompson River and forced a wall of water as high as 19 feet through the canyon. Millions of dollars in property was destroyed.

Heavy rains still spook the children of this Rocky Mountain community, said the elementary school principal, Dr. Dave Mathias. "When it clouds up, I have several little kids come running in here," he said.

The school — called Big T — lost seven children to the water, Mathias said. The other 360 remember their dead classmates, but they don't say a lot about them.

"I heard one kid say, 'Ricky used to sit there,' but that's about it," Mathias said. Ricky Mares and his family drowned.

Mathias is emotional when he remembers his first meeting with young Adams, who lost his father in the flood:

"He came in to register himself. He came up to me, stuck out his hand and said, 'I'm Rory Adams. I lost my dad.' He put his arms around me and said: 'Would you be my dad?'"

Even with Mathias' help, it has been a tough adjustment for Rory. "Me, my mom and brother, we cry a lot for him at night," the blond fifth-grader said, clutching a battered saxophone case. "We sometimes think we aren't going to make it without him."

The chunky youngster lived in the flatlands just outside the mouth of the Big Thompson Canyon.

"We had just got back from seeing (the movie) 'Noah's Ark'," he recalled. "We heard the police cars warning everybody to get out. He was trying to herd our cow and cattle back. I didn't know it would be the last time I'd see him.

"It's been pretty bad. My mom's just had an operation. We're Christians. I guess it was what God wanted."

Kevin Bray lost his girlfriend, Theresa Graham, to the floodwaters.

"She was my girlfriend all last year," the thin fourth-grader said. "I think about her when it rains. I found a new girlfriend, but I still think about her."

Doug Nolde's tale is different.

"Me and my dad helped carry out bodies," the 9-year-old Cub Scout recounted. "I had to be a brace underneath one. It was a nightmare.

"I think about it. One time it rained here, I thought it would flood again. But it doesn't bother me anymore."

The youngster's brave tones were undermined by nervous fidgeting with the silver wolf badge on his blue uniform.

The experience has matured many of the children beyond their years, Mathias said, and their emotional needs have rubbed off on one another. The kids are visibly close, whether romping on the playground or walking through halls. Hands hold hands. Arms drape affectionately around shoulders.

"Our kids need a lot of love," Mathias said.

Quake relief stalled

Combined News Services

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Reports reached here Saturday that a severe earthquake that jolted remote mountain jungles at the center of the island of New Guinea destroyed buildings, caused a major landslide and killed at least 20 persons.

Rough terrain and poor communications hampered relief efforts and limited information from the stricken area.

A report from Jayapura, capital of the Indonesian Province of Irian Baya, said two of six members of a helicopter relief team sent to the area were lost in the jungle.

Friday's quake was reported centered 150 miles south of Jayapura, in mountains ranging up to the 15,420-foot peak of Puncak Mandala. Parts of the area have been barely touched by civilization and natives live in Stone Age conditions.

More than 1,000 persons perished when an earthquake shook the same region last June.

Friday's shock registered 6.5 on the Richter scale, compared with the 7.1 recorded by the June quake.

Fire hits ship

BOSTON — The Italian freighter Pia Costa, her hold ravaged by fire Saturday, will be examined by marine experts to determine if the 550-foot cargo ship is still seaworthy.

Fire Commissioner George H. Paul estimated damage to the ship at $150,000 to $200,000. He said it would take engineers two to three days to determine the amount of structural damage to the 10,000-ton vessel.

The ship was docked at Commonwealth Pier, its 40-member crew on board waiting to leave for New York at 10 a.m., when thick black smoke began pouring out of the lower deck.

Paul said the fire was confined to one of the ship's six holds. The hold was filled with bales of rags picked up the previous day in Norfolk, Va.

However, two forward adjoining holds were loaded with highly flammable tallow — animal fat used to make candles.

Sailor in distress

NEW YORK — A Dutch tugboat received a distress message Saturday from a young sailor who had not been heard from for 17 days when he reported hull damage in the mid-Atlantic, the Coast Guard said.

The sailor, Bob Gainer of Hillsdale, N.J., was trying to solo around the world.

The Mayday message said the 23-year-old Gainer was drifting without sail or power about 500 miles east of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The Coast Guard said the ocean-going tugboat was en route to the sailboat. The Coast Guard dispatched a C130 aircraft from Elizabeth City, N.C., to San Juan to begin an aerial search today.

Blaze guts jail

BUSHNELL, Fla. — Twenty-two prisoners were evacuated Saturday when fire broke out at the Sumter County Jail, officials said. A spokesman said the two-story building was gutted by the blaze.

"It's a miracle that nobody was injured because it went so fast," said police officer Jim Fugate of Wildwood. "The jailers did a remarkable job of getting the prisoners out."

Elections postponed

NEW DELHI, India — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government, insisting that subversive forces remain a dangerous threat to the security of India, announced Saturday that it was postponing national elections for at least one more year.

Law Minister H.R. Gokhale acknowledged to Parliament that the postponement might be "temporarily unpopular," but he denied allegations by Mrs. Gandhi's leftist and rightist opponents that there was widespread uneasiness about the course she has charted for India since proclaiming a national emergency 16 months ago.

Air piracy charged

MUNICH, West Germany — Police said Saturday that they had formally charged 26-year-old Rudolf Becvar with "an attack against air traffic" in the hijacking Thursday of a Czechoslovakian domestic airliner with 110 persons aboard.

After the four-engined turboprop's return to Prague from the 5½-hour forced stopover in West Germany, Czechoslovak authorities said Becvar was wanted at home for the shooting death of his brother Stepan and several other crimes, including an attack on a taxi driver. No one aboard the hijacked plane was hurt.

Skirts an issue

TOKYO — Skirts of Japanese policewomen will henceforth cover the knee, largely because some policemen say its hard to keep from observing the knees of their female colleagues.

A National Police Agency announcement said skirts for Japan's 6,600 policewomen, many of them assigned to checking traffic, will be about two inches below the knees.

Skirts of Tokyo policewomen now average about two inches above the knee. Authorities said male police have confessed to being tempted to look.

'Nazi's' ouster sought

CHICAGO — The executive committee of the National Council of Churches in an emergency meeting Saturday sought to suspend an alleged former Nazi commandant from its governing board.

Archbishop Valerian Trifa, a bishop of the Rumanian Orthodox Episcopate of America, has denied charges that he participated in Nazi war crimes.

Questions surrounding his past surfaced three weeks ago at national council meetings in New York City. Bishop Trifa, who lives in Grass Lake, Mich., is a member of the National Council of Church's governing board.

He is one of six Orthodox delegates to the board of the council, an interfaith association of churches embracing 40 million members.

American Jewish groups have sought Bishop Trifa's removal or suspension, contending that his presence on the board would "seriously compromise the moral credibility of the National Council."

SIDS research

Please give me the names of where I could contribute some money toward the research in the prevention of crib deaths, as a memorial to a dear friend. V.S., Long Beach.

Donations may be made payable to the National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) Foundation, 17141 Bircher St., Granada Hills, Calif. 91344. One out of every 350 babies will die of SIDS, commonly known as "crib death." There are nearly as many theories as there are persons researching the mystery affliction, in which infants die unexpectedly, quietly and for no apparent cause in their sleep. But no one has been able to predict or prevent SIDS. It was recently discovered, for instance, that SIDS runs in families. Brothers and sisters of an infant afflicted with SIDS have five times the normal chance of being struck down. Last March, failure of chemoreceptors, which measure the oxygen content in the blood, thereby regulating the unconscious act of breathing, tentatively were blamed for SIDS. In September, researchers questioned the position of the baby's head and its relationship to SIDS. They wondered whether the airway was obstructed by pressure from the baby's head on the mattress. Another doctor hypothesized that cases of infant botulism, where botulism spores were ingested by the baby through the air— not food—and developed into toxins in the infant's intestines, were a possible cause of SIDS. Last year another doctor suggested that SIDS was caused by heart failure and cardiac rhythm abnormalities. Research continues in an effort to find the cause of the disease, which claims one child every 53 minutes worldwide.

Wit

I am an avid reader of Erma Bombeck's column, "At Wit's End." I understand she has written several books. I was wondering if they are in paperback form, and if you could help me locate copies of them. J.A.B., Long Beach

Three of Erma Bombeck's books, "I Lost Everything in the Post-Natal Depression" ($1.25), "At Wit's End" ($1.50) and "Just Wait Till You Have Children of Your Own" ($1.25), are available in paperback at the Book Barn, 240 Pine Ave., Long Beach. Her newest book, "The Grass Is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank" ($6.95 in hardback), can be found at Pickwick Books, 5037 Hazelbrook Ave., Lakewood. Mrs. Bombeck began writing her three-times-a-week column in late 1967. The column, which she says helps her female readers laugh at themselves, is among the most widely read in the country. She denies being a typical suburban housewife, because she says she hasn't lost her identity, as the women's magazines say she should have. In her own words, "I do my own housework (carp about it hourly), take oil-painting lessons and handle the family budget (which is why we move a lot)." She says her column helps her put her own life in perspective: "It's good that women are able to laugh at themselves. I'd be out of a job if they didn't."

Tours

I work in a children's home in Long Beach, and sometimes it's a problem to find inexpensive places to take our kids for holidays and weekends. Could you give us some information on places we could go that would not only be fun but maybe educational. V.R., Long Beach.

Every Sunday the Independent, Press-Telegram publishes the City Recreation Department's calendar of activities, some of which may be of interest to you. Also the Long Beach Convention and News Bureau publishes a calendar of citywide events monthly. In addition to listing events that charge admission, it notes free activities. You can get on the bureau's monthly mailing list by calling Robin Horn at 436-1236. For educational trips, the Long Beach Unified School District publishes a catalog of educational field trips for elementary grades. It outlines excursions to such places as the harbor, a small animal farm, a post office, dairies, museums and others. It also details how to set up such trips, whom to contact and the maximum number of children per trip. The catalog can be seen in the public-information office at School District headquarters, Seventh Street and Locust Avenue.

Airline's demands irk pilots

Associated Press

Continental Airlines' position that striking pilots must lower their demands before talks can resume was called "disappointing" by a pilots' spokesman Saturday in Los Angeles.

The reply by Continental to an Air Line Pilots Association offer to negotiate had not, however, been officially received by ALPA, said Capt. Richard Engle.

An ALPA telegram Friday informed Continental that the pilots were willing to meet with management in an effort to resolve the strike, which entered its eighth day Saturday.

Late Friday, Continental Chairman Robert Six said in reply, "If the pilot negotiating committee has dramatically revised its demands, they should advise the National Mediation Board, who will evaluate the new position and make the judgment whether it would be reasonable for the two parties to meet."

THE strike, said to be costing the airline more than $1.6 million per day, has grounded all Continental flights, and all service has been canceled through Friday.

Reward in officer-killing case now totals $20,000

It has been 10 months and 17 days since Long Beach Police Officer Franke Neal Lewis was shot down as he approached a car parked in the 6300 block of Cantel Street to investigate a disturbance at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 14, 1975.

With additional funds pledged by the Long Beach Police Officers Association, reward money offered in the case now has reached the highest figure listed by Secret Witness since the program was inaugurated by The Independent, Press-Telegram in June 1972.

A total of $20,000 is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the officer's killer, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness, $10,000 from state funds pledged by Gov. Brown and $8,000—increased from $5,000—pledged by the Long Beach Police Officers Association.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 from 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif., 90844.

Two Southland men were injured seriously Saturday when their small plane lost power at 2,000 feet and slammed into a Torrance landfill, authorities said.

The pilot, Leon Brodsky, 55, of Los Angeles, was listed in critical condition at Torrance Memorial Hospital, where he was awaiting surgery. His passenger, Michael Lee, 21, of 3654 Linden Ave., Long Beach, was treated for numerous cuts and abrasions.

Brodsky told county firemen his plane, a four-place Piper Aero 200, lost oil pressure at 2,000 feet about 12:30 p.m. He said he told the Torrance control tower he was gliding in without power.

The airplane, which Brodsky had just purchased and was flying on a shakedown flight, crashed into a landfill two minutes later in the 26000 block of South Crenshaw Boulevard, three miles short of the Torrance airport.

The plane lost its right wing and suffered heavy airframe damage, authorities said.

Pedestrian killed by car

A Norwalk pedestrian was fatally injured Friday night when he was struck by a car while crossing Imperial Highway, sheriff's deputies reported Saturday.

Luis Cuedas, 38, 12343 Crewe St., died at 9:43 p.m. at Studebaker Hospital in Norwalk.

He was hit near Roeston Avenue soon after 7 p.m. by an eastbound car driven by Sue Mishimura, 18, of Norwalk.

Veterans' vigil ends Monday

Associated Press

Veterans who have occupied Sen. John V. Tunney's Los Angeles office since Veteran's Day said Saturday they would end their vigil Monday morning because they don't want to prejudice Tuesday's election.

The veterans, mostly from the Vietnam war, began camping in the office Monday, demanding statements from all the presidential candidates listing what each would do about veterans' problems.

A spokeswoman said Saturday that if the veterans haven't heard from all the candidates by Monday morning they'll give up.

"Our purpose was to meet with the candidates, and we figured if they hadn't contacted us by Monday they were not going to contact us at all," said Loretta Smith.

THE veterans have heard from Democrat Jimmy Carter and Peace and Freedom Party candidate Dr. Benjamin Spock.

The group expected to meet today with independent presidential candidate Eugene McCarthy.

One of the veterans, Ron Blitzer, said the group still had not heard from President Ford, despite repeated attempts to contact him.

Swine-flu clinics set to open in L.A.

Associated Press

Swine-flu inoculation clinics for the general public will open in Los Angeles County Monday, although no decision will be made until Nov. 5 on whether children from 3 to 18 will be given the vaccine.

More than 90,000 elderly and other high-risk persons were vaccinated last week, a lower turnout than health officials had hoped for, but still higher than in other parts of the country.

Hayakawa writes a new book of political 'rules'

By BOB EGELKO

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If Republican S.I. Hayakawa unseats U.S. Sen. John Tunney Tuesday, the political rule book will have to be rewritten. Hayakawa has left it in tatters.

For example, conventional political wisdom says that, in the final stages of a close race like this one, you're not supposed to take any chances.

"I didn't know that was a rule," says the semanticist, who in the past week has lived up to his self-description as a "Republican unpredictable" by:

—Giving a free-wheeling and apparently spontaneous talk on sexual relationships and pornography, including a detailed and articulate description of the reasons people go to bed together.

—Suggesting that the United States consider sending troops to southern Africa, either through the United Nations or on its own, if a bloodbath were imminent.

—Saying the U.S. should encourage uprisings in Eastern Europe, though he conceded they would probably be crushed, and also that in the event of an uprising the U.S. should threaten to send troops.

Other unwritten rules say you shouldn't take positions that allow your opponent to portray you as indecisive or heartless.

It was easy for Tunney to make those characterizations of Hayakawa's habit early in the campaign of saying "I don't know" to questions on the economy, child labor and World War II U.S. internment camps.

Hayakawa says the minimum wage should be reduced for teen-agers -- to as low as $1.50 an hour — and some child-labor laws scrapped so employers will hire young people. And he says the internment camps, though wrong and cruel, turned out to benefit Japanese-Americans.

IN THEIR FIRST televised debate, Hayakawa spent much of the time defending those positions instead of attacking, as a nonincumbent is supposed to. He did better in the second debate, until the troops-to-Africa subject came up.

His speeches, too, defy convention.

Delivered in a soft, almost singsong voice, they often include a classroom-style lecture on the differences between the parties, complete with references to "outsider psychology."

New proposals sometimes take the form of "just-suppose" speculation. On those occasions, he can get testy when pressed later for specifics.

But the continued closeness of opinion polls — 45 to 43 in Tunney's favor in the California Poll last week — and the reactions of audiences to the little man in the tam-o'-shanter suggest that Hayakawa may be immune to conventional political taboos.

"Face it— the attraction of this guy is that he's unpredictable," says his campaign manager, Richard Woodward. "If we didn't know he was unpredictable, we'd be in a state of shock."

SAYS HAYAKAWA: "I am what I am, and, if it doesn't fit the political mold, that's too damn bad for the political mold."

Or as Tunney puts it, "If I made some of those statements it would be all over."

Of course, that's a statement that cuts both ways.

Tunney, whose future appeared bright when he trounced Republican Sen. George Murphy six years ago, has had trouble finding a political base in his own party, as evidenced in a bruising Democratic primary campaign against former Chicago Seven defendant Tom Hayden.

Tunney's image problems have been skillfully exploited by Hayakawa's television-advertising campaign, designed by Woodward with Press Secretary Jack McDowell, a former Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter, and retired advertising man Hal Larson.

One ad intersperses shots of an empty chair — symbolic of Tunney's frequent absence from the Senate this year — with footage of the senator skiing in Switzerland or vacationing in Florida, as he did during two Senate votes in the past. At the end of the commercial, Hayakawa sits in the chair.

CAMPAIGNING, HAYAKAWA talks about Tunney's absenteeism and changes of position on some issues, about child labor and the need to cut federal spending and curb "overregulation" of business.

In the San Joaquin Valley, expected to go solidly for Hayakawa, he talks mostly about Proposition 14, the farm-labor initiative that Hayakawa opposes and Tunney supports.

In Stockton last week, Hayakawa's cry that Prop. 14 "must, must, must be defeated" drew whoops and cheers from a crowd of about 250 at a $10 clam-and-wine feed.

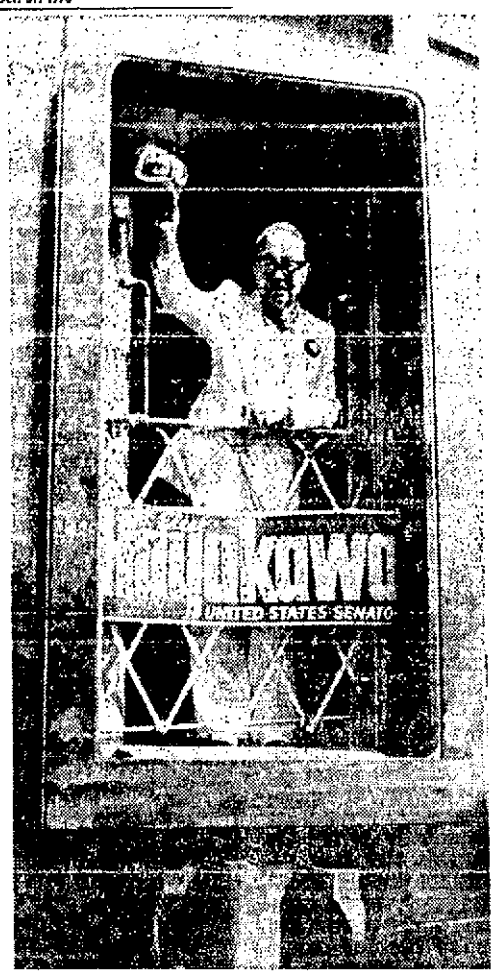

But, more than issues, what the audiences come to hear is the fighter who stood up to student radicals as president of San Francisco State College in 1968.

His greatest moment — when he ripped the wires from a microphone atop a flatbed truck where a student demonstrator was speaking — is mentioned or alluded to in virtually every campaign introduction.

After the speeches, the people who approach Hayakawa for handshakes and autographs usually talk about San Francisco State.

Hayakawa doesn't mention the subject that much on his own. But the symbol of those days, the tam-o'-shanter, is ever-present.

He and his staff wear tiny knit tams as lapel pins. At television interviews, he wears one or has it lying before him. And after each speech, he puts it on, and the applause level rises.

Tunney gains confidence

Says opponent making mistakes

By STEVE LAWRENCE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "It's like going into battle," John Tunney mused about his re-election chances. "You think you're going to win, but you might get hit by a stray shot."

There have been a lot of stray shots zinging at Tunney this year as he campaigns for a second term in the U.S. Senate. He survived a tough primary challenge from former antiwar activist Tom Hayden.

Now he's looked in a tight race with Republican S.I. Hayakawa, the former college president known for his clashes with student protesters and the tam-o'-shanter he wears.

BUT AS the campaign heads into its final hours, the lanky Democrat is at least outwardly confident that he'll still be California's junior senator after voters go to the polls Tuesday.

"I think I'm going to win," he said Friday as he hunched forward on a crowded, early-morning commuter plane. "I feel very good about it.

"I think that Hayakawa is beginning to make one mistake after another."

Tunney held a 45-to-43 per cent lead over Hayakawa in a Field Poll taken Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and released Friday, but he says he has a "gut feeling" that his margin is widening.

The Hayakawa "mistakes" Tunney referred to began Wednesday during the second televised debate between the two candidates, when, Tunney said, Hayakawa "stepped on a landmine."

DURING THE encounter and in questioning afterward, Hayakawa said the U.S. should be ready to send troops to Africa — preferably as part of a United Nations force, but on its own if necessary — to avoid a bloody clash between whites and blacks.

Afterward Hayakawa said the U.S. should encourage anti-Soviet revolts in Eastern Europe even though they would probably be crushed and should threaten to use troops to aid the rebels.

Tunney pounced on the statements, calling them "ludicrous" and "ridiculous," sand he has been hammering away at them in campaign stops since the Wednesday television appearance.

"It seems to me that injecting American troops into a tense African scene is more likely to provoke a bloodbath than to stop one," he said in a Los Angeles speech.

IF THE U.S. threatened to use troops in an Eastern European revolt and then backed down, he added, it would "condemn thousands of brave patriots to needless deaths.

"But if his threats to use troops were carried out they could lead to a third world war."

On paper at least, John Tunney probably should not be having all the problems he has had this re-election year.

Campaign '76

The son of a world champion boxer, Tunney won a 600,000-vote victory six years ago over former actor George Murphy. He outpolled even Gov. Ronald Reagan, who was re-elected that year by 500,000 votes.

His first-term record included getting more bills, amendments and resolutions through the Congress than any member of his Senate class, and early polls showed him beating several potential re-election opponents, including Reagan.

BUT POLLS taken shortly before the June 8 primary showed Hayden within a few percentage points of Tunney, although Tunney won by about 60 to 40 per cent.

And Tunney admits that his own polls showed Hayakawa nine points ahead of him soon after the primary.

Tunney blames the closeness of the races on Hayden's and Hayakawa's well-financed, "higly negative" campaigns, Tunney's lack of contact with community-group "opinion molders" and Hayakawa's image.

"I think his popularity comes from a desire that people have to project their own frustrations on a person who came through that 1968 San Francisco State disruption as a hero figure," he said during the plane ride.

"It was almost as good as a TV serial. This improbability, a man of small stature wearing a tam-o'-shanter standing up on a sound truck, appearing to be very decisive.

"WHAT HAS hurt Dr. Hayakawa is that in reality he is just about the reverse of his image."

Poll addresses wrong in snafu

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

A computer error on "close to a million" pieces of Democratic get-out-the-vote mail to Los Angeles County voters has resulted in wrong addresses for the addressees' polling places.

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, said his district-wide mailing, intended to be a service and convenience to voters, has instead turned out to be "a serious problem."

"Please disregard the polling-place address on my postcard and use the address included in your sample ballot envelope," Hannaford said.

George Hodgkins, vice president of Computer Mailings Inc. (CMI) of Los Angeles, acknowledged the error and seconded Hannaford's appeal to go by the sample ballot information.

Hannaford said erroneous polling-place information was printed on 1.2 million mailed voting reminders in his campaign and those of Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, and 63rd Assembly District candidate Bruce Young, Cerritos Democrat. About 700,000 similar mailers for the Carter-Mondale campaign were involved also, Hannaford said, but most of them were caught in time.

Hannaford is seeking re-election in the 34th Congressional District. His Republican opponent is Daniel Lungren.

Postcards hike Cal. registration by over 1 million

But election day effect still a question mark

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO—It is a piece of stiff white paper, a little more than 8 inches wide and some 15 inches long. It could be responsible for helping turn the 1976 general election into a Democratic landslide. It could make no impact at all.

It is the postcard voter registration form. Until the Oct. 4 deadline, Californians could simply sit at home, fill out the affidavit at the top of the form—the bottom 9 inches contain instructions in English and Spanish—tear it off and mail it in. No stamp was needed.

The forms were sent out to everyone turning 18 and to those on mailing lists possessed by the political parties, labor unions, service clubs, often with the suggestion that if the recipient were already registered, the form could be passed on to someone who wasn't.

POSTCARD registration is expected to account for more than a million more Californians being eligible to vote in Tuesday's election than were eligible to vote in the June 8 primary. Secretary of State March Fong Eu says the total should exceed 10 million, the largest in the state's history except for 1972, when the law opened the voting process to 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds.

And of the million new or re-registered voters, perhaps two-thirds figure to be Democratic. The party could well have close to 58 per cent of the state's registered voters at the moment.

However, as California Democrats know from bitter experience, a registered voter is not the same as a voter, and a registered Democrat is not a vote to be counted ahead of time.

BUT IF party workers have any success at all at getting Democrats to the polls Tuesday and persuading them to vote for Democratic candidates, California's two legislative houses could be the most partisan since the sessions of 1883 and 1884.

In those two years, Democrats dominated the Senate 32 to 8 and the Assembly 61 to 19, and newly elected Gov. George Stoneman was also a Democrat.

The target for Democrats in 1976 is more modest. They hope for 27 seats in the Senate—they now have 25—and 54 seats in the Assembly—they now have 53.

If they reach those figures, the party will have the two-thirds majority needed to totally dominate the legislative process in each house. And if Democratic members and Democratic Gov. Brown can get along, party programs should have no trouble being enacted.

The possibility of achieving a dominant majority is considered good in the Senate, fair in the Assembly.

IN THE 40-member Senate, 20 four-year-term seats are up for election this year. Of the 20 not up for election, Democrats occupy 17, meaning they must win 10 of the 20 contested seats to reach the desired 27.

Of the 20 seats being contested, Republicans occupy 12 and Democrats 8. Reapportionment created two new districts as of next Dec. 6, and six senators chose not to seek re-election.

It breaks down this way in the Senate's 20 races. Five seats are considered safe for their Democratic incumbents. They are the seats now held by Albert Rodda of Sacramento, Nicholas Petris of Oakland, Alfred Alquist of San Jose and David Roberti and Bill Greene of Los Angeles.

Four seats are considered safe for Republicans. Three are occupied by John Nejedly of Walnut Creek, Newton Russell of Glendale and H.L. "Bill" Richardson of Arcadia. The fourth, the 35th District seat in Orange County being vacated by retiring Republican James Whetmore, should be won by GOP Assemblyman John V. Briggs.

IF THOSE expectations materialize, Democrats will hold 22 seats and would have to win 5 of the remaining 11 races to reach the 27-seat level when the next session starts Dec. 6.

In the sprawling 1st District in Northern California, incumbent Democrat Randolph Collier is favored to defeat former Republican assemblyman Ray Johnson. But Collier is 74, much of the reapportioned district is new to him and Johnson is a canny veteran.

In San Francisco's 5th District, Republican incumbent Milton Marks has overcome huge registration disadvantages before but never as huge as this year. As many as 70 per cent of the voters could be registered Democratic come election day. County Supervisor Robert Mendelsohn is optimistic but cautious because Marks, as good a Democratic vote as there is in the Senate, has proved to be a persistent and knowledgeable campaigner.

DEMOCRAT John Garamendi abandoned his Assembly seat to go after the mountainous 13th District seat left vacant by the retirement of Republican Clare Berryhill. His opponent is Bob Whitten, a TV newscaster who is making a better fight of it than expected. The district is believed leaning toward Garamendi, but again, no Democratic considers it won yet.

Another district vacated by a retiring Republican, the 15th in the upper San Joaquin Valley, lured GOP Assemblyman Ernest Mobley. He has been elected five times despite a great registration disadvantage and figures to win again since he has maintained a low profile and done nothing to get folks mad at him. But Democrat Rose Ann Vuich is well known in the district, much of which is new to Mobley, and is working hard. Some Democrats think she has an outside shot at capturing the seat now held by Howard Way.

ANOTHER veteran Republican, Donald Grunsky, is retiring from his 17th District seat in the coastal counties of Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Luis Obispo. GOP Assemblyman Robert Nimmo is expected to defeat former Santa Cruz County Supervisor PHil Harry, but Democrats are insisting the votes be counted anyway.

Sen. Lou Cusanovich, R-Woodland Hills, is a good politician. He always runs scared. He's running scared this time, too. His opponent is a woman, Sabrina Schiller, who has mounted a sizzler of a campaign. She is said to be trailing but closing fast.

Two veterans are having at each other in the 27th District seat vacated by retiring Republican Robert Stevens. The district includes El Segundo, Redondo Beach, Manhattan Beach, Torrance, Palos Verdes, Rolling Hills, and the San Pedro-Wilmington area, and Democratic Sen. James Q. Wedworth of Hawthorne is claiming to be the incumbent. Republican Assemblyman Robert Beverly of Manhattan Beach is favored, but it is another race no one is very sure about.

ONE OF the races that has attracted the most attention statewide is the George Deukmejian-Renee Simon race in Long Beach's 31st District. Reapportionment has put Deukmejian, the veteran Republican incumbent, in a district partially new to him, in which Democrats have a large and increasing registration majority. City Councilwoman Simon is using the efficient campaign organization developed by retiring Democratic Sen. Joseph M. Kennick and the city's two Democratic assemblymen, Mike Cullen and Fred Chel, and is considered to have a chance to upset the favored Deukmejian and become the first female senator in California's history.

But Campbell's expected gain for the GOP should be balanced by Democratic Assemblyman Paul Carpenter, expected to defeat Republican Loran Norton in Orange County's new 37th District.

One of the most bitter Senate fights is taking place in San Diego's 39th District, where veteran Republican incumbent Jack Schrade, 74, is being challenged by Democratic Assemblyman Bob Wilson, 33. Schrade is a tough campaigner, but Wilson, who is both conservative and ambitious, is taking him down to the wire.

Of the 11 "doubtful" races, then, Democrats feel sure they have winners in Collier, Garamendi and Carpenter and believe they have good chances with Mendelsohn, Simon and Wilson. If all six come through, that would give the party 28 seats. Should one or more falter, party professionals feel, Vuich, Schiller and Wedworth are capable of pulling an upset.

Republicans, however, are confident they can win with Mobley, Nimmo, Cusanovich, Beverly, Deukmejian, Campbell, and Schrade. That would give them 14 seats, and keep the Democrats below 27. And they give Johnson, Marks and Whitten — Marks particularly — good chances of winning, as well.

The Assembly also could go either way as far as the Democrats gaining the two-thirds majority of 54 seats or more. Of the 80 seats being contested, 45 are considered locked in by the Democrats, with perhaps three of those — Floyd Mori of Pleasanton, Larry Chimbole of Palmdale and Bill McVittie of Ontario — subject to long-shot Republican upsets.

Republicans figure 15 of their seats are safe, with two incumbents — Eugene Chappie of Yuba City and Bill Thomas of Bakersfield — perhaps not as solid as the other 13.

That leaves 20 seats in the doubtful column, and Democrats would have to win nine of them to give them 54 Assembly votes. They are optimistic, but some privately say they would be pleasantly surprised if they succeeded.

Republicans feel confident they can win seven of the races in which there is no incumbent— with Stan Statham in the 1st District, Ron Greenslate in the 8th, Carol Hallett in the 29th, Marilyn Ryan in the 51st, Bill Dannemeyer in the 69th, Jim Slemons in the 74th and Jim Ellis in the 77th.

They look for incumbents Ken Maddy in the 30th, Paul Bannai in the 53rd and Robert McLennan in the 63rd to retain their seats despite dismaying Democratic registration majorities.

And they think they can pick off at least two incumbent Democrats—Richard Robinson in Orange County's 74th District by Peter Vogel and Tom Suitt in the desert counties' 75th by Al McCandless.

That would give the GOP 12 of the 20 doubtful seats and deny the Democrats the 9 they need. In addition, Republicans feel they have the candidates to oust at least two other Democratic incumbents, Michael Wornum in Marin County's 9th and Carmen Perino in the Stockton area's 26th.

Ford, Carter blitzing TV

Millions spent on last-minute commercials

By DAVE GOLDBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — For those so inclined, there will be three straight hours of Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford on television Monday night. For those not so inclined, you're out of luck.

The two major parties are flooding the airwaves with commercials this weekend in the last gasp before the voters make their decision and end more than a year of campaigning.

The peak will come Monday night, when Carter and Ford take over from the NBC "Monday Night Movie," "Executive Suite" and "The Captain and Tennille," but not, heaven forbid, from the ABC Monday night football game between the Baltimore Colts and Houston Oilers.

Each candidate has half an hour on each network.

The Ford people estimate that broadcast and newspaper advertising for the last three days of the campaign — Saturday, today and Monday — is costing them $1.2 million to $1.5 million. The Carter people say they can't break down the final three days, but Gerald Rafshoon, Carter's media director, has estimated that the last two weeks may cost about $2.5 million. Each of the Monday night half-hours will cost the candidate around $100,000.

For the final few days, Ford's people are selling a candidate to trust.

"The key word is 'trust'," says media adviser Phil Angell. "That's what it's all about."

Of the election-eve appeal, Angell says, "It's an upbeat, emotional, feel-good kind of spot." There is similar emphasis in the most-often-shown five-minute commercial, which replaces a biographical spot that showed, among other things, Japanese planes plummeting into the Pacific and implied that World War II Navy Lt. Gerald Ford shot them down.

Carter's election-eve show has already been on local stations in several cities — including New York. It involves a combination of man-in-the-street interviews and calls from those said to be ordinary citizens to Carter, "direct from Plains, Ga."

The rest of the Carter message will come via commercials produced by Tony Schwartz, media expert who designed the 1964 commercials for former President Johnson that showed a little girl picking daisy petals with an atomic bomb going off in the background.

Most of them are tightly edited and show Carter looking directly at the audience, reciting what he will do right and what he believes Ford has done wrong.

There is also something of a radio blitz. Both candidates have bought considerable time on all the networks, local stations and those catering to blacks and other ethnic groups.

Overall, both have taken steps to insure that anyone turning on a radio or television set before Tuesday will hear from them.

Hits oil-company campaign

Brown phones-in on Prop. 14

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

Gov. Brown abandoned modern media techniques Saturday and used the "old-fashioned" telephone in a late-hour campaign push for passage of Proposition 14.

He said he had just been to rallies in favor of the initiative in Sacramento, San Diego and Los Angeles and was making a "few phone calls to the news media in cities he could not visit."

He said he might be going out on a limb in supporting the initiative, risking a loss of face if it fails, but he was doing it because he believes strongly in the importance of its passage.

Asked what he was working hardest for — passage of the farm labor initiative or a victory in California for Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter — he responded: "I haven't really spent a lot time working on Prop. 14 until recently. I've spent lots of time campaigning for Carter in nine states, and I'll work with Carter today and tomorrow."

Brown said he fels only passage of Prop. 14 can end a bitter 10-year struggle and prevent the same kind of acrimony and political infighting which he said will continue to distract attention from more important issues.

Brown said during the telephone interview that "feelings are strong on both sides" and that "people have been screaming and yelling in my office all week.

"What we need is a two-year breathing period."

He said passage of the initiative would place existing farm labor laws in a secure framework by taking them out of the hands of the Legislature and putting them into the hands of the voters.

"If, after two years, changes in the laws are required, then the voters can make changes through the initiative process during the next general election. If the final decision remains the responsibility of the legislators, he said, attempts will be made continuously to sway the Legislature one way or the other."

Simon-Deuk interest high

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

With the precision and timing of a moon landing, a veteran Sacramento newsman targeted on remote Pavo Street in Long Beach and settled into the debate dust in Carver School auditorium.

The pinpoint timing spared him the crossfire of political argument on a congressional and an Assembly race and allowed him to catch the main act, the set-to between State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, and Long Beach Councilwoman Renee Simon, Democrat, vying for the Long Beach area's new 31st State Senate District.

THE debate over, he lifted off into the Los Altos night and was gone — just another alien kibitzer saucering into Long Beach's business.

The fact is, however, that the Deukmejian-Simon story and three other man-woman Senate races in California have been statewide stories since primary-election season.

Two of the others are also Los Angeles County races: Sabrina Schiller challenging State Sen. Lou Cusanovich, R-Woodland Hills, in the 19th District, and Betty Wilson challenging Assemblyman William Campbell, R-Whittier, in the 33rd District. The fourth race, in the upper San Joaquin Valley, is between Rose Ann Vuich and Assemblyman Ernest Mobley, R-Fresno.

A couple of nights after the Pavo Street debate, a crew bearing electronic shoulder widgets descended on another unlikely thoroughfare, Lakewood's Pixie Avenue, for a Channel 4 videotaping of Gov. Brown endorsing Mrs. Simon at a union hall.

CHANNEL 4 did another piece featuring several female candidates. Channel 7 did a news clip on the race. Channel 28 recorded Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., endorsing Mrs. Simon in Long Beach last week.

Northern California reporters for the Associated Press and for San Francisco and Sacramento newspapers have made queries to this newspaper about the 31st District campaign.

Mrs. Simon felt the first rumble last summer. Sacramento Mayor Phillip Isenberg and Vice Mayor Anne Rudin spoke in her behalf at a fund-raising party in that city.

Rita Gordon, wife of San Francisco's deputy mayor, gave Mrs. Simon a cocktail reception in her home. A San Francisco Chronicle reporter interviewed her. San Francisco Mayor George Moscone was principal speaker at a dinner for her that evening.

EARLIER on the same day, San Jose Mayor Janet Gray Hayes hosted a fund-raising luncheon in her home.

Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally spent a day campaigning for Mrs. Simon in Long Beach.

Women's groups across the state zeroed in on the Long Beach district as the "best chance for a breakthrough" in the all-male domination of the State Senate. It has never had a female member.

Deukmejian points out whenever they debate that it's not the Senate's fault; it's the voters of the district who make that decision. And he implies that the parade of big-name Democrats for Mrs. Simon through this district amounts to partisan overkill.

What does it all boil down to?

The prestigious California Journal sees the 15th District Mobley-Vuich seat as "safe Republican," with a longshot chance for Ms. Vuich, but "the other three women are better bets to win."

THE Journal puts the 19th District Cusanovich-Schiller race and the 33rd District Campbell-Wilson contest under "leans Republican."

It calls the Long Beach 31st District race "doubtful," noting the special watch California women are keeping on this race as "the best opportunity for the first female to be elected to the State Senate."

Deukmejian, the analysis says, was weakened by reapportionment, and Mrs. Simon "is running an aggressive campaign against both Deukmejian and the Independent, Press-Telegram, which is supporting the incumbent.

"Simon has a tremendous registration advantage, but Deukmejian's popularity extends beyond the GOP."

Before the reapportionment referred to in the analysis, Deukmejian ran and won twice in the old 37th Senate District. He overcame party registration deficits in both those races. It was a 6.1 percentage-point spread in favor of Democrats in 1968, but Democrats didn't even field a candidate.

IN 1972 the point spread doubled to 12.2 favoring Democrats, but Deukmejian buried Democratic challenger G.C. DeBaun 68.2 to 31.8 per cent.

Registration for this election in the new 31st District is: Democrats, 143,495, and Republicans, 79,450. That is a 64,045-voter advantage for Democrats, and the point spread has jumped to 26.8.

Despite Mrs. Simon's apparent advantage from registration figures, the only published survey showed Deukmejian winning 50.6 to 21.8 per cent, with 27.6 undecided.

That poll, taken Oct. 15, 16 and 17, was drafted by the I,P-T and conducted by Western Viewpoint Research, Inc.

Gas pipeline is worth fighting for

and his own recommendation to Congress.

Construction could begin in 1979.

Zarb and the Interior Department had a change of heart at the 11th hour and said the bill should be signed, if only because procedures esablished by the act for choosing the route, rather than normal procedures, could lead to earlier deliveries of gas from Prudhoe Bay.

Nevertheless, it appears that 1981 would be the earliest start for a flow expected to exceed two billion cubic feet per day.

Another reason Ford signed the bill was that it was unanimously supported, from the Great Lakes to the Pacific, by all regions and their congressmen.

A veto would have irritated some and satisfied none.

Senate Democratic sources said the White House was influenced to accept the bill by telephone calls on Oct. 1 to White House Chief of Staff Richard Cheney from Republicans in California, a state Ford needs to carry in Tuesday's election.

Sources said one caller was David Packard, the self-made electronics industrialist and former deputy secretary of defense.

The California calls were said to have been inspired by the El Paso Natural Gas Co., Houston, one of the three applicants whose plan would deliver the North Slope gas through an 809-mile pipeline to Point Gravina, 40 miles from the oil terminal at Valdez.

El Paso's 42-inch gas line would parallel the Alyeska Co.'s 48-inch oil line now near completion. All the El Paso gas would then be liquefied and sent by tanker to Point Conception, Calif.

However, environmental groups, including the Sierra Club, have vowed to fight installation of a gas revaporization plant in the ecologically sensitive area.

According to the El Paso plan, another 42-inch pipeline, this 142 miles long, would be built from the plant to hook into existing gas networks for distribution. And still another pipeline would have to be built to serve the Northwest.

If El Paso's plan is approved, much of the gas would stay on the West Coast. Proponents argue that keeping the gas here would allow supplies now being sent west from Texas to be diverted to other gas-consuming regions in the East and Midwest.

A SECOND competitor is Arctic Gas, a consortium of 15 Canadian and American energy companies who would build 4,490 miles of 48-inch pipeline eastward from Prudhoe Bay through Canada's Mackenzie River Valley. The line would also carry Canadian gas, believed to be about 7 trillion cubic feet, from the Mackenzie Delta to other energy-hungry provinces.

In Alberta, the flow would divide, with the Alaskan gas going to American markets through spurs to the West Coast and Middle West. The Canadian gas would flow to Eastern Canada in Canadian pipelines.

The third applicant is a latecomer who joined the competition just last summer after FPC proceedings had been under way almost a year.

Northwest Pipeline Corp., Salt Lake City, is in partnership with two Canadian pipelines, the Alberta Natural Gas Co., and the West Coast Transmission Co.

NORTHWEST Pipeline's proposed 5,000-mile line would parallel the Alyeska Co. oil pipeline as far as Fairbanks, then turn east along the Alcan Highway into the Yukon, then into British Columbia and Alberta. There, the Canadian carriers would pick up the gas in their lines.

Of the three plans, the Northwest proposal is the least definite and is backed only by preliminary studies.

Costs will certainly be a factor in the FPC and presidential recommendations and congressional decision.

El Paso's proposal would cost about $7.9 billion, but this figure fails to include expenditures for new pipelines in the contiguous United States.

The Arctic Gas plan would cost $8.3 billion, although $1.5 billion would be paid by Canadian interests, reducing the American cost to $6.8 billion.

The Northwest proposal is estimated at about $4.6 billion, half of which would be borne by Canadian partners. As with El Paso, this does not include additional U.S. pipeline to move natural gas to the Midwest and East.

AS FOR delivery dates, of crucial importance in California where residential customers may face cutbacks in 1980, El Paso feels it could start shipping gas in 1984.

Indians win land, end armed siege at center

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A group of Puyallup Indians ended their week-long occupation of a juvenile dentention center Saturday after reaching an agreement with the state to resolve ownership of the facility.

Under the agreement, the state will hand over six acres to the tribe, regardless of the ultimate decision on ownership of the entire 20-acre complex, Gov. Dan Evans said.

"We don't have the title yet, but our elders are really proud of us. They're proud because we can stand up," said Ramona Bennett, tribal chairwoman. "We don't have to hang our heads any more."

Federal, state and Indian officials reached agreement in principle on the plan late Friday. The Indians left the Cascadia Juvenile Detention Center on Saturday, meeting the deadline set in a federal court eviction notice. An estimated 100 to 150 Indians participated in the occupation.

"I am thankful we have avoided the potential violence which could have occurred if the tribe had insisted on remaining illegally" in the center, Evans said.

"While it is clearly illegal for the Puyallups to occupy the facility at gunpoint, there is a question over whether the federal government properly deeded the land to the state," he said.

The Indians took over the center last Saturday after holding an open house on the fifth floor of the building. That night, the only persons reported armed were official tribal policemen, who participated in the takeover.

Included in the seven-point agreement is the federal government's acknowledgment that the juvenile center may have been improperly deeded to the state in 1961.

The facility was an Indian medical clinic between 1941 and 1959.

Brown gets on phone to push for Prop. 14

that partisan and profit motives are behind opposition to the initiative. Growers can take advantage of farmworkers if the workers are not protected by law, and politicians can "come out of the shadows into the limelight by keeping the Legislature in a turmoil over this issue."

Farm labor laws enacted in August 1975 already give farm workers the right to decide by secret ballot which union they prefer, if any, to represent them. But Brown said there have been no elections on farms since February because funds to administer the laws were not provided by the Legislature.

He said opposition forces have admitted that large oil companies are "an underlying reality" in the campaign against the proposition, and as an example of oil company interest in the issue, he named Standard Oil, which owns 11,000 acres of farmland near Fresno.

Brown denounced the advertising tactics of the opposition as "harassment." Full-page ads against the initiative appeared last week encouraging voters to call the Agricultural Relations Board in Sacramento for information on the initiative, which caused the phone lines of that office to be jammed.

More ads urging voters to call the attorney general's office will appear in newspapers today, Brown said, creating more harassment.

He said the presidential election in California is "pretty close, but Carter can win." He said California would be one of several swing states.

"Politics is in part a reasoned evaluation of ideas and words, and also an intuitive grasp of personalities," he said, conceding that President Ford may have an advantage in California as far as personality goes.

The independent candidacy of former Sen. Eugene McCarthy "requires no comment because it isn't significant," he said. He added that he would play no role in a Carter administration because "I have a lot of work to do here."

The governor declined to comment on the opposition by the state's top smog official, Tom Quinn, to the Long Beach terminal for Alaskan oil. Quinn has said the terminal would upset air pollution standards, but Brown said he is not familiar enough with the matter to discuss it.

Devaluations in peso create chaos along border

EDITOR'S NOTE — It used to be that Mexicans flocked across the Rio Grande to buy American, but with the devaluation of their peso they have stopped, and Americans are going the other way to buy Mexican. The repercussions are felt on both sides of the border.

By ISAAC A. LEVI

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP)—Two peso devaluations in the midst of Mexico's worst monetary crisis in decades have brought deep hardship to an estimated 10 million Americans and Mexicans who live and trade on both sides of the border.

Official figures show that retail sales from Brownsville and Matamoros to Chula Vista and Tijuana have dropped 5 to 26 per cent, depending on the area. Merchants in dozens of border communities in Mexico and the United States either went broke or are about to fold.

Enrique Moreno Alvarz, general manager of the Ciudad Juarez Chamber of Commerce, predicts that unemployment here will rise another 25 to 30 per cent if remedies are not found. Presently one of every five of this city's 100,000-member labor force is out of work.

Since Aug. 31, President Luis Echeverria's administration has been forced to devalue the peso 100 per cent from 12.50 to 25 to $1 in an attempt to halt the flight of capital.

About the only thing the devaluations did was to break a huge smuggling industry from the U.S. to Mexico, estimated by Mexican banking sources at $1 billion to $3 billion annually.

The negative effects all along the 1,966-mile border are so acute that President Ford last week promised federal assistance to 36 counties on the U.S. side. Ford told reporters on the campaign trail in San Diego last Monday that he was moving to designate the counties in California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas as the "Southwest Border Economic Region" — a move that merchants catering to the Mexican trade have been demanding for weeks.

For many years, Mexicans shopped American because the goods were cheaper and better.

The devaluations suddenly reversed that, making American goods twice as expensive for the peso-earning Mexican and many Mexican goods twice as cheap for American visitors with dollars to spend.

This killed smuggling but also the daily shopping that hundreds of thousands of Mexicans did legally in the U.S. Now hundreds of thousands of Americans cross the border daily to take advantage of the lower prices in Mexico.

They go to get a haircut, to the beauty parlor, to get their dental work done, to buy eyeglasses, beef, cooking oil, sugar, some types of canned goods, rum and tequila.

But Mexican community leaders claim the influx of American shoppers is not enough to offset the depression brought by the devaluations Aug. 31 and last Wednesday.

They say that many Mexican merchants with dollar debts and Mexican currency income are going broke and point out that since goods are cheap in terms of dollars they do not bring in enough dollars to compensate.

A typical example of how the devaluation hit people is El Paso, a city of nearly half a million with an economy closely tied to Ciudad Juarez. About a million Mexicans used to do a fifth of their shopping in El Paso, mostly for furniture, home appliances, TV and radio sets, automobiles, clothing, toys, milk and groceries. Much of it was done through dollar installment plans.

"Now we don't go anymore," said Rosalia Hernandez, a Ciudad Juarez divorcee. "It's twice as expensive, even though Mexican goods have also gone up in price but not as much. My teen-age son and I used to go on weekends and have dinner and see a movie, too."

The El Paso Chamber of Commerce reported a 5 per cent drop in retail sales after the first devaluation, a loss to merchants of $5 million a month out of $100 million average. But firms catering to the Mexican trade lost 60 to 90 per cent, it said. The chamber doesn't have figures on how much sales dropped since the second devaluation.

"But no doubt about it, it has dropped," says the chamber's general manager, Mark T. Miles.

El Paso's Plaza Hotel reported bookings down by more than a third. An Italian restaurant across the street said its business dropped more than 40 per cent. Herbert Schartz of The Popular, a three-outlet department store, said sales were down 18 to 25 per cent. Working hours were reduced, and overtime was cut after the first devaluation.

The number of persons crossing the Rio Grande from Ciudad Juarez to El Paso dropped 50 per cent to a million in September, while crossings the other way increased 30 to 40 per cent, according to the local Mexican tourism director, Jose Quevedo Treviso.

But Moreno Alvarez says the money that tourists and American shoppers are spending is not half enough to cover losses suffered by Ciudad Juarez merchants.

Stores are reporting sales are up 40 to 50 per cent, but many still have dollar debts to pay for their American merchandise. In addition, they have new salary increases and higher costs to meet.

"The first devaluation—although it shook us like nothing before—was probably beneficial," said one of the score or so of merchants who went out of business here. "The second just sent us under."

"For a whole year, Juarez banks fearing devaluation refused people credits in pesos," Moreno Alvarez said. "They made only dollar loans.

"When the devaluation hit, a lot of merchants who had sold only in pesos and many on installment got caught with terrible debts in dollars. Others sold in dollars, but customers now just cannot meet their monthly payments."

The average monthly wage in Ciudad Juarez is 4,000 pesos, which was the equivalent of $320 before the first devaluation and $245 after it. With last Wednesday's devaluation, it dwindled to $160.

"It's the same all along the border, more or less," Moreno Alvarez said.

Tourist dollar buys bargains in Ensenada

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

ENSENADA — At first glance, this tourist-oriented Baja California city of 100,000 shows fews signs of damage from Mexico's current financial crisis.

The value of the peso, fixed for 23 years by the government, now changes daily.

Crowds thronged the city's several banks along Avenida Ruiz, a major commercial street. They wanted to trade pesos for dollars, but they were out of luck.

As in the U.S. last week, when banks temporarily suspended trading in pesos, the big Mexican financial institutions all but stopped dealing in dollars.

ONLY the "casas de cambios," independent money brokers, remained to trade dollars or pesos, one for the other, whichever the buyer needed.

And it was a good deal for the dollar sellers, who could buy pesos — from at least one firm — for just below the official rate.

Last week the American with cheap pesos in his wallet held something of a whip in Ensenada — if he wasn't planning to take the cash out of the country. It was vital to watch every transaction with an eagle eye — and a pocket calculator.

When the peso floats, every entrepreneur — with one eye on the law — sets his own exchange rate.

If enough pennies can be shaved this way, there is extra and entirely legal profit to be earned. The old Roman tag advising the buyer to beware was seldom more true.

ALREADY relatively inexpensive national liquor labels, Oso Negro vodka or gin and the coffee liqueur Kahlua, were undercut in price for the lucky buyer.

'A can of worms' in Arizona

A team of investigative reporters currently in Arizona to complete the work of slain newsman Don Bolles may find evidence of mob power and political corruption in the state, three news veterans said Saturday.

The probe by 18 members of the IRE (Investigative Reporters and Editors) will, in effect, "provide life insurance for every investigative reporter in the country," said Theo Wilson, West Coast Bureau chief of the New York Daily News.

"The investigative reporters are now in Arizona to see what Bolles was after," Ms. Wilson said in a news-writing workshop.

SHE was featured with Linda Deutsch, Associated Press' Los Angeles bureau; Mary Neiswender of the Independent, Press-Telegram; and moderator John Edwards, Glendale Print-Equip News.

Bolles, 47, an Arizona Republic investigative reporter, died 11 days after dynamite exploded under his car June 2 in the parking lot of a Phoenix hotel. He was apparently lured there to check out a story on land fraud involving politicians.

The Bolles' discussion took place during a day-long seminar sponsored by the Pacific Coast Press Club designed for professional newsmen and women and journalism students. In other workshops, participants discussed feature writing, public relations, photo journalism and page makeup.

PCPC'S members are drawn from Long Beach and throughout the Southland, said club President Ralph Hinman Jr., I,P-T staff writer. The journalism conference was held at the University Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles.

The significance of Bolles' murder was that reporters and policemen have traditionally been considered "off-limits for murder" by the underworld, Ms. Neiswender told the audience, most of them college students majoring in journalism.

"Killing a cop is no longer a big deal these days," Ms. Neiswender said. The IRE's effort in Arizona will be an attempt to make it clear to the underworld that "it's too much trouble — more than it's worth — to kill a reporter," she added.

The reporters said that, excluding reporters killed in war zones, it has been nearly 50 years since a newsman or newswoman has died "gangland-style" in the line of duty.

"IT'S really gotten reporters nervous," said Ms. Wilson. "In two or three months you'll see some good stories coming out of there (Phoenix)."

I,P-T staffer is first woman head of guild

For the first time in its nearly-40-year history, the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild has elected a woman as its president.

Linda Zink, a Life/Style writer for the Independent, Press-Telegram, was elected without opposition in the Guild's annual election meeting last week.

Ms. Zink, 29, is a 1965 graduate of Long Beach Poly High School who previously was secretary and treasurer of the union, which is Local 69 of the AFL-CIO Newspaper Guild.

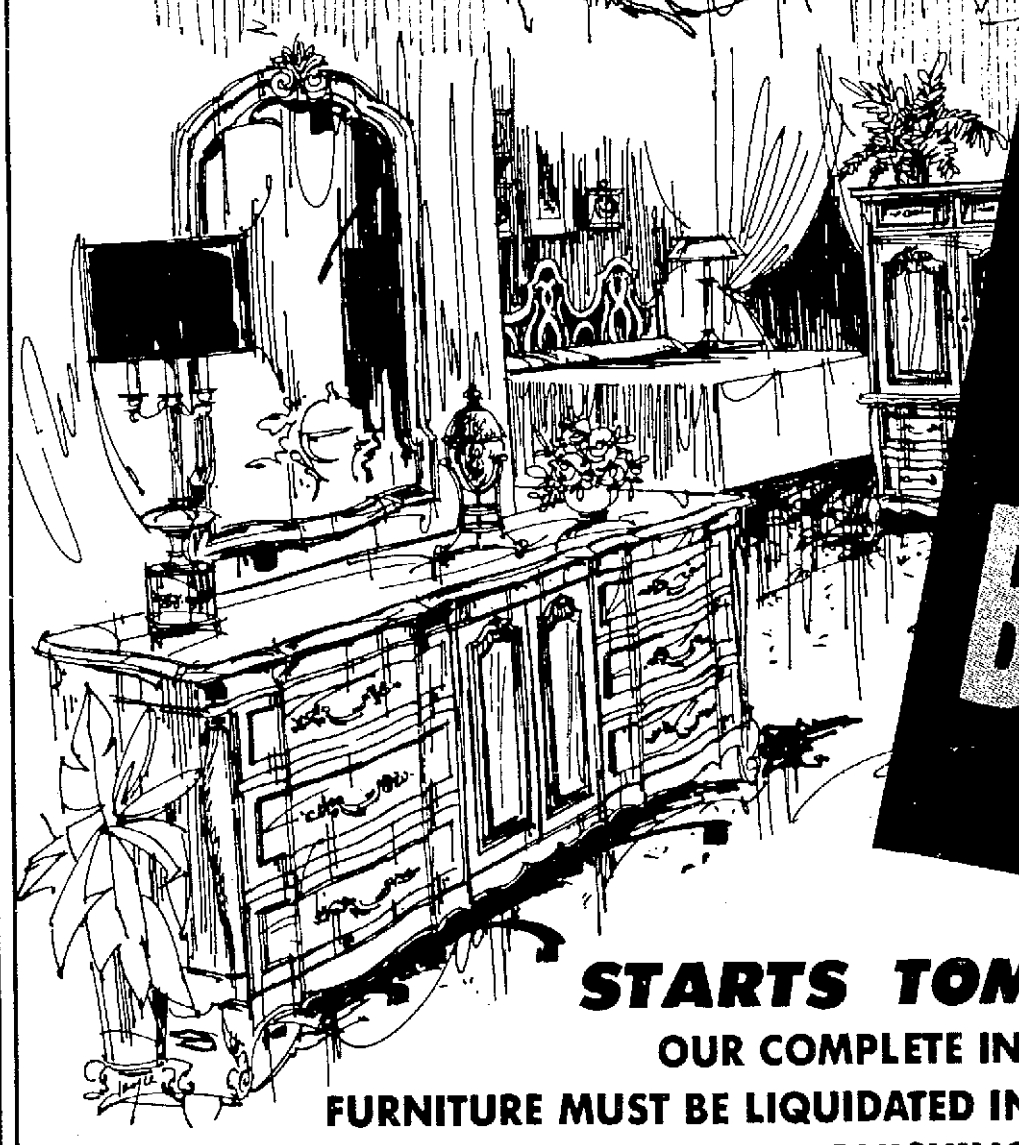

Other members of the local's 1977 executive board include Ron Shroyer, first vice president; George Laine, secretary; Allen Black, treasurer, and Ed Gallardo, sergeant-at-arms. All but Black are employed at the I,P-T. Black is an employe of Triangle Publications Inc.

Don Chorpenning and Bob Dey were elected unit vice presidents representing the I,P-T and Triangle Publications, respectively.

KATHY, DYLEN AND LAWRENCE TERFLINGER AFTER RESCUE

Family escapes blazing home

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

The parents of a 2-year-old boy dropped him from a burning second-story apartment into the hands of a neighbor Saturday in North Long Beach, and the mother jumped before firemen arrived to rescue the father.

Lawrence Terflinger, 26, of 6639 Delta Ave., said he was awakened at 10:15 a.m. by the screams of his son, Dylen, who apparently had been playing with matches in a bedroom adjacent to his parents' room. The family could not reach a stairway because of smoke and flames in the hallway.

Batallion Chief Paul Finley said a neighbor, Willie McKinzie, who lives in the apartment below the Terflinger residence, was returning from work and saw smoke all around the building.

McKinzie heard screaming in the back of the building, where the Terflingers were waiting by a bedroom window. Terflinger's 22-year-old wife, Kathy, dropped the boy into McKinzie's arms. Then she jumped, suffering cuts and bruises.

"I was just about to jump, when suddenly a ladder was brought up by firemen," Terflinger said.

A five-truck engine company extinquished the blaze in about 20 minutes, Finley said. He estimated damage at $10,000.

Stress deaths linked to unemployment rate

fluctuations in unemployment, illness and criminal behavior."

Brenner studied the effects of unemployment, inflation and real per-capita income on all these factors but could not find the same correlations for inflation and real per-capita income that he could for unemployment.

"The federal government has become relatively adept since World War II at assessing the impact of income, prices and employment of monetary and fiscal policy," said Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., the committee chairman, in his letter transmitting the report to committee members.

"But government policy planners have had essentially no success in shedding light on the next level — on the ensuing effects which changes in income, prices and employment have on individuals and on society.

"Yet it is precisely the eventual impact of economic policy on individuals which should be the focus of Washington officials, rather than the impact of this policy on the intervening economic variables."

The release of the study two days before the presidential election would tend to favor the Democrats, who support full-employment legislation.

The Republican members of the committee, however, have not followed their usual practice of filing dissenting opinions with the report, and staff members at the White House and in the Office of the Council of Economic Advisers said they have not seen it.

Management of the nation's ailing economy has been a major point of contention between the two presidential candidates and may become a more pointed campaign issue after Friday's report by the Commerce Department of figures warning of possible further economic decline.

Brenner's findings are based on the effect of 1 per cent unemployment, sustained over five years. The five-year period is used because certain diseases, like heart ailments, would take longer to show up than, say, homicides, he found.

The committee extrapolated Brenner's findings to the 1.4 per cent level to reflect the actual unemployment increase in 1970.

It said the cumulative effect of that increase cost American society some $21 billion in lost income, mortality and institutionalization, in addition to the following:

— About 5.7 per cent of the 26,960 suicides, or 1,540 of the total.

— About 4.7 per cent of the 117,480 mental-hospital admissions, or 5,520.

— About 5.6 per cent of 136,875 state-prison admissions, or 7,660 of the total.

— About 8 per cent of 21,730 homicides, or 1,740 of the total.

— About 2.7 per cent of 32,080 deaths from liver cirrhosis, or 870 of the total.

— About 2.7 per cent of the 979,180 deaths from cardiovascular and kidney disease, or 26,440 of the total.

During the brief debate, Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-Pa., said the seven months of daylight saving would cut the number of days with late sunrise. He also argued that public-opinion polls commissioned by the Department of Transportation, which administers the Uniform Time Act, indicate a majority of Americans favor extended periods of daylight saving time.

Congress has been tinkering with clocks periodically for almost 60 years, usually in the name of energy conservation.

THE MOST recent changes adopted grew out of the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74. In an attempt to reduce fuel consumption, Congress in January 1974 imposed year-round daylight saving time that was supposed to last for two years.

But complaints from persons in northern states and near the western boundaries of each time zone, who said the winter sun wasn't rising until nearly 9:00 a.m., cut the experiment short. Congress put clocks back on standard time from November 1974 to February 1975.

Daylight saving time on a nationwide basis was first used during World War I. After the war, some states and municipalities continued the practice, which led to a great deal of confusion for travelers. (Even today, Arizona, Hawaii and parts of Indiana do not observe daylight saving time.)

Welfare cheat says, 'It's so easy'

"I just went down and applied again under another name and had the check and Medi-Cal and food stamps by the next day."

The process, she says is easy.

"You go down to the welfare office the first day and fill out a 19-page form. You can say anything you want just as long as you end up alone and with kids."

Not knowing who or where the father of the children is, she says, is vital.

"One time I said I was hitchhiking and it was the truck driver that picked me up—I never saw him before or since."

After a three-hour wait in the welfare office waiting room, she says, there is a five-minute interview with an eligibility worker who reads over the answers to the questions. Another two-page form to fill out, another long wait and another five-minute interview with a child support worker ends the task.

"They tell you the next day at a certain hour they will come to the house to check on you and look at the kids—and they do."

But it's no surprise visit.

"I usually got everyone out of the house I was using and got all the evidence out that a man might be living there just in time for the visit. I'd borrow a couple of kids from someone—make sure they called me 'Mommy'—and that would be it. One time I just pointed to a couple of kids playing in a lot and said they were mine.

"The next day I picked up my Medi-Cal, food stamps and about $200. I also told her how broke I was, so she gave me $100 worth of food stamps right then for $1."

After six months, she says, she would have to fill out another form—which came by mail—to continue the fraud.

"There's another form now that comes every month that has to be filled out, but it's no big deal."

The social workers are so lax, she says, that for a long time she was getting two checks from the same welfare office and same social worker. The only things that changed, she says, were her name and address.

Although she admits receiving the checks under false pretenses, she says with the money she has helped other children—including close relatives who are on welfare but allowing their children to go hungry.

"There are kids starving on welfare and no one does anything about it . . . we turned in a relative whose children are like this. They're really starving—the boy lost his hearing because he had an ear infection and no one did anything about it.

"There are cockroaches in that house that fight you for your dinner—even with the lights on—and yet we've told the welfare people about it a lot of times and they've done nothing. They're still getting $240 twice a month, along with food stamps, but the kids are still starving.

"There are two junkies we know on welfare whose kids are in the same shape—no one's taking care of them.

"A cousin of mine has one child, is working, receiving welfare and unemployment benefits—all under different names.

"Two girlfriends are receiving welfare, saying they have kids. In fact," she says, "one recently got married and the checks never stopped. The other is just living with someone."

Welfare abuse, she says, would stop if the social workers weren't so lax, making it easy for anyone to get money.

"I don't think they've ever seen a real birth certificate," she says frankly, "and they've never asked me for a certified copy of anything . . . all they have to do is check state or county records—that would take five minutes and stop a lot of abuse.

"And it would take just five minutes to call a school to check on the school-age children that most people claim but never produce.

"Actually everything on that application should be checked—but nothing is. If you ask the social workers about this, they'll tell you they've overworked and the case loads are so heavy they don't have time.

"But how much time does it take to check the name on a mailbox . . . that would have caught me every time."

Carter, Ford down to wire in one of century's close races

Electoral vote distribution: If Ford can concentrate his popular vote in the states with big electoral votes, his chances of bringing off an upset will be vastly improved. In fact, it appears quite conceivable that one candidate could lose the popular vote contest and win in the Electoral College. That has happened three times — in 1824, in 1876 and most recently in 1888, when Benjamin Harrison beat Grover Cleveland.

With final polls still to be completed in a number of the closely fought states, an interim New York Times tabulation of electoral votes gave Carter 253 and Ford 188, with 97 still too close to call. To win, a candidate needs 270 electoral votes.

A document obtained by the Times from sources close to the President Ford Committee was somewhat more favorable to Ford, giving Carter the lead in states with 230 electoral votes and Ford the lead in states with 196, leaving states with 112 still in a category headed "pivotal."

The major surprise in the document, which bore no official committee identification, was its concession that Carter would probably carry New York and Texas, coupled with the assertion that Florida could still be won by the President.

It appears probable that the election will turn on the results in five states that lie in the nation's industrial heartland along Route 30 from the Atlantic to the Mississippi: New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

In all five the race is close, with the Democrats most confident about Ohio and Pennsylvania and the Republicans most confident about Indiana, New Jersey and Illinois, in that order.

A bad omen for Carter appeared in Illinois, where the final Chicago Sun-Times straw poll, which has an excellent record of accuracy, showed a virtual tie, with Ford pulling to within one-tenth of one percentage point of his rival, 49.4 to 49.3.

Of the other big states, Massachusetts and Florida are considered more or less safe for Carter; he leads in New York by three percentage points, according to a Newsday-Gannet Newspapers' poll completed on Thursday, and in Texas, where he campaigned heavily Saturday afternoon.

Although he has slipped there recently, Ford leads in Michigan, his home state, and in California.

Given Carter's still-strong electoral bases in the South and the border states, Ford probably needs three or four of the Route 30 states to win, a sizable requirement, but one that no longer seems beyond his reach.

According to the Times-CBS News poll, the President's best targets are young people, suburbanites and residents of small towns, among all of whom he has scored solid gains already, and perhaps blacks, an unusually large number of whom describe themselves as undecided.

Two comments on the last weekend before Election Day from veteran politicians in Maryland captured the special qualities of the campaign: its near-invisibility, created in large measure by the shortage of funds under the new federal election law, and the strange swoon of Carter, who has now lost a national lead of more than 25 percentage points in most polls.

"If you went by bumper stickers," said Edmond F. Rovner, a former secretary of economic development, " 'Save the Whales' would win, 5 to 3."

Asked why Carter had fared so badly since Labor Day, State Sen. Harry J. McGuirk, who represents a blue-collar neighborhood of South Baltimore, said, "People here don't feel that they know Jimmy Carter."

The campaign in its last stages is beginning to assume striking similarities to those of 1960 and 1968.

In 1960, it was a fight all the way, but the patterns of support for Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy closely matched those evident this year, including Nixon's greater strength the further west he went. The election turned on Illinois, with Kennedy winning the state by 9,000 votes.

In 1968, Nixon held a huge margin over Hubert H. Humphrey, but it dwindled with the passage of each day.

Ford, Carter stumping for big electoral vote

While the President was making a last-ditch pitch for Texas' 26 electoral votes, his running mate, Sen. Robert Dole, was in California with its prized 45 votes.

"We're winning, we're winning," Dole said in one speech. "Carter's a little uptight because he's about to blow the biggest lead in history," he said in another.

Carter, who was seen a 30-point favorite in the flush of his convention victory in July, acknowledged the race is tight.

"The polls show it is so close that the outcome could be decided by whether it rains or not," the Democratic candidate said. Political wisdom has it that Democrats benefit from big voter turnouts, aided by good weather.

In Illinois, which bestows 26 votes, Democratic vice-presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale stressed the get-out-the-vote theme. "We have the next three days to turn it around," he said.

Campaigning in Sacramento, Dole referred to a statewide survey, the Mervin Field poll, and said he is more optimistic than ever about the outcome.

"Frankly, Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale scare nearly everybody who looks closely at their records and their proposals and who is concerned about peace in the world and jobs here at home," Dole told a businessman's breakfast.

The Field poll showed Ford with a 6-point lead in California.

Dole also referred to the Ford camp's own surveys that project 293 electoral votes for the Republican ticket. He gave no specifics about the surveys.

"The polls are going our way and things are looking up," he said.

Mondale went from Illinois to Ohio, worth 25 votes.

In Aurora, Ill., he called the Republican ticket among the most conservative in history, declared Ford has consistently opposed any improvement in federal health care programs and said that "even Richard Nixon would occasionally rise above (Republican) principle."

Mondale also continued to hammer at Ford's record on Watergate, a theme designed to puncture the President's appeal as the candidate most worthy of public trust and confidence.

"If he had his way," Mondale said in suburban Chicago, "Richard M. Nixon would still be president." He referred to Ford's role as House Republican leader in blocking an early committee inquiry into part of the Watergate scandal. Ford has said he did not act at Nixon's behest.

Korea 'bribes' probe was sought year ago

Alleged political payoffs put 'hot potato' in State Department's lap

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The State Department secretly requested a Justice Department investigation of the activities of South Korean businessman Park Tong Sun shortly after a Senate subcommittee delved into the matter last year, diplomatic and Capitol Hill sources said Saturday.

The State Department declined to comment, but diplomatic sources said Philip C. Habib, then assistant secretary for Asian affairs, had asked the Justice Departent to investigate Park's activities in connection with South Korean-American trade.

Jack Blum, who in 1975 was an investigator for a Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations, said in an interview that he believed the State Department made the request after his committee had sought departmental records on Park, who is known here as Tongsun Park. Jerome Levinson the subcommittee's counsel confirmed that it had been pursuing testimony that Gulf Oil Corp. paid $4 million in covert political contributions to South Korean officials between 1966 and 1970.

PARK'S family operates a Gulf Oil refinery in South Korea and, according to one of his associates, Park contends he receives $1 million a month from his Gulf activities. Park, who is out of the country, was not available for comment.

Sources familiar with the investigation said the Justice Department issued subpoenas last week to several of Park's business associates and began questioning his social acquaintances. Blum and Levinson said in interviews that in the summer of 1975, their committee was following up on testimony by Bob R. Dorsey, then Gulf chairman, that the company had paid the contributions to the Democratic Republican Party, the ruling party in South Korea.

The Senate aides arranged a meeting with Habib, who had been U.S. ambassador to South Korea between 1971 and 1974. Habib, they said, declined to testify on certain matters involving the Gulf payments because he had no direct knowledge. But, they said, he seemed willing to supply the committee with State Department records on Park.

Sources in the diplomatic community have said that Habib had been suspicious of Park for several years and had ordered embassy personnel not to become embroiled in any of Park's business dealings.

Despite Habib's indication that the State Department would cooperate, Blum said, when he actually sought to obtain the records in August 1975, he was told by a State Department lawyer that the matter had been turned over to the Justice Department and was "very sensitive."

BLUM said he came away with the impression that Park's activities in the United States on behalf of business endeavors in South Korea was a political "hot potato." It was not until February 1976, six months later, that there was any public indication that the Justice Department was investigaing South Korean efforts to influence American officials.

At that time two Democratic representatives, Joseph P. Addabbo of New York and Robert L. Leggett of California, acknowledged publicly that they were under investigation on a charge of accepting bribes from the South Korean government.

A responsible law-enforcement source rejected the implication that there was any unnecessary delay between the State Department's move in 1975 and the current investigation of Park. He said the State Department's concern was only one of several areas of suspicion that had come to surround Park.

The Justice Department got in touch with Park this year, and he has been cooperating, according to his associates. He has told the investigators, the associates said, that he made payments to several present and former members of Congress, some in the form of political contributions and others in connection with business deals. He has denied, the associates said, that the money came from the South Korean government.

George J. Koelzer, a Newark lawyer, said the Justice Department was seeking to question a client, Cornelius Gallagher, who is a former Democratic representative from New Jersey, in connection with the investigation. Koelzer said a Justice Department lawyer had told him that Gallagher was urged to supply records and be interviewed on any business relationships he had with Park.

Koelzer declined to comment on Gallagher's relation with Park and said no decision had been made on the Justice Department request.

BLUM said his Senate subcommittee first inquired into South Korean-American business relationships as a result of an investigation of the Overseas Private Investment Corp., a government organization that guarantees American investments in several nations. During a fact-finding trip to South Korea, Blum said, a senior South Korean official offered him the company of a woman and took him to a party at which South Korean women seemed available for sexual pleasure.

"I may be prudish," he said, "but I found this shocking." He said his State Department escort officer did not seem surprised at the events. "I came to believe this was standard treatment for American congressional delegations," he said.

Other former congressional and executive branch officials told the New York Times that gifts, offers of sexual companionship and other amenities were not uncommon during official trips to South Korea.

A State Department spokesman said Saturday that John C. Nidecker, a former aide to President Nixon, was given an envelope containing $10,000 while on a 1974 visit to Seoul. Nidecker turned the money over to Habib, who in turn gave it to the CIA's representative in Seoul. It was subsequently returned to the South Korean government, senior diplomatic and intelligence sources said.

Park left Tokyo Saturday by air for Paris after a 36-hour visit to Japan. He arrived in Tokyo Thursday from Seoul.

When they fly, there's thunder in the clouds

And their lightning-fast reactions must be quicker than their craft

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures

They milled around the lobby of a Beverly Hills hotel, waiting for the Gray Line bus just like any other conventioneers.

They wore leisure suits and sports jackets, shook hands with old friends and were introduced to new ones. Tall and short, some balding, some with glasses, they could have been insurance salesmen, bank tellers or Fuller Brush men.

But among this group was the first man who ever lifted the Boeing 747 into the sky, some of the men who will fly America's space shuttle for the first time and a man who survived when his 2,000-mile-per-hour reconnaissance plane broke apart at 78,000 feet.

THAT'S not to mention the first man to fly faster than the speed of sound, the first man to take the B1, the controversial supersonic bomber, into the air, and the German test pilot whose job it was during World War II to take every captured allied plane into the air to see what it would do. The German, Hans-Werner Lerche, no longer a test pilot, worked on pure instinct, of course, with no manuals.

These ordinary looking men — the world' top test pilots (past and present) — gathered recently for the 20th annual meeting of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots (SETP), an international club with 1,400 members.

Meet, for instance, Bill Weaver, a good-looking 47-year-old blond who is discussing how to sell one home and buy another. Weaver, a test pilot for Lockheed, is also one of the luckiest men God ever created— and then decided to let live.

HE WAS testing the SR71, America's super reconnaissance plane, nicknamed "The Blackbird," about 10 years ago, when it suddenly flipped onto its back — at 2,000 miles an hour, flying at 78,000 feet.

Weaver was thrown from the plane as it broke apart.

"I blacked out. I thought it was a bad dream," he recalled. "This couldn't possibly be happening. If it had really happened, I couldn't survive.

"Then I thought I was dead. I was slightly euphoric. I remember thinking that I didn't know why everyone worried about death. It was sort of nice.

"Finally, I realized I was falling. I was alive. I didn't even know what state I was over. I was making a turn when it came apart." (The Blackbird can easily gobble up five states as it turns, can go from California to Florida in 45 minutes and shuttle from London to New York in 1½ hours.)

THE mask on his pressurized astronaut's suit had iced over. He could see nothing. Finally, his parachute popped at 15,000 feet and Weaver floated down — many miles from any sign of civilization.

"I was convinced I wouldn't be discovered for a long time," said Weaver.

But he was thrilled when he saw another parachute floating down — that of his systems controls analyst, the man who operates the sophisticated spy equipment.

Weaver mentally reviewed his survival training and frightened an antelope as he came down in what turned out to be a remote corner of New Mexico.

As he was fighting with his parachute, a voice said: "Can I help you?"

"There was this guy in this cowboy hat, straight out of a Marlboro ad," recounts Weaver. "If I had told Edwards Air Force Base I was going to crash at such and such a place at such and such a time, they couldn't have gotten there faster."

THE rancher had been branding colts when he heard a tremendous explosion too high to see. But he kept watching the sky and when the parachutes popped open, he jumped in his helicopter and went to greet them.

Weaver had a cut on his nose. The other man, however, had broken his neck on the way out of the Blackbird and had drifted lifelessly to the ground.

The rancher insisted upon taking Weaver to a hospital. He flew fast.

"I don't know anything about helicopters," said Weaver, "but I could see the red line, the safe mark, was 85 miles an hour and we were going well above that."

Now, wouldn't that be ironic . . .?

A TEST pilot thinks long and hard about a man who is killed when he is at the controls.

"Afterwards, I kept thinking of what I could have done differently that would have saved him. But I knew there was nothing. I didn't have time to warn him."

And the difference between test pilots and you and I is that Bill Weaver was back in the cockpit one week later, thundering another Blackbird into the atmosphere.

Times have changed, but test pilots are still a special breed. In one breath they deny it. They boast that they are pretty dull, that they spend most of their time on the ground laboriously working with the flight engineer on design and construction. They say it's not all that dangerous anymore, although the insurance companies don't buy that story.

THE test pilots all know a close friend or a colleague who has "bought it" while flying. And when one of this elite group goes down, the word flashes through this international community before it ever comes out in the newspapers.

In the next breath, they admit that they are the cream of the aviator crop. It's a highly competitive field and no matter how good you are, if you are out for a few years, chances are you will never get back in. This kind of flying, these reflexes, these nerves to react, must never be allowed to dull.

They are far removed from the days when the men in goggles and white scarves — the fastest and bravest men on the race circuit — were paid top dollar to try out new planes.

Now, almost all test pilots have engineering backgrounds, many with advanced degrees in aeronautical engineering. They have almost all come up through the military, and they know everything there is to know about a plane before they ever take it up.

THEY have even adopted their own aphorism:

"To be a test pilot is to spend hours and hours of sheer boredom, followed by one moment of sheer panic."

And their own gag definition of the ideal test pilot: "He should have 5,000 hours in the air, a master's degree in aeronautical engineering and be 21 years old." (Most are in their late 20s before they have the experience and training to quality. Many continue as test pilots into their 50s.)

And their own philosophy of life is something called the "guts to brains ratio," but then you would have to be a test pilot to understand it.

Test pilots earn $25,000 to $70,000 a year with good fringe benefits. The first men to take the big planes off the ground — thereby proving that the engineers were right — also get nice bonuses.

Jack Waddell, the first man to pilot the massive 747 down the runway and up and away, was rumored to have received $100,000. He says it wasn't that much.

"JUST say it was substantial. That would be accurate," says Waddell.

That bonus is not just for the first flight — it's for the rest of the testing, too; things like seeing how the plane recovers after a stall, how much faster it will go than the engineers say it should, and how many engines can be shut down in mid-flight without losing altitude.

Most of them could make more money by becoming commercial airline pilots, but that's not what they want to do. "The commercial airplane pilots are bus drivers compared with us," says Hank Hoffman, an Air Force major.

Test pilots in private industry say they pay 50 per cent more for insurance than the man who lives next door. Often, however, the companies pick up the difference or insure them heavily during their take-off to landing moments.

Frank Tallman, Hollywood's top stunt pilot, in attendance at the convention here, beat the system by insuring himself well before the insurance companies were quite so careful.

"THEY sit by their windows now and ponder their mistake," he says.

Tallman, who is 57 and has a wooden leg, was seriously injured while doing the stunt flying for "The Great Waldo Pepper." But he lost his leg from an accident with his son's go-cart, not in a plane crash.

Tallman, who divides his plane crashes into how many he got paid for and how many just happened, is currently flying in two TV series, "Baa Baa Black Sheep" and "Spencer's Pilots" and will soon be working on "Airport '77."

As the four-day meeting and convention goes on, the men attend technical sessions during the day and gather at various parties at night to exchange sea stories of the air, as it were. They also trade practical tips, and hobnob with Alan Shepherd or the real Jimmy Doolittle, now almost 80.

The oldsters of aviation are present and they entertain the younger men with films of the good old days when there was little engineering and all guts.

THERE is Herb Fisher, of Curtiss-Wright fame. He was the first test pilot to reverse all four propellers of a C54 in flight, giving him a sink rate of 15,000 feet per minute.

During World War II, Fisher was the civilian test pilot who first flew the treacherous Hump over the Himalayas. He is a man who, at 67 years young, as he puts it, doesn't give up. Just a few months ago, he was up playing with a P40, completing his 2,500th flight in that World War II-vintage Curtiss fighter plane.

One who couldn't make it to the convention this year is the legendary Tex Johnson, Boeing's chief test pilot in the 1950s, when Boeing was introducing the then jumbo 707.

Johnson became legend when he rolled the 707 above the heads of 100,000 people back in 1956 — including the head of the president of Boeing.

A CROWD had gathered for a boat race and the president was entertaining on his yacht, as the story goes, when the announcer called the public's attention to the new Boeing aircraft flying above.

And then Johnson rolled it, a stunt usually reserved for air shows in which one wing goes down and the plane rolls 360 degrees.

The next morning, Johnson was on the carpet.

"You and I know we've got a good airplane," Johnson told the Boeing president. "I just wanted to show the public how good it was."

Waddell, the 6-foot-3 test pilot who took the 747 up, said such stunts are frowned upon now.

But, did he roll the 747?

"The regulatory climate is such now that we don't do that sort of thing anymore," said Waddell. And then he smiled. "At least not for publication."

HE DID, however, fly it like you and I don't ever want to ride it. He put it into stalls, shut down various engines and then one day over Portland he put all four engines into idle and glided the Jumbo Jet to a perfect landing in Seattle. The 747, by the way, will go 16 miles forward for every mile down on a glide.

"That wasn't an official test. It was just fun to do," said Waddell, now director of flight training at Boeing.

What makes a man become a test pilot?

"I don't know," says Lt. Col. Tom Pugh, an Air Force test pilot. "Why do guys go out and race cars? You can't put your finger on it. You like to be on the top of the heap. No. one is the American way. We were born with it. We're the No. 1 country."

SAYS Maj. Hoffman: "I guess test pilots are overachievers and super competitive. If it's a dart tournament or a ping pong tournament, blood will be spilled before it's over. My ex-wife said I had a death wish."

Waddell, who watches his racehorses when he's not flying the 747, describes it as a sport. "It's like going out to play a good basketball game. I've never considered myself a courageous type of guy."

And Fitzhugh Fulton, the NASA test pilot who will fly the 747 that will carry the new space shuttle into the air, adds: "It's fun to go to work. You get to fly and they pay you for it."

The pilots downplay fear, preferring the word apprehension. Charles Bock, the first man to take the B1 up, put it this way: "I was apprehensive, of course, but not afraid."

AN exception is ex-NASA test pilot Milt Thompson, now 50. He was frankly scared when he tested the X15, a 4,000-mph number that is more a rocket than a plane.

He qualified his fear, saying he had not been in on the early testing and design and he felt he didn't know enough. "At that speed, it's a 15-minute flight," said Thompson. "I just told myself it's all going to be over one way or another in 15 minutes."

Thompson, who was a crop-duster early in his career, was one of the few men who didn't set out to become a test pilot. He wanted to build bridges and just drifted into test flying.

Nearly all of the others started flying as soon as they could. Most then flew for the military and many went to the four recognized test-flight schools, one run by the Air Force, one by the Navy and one each in France and England.

"I JUST knew I wanted to fly," said Robert Stephens, a retired Air Force colonel who is nicknamed "The Silver Fox" and signs his name with a little fox. "It was later that I realized that the kind of flying I wanted to do was test flying."

Everyone here has a good story, but one of the best belongs to Fox Stephens, whose name is synonymous with testing the Blackbird. The Fox, now a consultant in Washington for a German engine company, was flying one day down to Mexico in a single-engine four-seater . . . without enough fuel . . . and a Standard Oil road map as his chief navigational aid.

This, to be reminded, is the man the Air Force chose to test its most sophisticated reconnaissance craft, a tough, reliable, stable man, a man who plans ahead. Usually.

ON THIS flight, he was heading for an unknown airport and presumed there was a city nearby. Wrong. He also figured that it would stay light a little longer. Wrong.

The night was moonless and starless and The Fox couldn't find the gravel runway. "Not to sweat." The Fox told his companions. He said it was always possible to put the plane down on the beach, where there is more light.

The Fox, alone, knew just how low on fuel they were running.

"Not to sweat," he kept repeating, fooling no one, since his shirt was soaking wet. A buddy on the ground turned on the landing lights on his plane and then he talked the Fox down, with five minutes of fuel left.

FOX maintained they still could have made it to the beach. They went to see the beach the next day. Sheer granite cliffs rise straight up from the sea.

The Gray Line bus arrives in Palmdale and the conventioneers get a look at the space shuttle, the Blackbird, the U2, as well as some other classics. And then there is an air show, and if you think you have seen an exciting air show, imagine one that would be put on for the Society of Experimental Test Pilots.

Veteran test pilot Bob Hoover tricks around with the usual things — the difference being he's got all the engines shut down. A little jet called the Pinto races into the air, the pilot stands her straight up and she disappears. Next seen, she's spinning straight down for the runway, but then rolls out of that, flies upside down and zooms over the runway — 20 feet above it.

The spectacle over, the pilot taxies his super Pinto down the runway. The plane, built for 900 pounds of thrust, is souped up to nearly 3,000 pounds. The pilot pulls 7Gs as he performs.

Most of the pilots known him well. He's Dick Hunt, chief engineering test pilot for American Jet Industries in Van Nuys. But those who don't know him, run to congratulate him, expecting some dashing movie-star type to get out of the cockpit.

But Robert Redford he isn't. He's 51, balding, short, and — I cannot draw the veil — he was wearing white bucks.

Law keeps 'tax favors' secret

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Internal Revenue Service chief Donald C. Alexander sought special legislation last summer that would have kept secret the tax favors granted by the IRS to elements of the billion-dollar empire of the late Howard Hughes, the Philadelphia Inquirer reports in a copyrighted story.

While failing to gain special treatment for Hughes' interests, the account said, Alexander was successful in obtaining from Congress a tax-law clause designed to keep secret the identities of persons who receive preferential tax rulings from the IRS.

ALEXANDER'S intense lobbying efforts resulted in the secrecy clause contained in the tax-reform bill signed Oct. 4 by President Ford, the article said.

The House Ways and Means Committee, Senate Finance Committee and Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation all acquiesced to Alexander's demands, the story said.

The IRS has granted Hughes' businesses several favorable tax rulings over the years, the account said, including a decision to exempt the Howard Medical Institute from federal income tax laws.

The institute is the lone stockholder in the Hughes Aircraft Co., one of the nation's largest defense contractors.

Alexander's alleged legislative efforts may have been intensified by the Inquirer's repeated attempts to secure IRS information on Hughes corporations under the Freedom of Information Act, the newspaper said.

That intensified effort began, the story said, when Alexander noticed a loophole in pending tax-reform legislation. The loophole, the story said, would have resulted in opening files of IRS favorable rulings made prior to Jan. 1, 1976.

Also during that time, the Inquirer had filed several requests and had an administrative appeal pending seeking Hughes-related information of the IRS under terms of the Freedom of Information Act.

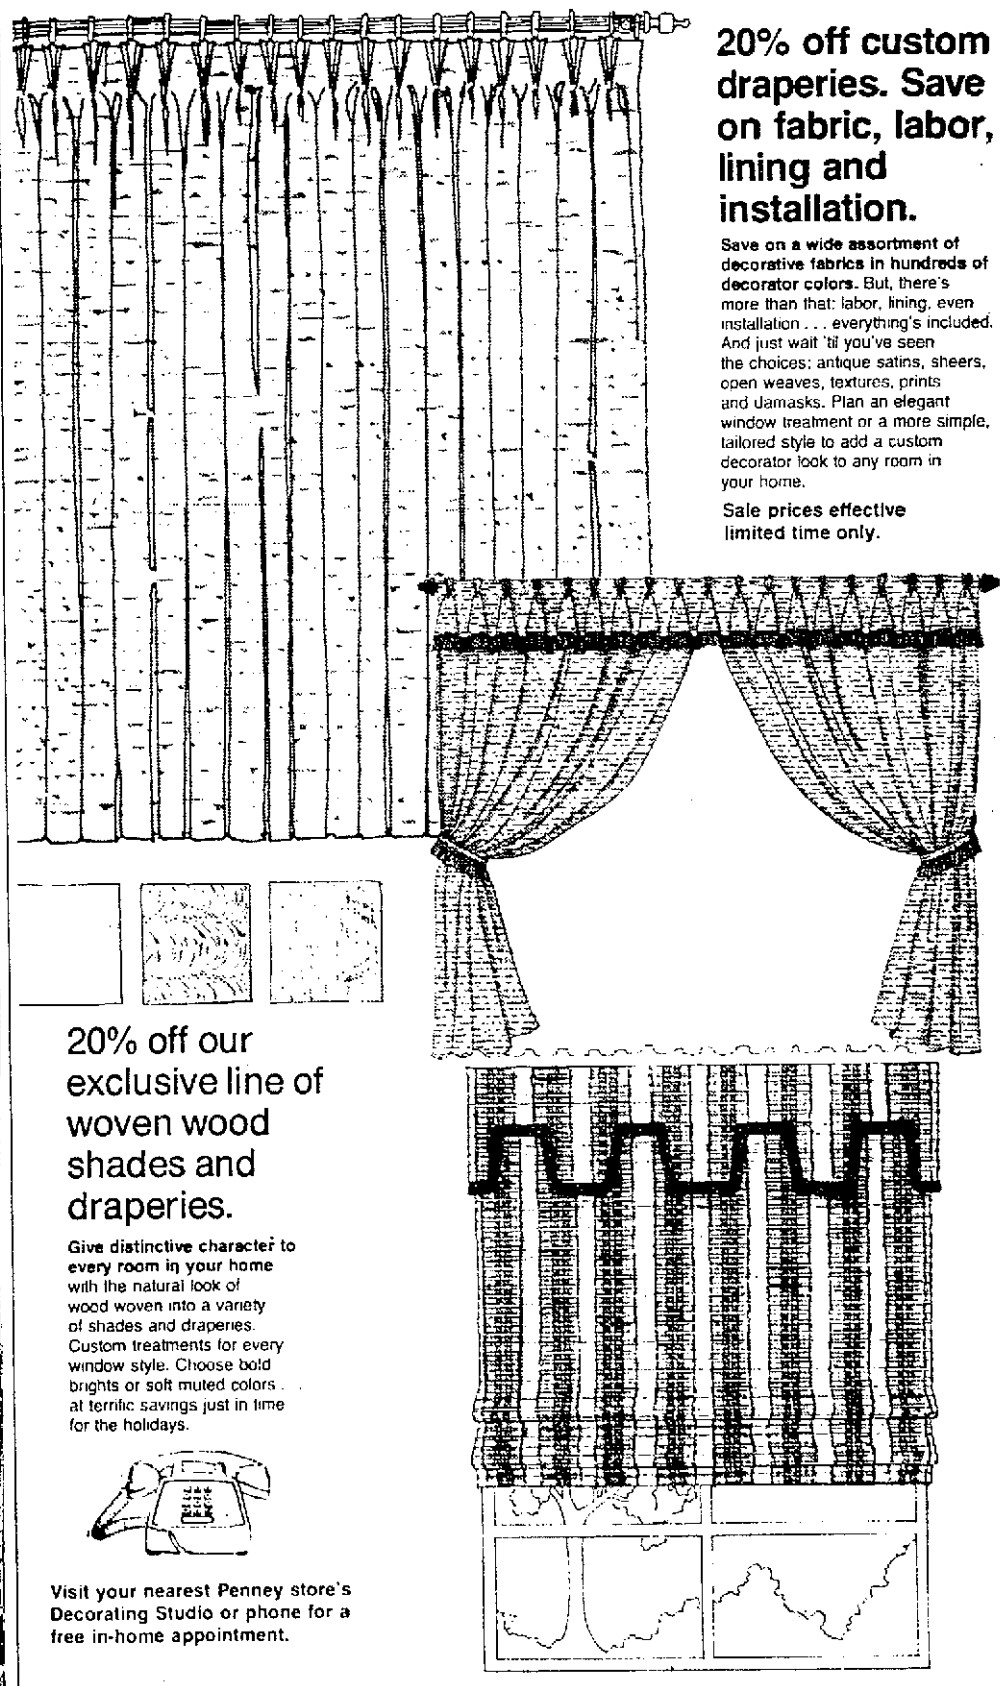

Alexander then suggested that language be added to the law specifically prohibiting the release of IRS rulings in which the taxpayer affected was named.

Cigarettes get 'added flavor'

By WAYNE KING
New York Times Service

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.—Each weekday morning, before he begins his job in the flavor application section of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 41-year-old John Shore puts in a stint as a member of the company's expert-smokers panel.

Usually he compares two to six cigarettes, in pairs, holding them in one hand. He puffs each alternately and deems them "rosey," "fruity," "winey," "buttery," "sulfury," "scratchy," "smooth," or any of a number of other designations of taste and character.

The work of Shore and nine fellow panelists, unpaid volunteers from company ranks trained to recognize and consistently describe cigarette characteristics, is becoming increasingly important. New brands and variations are coming on the market at the fastest pace in the history of the industry, signaling the most dramatic change in cigarettes since the switch to filters in the 1950s and 1960s.

THE NEW BULL MARKET is in "low tar." Although the low-tar cigarette category now commands only 15 per cent of the market, it has picked up 5 per cent of that (worth $375 million) in the past year, and the cigarette companies are estimated to be spending nearly half of their total advertising budget of $350 million to $400 million on low-tar brands this year.

"We are experiencing a dramatic change in the market," said Thomas Sandefur, vice president for advertising and brand management for Reynolds, the sales leader in the tobacco industry in the United States. "If you call the filter market of the '50s a revolution, then you call this a revolution."

A recent study of mortality tables sponsored by the American Cancer Society found that smokers of low-tar cigarettes suffered less from those diseases that have been linked to cigarette smoking than those who smoked cigarettes with a higher tar content. Such studies have signaled a less harsh attitude toward smoking.

IN THE MID-1950s, there were only 16 brands produced by the nation's six cigarette companies. Now there are some 150, not counting the variations within brands—the kings, superkings, menthols, soft-packs, boxes, lights, longs, long lights and other mutations.

Of the brands available, 43 are in the "low-tar" field—that is, one cigarette yields 15 milligrams of tar or less, the standard accepted by the Federal Trade Commission.

Moreover, tar and nicotine have been reduced substantially across the board in the past two decades. The National Cancer Institute noted this year that in 1955 the average tar yield was 43 milligrams. Now it is 18 milligrams and dropping with each new low-tar introduction. Nicotine has been more than cut in half, from 2.8 milligrams to 1.2 milligrams in the same period.

Dr. Gio B. Gori of the institute's division of cancer cause and research said a rapid shift to less hazardous cigarettes could "reduce the current epidemic proportions of smoking-related diseases to minimal levels in a few decades."

Companies are bringing out lower and lower tar brands, several in the past year. In that time, Reynolds's Vantage, the industry leader in low-tars, has been challenged by such newcomers as Merit, Kent Golden Lites, low-tar Pall Mall, Fact and several others, including even further reductions in existing low-tar brands like True and Carlton.

WITH THE ADDITION of Merit, the entry from Philip Morris, the second largest company and maker of the top-selling Marlboro line, the battle took on a new front.

For the first time, a cigarette company built its advertising campaign around the fact that the taste of its cigarette was "added on," not blended in through the use of real tobaccos. Philip Morris calls it "enriched flavor" and advertises it as a "scientific breakthrough."

What Philip Morris has done with Merit is to use an old, established technique to overcome what has been one glaring fault with low-tar cigarettes—they have very little taste.

Cigarette tar is reduced not by treating the tobacco, but by tightening the filter and using porous paper and tiny airholes in the filter to mix in air. Some reductions are also made by greater use of "reconstituted leaf," which is, according to Reynolds, "stems, scraps and dust," swept up and reprocessed into a sheet.

To make up for the missing tar, flavoring is added to almost every cigarette manufactured, a practice going back at least to 1913, when licorice, chocolate and sugar were added to Reynolds's extraordinarily successful Camel.

But the low-tars use more flavorings, and they have become considerably more complex. Dr. Alan Rodgman, director of research for Reynolds, said that a given cigarette might have "from a dozen to about 75" flavorants, the blends of which are closely held secrets.

Airline rivalry becoming a reel battle

So what if flight's over before the movie; you can stay on and watch

By RALPH BLUMENTHAL
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — They dueled in the skies in the great booze war, the piano-lounge war and the no-frills war. They fought with bagels, overhead-rack-space and legroom. Now the airlines are engaged in a whole new struggle: the great movie war.

Yes, the folks who brought you those previous dogfights in their efforts to win a slight competitive advantage over rival airlines are at it again — this time with movies on short domestic flights. Sometimes, in fact, the flights are shorter than the movies, and landed planes have to wait until a film finishes before unloading passengers.

Like previous confrontations between airlines, this one is privately deplored by some of the participants themselves. They ridicule it as another costly and futile venture in one-upmanship. Nobody wins an airline war, they say.

On the other hand, they note, once such a struggle breaks out in the hotly contested travel market, it would be illegal collusion for airline officials to get together to wage peace.

Movies aboard planes are not new. Trans World Airlines introduced them on transcontinental and overseas flights 15 years ago. Other airlines quickly followed suit, all agreeing on a charge (now $2.50) for use of the headphones that convey the sound track. In the past year or two, several domestic airlines have also begun showing free sports films and other short subjects on some flights.

But the domestic movie war broke out in earnest with the decision of National Airlines to introduce free first-run movies and film classics Oct. 1 on its flights of wide-bodied planes between New York and Miami.

National expanded the showings on Oct. 15 to other Florida cities and a week later to all its cities served by DC10 flights of two hours or more. By Dec. 15, the airline said, this will mean a total of 1,000 movie flights a month.

The films being shown include "Silent Movie," "Murder by Death," "Casablanca," "It Happened One Night" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

National Airlines also announced it was throwing in free popcorn.

"If you're really a movie freak," a National spokesman said, "you could catch a double feature by taking one flight from Miami to Houston and another on to Los Angeles."

This was too much for Eastern Air Lines, one of National's key rivals. Eastern announced it would show films on most of its wide-bodied flights starting Nov. 1. By the beginning of 1977, a spokesman for the airline said, Eastern plans to have 71 daily movie flights. "And all strictly first-run stuff," he added.

Eastern's offerings include "Silent Movie," "Future World," "Sky Riders" and "The Four Musketeers."

But Eastern feels it has been caught in a crossfire. On Sept. 13 American Airlines began showing cartoons, Jacques Cousteau movies and Spanish music films on its flights between New York and Puerto Rico, a market that Eastern also serves.

"We were fighting on two fronts," said the Eastern spokesman. "We had to respond to American." So movies were added to Eastern's San Juan runs.

Now that Eastern is going to show full-length films, an American Airlines spokesman said, American is "considering" escalating from shorts to regular movies.

Other carriers are trying to stay out of the fray. Delta Air Lines said it had no plans to join the combatants. United Airlines said it would limit itself to showing excerpts from the television show "60 Minutes" and the Olympics on some intercity flights. TWA has been showing short sports films on domestic flights for some time.

Airline officials seem appalled by the spreading struggle. "There's no way in the world one carrier can get ahead of another with giveaways," said one, anonymously. "All it does is cost everybody an immense amount of money."

It costs about $10,000 to equip one DC10 with the three required movie projectors, screens and sound systems, according to John Landstrom, vice president of Trans Com of Costa Mesa, one of the leading equipment suppliers. He said his company had recently equipped five National planes and 30 Eastern planes for films. Movie distributors charge the airlines $75 per film showing, he said.

In one key battleground, the airlines are fighting for about 8,000 passengers a day flying between New York and Miami-Fort Lauderdale.

Difficulty with the movies' running time has emerged. On Oct. 23 National's Flight 42 from Houston to Miami, helped by strong tail winds, arrived ahead of schedule. The passengers were kept on board three extra minutes to allow time for the film, "The Sunshine Boys," to finish. On Oct. 27 the same thing happened with the same film on National's Flight 34 from Los Angeles to New Orleans. This time debarkation was delayed six minutes.

The movie war reminds the airlines of earlier clashes above the clouds — the so-called booze war that erupted after Delta began serving free champagne in 1974, the wild competition involving live entertainment and piano bars and the price-slashing no-frills campaign.

In the movie war, it is Eastern that may have the ultimate weapon.

"We have a special wrinkle," a spokesman for the airline divulged. "In our B cabin will be a quiet zone — no movies here."

Natural-gas price '42% too high'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of a House subcommittee charged Saturday that the Federal Power Commission has ignored industry documents that show its new ceiling price for natural gas is at least 42 per cent too high.

The study said reports by hundreds of gas producers, submitted to the FPC under oath, indicate that the industry has been finding far more natural gas per foot of successful drilling than indicated by published industrywide estimates relied on by the FPC in setting its price limits.

That would mean the actual cost of finding gas was not as high as the FPC calculated, and the price it set would be higher than justified by those lower costs.

LAST July 27, the FPC raised the nationwide maximum price for gas sold by producers to interstate pipelines to $1.42 per thousand cubic feet, almost three times the previous limit of 52 cents.

The staff of the House subcommittee on oversight and investigations said, however, that forms filed by the producers under oath appear to support a ceiling price of about $1 and maybe not that much if the FPC were to adopt other recommended changes in its calculation.

The FPC has estimated that its new pricing policy would cost the public an additional $1.5 billion a year, but this included natural gas already limited to $1 per thousand cubic feet and gas at considerably lower prices under existing contracts.

Therefore, it was not immediately known how much money could be saved by adopting the subcommittee staff analysis, which has not been endorsed by the congressmen of the subcommittee itself.

In setting the new ceiling prices, the FPC said it relied on statistics published by the American Gas Association, an industry group that collects them indirectly and without any legal sanctions for misrepresentation.

Long criticized for accepting such statistics in rate-setting, the FPC ordered direct producer reporting of gas discoveries and drilling footage, under oath and subject to audit, but the new forms were stalled by challenges in court. Nevertheless, hundreds of producers submitted them.

The subcommittee said it examined those forms and found enough of them in good shape for analysis to reach the conclusion that the industry was finding far more natural gas per foot drilled than showed up in the AGA estimates.

The difference, it said, is enough to drop the ceiling price from $1.42 to $1 per thousand cubic feet, even including the FPC's allowance of a 48 per cent federal income tax as a cost of doing business.

The FPC, now considering a rehearing on its prices at the request of gas consumers, has been told the companies actually pay much less income tax than the supposed 48 per cent.

THE subcommittee staff said the FPC should not include federal income tax at all in setting gas rates.

If it excluded the federal tax, the staff said, the FPC could lower its price ceiling to 84 cents per thousand cubic feet.

TAXES

Did you know that the new government spending programs proposed by this Congress would add more than $1,000 in yearly income taxes to the average family of four?

Did you know that, right now, we pay more than $100 million interest—a day!— on our national debt of $350 billion; and we are adding $50 billion a year to that debt with programs already on the books?

The standard answer in Congress is that they will reform the tax code and soak the rich to pay for the new programs.

Did you know that successive Democratic Congresses have been reforming the code on that same promise, for the past 22 years? And your taxes have gone up, up, up!

It isn't that they don't mean what they promise, it's simply that they can't do it. The reason they can't do it is that they quickly run out of rich people to soak. In fact, only 10% of all American families make $25,000 or more—and a large percentage of those are families with two or more working members.

So, it is middle-income America that always winds up footing the bill.

If you elect me to the Congress I will vote against any bill that would increase your taxes.

I will vote for every measure that will ease your tax burden.

That's not a promise, it's a commitment.

Decriminalize gambling, U.S. panel recommends

Notes indifference of public to violations

By JON VAN
Knight News Service

Criminal prosecution for illegal gambling doesn't work and should be stopped, a federal commission studying betting has concluded.

Moreover, a report of the study suggests that states consider dropping most laws against social gambling and that the federal government make bettors' winnings tax-exempt.

The report recognizes several problems with expanded legalization of gambling. For one thing, legal forms seem to encourage illegal ones. But the commission believes most of its suggestions will be implemented eventually.

Most will be adopted, according to Stephen B. Bull, a member of the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling, "not because of anything the government does, but because of citizen attitudes. The trend to gambling is growing."

The commission, composed mostly of members of Congress along with some state and local officials, found that 61 per cent of the nation's adults gamble, and 48 per cent patronize commercial gambling, whether legal or illegal. Commercial gambling is legal or illegal wagering conducted for profit. In social gambling, legal or illegal, all money is returned to the bettors.

Almost 80 per cent of the adults questioned nationwide in the study indicated they favored legalization of some form of gambling.

The three-year commission study found that in the past 15 years the number of arrests for illegal gambling has declined steadily. This reflects a public indifference to gambling law violations, the panel concluded.

"The feeling is," Bull says, "that with people being mugged, raped and murdered on the streets, there isn't a heck of a lot of support to chase the local numbers runner."

In a national poll, a majority indicated that even among nonviolent crimes, gambling isn't very important. They rated other offenses—selling heroin, drunk driving, burglary, car theft, buying stolen property, selling marijuana, public drunkenness, prostitution, and pornography—as being more serious than gambling.

Most gambling arrests are for minor offenses, and few involve big gamblers or those connected with organized crime, the commission found. Many arrests appeared to have been motivated by a need to meet local police department quotas, and a disproportionately high number involved blacks, the panel concluded.

"Although blacks account for only about 11 per cent of the population of the United States," the report says, "they account for 72.8 per cent of the gambling arrests in 1974."

But it adds, "Although a disproportionate number of blacks are arrested for gambling, gambling laws or their enforcement cannot be said to be discriminatory in the usual sense.

"Visibility, rather than race, is the basis for these arrests. Black participation in public social gambling, such as dice or card games, and numbers writing is high compared to the participation of whites.

"Because these offenses are highly visible to police . . . they account for a substantial majority of gambling arrests."

Those convicted of gambling offenses seldom draw heavy fines or prison sentences, the study found, again indicating public complacency toward gambling as a crime.

The report recommends that gambling be decriminalized. A more effective way to control big-time gambling racketeers is through civil court orders, it says.

While such orders aren't punitive—they won't put a gambling boss in jail—they can put a gambler out of business, the report says.

Under the federal government's Racketeer-Influenced and Corrupt Organization (RICO) statutes, prosecutors needn't prove a defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt to get a conviction, as is the case under criminal statutes.

Instead, the prosecutor need only show a preponderance of evidence of gambling violations to get a court order against future violations. Such orders can even prevent a suspected gambler from doing things that would normally be legal.

"For example," the study notes, "an individual who is restrained from accepting horse wagers can be prohibited from visiting a racetrack in a state where parimutuel gambling is legal. Also, a defendant can be forced to divest himself of property that he utilizes to carry out his illegal gambling business—for example, a legitimate business used as a cover for the illegal operation."

Bull says the commission suggestion that civil court orders supplant criminal prosecutions to control organized gambling "is already the trend."

Another strategy is for legal gambling to compete effectively with illegal gambling to eliminate the illegal profits that organized crime channels into other illicit operations. Competition will never be effective, however, as long as the government taxes winnings from legal gambling, the report says.

Illegal winnings are never taxed, goes the reasoning; thus the bettor is more likely to patronize a bookie who won't report his winnings to the government than a legal off-track-betting office that will.

The commission realizes that its chances of obtaining tax exemption for gambling winnings now "are slim to none," Bull says. In the long run, however, commission members hope Congress will see the wisdom of such a move.

The tax-exemption ploy has worked well in Canada, the report notes.

Cold sufferers told to 'enjoy'

By JANE FLOERCHINGER
Knight News Service

Consumers spent about $735 million for cough and cold remedies in 1975.

In many, if not most, cases, saltwater nose drops and a cough syrup of honey and lemon juice concocted at home would have been as effective and cheaper, contends a University of Kansas physician.

"There really is very little we can do about colds," says Dr. Burton A. Dudding, chairman of the Pediatrics Department at the School of Medicine.

"I don't want you to say we've been had by Madison Avenue, but those who advocate remedies do so on fairly shaky scientific data."

DUDDING recently published an article entitled "On the Cause of Colds, Their Treatment and Prevention," which he said is intended to alert consumers to some facts about colds.

The gist of his message: Colds can't be prevented, nor, once started, can their course be shortened. Further, "If you treat a cold, you'll get over it in about a week; if you don't treat it, it will take seven days."

So, Dudding concludes, doctors should spend their time and effort teaching people to accept colds as a way of life, emphasizing their benefits.

Among other things, the physician wrote, colds "give us an acceptable excuse to take an occasional day off when we need a brief respite from work or school."

"THEY give us an opportunity to be sick (but not too sick) once in a while, with the attendant benefits of being nurtured and waited upon for a day or two by our parents, spouses or children. So why not relax and enjoy your next cold?"

Responds Louis Thompson, director of public affairs for the association representing the across-the-counter drug industry, "That's kind of a romantic vestige."

Many people, he said, cannot afford the luxury of taking off work: "It's whatever a person wants to do. If he wants to take a whole week off and feel miserable, that's his right. But if he's going to go to work, he's entitled to have something that will relieve his symptoms."

Thompson said none of the products is labeled as a cure for colds or their symptoms, but merely as providing temporary relief for the symptoms.

HOME remedies may have certain benefits, but there are limits, he said: "Chicken soup doesn't get rid of a headache." As for cost, he continued, the American public spent just $3.43 per person for cough-cold medicines last year.

The argument doesn't stop with Dudding and Thompson or physicians and the drug industry. A couple of months ago the federal Food and Drug Administration opened up 10 cold-remedy ingredients for across-the-counter sales, prompting a Ralph Nader organization to charge that not one of them does any good.

A cold is a disease associated with an infection of the upper respiratory tract caused by any one of more than 200 viruses and bacteria.

"The majority (about 95 per cent) are due to viruses," Dudding said. "These are not critters that are treatable by antibiotics."

THERE is no defense, he said, for the continued practice of giving antibiotics for colds aith the exception of children 5 to 15 years of age with a streptococcal infection that can lead to rheumatic fever.

To have a cold a person must be exposed and must be susceptible. He must also show the symptoms. There is considerable evidence that people frequently have upper-respiratory infections without knowing it because they experience no symptoms. No one knows why they don't, he said.

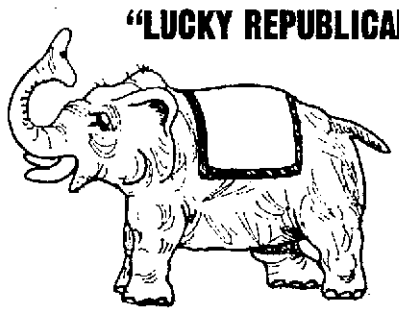

DUDDING begins his section on treatment with a quotation from Sir Alexander Fleming, the discoverer of penicillin: "A good gulp of whisky at bedtime — it's not very scientific, but it helps."

That's about where the state of the art stands today, the pediatrician said.

Summary of 10 Secret Witness cases and rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 68 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $46,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial.

Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information directly through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness first — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P-T Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade of Long Beach while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and assault-robbery conviction of the man and woman holdup team who shot and wounded Joseph H. O'Connor, 35-year-old Torrance area market owner, during the attempted holdup next door of the National Environmental Corp. food stamp headquarters, 22848 S. Western Ave., at 1:15 p.m. on April 1, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Alexander Burdelas, 53, of Norwalk at San Antonio Drive and Firestone Boulevard in Norwalk at 1 p.m. Sept. 27, 1975. The hit-run car was described as a 1964 light-colored Pontiac with chrome rims.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment-house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a female manager in another. Mack is black, 5 feet 9, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. If he is convicted on armed-robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of James Hamilton Macgenn, 50-year-old employe of King's Imperial Restaurant in Lynwood at 1004 Atlantic Ave. stabbed to death in the restaurant parking lot as he was leaving work at 3:30 a.m. on June 1, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home on S. Pacific Avenue in San Pedro at 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds and speaks French as a second language.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 42-year-old Donna Rae Goodell, found beaten to death in her home at 12230 Briarwood St. in Stanton on April 21, 1975.

— Rewards totaling $2,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by Knights of Columbus Council 3449 — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Steven Robert Snedeker, an 18-year-old clerk shot to death during a robbery at the H & O Liquor Store, 6069 Cherry Ave., on the night of Jan. 27, 1975.

Werewolves, vampires just plain folks in Transylvania

CLAREMONT (AP) — The residents of Transylvania believe that werewolves and vampires prowl the earth, but the creatures of their legends aren't the same as the Hollywood version.

Transylvanians don't regard the stories of human wolves with particular horror, either, but just a fact of life, says Dr. Harry A. Senn, French teacher at Pitzer College, who sampled folklore in Romania recently on a Fulbright fellowship.

"They're very matter-of-fact. It's just that these things can happen and you've got to be careful," says Senn.

He says Romanians — Transylvania is now part of that Eastern European country — consider werewolves and vampires as a part of nature and a product of the stuggle between God and the devil in creating the earth.

But they don't set much store in the Hollywood depiction of those creatures as murderous ghouls or bloodsucking, sexual marauders.

"I think the Romanians would consider that rather immature," says Senn.

Werewolves are occasionally seen as agents of God sent to punish cattle farmers by eating their herds.

Senn says he talked to four older persons who told him people they knew had been compelled by the call of wolves to run into the forest, strip and turn into wolves before the very eyes of their loved ones.

Unlike the American portrayal of the man who turns hairy and demonic under a full moon, the werewolf in Romanian legend doesn't change under lunar influence, Senn says. Rather it is an accident of birth that makes one a werewolf.

Becoming a vampire, on the other hand, has to do with an accident of death.

Some of the Romanians Senn talked to believe in vampires, which they call strigoi — dead human beings whose spirits aren't at rest because of improper burial rites.

Some Romanians believe the spirit is apt to seep out of the underworld to bedevil old enemies, terrorize farm animals and render fields infertile.

Senn says he was told in Romania that strigoi drink blood but don't necessarily bite human necks to get it.

Tradition has it that a stake is needed to banish the strigoi for good, but believers hold that the stake must be plunged into the heart through the back, rather than the chest.

How to become a secret witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.s Do not give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

New tasks for cruise official

In-PORT-ant people

Charles "Chuck" Slocombe, director of public relations for Long Beach/Catalina Cruises since the cross-channel line began operating five years ago, has been given new responsibilities, including handling public relations for all of Crowley Maritime Corp.'s Southern California operations.

Those operations include Catalina Island Cruises/San Pedro, Crowley Environmental Service, San Diego Transportation, Crowley Salvage Co. and Crowley Derrick and Barges (formerly Smith-Rice).

Before joining Long Beach/Catalina Cruises, Slocombe spent 35 years with the Long Beach-based Pacific Towboat and Salvage Co. In the late '20s he worked on water taxis hauling sailors to and from ships anchored in the Long Beach outer harbor and hauling adventure-seeking landlubbers looking for a chance to get even aboard the flashing lights of the offshore gambling boats.

Since joining Crowley, he has lectured to more than 200,000 Southern California school children about the relationships of gray whales migrating down the Southern California coastline toward their mating grounds. He is a member of the Los Angeles-Long Beach Propeller Club and the Binnacle Club and a delegate to the Radio Technical Commission for Maritime Services.

No racing

The International and National Brotherhood of Street Racers Inc., rebuffed for a second time by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners in its attempt to use an abandoned runway on Reeves Field for races, believes the decision is strictly for the birds.

The Harbor Department staff has twice recommended that the racing association's request to use the former naval air station on Terminal Island be denied, and twice the commission followed its staff's thinking.

One of the reasons for denying the Street Racers' request was that the racing activities would interfere with the nesting seasons of the rare and endangered least tern.

There were other reasons for the commission's refusal to respond to the pleas of Andrew "Big Willie" Robinson, the racing group's leading exponent, to use the abandoned airstrip.

The commission noted that it needed the runway area for the storage of imported automobiles and that, under the state's tidelands grant, it had to reserve tideland acreage for navigation and commerce. The commission was given legal advice that tideland areas could be used only for other purposes if declared surplus.

The staff pointed out that not only was the airstrip no surplus but it is needed for the "commerce" of storing inbound foreign cars and trucks.

"Big Willie" (he placed sixth in the recent Mr. America contest) pleaded for at least just one weekend to conduct races such as those among drag cars, bicyles, foot runners, skateboarders and any other type of racing competition except dry-land surfboarding. A staff recommendation was that, if the commission grants the street racers' request, all vehicles must be equipped with mufflers.

Despite pleas of "Big Willie," the commission said it would be "unfair" to allow his group to set up barricades and portable rest rooms, arrange for security guards and handle the many other details concerned with conducting a race, then one week later be "kicked out." The racers lost by a vote of 3 to 0.

They filed from the room quietly, obviously disappointed.

But the street racers, who conduct their various kinds of races on deserted streets until the cops are called and run them off, indicated they were not going to give up the fight to get "our people off the streets."

"Anybody got a dime? I want to call Mayor Bradley," said "Big Willie" as the group headed for a phone booth.

Fore!

Long Beach harbor commisioners are a dedicated group, especially on the golf course, and will go to any lengths to promote the port overseas.

That is evidenced by what happened a couple of weeks ago at the Hague Golf and Country Club in Wassenaar, the Netherlands.

Rik Wijsenbeek, a grain merchant associated with the operators of Long Beach's Koppel Inc. grain terminal, was visiting his homeland and played golf with some business associates and friends. He teed off on the sixth hole and sliced his tee shot into the rough. He followed the path of the ball into the rough and found not only his ball but another in the grass about five inches away.

He picked up the other ball, which obviously had been in the rough for some time, and examined it for "smiles." It was not the ball that had a "smile," but the grain merchant from Long Beach.

Imprinted on the found ball were the words "Port of Long Beach."

The ball had been hit (and lost) by Commissioner Dick Wilson while playing the Hague course the year before.

E. Europe growing as narcotics route

20 nations to tighten intelligence network

ROME (AP) — The Turkish-French connection appears to be dormant and heroin traffic out of Mexico declining, but enforcement officials say international drug rings are now resorting to new connections, including transit through Eastern Europe.

Increasingly, narcotics traffickers are using unsuspecting youths or elderly persons as "mules" to smuggle drugs across borders.

Those were among key conclusions reached by narcotics agents from 20 nations gathered in Rome for a closed five-day meeting that ended Friday night. The conference agreed on steps to develop a tighter worldwide intelligence network, particularly to help combat the rising flow of heroin from Southeast Asia's "Golden Triangle."

"THEY are better organized and move fast through places one can hardly imagine," one participant at the meeting said about the current narcotics situation. "Our best chance is to spot them locally and relay the intelligence information to national agents ahead of time."

The conference also found, according to sources, that Western Europe's heroin addiction is reaching danger points in almost every major city. Heroin seizures in Western Europe so far this year have amounted to about 700 pounds, more than triple the entire haul last year, and are likely to total some 1,200 pounds by the end of the year.

By contrast, in 1971 only 14 pounds of heroin was seized in Europe, which had served as the main processing and transit point for Turkish heroin en route to the United States.

Drug shipments destined for Western Europe — where a kilogram (2.2 pounds) of heroin goes for about $25,000 — are beginning to pass through Eastern Europe to circumvent agents who have concentrated their attention primarily on the western part of the continent.

HOWEVER, drug-enforcement officials say Eastern European authorities are beginning to cooperate in seizing narcotics couriers. In recent years, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and U.S. Customs Service have offered narcotics-training courses for policemen and customs inspectors in several Eastern European countries.

Officials say they hope the Soviet Union also will cooperate and stiffen controls after the recent conviction in Moscow of three young Americans who were carrying about 60 pounds of heroin in their suitcases on a flight from Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to Paris.

"So far we see Eastern Europe only as a transit area," one narcotics agent commented. "But even there the youth is changing and drugs are a part of the so-called 'hooliganism.'" No Eastern European country was represented at the Rome parley.

U.S. narcotics officials said their concern is that heroin on the European market, focused in Amsterdam, is about to make its way to the United States, where there are an estimated 300,000 heroin addicts and some 5,000 heroin deaths a year.

According to narcotics agents, the major new connection has its source in the remote, mountainous "Golden Triangle" of Burma, Laos and Thailand, where opium poppies are grown in areas mostly controlled by antigovernment insurgents and processed by laboratories in Burma.

The triangle's annual opium output is estimated at 700 tons, while another 400 tons comes from along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border.

Agents say the Southeast Asian heroin makes its way to Thailand or Malaysia, then is funneled through points including Hong Kong and Vancouver, Canada, before entering the United States, mostly on the West Coast.

According to U.S. drug-enforcement sources, Turkey's clampdown on illicit poppy cultivation has been effective and has made heroin laboratories in the Marseille area — the noted French connection — obsolete for the time being.

Mexican "brown sugar," which grew to fill the resulting gap to the point of supplying 90 per cent of America's $17 billion annual heroin trade, is now down to about 80 per cent and expected to decline further, mainly because of a crackdown by the Mexican government.

Dever known as wizard with budgets

L.B. city manager-to-be gets results quietly

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

SUNNYVALE — Whatever it was that propelled John Dever to the top of his profession as a city manager — and he's regarded in municipal government circles as one of the best in the business — it was not braggadocio or back-slapping.

The man who will take over Long Beach's top administrative post Jan. 1 is, by temperament and style, a private man — an ascetic who thrives on challenge, shuns the limelight, feels uneasy in the presence of roisterous chumminess and is as spare in his conversation about himself as he is in his physique.

At 5 feet 10, Dever is a trim 160 pounds. Given his soft voice, low-key style and preference for conservative business suits, he impresses people as a model of managerial austerity.

After nine years as city manager of Sunnyvale, the impression hasn't changed. To hear Sunnyvale citizens and politicians talk, there isn't a dollar in this city's $35-million budget that Dever can't account for, and for which he isn't getting every penny's worth of value.

"HE RUNS a tighter ship than anyone in Santa Clara County," says Sunnyvale Councilman Lawrence Stone, an investment counselor in private life.

"He's the taxpayer's best friend," adds Mayor Donald Logan.

Some of Dever's subordinates discuss him in almost reverential tones. Phyllis Brant, Sunnyvale's personnel chief and a woman who is not inclined to exaggerated judgments, says unabashedly that Dever is "a brilliant manager."

Gregory Morris, who might be called "the man in the middle" on Sunnyvale's council — he's a maverick liberal who has tried to act as peacemaker between the council's warring factions — finds Dever a fascinating study.

"The first thing that comes to mind about Dever," says Morris, an attorney, "is that he's a consummate public servant — a workaholic who didn't take a vacation until he'd been here five years."

MORRIS says Dever, an ex-Marine lieutenant, seems to be obsessed with physical fitness, somehow finding time to run three or four miles every day.

"Dever," he adds, "is also a real nut on retreats — for himself and his staff. This year he spent three or four days at the Menninger Institute (in Topeka).

"One fault with John is that he has a hard time admitting he's wrong. But fortunately he's right most of the times. He also has strong opinions."

The keystone of Dever's reputation, both in Sunnyvale and among the fraternity of city managers throughout the country, has been his fiscal wizardry.

Dever is said to be a magician with a budget and as tight a fiscal manager as can be found anywhere in the United States.

Yet Morris believes that, as well-deserved as that reputation is, it obscures an equally important side of Dever's public personality — a side Morris describes with the phrase "humane pragmatism."

Dever has been accused by some of his critics — and he has a few in Sunnyvale, his reputation notwithstanding — of not being sympathetic to the city's less fortunate citizens.

BUT MORRIS doesn't agree. Dever, he says, is concerned with social problems. But he combines that concern with a sense of what's practical and possible.

Dever himself says it's a matter of priorities. One thing he is careful not to do, he explains, is plunge into a social program merely because federal funds are available.

"It's best to have your needs and goals carefully defined," he says, "and then see if there are federal funds available to help you relieve the taxpayers of the burden.

"Just because federal money is there doesn't mean a city should take advantage of it," Dever declares. The government may pull out of a program at a later date, "and you may get stuck with it."

The fact that Dever approaches social programs with a measure of caution is not to say that he eschews them completely. Nor does he feel that all programs have to pay off in tangible dividends, he says.

For that reason perhaps, he has taken advantage of federal neighborhood-improvement funds, pushed a solid-waste program in Santa Clara County, encouraged the acquisition of open space for parks and recreation and supported the city's $4-million community center — not to mention a neighborhood center on the north side of town, where Sunnyvale's small minority population is centered.

Morris also feels that some of Dever's human qualities have been hidden by his private nature: his inability or unwillingness to trumpet his own good deeds.

"HE DOESN'T show his work," says the councilman. "Recently, for example, he helped a woman whose child was burned. In another instance, he assisted a woman who was suing the city by helping her fill out the legal papers. He'll do these things and not say anything."

To Morris, Dever is the real leader of Sunnyvale — its commander, as he puts it.

But if Dever is Sunnyvale's commander, his command is neither flamboyant nor highly visible. It's that lack of visibility, in fact, that has given him a reputation among some as being insulated from the city and its citizens. It's a reputation Dever has had a hard time shaking.

To some observers, Dever appears to have opened up a lot in recent months — which may be as much a reflection of his political astuteness as his own changing style. For Sunnyvale's seven-member council has three members whose election was largely the work of the city's powerful citizen lobby, known as Orchards.

Appraisal of new city hall depends on point of view

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

Long Beach City Hall — landmark or liability?

Backers of the 14-story, $26-million building contend it will serve as a symbol for the city and, further, that it is being built at an absolute minimum cost.

CRITICS of the project — due to open in December, one year late — say the building is a liability, plagued with a series of structural, legal and financial problems.

The structure is part of a civic-center project that includes a new library and was financed by a $36-million bond issue. The bonds, which have earned $5 million in interest, were issued in 1973 by the Civic Center Authority.

City officials, led by former City Manager John R. Mansell, were frustrated in their efforts to gain a new city hall and library when voters rejected bond issues three times during the 1950s for such an undertaking.

OFFICIALS pointed out that the old city hall was built to serve a city of 56,000 in 1921; the library to serve 17,800 citizens in 1909.

The Civic Center Authority, meanwhile, was formed as a joint-powers agreement between the city and the county with the right to issue bonds.

(Joint-powers agreements between two governmental units were authorized by the State Legislature as a method of issuing bonds without voter approval.)

Allied Architects, composed of four locally prominent architectural firms, was selected by Mansell and approved by the City Council in 1969 to do the design.

THE FOUR firms were Hugh Gibbs and Donalds Gibbs, Frank Homolka and Associates, Killingsworth, Brady and Associates and Kenneth Wing Sr. and Kenneth Wing Jr. They received total fees of $1,650,000, according to the city engineer's office.

"A city like Long Beach needs a mark," said Donald Gibbs. "We need a visual image we can associate with. We're pushing an old ocean liner and that hasn't been too successful.

"We live here," Gibbs said of his fellow architects. "We're dedicated to the place. We wanted a recognizable symbol, a civic center that wouldn't be copied by surrounding office buildings."

BUT according to a construction official who asked to remain anonymous because of his fear of reprisals, the building has several major problems:

—Triangular landings on the outside of the building, between the glass superstructure and the concrete support towers.

Intended to make the building architecturally attractive, the landings are called "pigeon roosts" by construction workers because of their attractiveness for birds.

Gibbs defends the landings as necessary to make the building distinctive.

"I QUESTIONED them," City Engineer Thomas Marchese said of the landings, but added, "the architect may say, 'If you want a barn or a box, hire someone else.'"

The 108 landings forced the city to design and order $70,000 worth of special window-washing equipment and probably added $2 million to the cost of the project, the construction official estimated.

Gibbs called the source's figure "unsound." He said construction of the landings was relatively simple.

—A heating and cooling system that Gibbs concedes will be unusually costly to operate. The architect pointed out that the building was designed and construction began just prior to the 1974 energy crisis.

"AT THE time, it seemed like the right system to use. We certainly weren't very far-sighted," Gibbs said.

According to estimates from the budget department, costs for heating and cooling the building will run about $625,000 annually, against $60,000 for the old city hall.

Gibbs disputed the city's figures, saying it was about $400,000 too high.

The source said that since the building is sealed, it will heat up to 100 degrees within 30 minutes if the air-conditioning breaks down on a hot day.

GIBBS pointed out that most official buildings still do not have open windows. He said he was going to recommend to the City Council that the building temperature be allowed to fluctuate from 68 to 78 degrees to conserve energy.

— Approximately 50 underground parking spaces built at a cost of $5,000 each, according to a letter from Mansell to the City Council in 1969. The spaces, for the council and executives, could have been built above ground for $2,000 each, Mansell wrote, but would have been further from the building.

'Take kids to park for safe Halloween'

Long Beach Police Chief Ralph Kortz and Fire Chief Virgil Jones recommended Saturday that children — for safety's sake — be taken to city or county Recreation Department Halloween programs at numerous Southland parks tonight instead of going door-to-door.

The Long Beach Recreation Department will host costume parades, game booths and the "Burning of the Giant Pumpkin" at 13 city parks.

The Halloween carnivals start at 6:30 p.m., with the pumpkin finale at 8:30 p.m.

Participating parks include Admiral Kidd, Bay Shore, Bixby, Cherry Avenue, Drake, El Dorado, Houghton, King, MacArthur, Ramona, Silverado, Veterans and Wardlow.

The spook houses will be open at Silverado and Houghton parks.

The Southeast Parks and Recreation District, which includes the cities of Norwalk and La Mirada, will hold its annual Halloween carnival at city parks from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Activities for Artesia youngsters will be found at Artesia and Padelford parks from 6 to 9:30. The spook house at Artesia Park will be open from 7 to 9:30.

Spook houses, games and parades are also scheduled from 6 to 8 p.m. at Sigler, Bolsa Chica and Park West parks in Westminster.

Omar Bradley guest at ceremony

The Navy commissioned the 658-foot replenishment oiler USS Roanoke Saturday in an impressive Long Beach Naval Shipyard ceremony.

Retired Gen. of the Armies Omar N. Bradley was a special guest and inspected the honor guard.

U.S. Rep. M. Caldwell Butler, R-Va., a World War II naval officer whose son is in the Navy, was the speaker. A native of Roanoke, Butler told the crew, "Consider me your congressman."

He said the Roanoke will enable the Pacific Fleet to help maintain its combat readiness in the face of a growing Soviet challenge.

"WITHOUT ships of this type, the fleet would be unable to handle its commitments in the 95 million square miles of the Pacific and Indian oceans," he said.

Rear Adm. W. Haley Rogers, commandant of the 11th Naval District from San Diego, placed the ship in commission at 11:35 a.m. and Capt. Paul A. Asmus became the first commanding officer.

The ship was the 25th built for the Navy by National Steel & Shipbuilding in San Diego and will be based there.

Roanoke, the fourth ship to bear the city's name, is under command of Vice Adm. W.R. St. George, Pacific Fleet Surface commander.

Roanoke Mayor Noel C. Taylor presented an electric popcorn machine to the crew and a silver service to the wardroom on behalf of the city.

The mayor gave keys to the city to Capt. Asmus; Adm. Maurice F. Weisner, commander-in-chief, Pacific, whose wife was the ship's sponsor; and Gen. Bradley.

The general, 83, last of the nation's five-star officers, was besieged by autograph seekers afterward.

He left his wheelchair to inspect the honor guard and stood and saluted as the "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played.

Opposition to rerouting of traffic strong

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

When it comes to sounding off about the city's traffic problems, Southeast Long Beach has more squeaky wheels than any other part of town.

Fiercely protective of their neighborhoods, its residents oppose any proposals to improve cross-town traffic flow that would route more cars through their residential communities.

PEOPLE TALK

F.C. ANDERSON

IT WAS A Sunday morning painted in the soft pastels of vacation postcards. Quartermaster Willard E. Murphy, 24, stood forward of the gangway on the four-stack light cruiser USS Raleigh. Just off bridge watch, Bill Murphy awaited the 8 o'clock boat that would take him to the mainland for flying lessons.

There would be no flying lessons for Quartermaster Murphy that day. There would be no tomorrow for 2,117 officers and men of the U.S. Navy, the soon-to-be-dead of a Sunday that lives in infamy — Dec. 7, 1941.

As Bill Murphy stood forward of the gang a few ticks before 8, an aerial torpedo knifed between No. 1 and No. 2 firerooms opposite the Raleigh's second funnel, penetrating four decks. Sea water roiled up through the ruptured plates, washing Bill Murphy down past the midship hatch.

"Next thing I knew I was back on duty on the bridge. How I got there is a blank. First thing I remember was looking up to see Capt. R. Bentham Simons, the skipper, bawling out orders. He was wearing his World War I steel helmet and blue-striped pajamas. Nobody laughed. I snapped out of shock when the captain sent me foretop to check on casualties, damage and the state of our firepower."

The Raleigh was holding up well but was in danger of sinking hulldown in the muck. Capt. Simons kept his ship afloat by jettisoning everything movable, by wangling extra pumps, by stuffing life belts into leaks, by borrowing four pontoons, by help from a nearby lighter.

As the Raleigh battled for life, the battleship Utah, set out to pasture as a target-towing vessel, capsized; the battleships Arizona and Oklahoma sank — the Arizona bottoms up, entombing 1,102 officers and men for eternity.

Bill Murphy will be 59 next month, and the hell of that December day at Pearl Harbor has given way to the serenity of a house in Los Altos, four children, and a marriage that will be 35 years old next anniversary. He wears his years and his memories well, and he shares them with quiet pride with the man from "People Talk." The scenes of war and peace are summoned up on the instant replay camera of his well-ordered mind and voiced in the soft, folksy drawl of his native Paducah, Ky.

The echoes of long-ago guns still as he tells about attending the Paducah church where Alben Barkley (The Veep) worshiped. Bill Murphy was a townsman of Irvin S. Cobb, and he has the Cobb flair for telling a story. If Bill Murphy's mustache was white and his dark hair grayed, he could play Judge Priest.

True, Bill Murphy might have to struggle to fit into his WWII issue 13-button pants, but the salty speech of his chief quartermaster rank is still as snug as his rolling gait. He'd be as much at home on a canted deck as he is in his den with the picture-lined walls and mounds of books.

He digresses from war to tell about his children, Carol, 31, a nurse; Sandy, 30, a dedicated and intense teacher in the Lynwood school system; Denny, 26, a Long Beach State graduate who is with the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation; and Danny, 12, a chip off the old block and the reason for last summer's 7,000-mile camper trip through the United States.

"We stay young through Danny, and, in a sense, grow up together, seeing all the things we might have missed before, sharing discoveries."

Bill Murphy wants to go to Pearl Harbor for the 35th reunion of Pearl Harbor Survivors Association. Every five years since the 25th anniversary, the survivors have convened aboard the memorial erected over the USS Arizona. Bill Murphy will go, and take Danny, if he can sell his wife on the idea. He probably will, for he's a super salesman, in business and private life.

Bill Murphy remembers Pearl Harbor, and he wants 12-year-old Danny Murphy to remember, too. "Another five years, and it will be too late. Kids develop other interest at 17, jobs and baseball and the like. I figure this year will be my last chance at a Pearl Harbor reunion."

If the Murphys go, Danny will see where the Raleigh joined World War II, riding easy and unsuspecting on the northwest side of Ford Island. And Danny will hear about the reserve ensign and gunner's mate who — under fire — assembled one of the ship's brand new 1.1-inch guns and knocked down four Japanese planes.

And Danny may hear his father talk about fear and the self-doubts that assail a man when he recognizes it in himself after the battle. Danny will learn that the scared warrior and the battle hero are one and the same man. That's the way the adrenalin flows, the way wars are fought.

Landmark or a liability?

OTHER employes will continue to park in the old lots at the rear of 200 W. Broadway and at a new lot to be built across from the new city hall on Ocean Boulevard, according to the engineer's office.

— Ceiling tiles used throughout the building are 13½ inches square, a custom-made size expensive to replace, the construction source said.

Gibbs said that the city has 4,000 replacement tiles. He pointed out that office walls in the building are movable on tracks located in the floors and ceilings.

Telephone lines and power outlets are beneath the tracks. This made the special ceiling tiles necessary so that the ceiling tracks are spaced equally with the floor wall tracks. The special tiles also serve to space lights so that no light would ever be blocked by a wall, Gibbs said.

ALTHOUGH the ceiling tiles are custom-made, the city will save money by creating a building that allows floor arrangements to be changed literally overnight, Gibbs said.

— Lights in hallways and on the City Council and city manager floors are mercury vapor lamps. While they are extremely energy efficient, the lamps take eight to ten minutes to come on again if they are turned off, Marchese acknowledged.

If there should be a power failure, employes would be walking in the dark for several minutes after the building shifted to its $118,000 emergency generator, the source said. He pointed out that this could be particularly disastrous in the event of an earthquake.

The public service department is already preparing to rewire some floors, Marchese admitted, because of another problem. Some conference rooms have light switches that affect most others on that floor — so if someone wants to see slides or movies, for example, in one room, much of that floor would have to go dark.

— The first rain of the season brought trouble for the building's six elevators. They all quit running for four days because water leaked into the shafts, the source said.

Marchese verified the problem, but said it had been corrected and the elevators have now been certified as safe by state inspectors.

— Some fire alarms have been installed in the actual ceiling, which is located above the false ceiling. They will have to be dropped down into the false ceiling, the source said.

Disgruntled construction supervisors also complained of alleged extravagances, including 36 carloads of half-bricks used to surface the plaza around the civic center. They were all hand laid and grouted.

ANOTHER complaint concerned the visual display system for the council chambers. The screen is a single piece of optical glass that measures 10 by 25 feet and took 21 men to carry into place, according to the source. The complex system, which includes multiple projectors, cost $45,000.

"I'm glad we built it (the new city hall) when we did," Marchese said. "Right now, it would cost another $10 million to duplicate the building."

Asked why the engineer's office couldn't have watched over the architects more closely and have urged them to cut costs, he replied, "We hired a consultant with expertise in a particular field. I wish we had the time, money and men to review every project in greater detail. It's a quality building and it's not overdone."

ORIGINALLY priced at $14.4 million, the project soon grew in size and cost. It has 275,000 gross square feet, compared to approximately 100,000 for the old city hall.

Ground was broken in 1973.

Councilman Wes Carroll warned that unless the new city hall is completely inhabited and open for business by Dec. 31, when under the agreement the city must take possession, the city will default on its bonds and the project would have to be refinanced at a higher rate of interest.

If this occurs, Long Beach's bond rating, now one of the best, will drop, making it harder for the city to sell other bonds, Carroll continued, which will hurt redevelopment efforts.

"IT WOULD be a real catastrophe," Carroll said, "but no one is listening."

Marchese said the move would be completed by the end of December and Carroll noted that "it appears that will happen."

Another looming legal snarl is the August request from the City Council that the city attorney consider filing suit against Allied Architects to recover part of the $1 million-plus in cost overruns on the city hall.

Dep. City Atty. Einar Peterson had no comment on the suit possibility, but said that the matter had been discussed with the city engineer.

Marchese said that overruns add up to 4.3 per cent of the total construction's costs. The industry average for a $26 million building would be somewhere around 8 per cent, he said.

THE $36 million city hall bond issuance was sold to investors at 5.9 per cent interest and must be paid off by 2006.

City Finance Director Warren Heistand said that the total cost for the bonds and interest will be $81.4 million by the pay-off date.

Annual payments will be in the $2.5 million range, he said. The first payment will be paid by property taxes, accounting for 22 cents of the $2.19 tax rate, according to the budget office.

Beginning in 1978-79, the city will use revenues from the leases it owns on the Uplands oil wells.

Heistand said this method of financing is uncertain. He pointed out that the city is counting on revenues from the oil fields to make the city hall payments through 1995 and that the estimates of that remaining income may not be right.

PROPERTY taxes, used to make the first year's payment, will probably be used from 1996 to 2006, when the payments will be completed, according to Budget Director James Phelps.

Phelps apparently has no worries that the oil revenues will dwindle faster than expected. He claims that there is enough oil to last easily until 1995.

However, Phelps does believe that the Uplands oil revenues could be better used for projects that would produce more money, such as a marina, golf course or the purchase of an electric company.

He pointed out that the city has already raised the property tax rate nearly 11 cents to pay for the city hall bonds.

THE amount of total city debt is not alarming, Phelps believes. By 1978, the city will owe only $6 million to investors who hold other bonds. Even with the additional $36 million in bonds for the new city hall, "Long Beach's bonded indebtedness is miniscule compared to most cities our size," he said.

Marchese said the occupants of the 14 floors would be: Mayor and City Council, 14th floor; city manager, 13th; city attorney, 12th; engineering, 11th and 10th; engineering and franchises, 9th; civil service and personnel, 8th; city auditor and finance, 7th; gas and commercial administration, 6th; administration, 5th; planning, 4th; community development, 3rd; building and safety, 2nd; and city clerk, licenses and other frequently used services, such as payment of utility bills, 1st.

PUBLIC Services Director Robert Kennedy said the move schedule has been set up and should take about four days per floor when it begins in mid-November. Most of the furniture in the old city hall has been refurbished and will be used in the new building, he noted.

L.B. trucker shot, robbed

David Fay Reid, 31, of 1645 E. Market St., was shot in the abdomen and robbed of about $20 early Saturday by two women and a man who gave him a ride, Long Beach police said.

Investigators said Reid, a truck driver, was hitchhiking when he was driven to Shearer Park, robbed and shot.

He stumbled to a nearby home where residents called police. No arrests have been made.

Traffic rerouting opposed

That was the overriding conclusion after a series of eight citywide community workshops to allow maximum citizen input in deciding Long Beach's future transportation policies.

Attendance at the two Eastside workshops, totaling some 215 participants, was more than three times that for all other areas of the city put together.

King Cushman, director of traffic management, expressed disappointment that residents in other areas of the city seem "relatively unconcerned about the broad transportation issues."

CUSHMAN estimated that the first draft of the new transportation element for the city's General Plan would be ready for public airing early next year.

He summarized citizens' input at the workshops as follows:

—Most participants agreed with the city's position favoring increased bus service rather than a rapid-transit rail system.

—Most favored extension of the Terminal Island Freeway to the San Diego Freeway and opposed the development of DeForest Avenue, on the eastern banks of the Los Angeles River, as a major north-south traffic corridor.

—Transportation should support downtown redevelopment and changes which would allow for people-oriented shopping areas with malls and sidewalk cafes.

—Downtown would be a more desirable place to go if free or low-cost parking were made available. The new Long Beach Library was singled out as a downtown location for which free parking would be desirable.

—ALTHOUGH no consensus emerged from proposed alternatives for dealing with east-west crosstown traffic, discussions revealed strong opposition to the widening of Ocean Boulevard and Livingston Drive.

—Many East Long Beach residents strongly resisted a proposal to connect Atherton Street to the San Diego and 605 freeways as a new route to Long Beach State University and downtown Long Beach, arguing it would impact residential neighborhoods and create traffic hazards for students at Tichenor Elementary School.

—A proposed extension of Loynes Drive to Nieto Avenue met with similar opposition. In addition to dumping traffic into residential areas, Eastsiders argued, it would create serious safety problems for students attending Rogers Junior High and Lowell Elementary schools.

In a city of nearly 110,000, most of whose breadwinners are well-paid professionals in Santa Clara Valley's electronics and aerospace industry, Orchards is an unusually articulate upper-middle-class movement of professional people with a keen sense of urban beauty and environmental quality.

TO MANY members of Orchards, Sunnyvale is a city without character, a bland bedroom community that lacks both charm and identity. And part of the blame for its having developed in that fashion, they feel, belongs to John Dever, who ran the city as if it were a business, they say.

Dever, in the opinion of John Cowan, a Sunnyvale computer programmer, helped create "a sterile climate of sameness, monotony and rectitude" in Sunnyvale — in fact, a carbon copy of a Southern California plasticity, he says. And for that reason, says Cowan, he isn't sorry to see Dever leaving Sunnyvale.

It's been said that Dever decided to accept the Long Beach post because the political scene in Sunnyvale had become discordant and quarrelsome in recent months.

But a number of Dever-watchers are convinced that the reason for his leaving was his need to be put to new tests, to take on new challenges.

The fact is, they say, Dever did all he had set out to do in Sunnyvale, picking up the pieces of a divided city management when he arrived here in 1967 and welding it into an efficient municipal organization.

HE CAME to a city whose budget was a shambles and, in a few short years, turned it into a model for other cities. Today there are several million dollars in Sunnyvale's unappropriated reserve, giving the city what amounts to a sizable budget surplus.

On the eve of his departure, moreover, Sunnyvale's deteriorating downtown commercial district is on the threshold of a redevelopment revival, thanks largely to Dever.

The town is also thriving with light industry (electronics, computers and aerospace) — again thanks to Dever. Having once been entirely dependent on Lockheed for its health, Sunnyvale in the past few years has diversified its industrial base to the point where, when Lockheed gets sick, Sunnyvale no longer coughs and wheezes.

As he prepares to manage a city whose $2.18-cent property-tax rate is close to its legal ceiling, Dever will leave a city whose tax rate in the last three years has gone down from $1.31 to $1.14, according to Sunnyvale Mayor Don Logan.

In his nine years in Sunnyvale, Dever has fashioned what friends and critics alike agree is one of the most efficient bureaucracies in the country, with an annual productivity-improvement rate far better than industry's average, and double the average of American cities.

HIS SECRET? A combination of training and motivation for the city's 1,000-odd municipal workers, long-range fiscal planning and an extraordinary use of computer hardware.

The city doesn't own the hardware; it leases it — and apparently to good advantage. For Dever and the city fathers are convinced that Sunnyvale's management-information system has enabled the city to operate not only with fewer employes, but at much lower costs. In addition to giving city officials unusually easy access to program information, the system has enabled the City Council "to determine priorities eight years in advance."

Having heard about Long Beach's fiscal problems and its difficulties with the Queen Mary, Sunnyvale citizens are convinced that Long Beach picked the right man.

"When I read that he was going to Long Beach," says Marcella Saxe, an Orchards member, I thought: 'Good grief, he's going from the frying pan into the fire.'"

But "he's really sharp, a good businessman," she adds, and he should help Long Beach.

The Truth Test.
Part II

Governor Jerry Brown is not being honest with the people of California.

His statements about Proposition 14 are false.

And YOU can prove it.

Affecting Private Property Rights

In a recent series of political television commercials paid for by the "Yes on 14 Committee," Governor Jerry Brown said, "The California Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court have made clear that Proposition 14 in no way affects property rights."

HOGWASH. The Access Rule is real. Whether Proposition 14 passes or not, over 50,000 small farm families will still be faced with the outrage of labor organizers who can enter their private property in order to organize farm workers—without their knowledge or permission—three times a day, seven days a week, week in and week out.

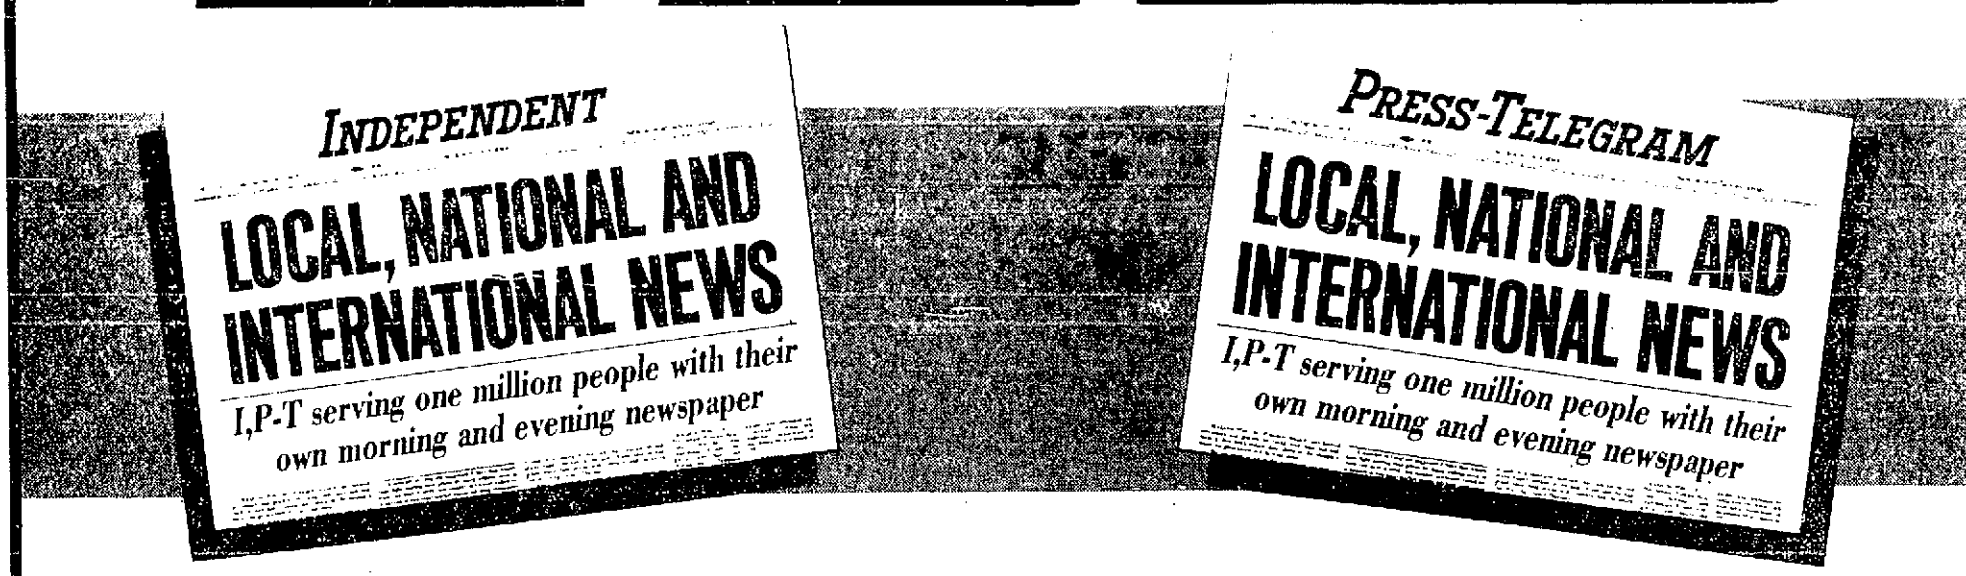

The difference is that if Proposition 14 passes, access will be even greater. The section of the current rule that suspends access once a union election has been certified, (Section F), has been dropped from Proposition 14. Without Section F, access could continue indefinitely—even by labor organizers for competing unions.

TRUE or FALSE? That's easy. Call the Attorney General of the State of California and ask him. (916) 445-9555.

SKETCH at left of initial phase of Irvine Center shows how five department stores, mall, hotel and Tivoli Court will be located, in the triangular area bounded north and south by the Santa Ana and San Diego freeways. Artist's rendering, right, depicts Tivoli Court, which is to be the hub of center activity. The tri-level recreation-entertainment structure, climate-controlled, will include theaters, concert areas, gourmet dining and other restaurants, an ice-skating rink, children's play area, meeting rooms and facilities for cultural attractions. It is projected as a center for nightlife after the shops close for the night.

$300 million retail and business complex

'Largest U.S. shopping center' for Southland

By a Staff Writer

Plans to construct a $300 million retail and business center on a 470-acre triangular tract at the San Diego-Santa Ana Freeway intersection in Orange County were announced the past week by the Newport Beach-based Irvine Co.

Groundbreaking for the $80 million first phase of the project is expected late next year with completion projected for autumn 1979, Albert J. Auer, head of the development firm's commercial division, said at a Los Angeles press conference. He noted also the shopping center will be the largest in the United States.

Four major department stores — Buffums', Bullock's, The May Co. and Robinson's — have signed letters of intent to locate within the center's first segment, Auer said. Another large department store is to be signed for the initial phase, he added.

Appearing with him were John Hunt, Buffums' senior vice president; Howard Goldfeder, chairman of Bullock's; George Foos, May Co. president; and James Slayden, president of Robinson's.

Auer said the initial phase will cover about 1.6 million square feet and is to include, in addition to the five big stores, 100 mall shops, a major 350-room hotel and a tri-level recreation-entertainment center called Tivoli Court.

In addition there are to be civic and cultural institutional centers, a central greenbelt with walkways, bikeways and possible equestrian trails, all laid out in a lakeside park environment.

Designing the center is the internationally known architectural firm of Gruen Associates. An area masterplan was prepared by Skidmore, Owings and Merrill.

The center adjoins a proposed high-speed rapid transit line serving the Los Angeles-San Diego corridor. A major transit stop is masterplanned to serve the eight-million-square-foot center, and, in addition, it is being designed to provide for a personal rapid transit system to convey people around the development.

Tivoli Court, at the heart of the center, is expected to become a major attraction for many Orange County residents seeking after-sundown entertainment. Available will be an array of fine restaurants, theaters, concerts areas, recreational attractions — and an ice skating rink.

Meeting rooms, cultural attractions and lounge areas designed to meet a variety of needs are to be offered.

The rink will occupy a central floor area at ground level and is to be open to view from two floors above. Around and on levels above the rink are to be restaurants, theaters, gourmet food, concert and exhibit areas, specialty shops, a children's play zone and interior garden.

"The center," said Auer "represents a commitment of the Irvine Co. to a concept of serving the multiple needs of people in a single location, meeting environmental concerns and serving an expanding areas's vigorous population growth."

Population of the center's primary market area is expected to be nearly 300,000 when the facility opens in late 1979, increasing to nearly 430,000 in 1985. By 1990, this sector of Orange County is expected to have a population of about 550,000.

Auer said school districts and other taxing authorities could realize some $20 million over the first 10 years following completion of the initial phase. "At its ultimate development, surrounding communities could realize a revenue surplus of more than $7 million annually, based on current projections."

He also noted that at its finished stage the center could generate more than 18,000 jobs.

This will be the second major regional center to be developed, owned and managed by the Irvine Co., Auer recalled. The firm's Newport Center, a 420-acre business, financial and shopping complex overlooking the ocean in Newport Beach, now is about two-thirds complete.

Sundance Shores cites desert and water-recreation living

A "water wonderland" of recreational facilities is available to residents of Sundance Shores, a new private community of desert resort townhomes on Nevada's Colorado River shore across from Bullhead City, Ariz.

Water skiing, boating and swimming are among the river sports activities enjoyed the year round in this desert playground and Sundance Shores is truly a fisherman's haven, according to Mike Straight, project manager.

A world record bass was caught recently in the river just below Sundance Shores, he said, and information on the 52-pound, 8-ounce fish is being forwarded to the National Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame for world record classification.

Just north of the resort development is David Dam and huge Lake Mojave, another fisherman's favorite. There are acres of wide, open spaces to roam and ride and rock hounds and nature lovers will find their perfect world — here, too.

History buffs can enjoy hours of recreation exploring the ruins of nearby Fort Mojave, Straight noted, or examining ancient petroglyphs — remnants of a previous civilization.

The Bullhead City community across the river offers a golf course and entertainment on Nevada's shore is close to home with several casinos, including the luxurious Riverside Casino, offering dining, dancing and gaming.

The development is in a peaceful setting with views of the river and mountains — 32 riverview villas, all fully completed and ready for immediate occupancy.

Prices of the three and four-bedroom townhomes range from $39,500 to $44,000. Four floor plans are available, all with two baths and luxury features.

Some models have family rooms and all have master suites with private baths, private patios, balconies and landscaped entry courts with covered front porches.

There are cathedral ceilings, wood-burning fireplaces, wall-to-wall carpeting, laundry closets and glass tub/shower enclosures among the quality appointments and all of the homes have smoke detector systems, shake roofs and covered parking areas with exterior storage.

Deluxe Sundance Shores kitchens are complete with built-in Hotpoint range and oven, dishwasher, disposal and refrigerator and feature generous dining areas.

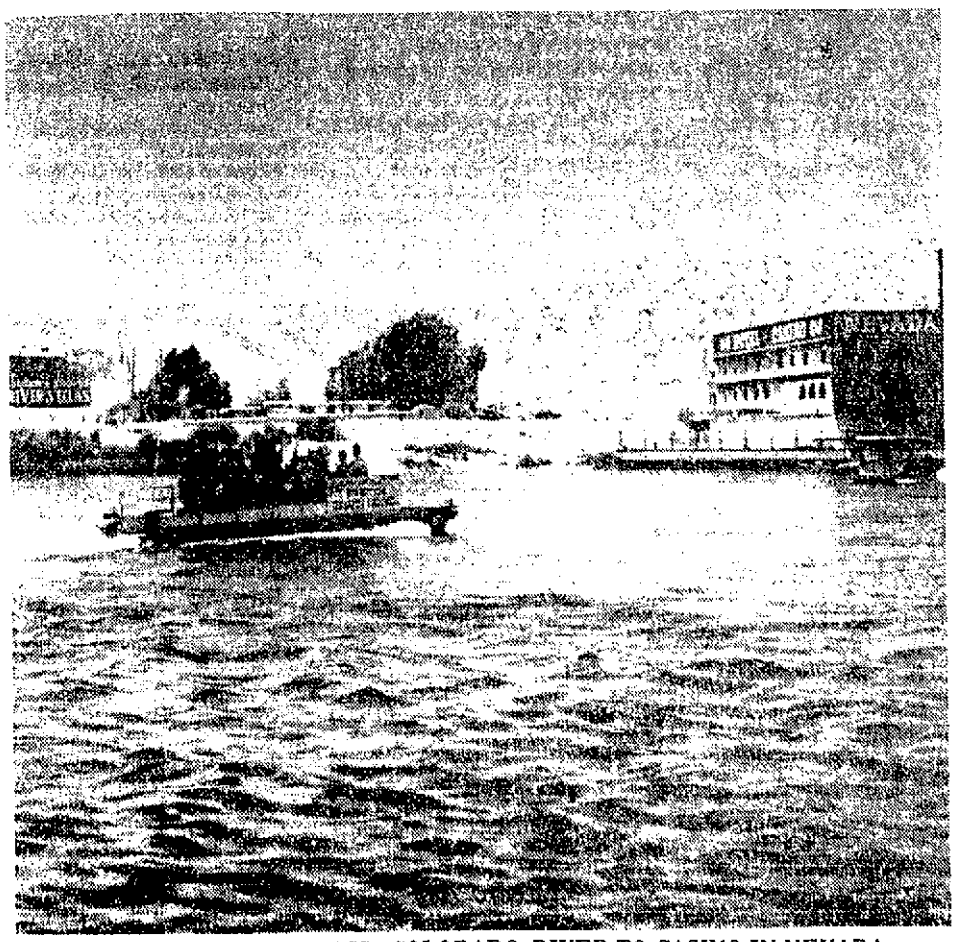

Sundance Shores offers professional maintenance of the community grounds and exteriors of the homes through the homeowners association.

Another benefit of vacation-home ownership in the new community is the fact that Nevada has neither state income nor inheritance taxes, the project manager noted.

"Very little desirable river property is still available in this popular area," Straight said.

Color photos of the project and full information are available to Los Angeles and Orange County residents at the Walker & Lee Shoppers Information Center in Anaheim. Located off the Santa Ana Freeway, south of Harbor Boulevard, the center is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Information may also be obtained by writing Walker & Lee, 1477 Manchester, Anaheim, 92803.

FERRY CHUGS ACROSS COLORADO RIVER TO CASINO IN NEVADA

Parkview Terrace sales up

Sales at Parkview Terrace, C. Robert Langslet & Son's condominium community in Long Beach, have passed the $3.5 million mark, reports Michael Engle, vice president of marketing.

"The sales pace has far exceeded our expectations, and less than half of the homes are remaining in our mid-rise building," Engle said.

Many of the two-bedroom, two-bath units face the Recreation Park golf course.

Parkview Terrace offers practicality in its two-bedroom, two-bath homes, Engle noted. Interior designer Don Brown of Environments is the decorator for the two model homes, the Monterrey and the Navarra.

BOTH MODELS have high ceilings, gas lighted fireplaces, private balcony with storage area and a large master bedroom suite with an adjoining bath featuring a tiled Roman tub. Third floor homes have loft areas and skylights.

The three-story, 60-home unit is surrounded by exotic foliage, including jacaranda trees and king palms. The focal point of the interior court is a Mexican fountain.

Take the San Diego Freeway to the Lakewood Boulevard exit, proceed south to Los Alamitos Circle and continue south on the Pacific Coast Highway to Anaheim Street and turn right. The community is at 4835 E. Anaheim St.

Solar energy concept has a long way to go

MENLO PARK — Solar energy is not a cure-all for our energy problems but it is one part of a larger strategy that involves energy conservation, good design, and maybe a modest sacrifice of convenience, according to Sunset Magazine.

"The sun's potential is often oversold." Sunset says in a 12-page report on solar energy in its November issue. "Experts disagree widely about which systems work best and are most cost-effective," the editors say. "Many installations are frankly experimental, and a full-scale solar system typically involves considerable cost and technical ability."

Nevertheless, Sunset notes that a new drive to couple the sun to the home is well under way, backed by increasing amounts of private and government funds, and inspired by personal daring.

THE EXTENSIVE Sunset article deals with solar installations in such widely separated parts of the West as Salem and Bend, Ore., Santa Fe, N.Y., Flagstaff, Ariz. and Northern and Southern California.

Active solar systems consist of collectors to absorb the sun's heat, ducts or pipes to transport it, and a heat storage area. The active components are fans, pumps, valves and thermostats.

"You cannot today buy an 'off-the-shelf' solar heating or cooling system," Sunset says. "All of our examples are custom-fitted from readily available manufactured components. Mass-produced package systems for hot-water heating may be close at hand; it likely will be longer before you can buy a standardized space-heating system."

An air system for circulating heat is simple, but has the disadvantages of requiring large ducts and several tons of rock for heat storage. Water systems require some complex plumbing and hardware, but water requires less than half the storage volume of an equivalent air system, and its thin pipes make retrofits easier, Sunset says.

Depending on total heat need, the installed cost (including all labor) of an active space-heating system could range from $4,000 to more than $10,000, the magazine reports. "Energy experts agree that the time has come to look at the 'life-cycle' costs of a home as critically as we look at the 'front-end' or initial cost," Sunset says. "We may have to pay dearly for fuel to heat a house whose first cost is deceptively low."

"Passive" solar architecture meets the same challenge as active mechanical systems: Collecting solar heat and storing it for use at night and during cloudy weather—but without hardware driven by mechanical energy, Sunset reports. "The building becomes the system; heat storage is usually the structure itself."

HUD booklet answers solar queries

The most commonly asked questions about solar heating and cooling — and their answers — have been assembled in a 19-page booklet by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"Solar Energy and Your Home" was produced by the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia for HUD's residential solar energy demonstration program as part of a nearby half million dollar contract to organize a one-stop solar information center.

The inside front cover of the brochure lists the address of the National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center, which supplies copies of this and other solar literature to industry and the general public.

Mailed inquires should be directed to P.O. Box 1607, Rockville, Md. 20850. The toll free telephone number is 800-523-2929.

Sample questions from the brochure:

- Why should I consider a solar heating system for my home?
- What kinds of solar heating systems are there?
- How much will a solar energy system cost?
- Will a solar energy system raise the resale value of my home?

In addition to answering those and other questions briefly, the booklet serves as a guide to other information sources, such as finding a contractor who can install solar equipment, and locating solar homes by area.

A black cover with a striking orange sun advertises an interior dotted with simple, clear sketches showing how different solar systems work.

HUD's solar program is linked to the larger National Program for Solar Heating and Cooling of Buildings operated by the Energy Research and Demonstration Administration. The national effort also includes research on non-residential buildings, federal buildings and defense installations.

SUNSET HILL HOME KITCHEN FEATURES BUILT-INS

Popularity of Sunset Hill increasing, sellers report

The popularity of Sunset Hill, a single-family home community in Dana Point, is growing daily, reported Landon M. Exley, vice president and general manager of Pacesetter Homes, builder of the development.

"Buyers at Sunset Hill are fully aware of the potential appreciation of the quality-built homes, because of the choice area location. Since the project was begun several months ago, there has been a 20 per cent increase in home values in the area," Exley noted.

In addition to the aesthetics of the coastal location, the area is enhanced by vast recreational opportunity, Exley continued.

Dana Point Yacht Harbor, one of the largest on the West Coast, offers a wide variety of natural and man-made recreational facilities, while well known parks and beaches are available for additional outdoor activity.

The homes are available in four floor-plans and range from 1,225 to 1,887 square feet of living area, with prices from $69,950 to $79,950.

There are a variety of architecturally coordinated exteriors with rustic cedar shake roofs, extensive use of wood siding and stained, rough-cut beams.

Diverse three- and four-bedroom models feature two or 2½ baths, family room or large kitchen/family room area, dining area or optional bedroom or formal dining room. All have enclosed attached two-car garages.

Features which reportedly add to the value of the homes are wood-burning fireplaces with gas outlets, cathedral ceilings, custom carpeting and tempered-glass sliding walls.

Deluxe kitchens include built-in range and oven, dishwasher and disposal, formica counter tops, custom hand-finished ash cabinets and large pantries in some plans.

Huge closets are one feature of the master bedroom suites, which also have baths with large vanity mirrors and synthetic marble pullmans.

From Pacific Coast Highway, take Selva Road east to Golden Lantern, and turn north on Alcapulco. Furnished models are open daily from 11 a.m. to dusk.

4½-day seminar

"Vital real estate principles of investment analysis, exchange and taxation," will be discussed by three realtors at a 4½-day seminar Nov. 15-19 at the Airport Marina Hotel, Los Angeles. Courses are open to the public as well as realtors and realtor-associates.

Sponsored by the Investment Division of the California Association of Realtors, the seminar will be in session, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with evening homework sessions beginning at 7, and will conclude with one-half day of examination.

Instructors will be Reed L. Smith of Santa Rosa, George Warwick of Chula Vista and William Gorman of Fullerton.

Shopping complex opening

Rossmoor Leisure World's third major shopping center, Moulton Plaza, is beginning to open for business.

The 127,000-square foot center at Moulton Parkway and Santa Maria Avenue in Laguna Hills eventually will have 30 stores and two financial institutions. Now open is Hacienda de las Boleras with 40 bowling lanes, and a Colony Kitchen restaurant.

Additional stores and offices of Leisureworld Savings and Loan and the Security Pacific National Bank are to open in coming weeks. A super market is to open next Spring.

The center features Spanish-inspired architecture and is built around two patios with benches and wide overhangs.

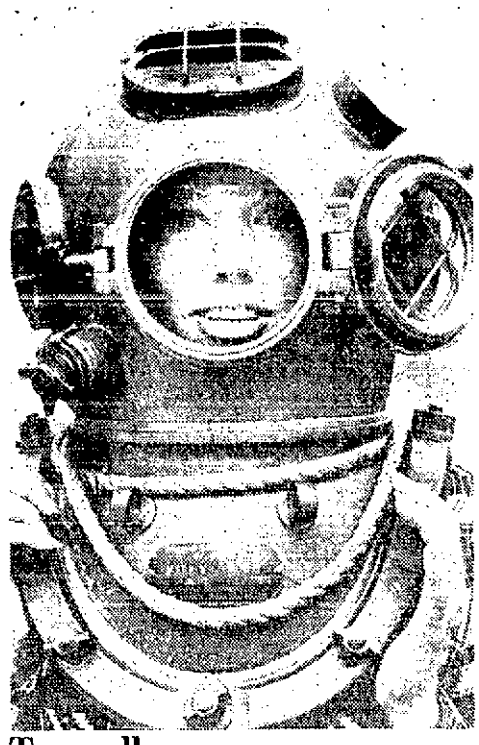

Other shopping facilities at Leisure World include another center with a supermarket and stores and the giant Laguna Hills Mall, which has four major department stores and some 70 specialty shops. A fourth center is planned for construction in the future.

Leisure World is now in its 12 year and has a population of approximately 19,000. It is an adult community for people 52 and older and it features security and recreation. The community is surrounded by wall and fence and has a force of 255 security officers.

Realty certificate course scheduled

Twenty-four units of college-level courses are being offered by the Lumbleau Real Estate schools in Los Angeles with California Department of Real Estate approval, according to Vincent Lumbleau, president of the schools.

The 24 units are required by the California State Department of Real Estate in order to qualify for the Real Estate Certificate, which Lumbleau said, many realtors consider a sign of solid professional achievement among licensees.

U.S. rental assistance program tops its goal

Business Wire

WASHINGTON — The Department of Housing & Urban Development has exceeded its goal in the Section 8 rental assistance program for low-income families, Secretary Carla A. Hills reports.

Preliminary reports indicate that contract authority for approximately 490,000 units had been allocated by Sept. 30, some 90,000 in excess of the 400,000 goal set by President Ford in January.

Rates for occupancy and starts for new and rehabilitated housing under the program are also up substantially, Hills said.

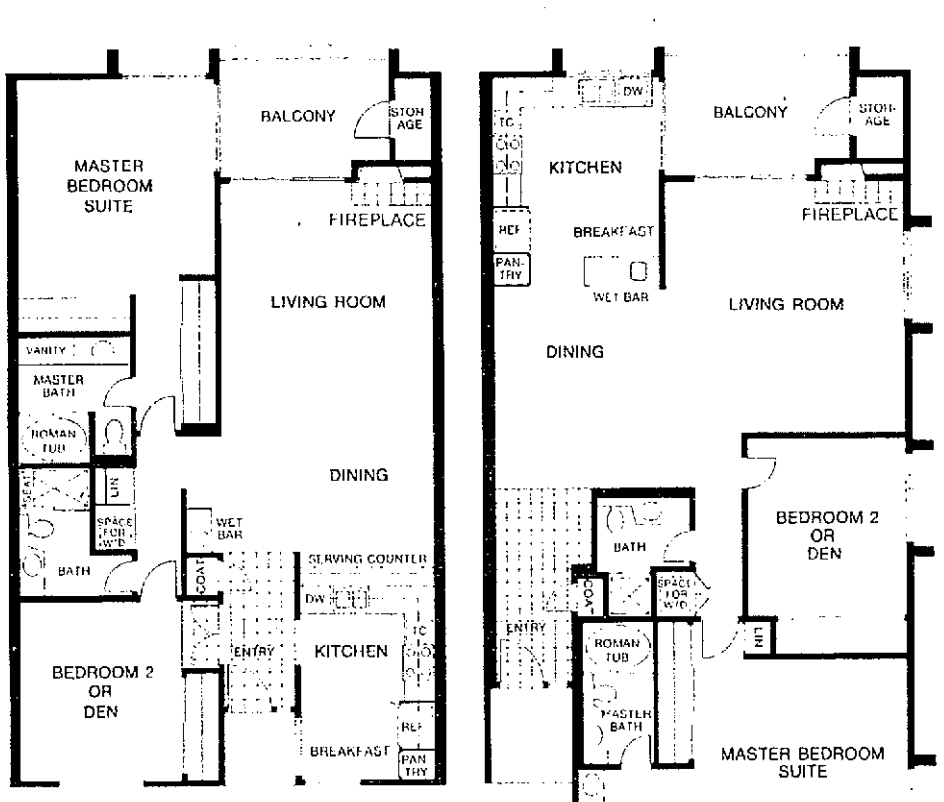

Indications are that occupancy rates had reached almost 90,000 by Sept. 30. Of these, approximately 60,000 were for new, substantially rehabilitated and existing housing, with the remaining 30,000 under loan management. Starts for new and rehabilitated Section 8 housing reached a cumulative total of more than 40,000 units.

"There are two major reasons for this very good record," Hills said. "The program has been widely accepted by the low-income families who are in desperate need of good housing. Secondly, the staff of HUD field offices has done a tremendous job in administering the program."

What's Your Problem?

Middle-aged couple can enjoy a new, more expensive home

By DON CAMPBELL

Times change, our standard of living changes and our tastes change. What we considered perfectly acceptable as a standard of living when we were first married is viewed as wholly inadequate 20 years later.

It is the most natural of all evolutions.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We are working couple, ages 49 and 52, presently earning $30,000 a year. Our two children are grown. We would like to sell our family-type home of 25 years and move into a two-bedroom custom-built home in a luxury neighborhood where we feel we will enjoy spending the remainder of our working years and just might stay on after retirement.

The problem is that the new house will cost about $50,000 to build while our older home will bring about $35,000, conservatively. The new house will cost more to heat and cool and taxes will be about double our present ones.

The favorable arguments are that the new home will be in a proven high-investment-type area which will only increase in value. We plan on a low maintenance type yard and will enjoy a more tranquil and leisurely surrounding during our after-work hours.

If we carry a long-term (30-year) mortgage at 8½ per cent, plus points, our monthly payment will be around $500. We plan to invest the money received from our old home in certificates or bonds at a minimum of 7 per cent. We then would have the option at retirement of paying off (if it's down far enough) the new house mortgage or, if inflation should continue, the $500 payment may not be so large then.

Is this a financially sound move for the reasons we have listed, or is it a frivolous scheme for folks our age? Our retirement program is a state retirement plan for teachers, plus Social Security. We also have a very small, so far, tax-sheltered annuity plan — Mrs. D.L.G., Tucson, Ariz.

ANSWER: I don't see anything wild-eyed about your plan and for heaven's sake, 49 and 52 is hardly over-the-hill as far as this type of idea is concerned!

You can certainly afford this new home on your present income although you are very wise in looking ahead to retirement when — as is invariably the case — your income undoubtedly will drop. You may very well, at that time, find it more comfortable to refinance the home, throw more cash into the kitty, and adjust the monthly mortgage payments downward.

Housing starts in 4.7% upturn

New housing starts in California increased in August to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 202,000 units, Bank of America reported.

This total represents a 4.7 per cent increase from the 193,000 annual rate for July, and an increase of 48.5 per cent from the 136,000 annual rate of August 1975.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We recently moved out of an apartment we had been renting because we couldn't get along with the landlord. A couple of weeks after we were in our new place we got a bill from the old landlord for an extra month's rent because he said we didn't give him enough notice.

It's true that we didn't tell him in advance we were moving, but we moved out a week before the month was out without asking for any refund. Can he bill us like this? — T.F.V., Allentown, Pa.

ANSWER: State laws vary considerably on this and you'll have to check locally. In some states, no notice at all is required by the tenant (although it is for the landlord), but it is more common to require 15 days, or a month's notice.

I suspect — since he billed you — that the landlord knows something that you don't about your state's requirements here. I suggest that you get together and work out a compromise of some sort.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

I am a single career-woman and I recently attempted to buy a home but the mortgage company turned down my application.

Didn't I read, recently, that lenders can no longer turn down an applicant because of sex or because of the fact that he/she is single? How do I protest this? — Ms. W. G. B., Long Beach.

ANSWER: Yes, you're quite right because the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 added the word "sex" to the long-standing prohibitions of "race, color, religion or national origin."

The trick, unfortunately, comes in proving that the turn-down was based on your sex and marital status. Lending is still a cold-blooded business in which all sorts of risk, quite apart from the borrower's sex, have to be taken into account.

I would go back to the lender and demand to know, specifically, why you were turned down (he also has to tell you this under the terms of a completely unrelated law). If this doesn't satisfy you, contact the local office of your Civil Rights Commission.

(Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only representative questions of general interest. Write him in care of the I.P-T.)

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1976 L/S-

Billion dollar hospital 'ripoff'

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Hospital charges are often $25 a day higher than need be because government bureaucrats are underpaying on services given to Medi-Cal and Medicare patients, it was learned Saturday.

Financial losses to local hospitals, and other hospitals as well, are running into the millions. One hospital official in Long Beach called the underpayment practice a "multi-billion dollar ripoff of patients."

Patients not under Medi-Cal or Medicare coverage are absorbing the loss.

The health committee of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce reports that the city's four major non-profit hospitals experienced losses in excess of $10 million in the past year.

The loss is expected to be $18,900,000 by 1978, says Jack W. Weiblen, health committee chairman and vice president of Memorial Hospital Medical Center.

"These multi-million dollar underpayments by government are being added to the bills of the non-government patient," Weiblen says. "Our local not-for-profit institutions have no other source of income.

"At present, the 'surtax' exceeds $25 a day per patient. It will be larger and larger each succeeding year unless something is done about it."

Weiblen notes that an average patient stay is about seven days, bringing the total figure to about $192 per patient.

"What is really happening is that government is placing a double tax on the non-government patient," Weiblen says. "This patient pays a tax to support Medicare and Medi-Cal and then pays a second tax to pay for the underpayments by government."

For every dollar billed for services to medical patients at one local hospital in recent years, the state reimbursed the hospital about 87 cents. This past year the state reduced the amount of reimbursement to 71 cents on every dollar.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS say that if present regulations issued by the state are ruled legal, reimbursement will dwindle to as little as 50 cents for each dollar's worth of care for Medi-Cal patients.

"In many instances," says Weiblen, "it is the employer who is being forced to pick up the tab." This is the case when the employer provides all the health insurance for workers and families.

Anthony J. Abbate, vice president of St. Mary Medical Center, said the extra charge is being absorbed in the daily room rate.

"The cost can't come out of our (the hospital's) pocket," he says.

Abbate explained that the hospital must pay its staff and its suppliers.

He says that the problem continues to get progressively worse.

If governmental payments were adequate, daily hospital charges could actually be reduced, Abbate says.

C. Joseph Heinz, administrator of Pacific Hospital of Long Beach, says that Pacific Hospital has no such thing as a surcharge.

"We don't do that," he says.

But he admits that the deficit created by government patients must be borne by the rest of the patient population.

There was the time that both government programs paid costs, Heinz says, enabling hospitals to break even but allowing nothing extra to purchase new equipment. Now not even costs are paid, Heinz says.

Arnold V. Loveridge, associate executive director of Long Beach Community Hospital, cites a case of a typical patient with a hospital bill of $1,000 after a five-day stay.

If the patient has private insurance or pays cash, the hospital generally collects the full payment.

If the patient is covered by Medicare, the hospital's reimbursement is $865.60, a deficit of $134.40. Forty-four per cent of Community's patients are Medicare cases.

If the patient is covered by Medi-Cal, only $652.74 is paid by the state, a deficit of $347.26. Six per cent of Community's patients are Medi-Cal cases.

SAYS LOVERIDGE:

"Because Medicare and Medi-Cal refuse to pay the full costs of running a hospital, then private insurance and self-pay patients in non-profit hospitals must make up the difference.

"Government-insured patients are getting their medical care wholesale while the rest of us must pay retail prices.

"I know of no other instance in which the government pays only the operating costs for goods or services."

Loveridge adds:

"Even proprietary hospitals that are run for a profit to their owners are allowed by Medicare to have a factor for return on investment, but in the case of the nonprofit hospital, no such allowance is made."

Health officials and chamber leaders plan to take the lead in soliciting the assistance of legislators at state and federal levels to correct the inequity.

Plan war on litter, vandalism in L.B.

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

There's a good chance that before the day is out copies of this newspaper will be found in several of the city's 40 parks and along the 543 acres of beach.

Newspapers will be left on benches, in the grass or on the sand to become part of the mountain of refuse picked up and hauled away by the Public Service Department each month.

The cans, bottles, pull tabs, bottle tops, candy and fast food wrappers are trash when they are deposited in cans. When they are tossed to the ground, dropped on the sand or washed up on the beach, these things become litter which is unsightly, costly to remove and, according to at least one city official, dangerous.

And litter begets litter. A dirty park or beach tempts a person to just drop paper and cans anywhere. If the beach or park is clean, he might be more inclined to use a trash container. Litter also invites vandalism, park officials claim.

The result in the worst cases is recreational areas in which residents no longer take pride and which have lost all of their aesthetic appeal.

LONG BEACH PARK Commissioner Gordon Getz says he visited such places in eastern cities recently. He was appalled by the condition of New York's Central Park and recreational areas in Harlem and the Battery.

"Our parks are cream puffs compared to those," he says. Dogged by the memory of littered and vandalized recreation areas elsewhere, Getz is proposing a five-year plan of attack on the problem.

Getz wants to make people aware of how much it costs them to repair vandalism and pick up litter in parks and on the beaches. An educational program for schools and professional and civic organizations might include slides, films, and brochures.

He also wants to explore the possibility of stronger enforcement of laws against those who litter and destroy public property. He likes the idea of sentencing offenders to pick up litter or to repair the damage they have caused.

A key part of his plan is a volunteer park ranger corps. Badges and uniforms would be issued to volunteers who would patrol recreational areas, sometimes reporting disturbances or vandalism. Their major role, however, would be to discourage such acts by their presence.

The idea, according to Getz, is to develop pride in the city and its recreational opportunities.

Park Department staff members are already at work with Recreation Department employes on an educational program for the schools.

William T. Bell, assistant director of the Park Department, is concerned about the cost of picking up litter and disposing of trash in parks. He says it ranges from $200,000 to $300,000 a year in Long Beach.

That cost could be reduced, Bell says, if ideal conditions prevailed. Large trash containers would be placed at park entrances and users would deposit refuse as they left the area. That would eliminate the need for the smaller trash receptacles inside the park. Bell says they represent a kind of park litter in themselves and are frequently stolen because they are the right size for home use.

But ideal conditions exist only in the dreams of park officials and in reality litter is tossed all over

RAKING SAND is part of the regular beach cleanup which costs Long Beach about $300,000 a year. Worst litter is caused when it rains and refuse from the rivers and drainage ditches is washed out to sea and then back up on to the beaches.

Glad you asked that!

OLYMPIC decathalon champion Bruce Jenner — too young to portray Superman.

ACTOR James Cagney — meeting with George M. Cohan came on the job.

THE LATE actress Betty Grable — lied about age to start her career.

Q: Isn't Bruce Jenner, the Olympic decathlon gold medal winner, going to be the new movie "Superman"? — Mrs. J. Johnson, Baltimore.

A: No. Though Hollywood thinks he's really super, he's not the man for the job. "Jenner is a natural actor who has an enormous career on the screen in the future," said producer Ilya Salking. And director Guy Hamilton declared: "He looks like a polished actor." But when he screen-tested for Superman, Bruce, only 26, came across too young.

Q: Known as an X-rated comedian for years, does Redd Foxx ever forget himself when he's taping his TV shows and let something off-color slip out? — Mrs. A. Girard, Omaha, Neb.

A: No. Nothing blue from Redd. "I've never been bleeped," he insists. "I never say anything a censor would have to cut out. The minute those cameras start rolling, any kidding I do on the set immediately stops."

Q: My husband has warned me not to lick any stamps. Say's he heard about a contraceptive stamp invention. What's he talking about? — Mrs. Angela R., Omaha, Neb.

A: He's talking about a stamp that cannot be posted. It allegedly has the same function as the Pill. Now used in China, the stamp will be tested in England for at least a year before it can be marketed. Made from a special edible paper, each tiny square is impregnated with hormones.

Q: Is it true that showman Mike Todd once received a new birth certificate to make him seem younger? — R.A.M., Madison, Wis.

A: Yes. From the mayor of his home town of Minneapolis. He went along with Mike's whacky whimsy and issued such a certificate "documenting" the showman's age as 29 (although he was close to 50). Todd wanted to prove to Elizabeth Taylor, who was 24 at the time, that he wasn't too old to marry her.

Q: When did President Franklin D. Roosevelt first create the phrase "arsenal of democracy" to describe the U.S. role in World War II? — Mrs. Dorian Angela, Brooklyn.

A: FDR didn't create the slogan. Justice Felix Frankfurter heard Jean Monnet of France use it conversationally and requested permission for the President to employ it.

Q: Did any race horse ever "earn" a million dollars for its owner? — A. Nardin, Westchester, N.Y.

A: Yes, 17 have made that magic mark. Kelso has made the most with a total take of $1,977,896. Dr. Fager made $1,002,642. The 15 others in between are Round Table, Buckpasser, Secretariat, Nashua, Carry Back, Dahlia, Damascus, Cougar II, Allez France, Riva Ridge, Fort Marcy, Citation, Susan's Girl, Forego and Native Diver.

Q: When he played in the major leagues, was Joe Garagiola really only a mediocre baseball player? — L. Lacey, Cincinnati.

A: No. Though Joe likes to kid himself, he did have a respectable nine-year big league batting average of .257. His career skidded after an accidental collision with Jackie Robinson in 1950 — leaving him with a weakened arm. Joe considered his native St. Louis lucky for him. He established a lifelong friendship with Yogi Berra, playing sandlot baseball there. And he met his wife at the St. Louis ballpark — playing the organ.

Q: My husband claims that Betty Grable once worked in blackface. I know. Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor did — but Betty Grable? Is this true? — Mrs. Gordie Brynner, Denver.

A: Yes. Betty made her musical movie debut in a chorus line when she was only 13 by lying about her age. All the other girls also worked in blackface.

Q: I'm curious. Did James Cagney ever meet George M. Cohan, whom he once played on the screen? — Amy Seward, Minneapolis.

A: Yes. They met for the first time at the Friars' where Cohan was the club's most distinguished member — and Cagney its busiest bellboy.

Q: Please ask Dame Sybil Leek, author of the "Diary of a Witch," what was the craziest question she was ever asked? — Ms. Jerri Louder, Cincinnati.

A: "I was being interviewed by a well-known member of the New York press. In what appeared to be seriousness, he asked, "Is it true that witches eat babies?' I think," says Sybil, "he must have mistaken my silence as a period of solemn consideration. Actually I had gone into shock at the absurdity of the question. But since he was solemn-faced, I replied with equal seriousness: "Only when there is no marmalade.' The interview ended very rapidly!"

Q: I'm curious. What's the real reason country singer Mel Tillis shaved off his new mustache? — Mrs. Randy Hanson, Indianapolis.

A: Explains the stuttering star: "Somebody told me the mustache would repress my lip and thus prevent me from stuttering. But I found I stuttered through it anyway," he said. "The mustache sorta strained what I was saying. So off it went!"

THE LATE movie producer Mike Todd with Elizabeth Taylor — changed age to win actress' hand in marriage.

COUNTRY singer Mel Tillis — mustache got in his way.

DAME Sybil Leek — witch interview ended with baby question.

TV announcer Joe Garagiola — baseball career better than he indicates.

Escapist thriller will make director a rich man

John Schlesinger beams like a Disney cow. The notices are in on "Marathon Man," the season's big movie blockbuster, and it's going to make him rich. Last year, he directed "The Day of the Locust," and it rained on his parade. How can you win? He made a great film, and some critics said he should have stayed in bed. Now he makes a totally commercial escapist thriller, and some critics are saying it's beneath his dignity.

How does a John Schlesinger keep from going crazy? "Well," he says, rubbing circles on his bald head, "you just laugh. I'm happy 'Marathon Man' is a hit, but that doesn't make me any less proud of 'Locust.' You just have to do what interest you in life and plunge ahead. I went through similar frustrations after 'Far From The Maddening Crowd.' It was a disaster.

"I followed it with 'Midnight Cowboy,' and everyone said, 'Why do you want to do such a depressing film that nobody will ever go and see?' Then that one was an enormous success, and that was the moment I was offered a lot of very big pictures to direct. Instead, I did 'Sunday Bloody Sunday' because it seemed like the right movie to make.

"The answer is that since every director's career is going to be a checkered one, and we can't all have hits all the time, we have to take chances. We no longer live in a golden era in which directors went under contract to a studio that guaranteed a certain amount of work each year. In the 40s, a director never had to worry about where the next film was coming from. You just made films, one after the other, some good, some bad. That's how all the great reputations were made. Now it's a big gamble, and every time you make a film, your whole future is at stake. That's why I'm always anxious to get the next one prepared while the old one is being released."

HE POURS TEA in a most civilized British manner while the phone rings angrily. The newspaper ads are spread on the sofa pronouncing "Marathon Man" the greatest thing since peanut butter. Studio executives are trying to break through with offers that go ignored. Schlesinger is king of the mountain. There's nothing like lines around the block under the marquee to insure self-confidence. Yet he seems nervous.

"I shall never stop being anxious," he sighs. "I'm always on the edge of a precipice, ready for the deep end. I'm a nervous wreck. I'm always scared because one's success and failure these days is so rapidly judged on what the film will gross. There were people going around after 'Day of the Locust' saying 'He must never be allowed near a camera again.' There's nothing you can do except shrug and carry on. The main thing is to cash in at the moment you have a commercial success and use that power to do a film that would not have a chance otherwise.

"Sunday Bloody Sunday' will never show a profit, although it had hugh critical acclaim. You can't make movies for critics, or you will destroy yourself. On the other hand, that film would never have been made if it had not been for the commercial success of 'Midnight Cowboy.' Francis Coppola did the same thing. After 'The Godfather' he used his muscle to make 'The Conversation,' which was not a commercial success, but the right move to make. In this business, one must take risks to remain a creative artist.

"Now with the success of 'Marathon Man,' I am taking advantage of my sudden popularity to make a film in England called 'Yanks!,' a love story about an American G.I. and an English girl just before D-Day. It's a kind of funny, touching, raunchy script by a young writer from the North Country of England, and we're currently going around New York meeting men who were in England during the war. I'm not making any more adventure thrillers or heist movies. I'm going back to my roots."

"COMING FROM England, where the economy is so unstable that it is impossible to get any kind of movie produced, do you think American actors who get a million dollars per film are overpaid?" I asked.

"Dustin Hoffman certainly got it for 'Marathon Man' and the studio thought he was worth it, but I look at it all with a jaundiced eye. I certainly did not come to America to make a profit. I like America, and I've been coming here since I was a student. I'm hooked on the place. But I came to make 'Midnight Cowboy.' Then I went back home to make 'Sunday' and came back to make 'Locust.' It took me years to get that one off the ground, and I had to work on it in Hollywood, so I bought a house there, and now my tax situation is absolutely chaotic.

"But I've also had projects that never got off the ground at all. I developed Evelyn Waugh's 'Handful of Dust' with my own money, and nobody wanted to make it. Then I was planning to make 'Alive!' but the Stigwood people came out with a total rip-off in that dubbed Mexican atrocity called 'Survive!' which is truly a piece of crap. But it ruined my film because the story has now been told. Now 'Marathon Man' is a great smash and that pleases me, but I wouldn't call it my favorite film."

It was certainly different. He had no experience with the enormity of that kind of film, but he tackled it anyway by "depending a lot on the technical experts around me — the designers, stunt coordinators, special unit director, cameraman, special-effects men, everybody. They all played a great part in it. For me, a film is always a collaboration. I can't take credit for all of it. In the middle of all the car crashes and explosions, I did have to find a way to establish an individual touch of my own. That was the hard part.

"I REMEMBER walking around New York with Bill Goldman, the writer, and it was Yom Kippur. I suddenly got an idea. Since the first car crash involved an old Jew and an old Nazi, why not set it on Yom Kippur? That was the first bit of texture that occurred to me. Then in Paris when we were scouting locations, we were having a script conference in a hotel room at the Plaza Athenee. Suddenly there was a noise outside, and it was a political rally. People came out on their balconies to watch. Another idea was born. What would happen if we had Roy Scheider attacked by the murderous villain while he's watching a street demonstration from his hotel window? It's little things like that that make films different.

"The biggest problem with 'Marathon Man' was how to blend the elements of melodrama — Nazi torturers, villains, explosions, chases — and keep the film on a realistic level. In most thrillers, whole masses of people go in a matter of seconds to all sorts of comic deaths, and nobody takes it seriously because nobody feels anything. 'Marathon Man' is different because it happens to an innocent person, and the audience is identifying like mad.

"I don't know if I want to do another film like this. Up to now, all of my films have been about small people and real relationships, but I wanted a change. I believe in change. I admire Hitchcock, but I don't know how he's been able to make the same movie over and over again without feeling the need for change.

"This was my first thriller, Dustin Hoffman's first thriller, Bill Goldman's first thriller, and for two weeks of rehearsal we were always asking logical questions about the plot. Finally, Goldman just said, 'It's a thriller, for godsake! You just have to believe it!' And that's when I decided it would only work if we treated it just as seriously as Chekhov."

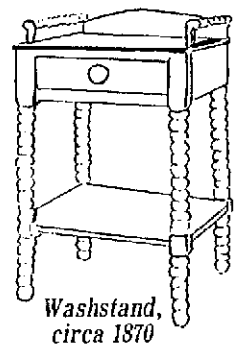

RUMORS PERSISTED during filming that there were problems with Dustin Hoffman. True or false? "Well, there were differences, but they don't show on the screen. Dustin is one of those actors who asks a million questions, and then wants take after take after take, and you just have to say no very firmly and call a halt.

"Laurence Olivier, on the other hand, is very precise, doesn't like to improvise, and just wants to

Open washstands predate plumbing

Washstand, circa 1870

Q. "Can you help us date our spool turned open washstand?" — Mr. and Mrs. F.S., Colorado Springs, Colo.

A. Spool turned furniture threaded its way into every nook and cranny between the 1840s and 1880s. Some of the earliest pieces were made by local cabinetmakers, but eventually spool turned pieces were mass-produced by American furniture factories. Small open washstands, often with spool turned towel bar ends, and legs, usually had a small drawer beneath the top area, and a lower shelf. This piece varied slightly, depending upon the maker, but all were designed to hold a bowl and pitcher, plus other bedroom necessities in the pre-plumbing era. Value guide: Mahogany, spool turned towel bar ends, circa 1870, $170.

Q. "Is it too late for me to think about starting a beer can collection?" — Bill, Monterey, Calif.

A. Positively not! Just start roaming around the local markets and you'll find plenty of collectible beer cans on tap. Look for the cone top types as they always arouse some spirited bidding. Many cans sell for less than $5 each, but there are scarcer examples retailing in excess of $100. With more collectors entering the field daily the beer can collecting hobby should never go flat! Value guide: Hapsburg, red, silver, blue, $10; Keeley, $9; Canadian Ace, 32 oz, $16; Burgermeister, $6; Fox Head, $11.

Q. "I'm trying to acquire every character and personality spoon possible." — Gail, Norfolk, Va.

A. Seekers of novelty spoons are absolutely beguiled by these fun finds, which believe it or not, can still be found in the affordable price range. But better hurry because these little trifles are on their way toward becoming little treasures. Spoon value guide: Anita Stewart, $10; Charlie Chaplin, $16; Charlie McCarthy, $8; Douglas Fairbanks, $10; Dennis the Menace, $7; Gloria Swanson, $12; Howdy Doody, $6; Huckleberry Hound, $5.50; Mary Pickford, $13; Pola Negri, $11; Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer, $6; Victor Herbert, $15.

Q. "We are anxious to complete our set of Buffalo Pottery Christmas plates." — Mr. and Mrs. R.S., Bristol, Pa.

A. The famed Buffalo Pottery, established by the Larkin Company in 1901, is a familiar name to flea market shoppers. Locating their prized Buffalo trademark on a ceramic find indicates that you've corralled a winner. Their Christmas plates issued annually between 1950 and 1962, with the exception of 1961, rate as fortunate finds. For some unexplainable reason the 1962 plate is the rarest bringing a merry $150. All remaining years are listed for between $35 and $50, depending upon what the seller asks, and what the buyer is willing to pay.

Cruising Empress led to Queen Mary

IMAGINE WHAT you can get for a dollar in these inflation ridden days! Two nights aboard the Hyatt Hotel on the Queen Mary. That's what.

Of course, you have to go to a Chamber of Commerce mixer aboard the Long Beach Empress, buy a ticket and win the prize. That's just what my husband George Robeson did.

Last year at a fashion show, he won a purse but it didn't go with any of my clothes — or his either.

More than 300 members and guests of the Chamber enjoyed the sunset cocktail cruise courtesy of Long Beach Catalina Cruises. Chuck Slocombe and general manager Tim Mazer were our genial hosts.

Congratulations were in order for Chuck who started the annual whale watching cruises several years ago. Crowley Maritime Corp., the parent company of the Long Beach firm, just promoted him, to director of public relations for the entire Southern California region. As if he wasn't already busy enough giving whale information to schools from San Diego to Sunland.

Party was billed as a costume affair, but only a few followed the theme. Chamber communications director George Economides put on a fierce looking black beard and a hillbilly hat for his duties as emcee but the beard got in the way of his drinking, eating and emceeing so he took it off.

Grand prize winner for the best costume was Lana Haines. The prize was two round trip tickets to the tiny but charming island of Catalina, courtesy of Catalina Airlines.

Lana was costumed as aviatrix Amelia Earhart. Recalling the real outcome of Amelia's last flight over the Pacific, Lana passed her prize to the Pregnant Bride, Debbie Doerr, and her reluctant groom, Helene Fredrickson.

There were some escaped prisoners aboard. Jan Withee and Colleen Sullivan were a pair. But Janet McLaughton was the only authentic escapee. She dragged around a ball and chain all evening. Also the stripes on her prison suit went in the right direction.

Alice Ellis came as a tiger, Karen Henry was stunning in a black turn-of-the-century gown complete with bustle. She said the gown and the ruffled umbrella she carried were genuine antiques. Faith Dudley also came as an old fashioned girl and Marjorie Bowie turned back the clock with her "Rosie the Riveter" costume.

Park litter both an eyesore, dangerous

the park, sometimes it piles up near empty containers.

ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS is not practical, Bell asserts, because violations are rarely witnessed by persons with the power to prosecute.

Park Department workers are also busy repairing damage done by vandals. Bell cites instances of golf greens being torn up, trees being uprooted and bottles broken over sprinkler heads in parks.

There is almost always damage in rest rooms and graffiti, much of it done with spray cans, is everywhere.

The problem is much the same on the beaches, according to John Adams, deputy public service director. It costs about $300,000 to keep them clean. He says 12 to 14 permanent workers are required for the job and the staff swells to 22 during the summer.

They empty up to 300 large trash containers, repair vandalism to comfort stations, clean graffiti off walls and regularly sweep the beaches with specially built rakes which remove refuse from the sand.

Richard Rieboldt of the Public Service Department keeps records on the amount of trash hauled from parks and beaches.

The monthly total of refuse picked up at the beaches rises and falls with weather conditions, he says. It's heaviest after a rain storm which washes trash down the rivers and storm drains to the sea where it is swept back upon the beach to become part of the massive litter problem.

In the parks, trash collections are heaviest after holidays or a special event like a concert or a large picnic.

Last year trash collections at the beach ranged from 153 tons to a high of 795 tons a month. In the parks it ranged from 390 to 795 tons, according to Rieboldt.

No one knows exactly how much of that refuse was deposited in a container and how much had to be picked up off the ground or raked out of the sand.

AND VICTORIES in the war against litter are just as difficult to measure. Ronald Whitely, assistant director of parks and beaches in Newport Beach, thinks they are doing some good in that city.

Their campaign began three years ago when the city council appointed a citizens advisory committee to combat litter.

Under a banner urging residents to "Can Your Trash," the committee launched an educational program in schools and service clubs. A litter awareness week was planned and brochures and a film were distributed.

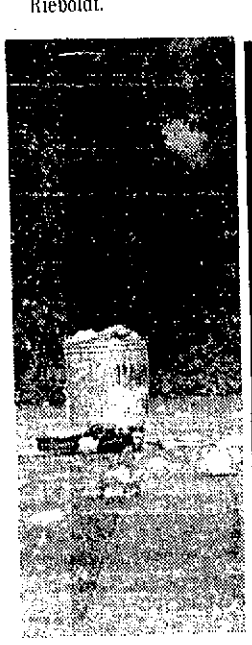

The council budgeted $5,000 for the program and workers 16 to 18 years of age were hired to walk the parks and beaches in the summer. They wear T-shirts with antilitter logos printed on them. Their job is not to pick up trash but to appeal to their peer group and change attitudes among those who use beaches and parks.

Whitely came across a study which reveals that 300,000 Americans are injured annually by litter. Broken glass and pull tabs do the damage in 86 per cent of the cases and the cost of treating those litter-related injuries is $3 million. More than 60 per cent of them occur in public recreation areas.

Getz, Bell, Whitely and others think an attempt to reduce litter and vandalism is a matter of aesthetics, a chance to save money and a question of safety. But most of all they feel it is a way of developing a sense of pride in the city's recreational areas.

Women are asking

'I am job hunting. Can you offer some tips on putting my best foot forward?'

By REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

You want to communicate. You need to explain things easily and quickly. You desire a personality that draws not repels.

If this sounds like a TV commercial for a breath mint, it's not. They are good ways to put your best self forward for a job or getting involved in a people-to-people project.

According to a trio of employer-relations experts, "The two keys to success are 'impress' and 'express.' Whether you have an oustanding job record or are just starting out, sincerity always impresses. Do your homework BEFORE the meeting. Have a list of previous jobs, recommendations, or scholastic record on the tip of your memory."

"Or," as one professional explained, "If you'll type some of your qualifications on a 3x5 card, along with your name, address and phone, it will show you're orderly and thorough. Even if the interviewer returns it, it will still make a visual impact."

Another "help" is expressing yourself. This ranges from answering questions readily and adequately to presenting a clean, attractive appearance.

The trio punctured a few taboos. "It's perfectly correct to ask questions concerning the job. You've a right to know basic facts — just don't turn the interview into 20 questions, or you'll turn off the employer."

Also, as Suzanne Rogers, seen on NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives," illustrates, it's wise to follow through with a phone call. It reminds them of you, gives you some information, and reinstates your interest in the position.

Do try to tell something about yourself that will register in the interviewer's memory. If you give a little personal background, or just ask directly for the job instead of being nonchalant, your chances are increased.

P.S. Would you like to increase your success potential? Send for our 12-page booklet which gives a test on how to rate your popularity, tips to improve your image as well as increase your word power, make first impressions good ones, and the ABC's of success. Enclose 50 cents (in coin) and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "increase your success potential," Independent, Press-Telegram, P.O. VIEW OF Friends and Associates area of "The World of Franklin and Jefferson" exhibition. In the background is a reproduction of Paul Revere's snake, engraved for the masthead of a Massachusetts newspaper at the time of the War for Independence. Exhibit will be at Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Invitation: enter world of Franklin, Jefferson

In Paris, London, Warsaw, New York and Chicago, throngs of curious, fascinated viewers have gone to see "The World of Franklin and Jefferson."

This major exhibition officially launched the American Bicentennial celebration in Europe, mixing words, pictures, historical artifacts and personal mementos to breathe life into the review of 120 crucial years in the formation of the United States.

Now the exhibit will be available to Southern Californians, opening to the public at Los Angeles

County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd., Nov. 9 and continuing through Jan. 2.

The historical exhibit-story begins with the birth of Benjamin Franklin in 1706; it ends with the death of Thomas Jefferson in 1926. Backgrounds of the men, books they wrote, their inventions, their special interests, their vision of the America that beckoned West are there for examination. Artifacts include model "thunder houses" made by Franklin to demonstrate virtues of his lightning rod, two silver tankards made by Paul Revere, pistols used by Alexander Hamilton in his famous 1804 duel with Aaron Burr; Hamilton was killed.

This exhibit, which our country sent abroad to reveal America's roots, was designed by the office of Charles and Ray Eames with cooperation of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. It was financed by a grant from the IBM Corporation. Admission is free.

The exhibition space is divided into four main sections. In the first, "Friends and Acquaintances," you meet not only George Washington, John Adams and Hamilton, but also Mercy Otis Warren, Charles Wilson Peale, Edmund Burke, the Marquis de Lafayette and others — a total of 34.

THE SECOND section is devoted to the lives of Franklin and Jefferson in terms of contrasts and similarities of backgrounds, activities and styles. Here is Franklin, a man of many parts, a printer, scientist, inventor. Jefferson's interests were farming, music, architecture. Both thought of themselves as philosophers, members of an international community, believing that the impartiality of sound knowledge could gradually free men everywhere from arbitrary power.

In the third section are major contributions both men made to three key documents of American history, documents which still are goals of political practice: the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

The final section concentrates on Jefferson's most significant presidential legacy: the plan for the westward expansion of the new nation. It traces events leading to the Louisiana Purchase and follows the Lewis and Clark exploration which Jefferson planned in detail to take the measure of the new land.

THIS IS HALLOWEEN and it will be marked in a special way, the Ethnic Mask Parade. Co-sponsored by the Craft and Folk Art Museum and Los Angeles County Depatment of Parks and Recreation, it has received official endorsement as a UNICEF Day activity. The parade will begin at 1 p.m. at La Jolla and Wilshire Boulevards with Rodney Allen Rippy, 1974 national children's chairman for UNICEF Day, serving as grand marshall. The procession will move east from La Jolla along Wilshire, past the Craft and Folk Art Museum and the La Brea Tar Pits, to Curson, then will disband at Hancock Park.

AT A PUBLIC meeting Oct. 21 in Saratoga, the California Arts Council awarded grants to five statewide organizations. The awards were made under a special emergency category in the Direct Funding Program to support statewide arts conferences. Recipients are: California Association of Dance Companies, $2,000; Bay Area Lawyers for the Arts/Los Angeles Advocates for the Arts, $3,000; California Confederation of the Arts, $5,000; Western Association of the Arts Museum, $1,300; and Alliance of California Arts Councils, $5,000.

Also, CAC is setting up guidelines for Special Projects. These are cultural projects that can't be pigeon-holed into other categories. CAC also is going to approve guidelines for Artists-in-Communities for statewide distribution by Nov. 10. This category includes artists in residence in community centers where they may practice their art and share their experiences with local audiences. Applications will be received for both programs between Nov. 15, Jan. 3.

LBSU can give new degree

The first degree in dance ever authorized for the California State University and Colleges has been approved for the department of dance at Long Beach State University.

Authorization from the chancellor of the 19-campus system for the program recognizes the extensive dance program offered by the department and the professional quality of the training it offers students. Established in 1970 by combining dance faculties from physical education and theater arts, the dance department now employs 17 full and part-time faculty members. This fall there are more than 828 students, more than four times the 1970 enrollment.

In its first showcase this season, the faculty of professional choreographers and dancers will give its fall dance concert Nov. 11 at 8:30 p.m. in the Studio Theater. Works will include modern, ballet, jazz and tap numbers. Additional performances will be given Nov. 12-13 at 8:30 p.m., Nov. 13-14 at 2:30 p.m. and Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m.

OPENING with "Encounters," a pre-classic suite in the modern idiom choreographed by Gloria Newman, the audience will be introduced to the forms and manners of the period of the allemande, courante, bourree, saraband and gigue performed by students from the repertoire class.

A concert premiere, "To Create the Burning Sweat of Ritual Fires" is a solo choreographed and danced by Rebecca Bobele. Ms Bobele was a member of the Bella Lewitzky Dance Company from 1968-72. She has worked in television with Donald McKayle and Jaime Rogers.

In the spectrum of modern dance, Karen Mullin will dance "'B.B.' Love, Duke" to a voice-rag-blues sound, choreographed by Larry Clark, member of the Viola Farber Company. Created for and danced only by Ms. Mullin, the dance was premiered at Brooklyn College, New York, in 1974 and later was performed in New Orleans.

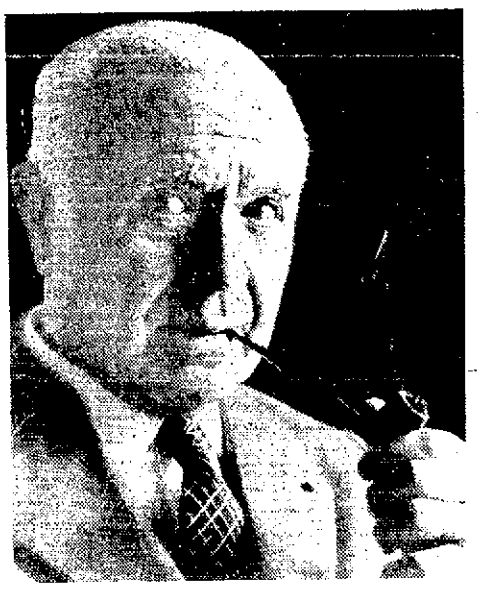

Gloria Ann Bowen will dance the "Prelude and Mazurka" from "Les Sylphides," choreographed by the legendary Michel Fokine. This romantic ballet first was performed in 1832.

PAT FINOT has created a new multi-media work for eight student dancers, two musicians and one photographer. It is a contemporary work inspired by the lights of night places. An artistic director and principal choreographer for The Moving Co., Ms. Finot has been a guest artist throughout California and received a National Endowment for the Arts grant for choreography in 1973.

"A Fifth of Beethoven," one of two dances representing the jazz style of Carlton Johnson, will be performed by LBSU students. Johnson is in his fifth season with the Carol Burnett Show and has worked in specials of Carol Channing, Danny Thomas, Sammy Davis Jr., Cher, and Danny Kaye.

Ted Howard, half of the team of "Ted and Larry Howard," will bring to the concert a reminder of the golden age of tap dancing with a line of 10 students and himself.

General admission is $3 for Thursday, Sunday and matinees, $3.50 for Friday and Saturday. Ticket information is available at the fine arts ticket office.

JOSE ITURBI

Iturbi concert date Nov. 16

Jose Iturbi, noted pianist, will open the 1976-77 Piano Series at Ambassador Auditorium, 300 W. Green St. Pasadena.

The performance Tuesday, Nov. 16, at 8:30 p.m., will be the world-renowned pianist and conductor's first public appearance in the Southern California area in nearly a decade. He is including this Ambassador appearance on a concert tour which includes performances in Mexico City, New York City, Spain, France and elsewhere.

Last season, Iturbi celebrated his 80th birthday in New York with a highly successful gala concert in which he performed four piano concertos as soloist and as conductor. The accompanying ensemble at Avery Fisher Hall was the Rochester Philharmonic which he led as permanent conductor and music director from 1935 to 1943.

The New York Times heralded the event as "an occasion that was impressive in so many respects and that honored a man who in his long life has given pleasure to many."

IN ADDITION to many concerts as both conductor and piano soloist, Iturbi played the first piano recital given in the new Lincoln Center concert hall, then known as Philharmonic Hall, in 1962. He will be the first to do so when the newly reconstructed hall, now called Avery Fisher Hall, is reopened this fall.

Iturbi was the first classical artist to break all classical recording sales and reach a total of more than a million copies on two occasions. His first gold one-millionth pressing in 1950 was for his "Polonaise in A-flat" by Chopin. The second was in 1953 for his "Clair de Lune" by Debussy.

Iturbi was heard in Long Beach in 1971; in 1966, he performed at Royce Hall, UCLA.

'The King and I' sets stage for LBCLO season

BY ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

On the eve of opening its 27th season, Long Beach Civic Light Opera is making progress by looking back.

So said Harvey Waggoner, LBCLO general manager, as he fielded last minute details for "The King and I" which opens Friday to run Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. through Nov. 21 at Jordan Theater, 6500 Atlantic Ave.

Doug Lance plays the dominating role of the King; Kathy Davis is his dauntless equal as Anna. Other leading roles are filled by Kathryn Lowe as Lady Thiang, Kevin Welch as Louis, Roberta Wolf as Tuptim, Steve Lozano as Lun Tha, Tom Hillary as the Kralahome and Tavio Hurtado as Prince Chulalongkorn.

This light opera classic by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II unfolds the tale of the tempestous king of Siam and his attempts to westernize his kingdom with the aid of the beautiful, headstrong English schoolteacher, Anna.

FROM THE OPENING "I Whistle a Happy Tune," through such numbers as "Hello, Young Lovers," the haunting "We Kiss in a Shadow," the lilting "Shall We Dance?" and the exotic, hilarious "Small House of Uncle Thomas" with its enchanting ballet, the story moves musically and dramatically with humor and sorrow to its emotional climax.

Why "The King and I," that veteran, to open the season?

Why two other productions of the same genre to complete this season: "Fiddler on the Roof" March 1 through 20 and "Oklahoma!" June 3 through 19?

Their selection is not by chance; it is the very heart of the philosophy which guides LBCLO this year.

"We're moving back to old standards," explained Waggoner, "and our season ticket sales already are up from 42,000 to 56,000.

"Five years ago we moved to more contemporary shows to add a young audience to our loyal subscribers."

TO ONE LOOKING for truly contemporary work, the past seasons scarcely seem daring. Example: 1969-70, "Flower Drum Song," "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," and "110 in the Shade." 1970-71 brought "Mame," "Music Man" and "Man of La Mancha."

In 1972-73 the innovation was "Promises, Promises;" in 73-73, "Applause;" in 74-75 there were two newer shows in the season, "Cabaret" and "Company;" and in the season just past, 75-76, "Jesus Christ, Superstar" led off, followed by "Most Happy Fella" and "Sweet Charity."

"I told the selection committee and the board of directors five years ago that I thought they were making a mistake in programming," Waggoner said. "The decrease in our attendance bears me out.

"WE HAVE a great president this year. Bill (William C. Maas, executive with Avery Products, International) will be a tremendous partner for me. He has a board that will be extremely active. Alan Ide, president of Metropolitan Stevedore Company, is heading a major effort to increase the number of businesses and corporations giving their support. Mrs. Harry Hastain, heading the Women's Guild, has stimulated interest in the company and increased ticket sales.

"Next year we move to Pacific Terrace theater — we look with great eagerness toward that and we want to be in a strong position, professionally and financially, when that time arrives.

"We have every expectation of continuing as an active and helpful participant in the Public Corporation for the Arts; CLO is on its professional resources committee."

ONE THING THAT has troubled Waggoner and others in LBCLO is the trend away from the original concept of the organization. First called Singers Workshop, the group was conceived as a musical theater workshop to give local, non-professional performers a chance to hone their talents, to learn and display theater crafts.

Through the years, the company focused more and more on professionalism and, beginning with "Applause," has used only union performers in leading roles.

Although the quality of productions was high, many in the CLO Association regretted the fact that non-Equity people couldn't hope for major parts.

At the end of the just completed 1975-76 season, Waggoner announced that this year, no union personnel would be employed. This was largely a financial necessity, but many members rejoiced at the return to the open-audition, non-union policy.

When the company moves to Pacific Terrace, it again will deal with unions. But there is great determination to retain the workshop aspect.

Dr. Sam and Meredith Meals recently were delegated by the executive committee to report on the Singers Workshop project.

THEY SAY, in part, "LBCLO traces its ancestry to an organization known as The Singers Workshop. These hardy pioneers were active in all phases of musical theater — costuming, design and construction of scenery and, of course, singing, acting and dancing.

"Through the years many changes have taken place in the name of progress, the majority (but not all) for the better.

"Our shows have achieved an ever increasing degree of professionalism of which we are all proud. Unfortunately, in the process, we have sacrificed much of the charm of amateurism — amateurism in its finest sense."

Looking ahead to the move to Pacific Terrace and its attendant union policy, the report continues, "LBCLO has long been acclaimed the leader in community musical theater in California, perhaps in the nation. This has been due not only to the quality of our productions, but to our serving as a place where young performers can learn and develop their particular skills and talents.

"We must not allow this element of our success to die for any reason."

"A WORKSHOP, or laboratory, would accomplish this end.

"The logical place to house such a project would be in the present CLO facility on Fourth Street. This would necessitate purchase of the property which would continue to serve as CLO offices and rehearsal hall. In addition it would provide space for classrooms, where all disciplines of musical theater could be learned — singing, dancing, acting, scenery design, lighting, etc."

"IN GOING BACK to old standards for this season, and probably for the future, we are gaining support," Waggoner said. "The quality of this first performance of the season in acting, scenery, music — in every way — is as good as any we've ever done."

As an example of the community's reaction to its season, Waggoner offered a letter.

It began: "Dear Friends — Bless you!! Bless you!!! For scheduling these three 'goodies' as your productions for next season!! I am so pleased that I shall again become a member — and this time a sponsor!

"I cancelled my membership last year in protest to some of the numbers included in the previous year's productions...."

The letter was signed by Florence E. Farrand, immediate past president of California Retired Teachers Association.

It's indicative, Waggoner believes, of the greater response that will come to Long Beach Civic Light Opera's new direction toward old ways.

IT HEMS, BASTES, MEASURES BUTTONS AND MAKES BUTTONHOLES JUST AS IF IT HAD HANDS.

Model 920

The trouble with a lot of sewing machines is they don't do a lot of work. You have to baste by hand. Hem by hand. Make buttonholes by hand. Sew hard-to-reach places by hand. And on and on.

The Futura* II machine by Singer is different.

It was designed to do the handwork for you. It blindstitches to give you invisible hems. It even speed bastes—fast and neat—so you don't have to.

It has an exclusive buttonholer that actually measures your button and makes a buttonhole to fit it—all in one step.

What's more, it also has our exclusive Flip and Sew* two-way sewing surface. A flat surface for 80% of your sewing jobs that snaps into a tubular surface for the other 20%. Like cuffs and pants and sleeves and neck seams.

There's even our push-button bobbin winder that winds in the machine right from the needle. You don't touch it.

As a matter of fact, there are so many extraordinary features on the Futura II machine by Singer, you're not just getting a sewing machine. You're getting an extra pair of hands. Come to Singer and try it for yourself.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Salmonella is food poison culprit

Food poisoning still causes more than two million Americans to fall ill each year, reports the American Medical Association.

The foremost food hazard continues to be poisoning by microbes, says Philip L. White, Sc. D., secretary of the AMA's Council on Foods and Nutrition.

And the major cause of food-borne illness is faulty food handling.

A common offender in food poisoning is an organism known as salmonella, found mostly in raw meats, raw poultry, eggs and dairy products. These organisms can produce headache, vomiting, diarrhea, stomach cramps and fever. The condition is seldom fatal but can be serious for infants, the elderly and the chronically ill.

Recommended precautions to help avoid salmonella poisoning:

—Use hot, soapy water to wash hands, utensils and cutting boards that have been in contact with raw meats, poultry, eggs and pastry mixes.

—Do not buy foods stored above the frostline in store freezers.

—Wash raw food thoroughly.

—Refrigerate all perishables promptly. Do not leave groceries in the car while running other errands.

—Do not thaw meats at room temperature.

—Do not stuff poultry until just prior to cooking.

—Use only clean eggs, without shell cracks, in foods not thoroughly cooked. Better still, avoid raw eggs.

—Refrigerate leftovers promptly.

—Wash poultry and the surface of raw beef to reduce the number of organisms.

—Always follow label instructions for storing and preparing packaged and frozen foods.

A dose of salt

A dose of "health salts" each morning may help ward off heart attacks, particularly in soft-water areas.

According to Drs. John Bradshaw and Geoffrey Dean of the Irish Medico-Social Board, the magnesium in the salts may help the chronic magnesium deficiency often seen in such areas.

Heart disease and high blood pressure are more common in soft-water areas, the report says.

The doctors, reporing in the Practitioner, a British medical journal, say chronic magnesium deficiency is just as significant and can lead to heart trouble. Hardness of water is linked to magnesium and calcium deposits.

Persons who die of heart attack tend to have fewer magnesium concentrations in the heart muscle than those who die of other causes.

A sumry of the report appears in the Medical Post.

Easy anesthetic

An anesthetic patch with 30 per cent lidocaine cream applied to intact skin produces complete skin anesthesia for minor operations.

The patch also can be used for other painful procedures such as skin testing for allergies, according to the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

Ban Brazil nuts

Brazil nuts, said to contain a poisonous substance, have been banned in Austria.

Government officials are confiscating Brazil nuts throughout the country, reports Medical Tribune, a newspaper for doctors.

The move was made in an attempt to protect the population from aflatoxin, a poisonous substance sometimes found in the nuts.

Aflatoxin, produced by a mold, particularly in products coming from the tropics, also has cancer-causing properties.

School cracks down on teen smokers

DEAR DR. MENNINGER,

My 14-year-old daughter, Susan, loves school. The last few weeks of summer, she couldn't wait to get back to classes. She's in the eighth grade in a junior high school where they have been having quite a bit of trouble with teen-agers smoking.

This year, the school decided to crack down on the problem, and they have instituted some harsh penalties. The first time a student is caught smoking at school, he or she is given a warning, and the parents are called. The second time, the student is suspended for three days.

Today, I got a call from the principal. He caught Susan smoking, and this was the warning. She says that this was a fluke; she was just taking a drag on a friend's cigarette.

At this point, my wife and I don't know what to do. Even though we both smoke, we don't think that Susan ought to be doing so at her age. I don't know whether to let it pass or to really come down hard on her and bawl her out. What would you suggest? Sincerely, D. M.

DEAR D. M.,

An increasing number of teen-agers are smoking. A national survey in 1971 found 15 per cent of young people smoking.

The latest survey in 1974 reported one out of four (25 per cent) young people were now smoking. This compares to a fairly constant report of about 40 per cent of adults who smoke (39 per cent in 1971, 41 per cent in 1974).

Again, the marked increase is in younger age groups. In 1971, only 5 per cent of the 12-13 year olds were smoking; now that's up to 13 per cent. The 1974 survey found 25 per cent of the 14-15 year olds were smoking and 38 per cent of the 16-17 year olds were smoking. So Susan has a good deal of company.

Since the incidence of smoking in teen-agers is so prevalent, I'm not sure you'll get the results you want by either extreme of letting it pass or bawling her out. Rather, I would suggest sitting down and discussing the situation with her in a straightforward manner, touching on the issue of smoking and its relationship to staying in school.

MANY TIMES we are faced with rules with which we may disagree. Your daughter and her friends may disagree with the school rules about smoking, but as long as they exist, they are part of her "reality." And she must consider the "cost" of challenging that reality. Is she willing to pay the price of suspension from the school she so enjoys in order to smoke?

Most adolescents think primarily in terms of here and now; they often fail to consider the future consequences of their actions. Your responsibility is to help Susan appreciate those potential consequences, and to then trust her ability to judge the best course of action.

Of course, some teen-agers challenge rules as a way to prove they are independent and can do their own thing. The task of the parent is to help the teen-agers find a way to do his or her own thing without compromising the future.

In the case of smoking, the future consequences also include the high probability of health problems over the long run, particularly when one starts smoking at an early age and continues it on a regular basis.

However, as long as you and your wife smoke, you present a model with which your daughter may wish to identify. Teen-agers do not always appreciate advice of "Do as I say, not as I do."

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Tips when the party's on you

DEAR MR. SMITH: According to current Internal Revenue Service rules, how much must one spend for business entertainment expenses before a receipt for those expenses is needed? I keep a daily log of such expenses (who, what, where and the purpose). Is my lunch or dinner that is included on entertainment occasions also deductible from gross income? — L. P.J.

jacob smith

Your contemporaneously-prepared daily log is extremely important. In addition, obtain a paid bill or receipt for any single expenditure of $25 or more. When you entertain for business, it is not required that you reduce your deductible expense by the cost of your own meal.

DEAR MR. SMITH: As a self-employed golf pro I purchased a 10-year medical policy with the condition that if no claims were made I would receive 80 per cent of the premiums back. The 10-year period is almost up and the insurance company is in financial difficulties. They offered me 15 per cent of what is due me instead of the 80 per cent as outlined in the policy. How can I take this $5,000 loss on my 1976 tax return? — J. R.

I think you will first have to determine whether all the premiums you paid over the 10-year period have been deducted in your tax returns. If so, then the 15 per cent refund you receive will either be taxable income or it will decrease your current-year medical expense. There would then be no deduction for any financial loss. However, if all or any part of the premiums were not deducted, then you have a non-business bad debt (the same as a short-term capital loss) deduction in proportion to your non-deducted premiums.

ROY ROBERTS
Fancy champagne brunch at Rascals

NEARLY EVERYONE feels like a rascal at times. After my Uncle Lonie has a glass of champagne he gets pretty frisky. Sometimes he's tricky and mischievous even when he hasn't had a drink.

Which reminds me that Rascals, Long Beach's swank new restaurant at 4401 Atlantic Ave., has a nostalgia theme that dates back to the Hollywood movie era of the 1920s, '30s and '40s. Remember such classic rascals as Errol Flynn, Rudolph Valentino, W. C. Fields and Theda Bara, the vamp? Well, that's what Rascals restaurant is all about. It's the kind of place where you can have a rascally good time, dining, drinking and dancing.

Rascals is also for those who don't feel like devilish rascals. It's a beautiful place to take your family and small children. Especially this morning when Rascals serves its delectable champagne brunch. That brunch — with many colorful selections, hot and cold — is served every Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The brunch includes a glass of sparkling champagne and selections of fresh fruit and salads from the salad bar. Currently in season are Crenshaw melon, honeydew melon and watermelon. The salad bar also offers such fruits as pineapple and cherries. The entrees are served by waitresses or waiters costumed as such personalities as Mae West, Groucho Marx, Charlie Chaplin or perhaps Fanny Brice, or Elizabeth Taylor. The entrees, served with hot fresh blueberry muffins range from cheeze blintzes, $2.95, to creole or mushroom omelets, $3.75; smoked Nova Scotia salmon with eggs, $3.95, and eggs Benedict, $4.25. There are also other selections.

Rascals (formerly Welch's) is a stunningly beautiful restaurant and discotheque owned by Roy Roberts and W. C. Bob Wills. Roy was a founder of Occidental Petroleum and former head of Mutual Broadcasting. Bob is president of Three Chels Corp. Their company vice presidents, who helped create Rascals, are Bill Shepard and Ken Rapley. Its new manager is Dave Reichley.

Rascals, which appeals to people of all ages, has a beautiful disco with a huge collection of old and new records. The music doesn't intrude into the dining areas. There's disco dancing during the Sunday brunch, during the daily luncheons and all night long.

Rascals' big exotic cocktails are half-price Mondays and Tuesdays from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. and Wednesdays from 9 to 11 p.m. On Mondays and Tuesdays, the prime rib, a large juicy tender slice, is $6.95. It's normally $8.95. Other premium entrees for dinner range from the top sirloin steak, $6.95, to flaming steak Diane, $9.75; king crab, $7.45, and skewered steak pieces, $6.95. Each comes with all you wish from the soup-salad bar.

--Caricatures by GLEB RUBANOV

THE POPULARITY of Sunday brunches has become a phenomenon in Southern California restaurants.

Another one that this department highly recommends is served every Sunday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Currie's Santa Fe, long a highway landmark at 1735 W. Pacific Coast Highway, just west of Santa Fe Avenue. New owners Lynn Huff and Bill Newbury don't include champagne with their deluxe, "sit-down" brunch, but they do include just about everything else. The starter is chilled orange, grapefruit or tomato juice. The entree plate is as attractive as a scene in Technicolor, including wedges of fresh cantaloupe, honeydew melon and watermelon plus two eggs (any style), potatoes O'Brien, Irish-style, or hominy; ham, bacon, sausage or beef patty.

Also included are hot homemade cinammon rolls, biscuits with country gravy and a generous condiment platter containing wild honey, strawberry jam, apple butter, grape jelly, yogurt, whipped butter and cream cheese. The brunch is $2.99 for adults; $1.99 for youngsters.

Open every day for luncheons, dinners and banquets for groups from 35 to 75, Currie's has been revitalized by Lynn and Bill. Their new No. 1 chef is a talented, versatile woman, Ann Duchak, whose daughter, Pat Daniels, is hostess. Luncheon is Mondays through Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. If a guest wishes luncheon on Sunday instead of brunch, it will be served cheerfully from Currie's new luncheon menu.

Monday through Friday, Currie's features a special luncheon for $2.95 with tossed green salad or soup du jour and other items. Here's the sked: Mondays, a surprise entree; Tuesdays, lamb shanks; Wednesdays, chicken-fried steak with country gravy; Thursdays, ham with limas; Fridays, corned beef and cabbage. A new seafood entree served every day at luncheon is scalone, a patty combining scallops and abalone. It's $2.95 and delectable. Cocktails are at reduced prices during the happy hour, 3 to 7 p.m.

Decorated in the desert style of New Mexico, Currie's attracts many sports minded people for its Monday night TV football games when the special is a hot dog with beer for $1. When the Rams play in Los Angeles on Sundays, Currie's arranges for a 45-passenger bus to transport fans from the restaurant to the Coliseum.

At dinner every night, Currie's emphasizes its new Chef's Choice for $3.50, offering fried chicken with country gravy and whipped potatoes or steak tidbits with a sauce en casserole plus rice. Included are green salad or soup and hot bread. Also featured are the entrees Currie's has made famous since the 1940s — the big beautiful filet mignon au jus, prime rib au jus, lobster thermidor, broiled sanddabs, braised beef shortribs, roast turkey, and other steaks, including the Currie's special. Those dinners are $4.95 to $7.95.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Finds his reward rebuilding lives

mildred flanary

As director of the Salvation Army Men's Social Service Center, today's chef of the week, Capt. Charles Strickland, is carrying on in exemplary style the important work started in 1865 by the late William Booth, founder of the Army.

Strickland is beginning his sixth year at the Long Beach center, where there are 90 full-time employees. Their salaries are taken from the yearly operating budget of $840,000. Through the support of public donations of clothing, furniture and other household items, the Army operates nine thrift stores — providing the public an opportunity to buy items at reduced rates.

Strickland says, "Of all the services in which we are involved, I find working with men who need help and lodging to be most rewarding."

The "clients" are men, mostly in their mid-40s, who live in the large three-story building constructed in 1924. They men are accepted as residents when they agree to work on personal problems, such as the treatable handicaps of emotional disability or alcoholism.

Most men stay about six weeks, obtaining therapy skills to prepare for reentry into society.

"The men spend some time with religious matters," said Strickland. "We try to direct them to a personal relationship with God. We have a chapel program five days a week." The men receive a cash stipend of $5 to $18 a week, depending on their progress in therapy.

STRICKLAND WAS BORN in New Bern, N.C., and following graduation from high school there, entered the U.S. Air Force and served for four years. It was while in the service in Arizona that he met his wife, April, who shared his special interest. Following discharge, both enrolled in the Salvation Army School for Officers Training. They were commissioned (ordained) as officers in June, 1965.

Areas of service have included Ogden, Utah; Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Santa Barbara and Hawaii.

In the interim, Strickland has graduated from Santa Barbara City College with an A.A. Degree. He says, "If all goes as planned, I will receive my B.S. in business administration from Long Beach State University in December."

The Stricklands have two sons and a daughter, all students at Long Beach Brethren School. Craig is 11, Derek, 5, and Linnea, 9. When time permits, the family enjoys bowling, swimming and camping.

April says, "Charles has about given up on reminding me to shut the cupboard doors; and NOT to refrigerate the peanut butter. There was a time when he considered a peanut butter sandwich a 'must' on his menu. He's changed now to mashed banana sandwiches, because the peanut butter wouldn't spread."

Today, he and April have combined their cooking talents on a Butter pineapple cake, a dessert for a typical Southern supper of pork chops, collard greens, sweet potatoes, hush puppies, and a salad of sliced tomatoes and pickled cucumbers. We recommend it for any menu!

BUTTER PINEAPPLE CAKE

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
¾ cup milk
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream sugar and butter. Add eggs and beat thoroughly. Sift flour, measure and sift with baking powder and salt. Add alternately with milk to creamed sugar and butter. Beat thoroughly. Add vanilla.

Divide and pour into four well oiled cake pans. Bake at 375 degrees about 15 to 20 minutes. COOL.

TOPPING

1 20-ounce can crushed pineapple
1 5-ounce can evaporated milk
1 tablespoon sugar (may be omitted, if desired)

Mix pineapple with juice, milk and sugar. Chill for 2 to 3 hours. Chilling thickens mixture. Spoon mixture between each layer and on tops of layers. Slice and serve.

Serving suggestions:

After final layer has been covered with the pineapple mixture, sprinkle with shredded coconut. Decorate with cherries and/or bananas.

Topping can be used on your own favorite butter or yellow cake. Cake can also be baked in an oblong cake pan.

CAPT. CHARLES STRICKLAND, S.A.

Aces on bridge

ira corn

Dear Mr. Corn:

Rubber bridge, both vulnerable. 60 on score, what is the best opening with:

In Bushes, Dayton

♠ A K 7 10 31-A
♥ A K 8
♣ K J 9

Answer: The standard opening bid with a balanced hand of 25-26 points is three no-trump and I see no reason not to make that bid. For tactical reasons one might bid only one no-trump in hopes of luring an aggressive opponent into a trap.

However, in my opinion, that action will miss more slams than it will catch opponents who bid on nothing.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Please settle this controversy. Does it take seven points or eight points to make a positive response to a strong two bid? Some texts specify eight points, some of my partners say only seven.

Fine Lines, Graham, Tex.

Answer: What controversy? On some hands it's seven; on others maybe it's eight. Let me put it another way. Suppose partner opens two spades and you hold the ace of hearts and the king of spades.

Is that really only seven points? On the other hand, suppose you hold a singleton spade and eight scattered points in queens and jacks. Is that really eight points?

Point count is only a guide in bidding. Each hand must be evaluated, using the point count as a guide, and tempered by the actual bidding that influences the assessment of the value of specific cards.

Dear Mr. Corn:

What happens at a tournament if a player accidentally overhears someone else's results on a hand he is yet to play?

Sneak Previews, Chicago

Answer: The player should report this fact to the tournament director who will take the appropriate action.

At the New England Knockouts, one player overheard the result involving the very last hand. He reported this to the director and a substitute board was played. In this case, virtue was truly rewarded.

The result overheard would have produced a tied slam and a loss by three IMPS. The substitute board netted a gain of six IMPS for a close three IMP win!

Dear Mr. Corn:

What would you bid with this hand after partner bids one club?

Caught It, San Mateo, Calif.

Answer: I would bid two clubs. One spade is a possibility but very risky. If one bids one spade one may never be able to support clubs. A pass is also possible but I prefer to raise while the stakes are not too high.

♠ Q 9 8 7 4 10 31-B
♣ Q 10 8 6 3

Dear Mr. Corn:

I open one club and partner jumps to four spades. What type of hand does he promise?

Broken Promises, Detroit

Answer: A long spade suit and a prayer that he can make four spades opposite a normal opening bid. The jump to game does deny interest in slam contracts.

Time doesn't dim validity of her advice

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from HEAVY-HEARTED DAD whose pregnant daughter wasn't even through eighth grade, I had to write. This is for all teen-age girls whose boyfriends try to pressure them into going all the way:

I'm 16 and my boyfriend is 18. Sure, we go parking and make out, but when he mentions fourth base, I set him straight right away.

My feeling is this: We have our whole lives ahead of us, so why take a chance on ruining it when we're young?

If your boyfriend says, "If you love me, you'll prove it by going all the way," tell him to get lost. Keep a level head and don't ever go so far you can't turn back. It's not worth it. Sign me ... A FIRM "NO"

DEAR FIRM: Congratulations! Fifteen years ago I wrote a book, "DEAR TEEN-AGER," but the chapter "Should I Prove My Love?" is still sound advice for teen-agers. And here it is:

Girls need to "prove their love" through illicit sex relations like a moose needs a hat rack.

Why not "prove your love" by sticking your head in the oven and turning on the gas? Or playing leap-frog out in the traffic? It's about as safe.

Clear the cobwebs out of your head: Any fellow who asks you to 'prove your love' is trying to take you for the biggest, most gullible fool who ever walked. That proving bit is one of the oldest and rottenest lines ever invented!

Does HE love YOU? It doesn't sound like it. Someone who loves you wants whatever is best for you. But now figure it out. He wants you to:

Commit an immoral act ...
Surrender your virtue ...
Throw away your self-respect ...
Risk the loss of your precious reputation ...
And risk getting into trouble ...

Does that sound as though he wants what's best for you? This is the laugh of the century. He wants what's best for HIM ... he wants a thrill he can brag about at your expense.

Love? Who's kidding whom! A boy who loves a girl would sooner cut off his right arm than hurt her. If you want my opinion, this self-serving so-and-so has already proved that he DOESN'T love you.

The predictable aftermath of "proof" of this kind always finds Don Juan tiring of his sport. That's when he drops YOU, picks up his line and goes casting elsewhere for bigger and equally silly fish.

At times, still another version of this modern tragedy occurs, as indicated by this letter I once received:

DEAR ABBY: I went steady for seven months with a boy I thought was the most wonderful person in the world. I thought I'd always stay decent. After a while we weren't satisfied with just kissing.

He asked me to prove my love. I thought as long as we planned to be married in a few years, what would it matter?

I gave in to him, Abby, and I found out it mattered a lot. He lost all respect for me. He started going with other girls. He even talked about me to other boys.

Please print this for all the girls to see. Maybe it will help someone who is tempted to prove her love like I did. — SORRY NOW

If he loves you, let HIM prove his love — by marching you to the altar!

Mexico City

Mexico West says if you fly into Mexico from a Mexican border airport, you will pay the same fare as before in pesos. Only now your dollar gets you 25 pesos. Double the old 12.50, thanks to another devaluation last week.

Not so if you fly from international airports. Fares there are worked out in U.S. dollars. Mexico West therefore figures if you fly to La Paz in Baja California from Los Angeles, you'll pay something around $150.

But if you cross the border and take the plane from Tijuana — paying in pesos — you get the ride for $76.

Other savings changing dollars into the new devalued peso: Gasoline unleaded was 92 cents, now about half that. Car ferry service between Baja and Puerto Vallarta or Mazatlan is down.

Toll road charges down. Car insurance rates are NOT down. Car parts are imported to Mexico and are bought at dollar prices.

Editor's note:

The two-year-old bimonthly publication is edited by Elmar Baxter, director of public relations for the Port of Long Beach and a Baja aficionado of long standing. Among his Mexican credentials is co-authorship with Tom Miller of the "Baja Book," a definitive touring guide of the peninsula, with maps made from authorized National Aeronautics and Space Administration satellite photographs.

MEXICO WEST is a lively 12-pager covering tourist travel, buying, roads, fishing and so on. Mainly about Baja California. But they reach out to the Mexican West Coast wherever the car ferries run. Baja Trail Publications. Box 15444, Santa Ana, CA. 92705, one year $5, every other month.

The dollar begins to climb again in the world market. (Or other currencies are dropping.) Anyway, your dollar buys more pounds, francs, lire at the bank.

THE LONDON cab ride that cost you $2.40 last year should be around $1.65 today. And the French franc is running close to five for the dollar. I was only getting four to the dollar a couple of years ago.

But French prices still startle the most traveled Americans. Ed Fleishell, just back from a business trip that took him through a lot of wine and restaurant country says: "I figure it cost $160 a day for two of us just for restaurants."

He said: "And I don't mean expensive, three-star places either. Matter of fact, I think the one-star and two-star restaurants give you better food and service.

"MICHELIN three-star restaurants have it made. As soon as they get three stars, EVERYBODY goes there. You, a Frenchman, have a good customer coming from the States. You take him to a three-star restaurant."

"Now the one-star is trying for two stars. And the two-star is like Avis. Trying harder — for the third star."

FLEISHELL told me: "I ordered a bottle of Chateauneauf du Pape and it came to $14. Now I sell that wine at Le Club for $10. This man just walks down the road and buys it from the winery, right? I've paid shipping charges, importers profits, taxes and I make money at $10."

"So I said this to the owner and he told me: 'M'sieu, in your American restaurants, the customer sits before dinner and consumes many expensive martinis, Scotches.

'The Frenchman may have a tiny aperitif before dinner. But he does not drink $20 worth of gin and vermouth. Therefore, you make money on gin. We must make our money on wine.'"

INCIDENTALLY, Le Club is the only first-class restaurant on snobby Nob Hill where the frosty, dry martini still costs only $1.50. I am cutting out places where the tab shows martinis at $2.50 to $3.

The $3 martini is about standard in France now.

PALM Springs offers diversions by day and night.

GAL-IVANTING Season springs anew

Like a sleeping princess, Palm Springs slumbers through its long hot summer awaiting the kiss of an autumn knight. Then, the desert resort springs to life for another season.

Our little princess is maturing. She is becoming a queen. No longer is Palm Springs a culturally vacuous place devoted solely to poolside lizards and fun-in-the-sun.

Theater, for instance. Last year when the impressive Desert Museum opened its multi-million dollar doors, its old location was taken over by the performing arts. The Palm Springs Theater opened its pilot season then with little fanfare, but reviews it garnered were the envy of theatrical entrepeneurs in Los Angeles.

THIS SEASON, with four major productions featuring world-renowned stars, theater in Palm Springs will rank with any in the West.

Despite its growth, Palm Springs retains a low architectural profile. With fragrant air, soaring snow-capped mountains and palm-studded oases, the natural ecological balance is as much a part of desert alchemy as suntanned faces hobnobbing in street cafes and nighttime bistros.

The first thing I do on my weekend arrivals is pick up a copy of Key Magazine to find out what is going on. It is available free at the airport or from most hotels, restaurants and shops in town.

Each October's seasonal "opening night" provides a moveable feast of entertainment as suspenseful as the TV network's annual turnover. Some bistros barely make it through one season. Others catch on and stay around forever.

AMONG THE latter is Melvyn's charming Ingleside Inn which opened last year. Its popularity is reinforced by George Allardice and Russ Haddock, the desert's favorite troubadour and accompanist, who appear to be ensconced in the lounge quite permanently.

Ace Baldwin at Perrinas piano bar is another "establishment." Perrina's calm linguine is an experience nobody should miss. Order it with a salad and a bottle of wine.

For Sunday night, I'll take Bob Corwin on the piano at Sorrentino's seafood house. This highly-trained musician does as well with classics as he does with pop.

For the disco set, a new one called the Bomba

choral pepper

has opened in the Trinidad. The hotel and restaurant has a new owner, Ken Hole from Vancouver. It now is redecorated in typical West Indies fashion.

The menu features flaming dishes with unusual salads and a tropical fruit bar for deserts. Entertainment is in the bar until 10 PM, when the disco opens in the dining room.

As a part-time resident of Palm Springs, the above are my own favorite spots, but on each visit my list grows. Yours will, too.

Grove Garden

Hundreds of flowers, plants, shrubs and other greenery from around the hemisphere comprise the Garden of the Groves in Freeport, Bahamas.

The admission-free beauty spot also has three waterfalls, a man-made pond and a re-creation of a famous European chapel for meditation.

AUTUMN LEAVES GRACE VIRGINIA'S CAPITOL IN RICHMOND

BEST OF BICENTENNIAL

Where it all began

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

RICHMOND, Virginia — It's not too late in the year to blaze a Bicentennial trail through the flaming forests of this state where American history began. New England's Indian summer is drawing to a close, but Virginia's fall foliage is in full bloom and the major historical attractions are open all year long.

You get both in a single glance here in the capital city, where the Grecian-styled Capitol building designed by Thomas Jefferson crowns a central hilltop park, surrounded at this season by a carefully-tended landscape of green, red and gold. Variegated leaves hardly touch the ground before they are whisked away by the rakes of gardener teams.

The structure itself is one of the many minor prides of Jefferson, after the three achievements he considered his legacy to the nation: Author of the Declaration of Independence, instigator of the first statute for religious freedom and founder of the University of Virginia.

Unlisted on his self-written epitaph are the Capitol, the stately home at Monticello on which he lavished nearly 40 years of spare-time architectural talent, the university's famed Rotunda at the Charlottesville campus, which was the basis for the design of the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, and his terms as Governor and President.

RICHMOND is the hub of Virginia's wealth of historic colonial attachments, preserved or restored as they were when erected. To the east are the crude log huts of Jamestown, site of the 1607 landing of the first company of English settlers in America. To the west is Charlottesville and Jefferson's elegant hilltop homestead a few miles outside the city.

Both north and south lie other centers of early Americana, from spacious plantations to the battlegounds of the Revolution and the Civil War. Modern highways and freeways have replaced the rutted trails which linked the Colonial settlements, but the countryside between remains much the same as Jefferson's description in a letter written in 1788:

"... a flower here, a tree there; yonder a grove, near it a fountain; on this side a hill, on that a river. I know nothing so charming as our own country."

This autumn tour through the Virginia of Washington, Jefferson, Thomas Paine, Capt. John Smith and Gen. Robert E. Lee combines the best of two worlds. What there were of Bicentennial throngs (the expected overcrowding never materialized this year) have left the scene and the scenery to latecomers.

THE COLORFUL pageant of nature and history began immediately after arrival at Dulles International Airport. Although American Airlines lists Dulles as a Washington destination for its daily DC10 flights from Los Angeles, and other connecting flights into Washington National Airport, both terminals are actually in Virginia.

Dulles is about 30 miles west of Alexandria, just across the Potomac from the nation's capital. The rental car drive into Alexandria along the freeway serving the airport was a preview of the next four days. No billboards marred the view of wooded hills and open farmland decked in harvest tones.

Temperatures were brisk in the mornings, but sunny and warm to the mid-60s by early afternoon four days of the tour. Changeable weather to be expected at this time of year gave us rain only one day.

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

Fly by night & $ave

It was twilight, and New Orleans was a dusky blue fused with gold — far too beautiful to leave. Besides, there was also the possibility of sitting around discussing soybean futures and dining with a new-found friend.

Since he looked like The Bionic Man and the proposed restaurant was Gallatoire's, any sane female would instantly phone the airline she'd planned to spend the evening with and say, "You do what you want at 7:30 but I'm staying here."

BEING OF sound mind, I did call. They were very understanding. They even offered an alternative 2 a.m. departure that made me wonder if helpful Heloise had gone into the aviation business. When I raced up to the airport counter at 1:45 a.m., however, Heolise was off duty. It was nonetheless a night of nights: She'd been replaced by Santa Claus.

"I see you have a full-fare coach ticket," said St. Nick. "If you'll wait just a minute, I'll give you a refund. This is a coach flight, so it's less."

Yes, Virginia, that's how it is. You fly by night for 20 per cent less than you fly by day. Take that, bank account, and don't forget to credit it to me.

Well, that's how it works MOST of the time. There are some night flights that haven't any competition, so of course the airlines in charge have neglected to file lower fares. To be a cheapie night flight, the thing has to be designated night coach, not merely take off after 9 p.m. and before 7 a.m.

NOR ARE night-coach flights as numerous as nickels. Delta has pushed them, however, and this season they are on the increase, though still operating only between big cities that attract lots of daytime passengers and are presumed capable of generating more business if the price is right.

At the moment that appears to be an expanded

list of places principally along the routes of American, Delta, Eastern, National, TWA and Western.

The big item to remember is that night coach tickets are just about the only discount fares left with no strings attached. When you do locate one, you don't need to have pink eyes, furnish your mother's maiden name or sign up during the preceding leap year. If there are seats, you can buy one right up until departure time.

So night coaches take off and land at odd hours. Look at it this way: It's not a great saving, but it's a good saving and all you have to lose is a little sleep.

City of museums

Fort Worth, Texas, has an unusual complex of four museums whose exhibitions are non-competitive, according to Continental Airlines travel experts.

They are the Museum of Science & History, with both live and mounted animals, historical objects and exhibits designed to appeal largely to youth; the Art Center, with a large collection of impressionists and sculpture of the Southwwest, the Amon Carter Museum of Western Arts, with paintings by Charles Russell and Frederic Remington, and the Kimball Museum, wwith a collection of classical and modern masters, and a library of 20,000 art volumes.

At that moment

"He who tooteth not his own horn," said John Llewelyn Lewis, "the same shall not be tooted."

Nobody tooted his louder during the stormy years labor came of age, or did more in the rearing, than the union leaderith the eyebrows like hedges and jaw like a coal stove. John L. took on most everybody and most always won.

"Organize the Unorganized" and "Never a Step Backward" were the slogans of the ninth grade dropout who could quote Shakespeare and Scriptures to the low and the mighty and tell an armed man to "take that gun out of your pocket or I'll shove it down your throat."

The former coal miner who dug his way to the top of the United Mine Workers and founded the Congress of Industrial Organizations battled presidents of companies and presidents of the United States from Wilson to Truman. Feeling he had been double-crossed by one President, he said to his face: "Nobody can call John L. Lewis a liar and least of all Franklin Delano Roosevelt!"

He called Vice President John Nance Garner "a poker playing, whiskey drinking, labor baiting, evil old man." About the best anyone could manage in retaliation was one company executive who stammered: "Mr Lewis, I-I-I am not afraid of your eyebrows."

Tough or courtly, imperious or impish, Lewis set the pattern that other labor leaders were to follow. He made the sit-down strike, which he said dated back to the builders of the Pyramids, a national weapon of the late '30s. Even high school students in Cleveland sat down in protest that their newly arrived class pins "were a lot of junk." There was violence, often, but Big Labor had been born.

MIDWIFE LEWIS was always in the news. In 1937, about four per cent of the stories in the New York Times for the whole year revolved around John L. But no headlines were bigger than when he pulled his men out during World War II contrary to a union no-strike pledge. "John Lewis, damn your coal black soul," cried Stars and Stripes from Europe. Unbowed, Lewis won but was magnanimous in victory. One day when he found Roosevelt maneuvering some miniature ships on a battle map, he offered to send him a set of electric trains for Christmas ...

Now, on this Nov. 19, 1946, Lewis has done it again. The government has seized the mines, but Lewis has called his men out anyway. He's demanding a 40-hour week instead of 54, with no loss in pay.

With a toss of his cane to the curious and a tip of his hat to a lady, Lewis, chewing on a cigar, drops into the lobby of Washington's Carlton Hotel to read in peace about one of the few battles he was to lose.

It was to cost him $10,000 personally and his union $700,000 in court fines, but no one could forget the debt labor owed the man who made management listen to a favorite quote from the Bible: "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn."

A rich man

get on with it. His patience was severely tried, but luckily he liked Dustin and they got along. Olivier can't remember his lines the way he used to because of his recent illness, but Dustin required just as many retakes. It all evened out."

And what about line producer Robert Evans, who has taken his share of credit for the film's success? "Bob found the book, came to me and helped every inch of the way. I didn't want Dustin. I thought he was too old. I wanted an unknown. Evans begged me to reconsider. So we made a pact that we'd never mention his age in the film.

"Evans came up with the idea of Olivier. I thought he was too ill to work. Evans pressured me into using big-star names. Then when we started shooting, we had some differences. The film was not well-organized, Bob couldn't understand why I wanted a lot of garbage littering the streets of Paris — little things. But all good producers — and there aren't many — have as their first concern the film itself.

"Not until we were in the cutting room did I realize what a remarkable, tasteful man Robert Evans is. I was deceived by the eye-catching, glamorous lifestyle he likes to advertise.

"We developed an extremely close relationship. I know people regard him as a figure of fun, but he's amazingly acute. He really made hundreds of valuable contributions. He was an objective eye and ear, and I trusted his advice completely."

AT WIT'S END

Chaperone's checklist

erma bombeck

At some time in a parent's life, he or she will be asked to chaperone something at the school.

Chaperoning is basically a depressing job. It is the moment most people have been dreading ... the day you traverse the gap from swinger to swingee.

I do not like chaperoning for other reasons. It is not my idea of fun to sit and watch someone doing what I would be doing if I didn't have to sit there and tell them not to do it.

As the wife of an educator, I have had my share of supervising dances, trips, proms and social affairs. It would be selfish of me not to share my expertise.

1. One of the primary duties of a chaperone is to find the party. Obviously you cannot chaperone if you have no one to chap. We have found the best way to find the hidden location of a party is to follow a car full of kids with your lights out.

2. Proms often have two punch bowls. One is a blend of 15 fruits that make your face break out as you pour it. The other will put a little fun in your life, quicken your footsteps and make the evening bearable. Unfortunately, the chaperones are not told about this bowl.

3. Be sure of your authority. When you walk into the parking lot and discover three hoods who do not attend your school, but who are ripping off a car and have a tire iron in their hands, make sure you have a better threat than, "You know, this makes you ineligible for the Robert Frost awards in the spring."

4. BE AWARE of the fact that music at proms and parties could make you sterile. The art of conversation is reduced to lipreading and pantomime. As an experiment, I once repeated a single sentence for the entire evening, "Is there somewhere I can go to scratch my teeth?" Everyone pretended to hear what I was saying. Thirty-five people said they were pleased to meet me too. Eight said, "It's too much work for you. Come to our place." And one said, "Thank you. My mother made it."

5. It is not as difficult knowing when the party is over as you might think. There are little things ... like you are humming and tapping your foot and the band is gone ... your eyes no longer smart from Clearasil, and you realize that from habit you shouted, "Is there somewhere I can go to scratch my teeth?" and the English teached sniffed and said, "I'd say you got into the wrong punch bowl."

USC quarterback Vince Evans (8) follows excellent blocking by fullback Mosi Tatupu (36) on 8-yard touchdown run in second quarter. Jinx? Ha! Brown peps UCLA past Washington

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

SEATTLE — The Jinx is dead.

Theotis (Big Foot) Brown and James Owens stomped UCLA's 18-year Husky Stadium jinx to extinction Saturday afternoon as the Bruins escaped tenacious Washington, 30-21.

A crowd of 47,719 watched in amazement as Brown thundered to a school-record 220 yards on 35 carries. In the process the 6-3, 215-pound sophomore scored touchdowns on dashes of 29, 15 and 51 yards.

Besides breaking Kermit Johnson's mark of 183 yards, Brown joined 20 other Bruin backs who have crossed the goal line three times in one game. Oddly, one of those, Wendell Tyler, spent most of the chilly afternoon on the bench after suffering an ankle sprain and twice fumbling — neither of which the Huskies recovered.

Head coach Terry Donahue didn't hesitate to insert the 175-pound Owens into Tyler's left halfback spot and the sophomore from Sacramento reeled off 123 yards in 22 carries, scoring his first Bruin touchdown on a broken-field gallop of 34 yards.

The game was won by the offensive line. Methodically, tight ends Rick Walker and Don Pederson; tackles Rob Kezirian and Gus Coppens; guards Greg Taylor and Keith Eck, and center Mitch Kahn tore gaping holes in the Husky defense.

"I wouldn't be doing justice if I didn't praise the offensive line," a relieved Donahue said afterward. "That's the best its played this season."

It was a contest of two excellent running teams and the object was to force the other club to throw the football. UCLA's defense succeeded; Washington's did not.

Plagued by the toughness of ends Manu Tuiasosopo and Tim Tennigkeit and the pursuit of linebackers Frank Stephens, Jerry Robinson, Tom Murphy and Raymond Burks, quarterback Warren Moon could complete only 11 of 27 passes for 132 yards.

One of those was a 28-yarder to tight end Don Greenwood midway through the final period. It went for a touchdown when safety Pat Schmidt tried a leaping interception and missed.

That was the only TD Bruin defenders surrendered. Twice they forced the Huskies into field goals — Steve Robbins from 31 and 32 yards out — while Joe Steele sped 89 yards with a kickoff 6:27 into the second quarter.

UCLA held Washington to 111 yards afoot, limiting giant Robin Earl to just 58 yards on 13 carries. The Huskies were hampered when Steele was forced out of the lineup with a deep thigh bruise after his touchdown.

"I'm shot emotionally," Donahue said with a hoarse voice. "I didn't feel we had the game won until I saw double zero on the clock."

Brown shunned the praise with the same efficiency he dispatched Washington tacklers.

"Our offensive line controlled the game from the opening kickoff to the final gun," he said, beaming. "As for the jinx, I don't believe in those things. To me, the better team will always win."

24-14 LBSU win may prove costly

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

WICHITA, Kan. - Long Beach State decisioned host Wichita State, 24-14, Saturday night in a contest that could prove costly to both clubs.

The 49er bill will be the most difficult to pay.

In all likelihood, Long Beach has lost guards Jerrell Smith and Greg Scoles and defensive end Scott Johnson.

All suffered knee injuries as Long Beach was recording its seventh victory in eight outings this season.

If they are hurt as seriously as it appeared, none of the three will be available as the 49ers close out their season with Pacific Coast Athletic Association foes Fresno and Fullerton State and traditional rival San Diego State.

Wichita's payment will come from the bank.

SC defense 'too much' for Bears

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

"It wasn't beautiful, but it was a win," said USC coach John Robinson Saturday after the Trojan defense had smothered California during the course of a 20-6 victory before 60,323 fans at the Coliseum.

Perhaps for a team leading the nation in total offense, it wasn't the Mona Lisa.

But what the Trojans lacked in offensive punch, they offset with a brilliantly conceived and executed defensive plan that sent a battered, bruised and discouraged all-America quarterback candidate to the sidelines in the fourth quarter.

Cal's Joe Roth must have felt like Custer.

"They were too much," said the Bears' quarterback of USC's defenders, who knocked down his receivers at the line of scrimmage, flooded the deep zones, tore apart his protection and put his best receiver, Wesley Walker, out of the game in the second quarter.

Roth completed only 12 of 27 passes for 109 yards before giving way to backup quarterback Fred Besana in the fourth quarter.

The high-powered Bears had only 201 yards in total offense, 18 by rushing, and had to settle for field goals of 33 and 47 yards by Jim Breech.

So the Pacific-8 Run for the Roses rolls inexorably toward a Nov. 20 showdown between those crosstown alleycats, USC and UCLA.

Third-ranked UCLA is 4-0 in the league and 7-0-1 over-all. Fourth-rated USC also is 4-0 in the conference, and has a record of 6-1.

"Now we have to go like heck to get past Stanford and Washington before we get to play UCLA for the Rose Bowl shot," said USC defensive tackle Gary Jeter, who was one of Roth's main marauders.

On a day when all-America tailback Ricky Bell was knocked out of action with a twisted ankle to go with his hip-pointer, the Trojans found enough other weapons to repel Cal, which lost its third consecutive Pacific-8 game.

Quarterback Vince Evans passed and ran effectively, split end Randy Simmrin worked some magic with his hands, and freshman Charles White came off the bench to add 91 yards to Bell's total of 78 in 24 carries.

"I was surprised at Cal's intensity on defense," said Robinson. "Because of that, we played somewhat conservatively."

Although held to 376 yards — 115 below their average — the Trojans converted on their best scoring opportunities.

For instance, they got off in front in the first quarter after freshman Mike McDonald recovered a fumbled punt by Cal's Vern Smith.

Starting from the Cal 22, the Trojans scored in six plays, Bell going the last four around left end, aided by a block from fullback Mosi Tatupu.

TROJANS' BELL 'UN-COVERED'

Everything was set up for Ricky Bell to make a move on Pitt's Tony Dorsett in their Heisman Trophy duel.

Three writers and four photographers from Sports Illustrated were on hand as the USC tailback went against California Saturday at the Coliseum. He was scheduled to be the magazine's cover picture and story.

But Bell, who came into the game with a hip-point injury, sustained a twisted ankle on his first rushing attempt in the second half.

After treatment from USC trainers, he re-entered the game and carried four more times, but was laboring badly and left the contest midway in the third quarter.

His rushing record for the day: 24 carries for 78 yards.

After the game, Sports Illustrated decided to scrub the Bell story.

The magazine's new cover choice? Tony Dorsett, of course.

Pierce bulls way past LBCC, 14-13

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

Fullback Bob Durham scored on a two-yard plunge with 3:07 remaining and Gifford Sears booted the point after touchdown to give Pierce College a come-from-behind 14-13 victory over Long Beach City College Saturday night.

Durham's blast before 4,006 disappointed Homecoming fans at Veterans Stadium capped an 86-yard, 13-play Brahma drive that ate up only four minutes of the final period.

His two-yard run, one of only a handful of rushing plays that netted anything during the second half against the Vikings' stiff front line, ended what had been Long Beach's domination of the game.

The final TD came only after Durham bounced off the LBCC front line for what appeared to be no gain, then spun loose of one LBCC tackler and twisted past several other defenders before bulling his nose just inches across the goal line.

The win lowered Long Beach to 1-3 in the Metropolitan Conference and 2-5 over-all.

Pierce retained its conference lead at 4-0 (6-1-1 over-all). LBCC has now lost three in a row. The Brahmas have not lost since their second game of the season.

The state's leading percentage passer, Charlie Young, entered the game with 1,646 yards on 143 completions and was forced to rely on his arm most of the second half as Long Beach continually thwarted any attempt by Pierce to establish a running attack.

Saturday's results
Pierce 14, LBCC 13.
Bakersfield 15, East L.A. 0.
El Camino 19, Pasadena 14.

Young, who averages 235.1 yards passing per game, finished 22-of-40 (55 per cent) for 253 yards.

If Pierce thought the stumbling Vikes would be a pushover it found out otherwise in a hurry.

Long Beach, ranked last in conference defense against the rush and fifth ahead of Valley and East Los Angeles against the pass, deflected seven passes and intercepted three.

Pierce netted a modest 154 yards on the ground against a defense that had given up an average of 234.3 a game.

The interceptions, one each by linebacker Chad Nikoletich, and defensive backs Charlie Green and Steve Toucey, equaled the entire number of interceptions LBCC had accomplished in its previous seven contests. Each stalled a key Brahma drive and kept LBCC in the driver's seat until the final three minutes.

Toucey's grab stalled a Brahma drive at the LBCC 26 after a march of 50 yards with only 55 seconds left before the half.

Nikoletich picked off another with 2:25 left in the third quarter as Young tried to throw on second-and-goal from the LBCC two.

Green made his theft on a deep swing pass at the LBCC 20 and returned it 40 yards. At the time, that seemed to have sealed Pierce's fate.

Yet the Brahmas, who had been denied scoring opportunities deep inside LBCC territory once in the second quarter by Toucey's steal, twice in the third quarter because of Nikoletich's effort and on downs, then twice in the fourth quarter on downs and Green's heroics, came back one last time.

Unable to run during the final drive, Young took to the air and LBCC began to crumble. Passes of 16, 20 and 13 yards to Bill Spooner highlighted the Brahmas' final crucial series, before Durham tied the score.

Kings' power play comes through, 4-3

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

"We've been moving the puck well which opens things up for the good shot. We were due for a couple," Tommy Williams was saying after his second power play goal of the night with 7:11 remaining enabled the Kings to deflate the Cleveland Barons, 4-3, Saturday night to the delight of 10,840 fans at the Forum.

The victory, coupled with Montreal's first loss at home this season, to Boston, pulled the Kings within two points of the division-leading Canadiens.

Reflecting on his line which scored all four goals (Mike Murphy and Butch Goring also connected), Williams said, "When you get off to a good start you play with a lot more confidence. To do well you've got to work hard. When you do, you make things happen."

Williams, whose seventh and eighth goals of the season enabled the Kings to remain the second highest scoring among the NHL's 18 clubs, said, "We really had a good home stand. We got beat by a good team (Boston) and then won three in a row. Remember, Boston walked in and beat Montreal tonight."

Coach Bob Pulford also smiled when the subject of the Kings' power play arose. "We were struggling for awhile but with (Gary) Sargent and (Marcel) Dionne on the point and Butchie up front, it's been more effective," he explained. "Before, we had Butchie playing back, but Sargent's versatility gives us a chance to use Goring up front where he's more effective.

Goring, who notched his seventh goal along with three assists, said, "We knew if we worked at the power play we'd eventually get some results. Nobody cares who scores."

After falling behind 1-0 on Dave Gardner's first goal of the campaign, Goring's goal, which ricocheted off defenseman Greg Smith's skate, squared the matter at the 7:13 mark of the first period.

Murphy's 11th goal of the season put the Kings ahead 2-1 only to have Wayne Merrick's second goal of the year tie the match with 3:37 to go in the first period.

Williams and Gary Sabourin traded goals in the second period and Tommy, who also scored the winning goal against Detroit in the final 11 seconds on Tuesday night, then beat Baron goalie Gary Simmons for the decisive goal in the final period.

Cerritos upsets S.D. Mesa

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

After a season of frustration and derision, the Cerritos College defense gained some measure of redemption Saturday night by turning in its best effort of the year to lead a 20-7 upset of fifth-rated San Diego Mesa before an appreciative homecoming audience.

It was Cerritos's initial South Coast Conference win and evened its season record at 3-3-1. But it may have dropped the Olympians, now 2-2, and 5-2 over-all from the SCC title race.

Mesa accumulated 328 yards but that total was nearly 100 below what Cerritos had allowed six previous opponents. In addition, the Falcons recovered two fumbles and snared four interceptions from Steve Fairchild, the SCC's total offense and passing leader.

Meanwhile, Cerritos' offense continued its improvement, this week under the direction of quarterback Kevin Hamilton who replaced Mark Chandler midway through the first quarter.

Hamilton completed 8 of 10 passes for 65 yards but his most productive task was handing off to Marty Campbell, and Joe Fletcher who gained 134 and 100 yards respectively. Cerritos picked up 360 total yards, 118 in the air.

However the Falcons were sluggish in the early going, squandering scoring opportunities from the Mesa 24, 19, 9, and 11. They finally broke the ice with Campbell's 14-yard run 4:08 before halftime after a 56-yard drive.

Less than four minutes later it was 13-0 when Hamilton hit Phil DuBois with a 7-yard toss after the first of Dan Buckley's two interceptions gave the ball to Cerritos on the Olympian 25.

Cerritos concluded its scoring on its first possession of the second half by plodding 73 yards on 16 plays, Hamilton finally diving in from the one with 5:44 showing on the clock.

Thereafter it was left to the defense which effectively corralled Mesa except for a 12-yard TD pass from Fairchild to Barry Harris with 4:19 to play after a fumble had given the ball to the Olympians 52 yards from the goal line.

Fairhcild hit 17 of 38 passes for 201 yards.

Joe Barloon scored four goals and Eric Atkeson turned in 14 saves in the goal to spark Long Beach City College to a 11-2 water polo win over Ventura Saturday and win the championship of the Cypress Tournament.

Lytle, Leach keep Wolves first, 45-0

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Michigan's Rob Lytle doesn't think he has a chance to win the Heisman Trophy as the nation's best college football player because "our program is built around a team effort and not an individual one."

But it would be tough to convince coach Bo Schembechler of the No. 1-ranked Wolverines that Lytle doesn't deserve the honor.

"In my opinion, there is no back in the United States of America who does more for his team than Lytle does for Michigan," Schembechler said after Michigan's 45-0 Big Ten victory over Minnesota Saturday.

"He can play fullback, tailback, run, catch, lead—whatever you want done. There's no back like him."

Lytle rushed for 129 yards in 20 carries, scored on a two-yard run and a 13-yard pass from Rick Leach, and also did an outstanding job of blocking and faking.

Lytle, a senior who entered the game with a rushing average of 7.7 yards per carry, said if this wasn't the best Michigan team he's played on, "it's certainly the most diversified. Both the defense and offense can do everything well.

"The No. 1 ranking helps us a lot now that we all know it's within reach for the entire season," he said. "Everyone is working harder and is more serious about hanging onto it."

It was almost a toss-up between Lytle and sophomore quarterback Leach as to who was the top offensive star. Leach tossed two touchdown passes, ran for two others and rushed for 114 yards in 10 carries.

Minnesota's quarterback, Tony Dungy, completed 12 of 20 passes but failed to move the Gophers.

"Michigan should be able to go all the way if they don't mess themselves up and let someone upset them," Dungy said. "The big difference was Michigan's quickness and big people. No one will hold Michigan under 21 points. They will score on anybody."

The victory was the eighth in a row for the unbeaten Wolverines and raised their conference record to 5-0.

The game was played before a Michigan Stadium crowd of 104,426—fifth largest in Wolverine history.

STANFORD (AP)—Defensive end Duncan McColl made two key fumble recoveries and Tony Hill caught two touchdown passes to break a Stanford record set by McColl's father, leading the Cardinals to a 24-3 Pacific-8 football victory over Oregon State Saturday.

Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin passed for 233 yards and three touchdowns, breaking open a close game in the final period with his second touchdown pass to Hill and a scoring toss to James Lofton.

Immediately after McColl fell on a fumble at the Beaver's 16-yard line late in the first period, Benjamin hit Hill in the end zone.

It was the 14th career touchdown catch for the senior flanker, tying the record held by Bill McColl, a Stanford all-America 25 years ago.

Oregon State's Kieron Walford kicked a 55-yard field goal, breaking a team distance record, in the second period and the Beavers drove to Stanford's eight early in the third period. But McColl killed the drive with his second fumble recovery.

Stanford increased its lead to 10-3 on Mike Michel's 34-yard field goal early in the final period before Hill made his 15th touchdown catch on a 6-yard pass from Benjamin and Lofton scored on a 4-yard pass.

The Cardinals, who face Pac-8 co-leader USC at home next weekend, are 3-1 in the conference. The hattered Beavers, whose long injury list got some additions Saturday, are 1-3.

Bucks erupt, bury Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — For a while, Indiana's fired-up Hoosiers actually thought they had a chance to beat Ohio State for the first time in 25 years.

Until the closing minute of the second quarter Saturday, Indiana led 7-6, had not allowed Ohio State a single first down and had yielded just 35 yards to the Buckeye offense.

Then the roof fell in.

Pete Johnson scored his first of two touchdowns with 16 seconds left in the half, the Buckeyes added two more TDs in the third quarter and three more in the fourth period for a 47-7 victory.

"In the second half, they just overpowered us and pounded us," said Indiana Lee Corso of the eighth-ranked Buckeyes.

"But I can tell you this — we played them in the first half about as well as anyone can play football. We played them like your supposed to."

Ohio State coach Woody Hayes, who was fuming along the sidelines after the Hoosiers took the early lead, called the first half a "chamber of horrors."

"That's as bad as we've played," said Hayes, who conceded that Indiana "does not have that bad of a team."

"They ran out of gas," said Hayes. "They don't have the reserve strength that we have. We ran them into the ground."

The Buckeyes' first touchdown, following an interception by Nick Buonamaici at the OSU five-yard line, was hotly disputed by Corso.

Irish struggle past Middies

CLEVELAND (AP)—Navy's Joe Gattuso was beaming like a winner after Notre Dame's 27-21 victory over the Midshipmen Saturday.

"I thought we should have won," the Navy halfback said. "Today we became a football team."

Navy, which has won just one of its eight games this season and was ripped 70-14 by powerful Michigan, scored a touchdown in the fourth quarter, had a drive stopped deep in Irish territory and had a pass intercepted in Notre Dame's end zone on the last play of the game.

"I've been involved in games like this before where a team is favored because of its record," Notre Dame coach Dan Devine said. "This was a similar situation where we could have been upset, and I warned our people about it all week."

The passing of Irish quarterback Rick Slager and a pair of field goals by Dave Reeve were the difference in the intersectional football battle, as Notre Dame came from a 14-3 deficit to take the lead for good with 21 second-quarter points.

"I want to give Navy a great deal of credit for the way they played," Devine added. "But I'm not totally surprised because they were only one touchdown behind Michigan and one touchdown behind Pittsburgh at halftime, and both teams had to score for those leads right before the half."

Navy coach George Welsh said, "This was our best game of the year, no doubt about it. This game should help us if we're mature enough to handle it despite the loss."

It was Notre Dame's sixth consecutive win.

Navy quarterback Bob Leszczynski's pinpoint passing kept the Midshipmen in the game.

The Irish broke a school record by holding Navy without a touchdown in the first quarter—their 21st straight quarter without a touchdown.

BYU rips Ariz. State by 43-21

PROVO, Utah (AP)—Quarterback Gifford Nielsen threw two touchdown passes, including an 81-yard bomb, and completed 20 of 37 passes for 339 yards to help Brigham Young University beat Arizona State, 43-21, Saturday.

The victory kept Brigham Young's chances alive for a possible trip to the Fiesta Bowl on Christmas Day. BYU is now 3-1 in conference play. ASU dropped to 2-2.

A Larry Miller interception of an ASU pass from quarterback Dennis Sproul led to BYU's first score. Split end John Van Der Wouden scored from four yards out on a fake field goal try. Dave Taylor's kick was good and BYU led 7-0 with the game less than two minutes old.

Sproul wasted little time in pulling ASU even as he connected with speedy wingback Larry Mucker on an 80-yard pass and run play.

Sproul scored on a one-yard keeper with 22 seconds left in the first quarter to give ASU a 21-17 lead. But that was the last score ASU could manage in the game.

TD, 2-pointer win for Wash. State

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—Jack Thompson threw a two-point conversion toss to Dan Doornink with 19 seconds remaining Saturday to give Washington State a 23-22 Pacific-8 victory over Oregon.

The play followed a last-minute 86-yard drive capped by Thompson's 14-yard touchdown pass to Eason Ramson.

Oregon had taken the lead at 19-15 earlier in the final quarter on a 41-yard pass from Jack Henderson to Tom Cafferty.

The Ducks stretched their lead to 22-15 with 3:11 to go on a 27-yard field goal by Roy Geiger, his third of the game. But Thompson, the No. 5 passer in the nation, held in check by the Oregon defense, completed seven passes on the winning drive.

At one point in the drive, Washington State had first down and 39 yards to go on its own 33, but Thompson hit Mike Levenseller over the middle for 40 yards and a first down on the Oregon 27 with 41 seconds remaining.

Oklahoma State overtakes Mizzou

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — "I've never been around a football team with the kind of love and character for each other than this team has," Oklahoma State coach Jim Stanley said Saturday after his Cowboys' 20-19 comeback victory over 10th-ranked Missouri.

It was the explosive running of setbacks Terry Miller and Skip Taylor that set up the triumph. Miller ripped off a career high 228 yards and scored all three second-half touchdowns as the Pokes wiped out a 16-0 deficit. Taylor added 106 yards.

The victory put Oklahoma State into a tie with Nebraska and Colorado for the Big Eight lead, each at 3-1.

"I was very disappointed when we got 16 points down, but I don't think there was ever any doubt from anyone — even from the people in the stands — that we couldn't come back," Stanley said.

Missouri coach Al Onofrio said, "That was a heck of a game. Both teams played their hearts out. Oklahoma State has a very solid team.

Iowa's rally keeps Northwestern winless

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—A three-yard touchdown run by Butch Caldwell with 3:14 remaining allowed Iowa to beat a gambling Northwestern team, 13-10, Saturday.

Winless Northwestern marched to the Iowa 12-yard line after the go-ahead touchdown and, on fourth and five, shunned an almost certain tie by not going for a field goal.

Cornerback Rod Sears knocked down a pass intended for Northwestern's Scott Yelvington in the end zone with :47 to play, Iowa then ran out the clock.

The victory evened the Hawkeyes' record at 4-4, moved them to 2-3 in the conference and guaranteed their best season in seven years. Northwestern fell to 0-8 and 0-5.

San Jose rips Santa Clara

SAN JOSE (AP) — Quarterback Steve DeBerg threw for three touchdowns and James Tucker ran for two as San Jose State crushed Santa Clara, 50-15, in a cross-town clash Saturday.

Santa Clara led 3-0 after the first quarter on a Lou Marengo field goal. But following a San Jose field goal by Lou Rodriguez which tied the score, DeBerg, who completed 13 of 19 passes for 199 yards, hit wide receiver Larry Johnson for a 17-yard touchdown and the Spartans were ahead to stay.

Arizona clips Utah, 38-35

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Lee Pistor booted a 29-yard field goal with 15 seconds left in the game to boost Arizona to a 38-35 Western Athletic Conference victory over Utah Saturday.

The three-pointer, Pistor's third of the game, climaxed a come from behind effort by Arizona, which trailed 35-27 with eight minutes to go.

Arizona is now 4-3 overall and 2-1 in the WAC. Utah's record is 1-6 and 1-2 in league play.

Arizona quarterback Marc Lunsford led the Arizona attack, throwing touchdown passes of 58, 45 and six yard, and scored once himself on a four-yard keeper play.

Buff explosion sinks Sooners

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)—Fired-up Colorado, rallying behind versatile sophomore quarterback Jeff Knapple and the hard running of Tony Reed and Jim Kelleher, exploded for three second-half touchdowns and ripped Oklahoma, 42-31, in a wild Big Eight football game Saturday.

The 19th-ranked Buffaloes, trailing 31-20 midway through the third quarter, struck quickly. Knapple unloaded a 70-yard bomb to wingback Billy Waddy to pull within 31-26, and Reed ran for the two-point conversion.

Less than a minute later, Colorado middle guard Charlie Johnson stripped the ball from Sooner halfback Elvis Peacock, giving Colorado possession at the Oklahoma 27-yard line.

Six plays later, Kelleher ran one yard for the go-ahead score.

The Buffs then marched 85 yards in 11 plays for a third TD. Knapple passed 28 yards to Emergy Moorehead and ran 19 yards to the two-yard line, setting up another Kelleher touchdown—his third of the day.

Three turnovers in the final 10 minutes thwarted the Sooners' comeback attempts.

The 13th-ranked Sooners had rolled to a 14-3 lead in the first quarter, largely on the breakaway running of fullback Ken King, who got Oklahoma rolling with a 71-yard jaunt for a score midway through the opening period.

Wyoming shocker scrambles WAC

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Tom Drake booted four field goals Saturday, the last a 31-yarder with 1:26 left, as Colorado State upset Wyoming, 19-16, and threw the Western Athletic Conference football race into a wild scramble.

Wyoming is 4-1 in the conference while defending champion Arizona State, Brigham Young and Arizona each entered the day with one league loss.

Drake kicked his game-winner after a pass interference call on Wyoming's Dennis Camino put the ball on the Cowboy 18-yard line. Camino was called on a pass from Dan Graham to wide receiver Harry Washington, who hooked up on a 56-yard touchdown pass with 10 seconds left in the first half to tie the game at 13-all.

After the game the first thing Colorado State coach Sarkis Arslanian recalled was a promise he made to himself three years ago.

"The first time we played up there (in Laramie), they beat us, 35-3, and kind of rubbed it in. I vowed we'd never lose again to Wyoming as long as I was coach," Arslanian said.

Colorado State has now whipped the Cowboys three years in a row, Arslanian's only loss to Wyoming being that first game in 1973.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

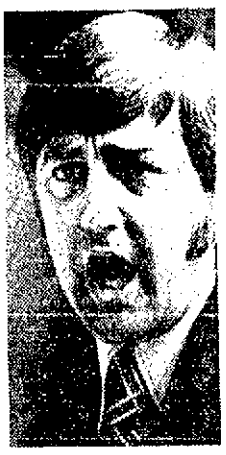

Jones fumes over 49ers' low rating

Dwight Jones has so much basketball talent at Long Beach State that he became indignant the other day when he noted in one publication that his 49ers were ranked No. 17 in the nation.

Ordinarily, having one's team ranked in the top 20 is cause for rejoicing and, perhaps, taking the champagne bottle out of the refrigerator for a little premature celebration, but not so with Jones.

"We deserve better," he fumed. "Just look at our recruiting, for openers. We got Francois Wise, Northern California player-of-the-year and that section's No. 1 athlete for the entire school year.

"We also got Donnie Martin, Oakland's player-of-the-year, and Michael Wiley, Long Beach's co-player of-the-year and also CIF co-player of-the-year. We got the three top high school kids in their areas in the state, who also were high school all-Americans.

DWIGHT JONES
'We deserve better

"Then, we've got our entire squad back from last year, plus two redshirts who figure to be immediate starters, and a JC all-America. Doesn't that merit us better ranking than No. 17?

"The trouble with national publications is that the Eastern influence is too much for anyone else to counteract, unless you happen to be UCLA."

WHEN HE CLIMBED down the wall, Dwight was asked if he wasn't concerned that he might have too much talent. USF had a similar situation last year and had nothing but trouble trying to keep a dozen all-stars happy.

"I'd rather have too much talent than not enough," Jones responded. "But we don't have any problem. My seniors and juniors will start. My freshmen were not told that they would start. They weren't recruited with that promise.

"Other teams with many returning starters and some super freshmen have had problems because they'd promised the freshmen they'd start. I didn't. But the freshmen will get playing time this season because they're too good to stay on the bench altogether.

"In fact, my freshmen are fortunate in one respect. We are primarily a freshman-senior team (the 49ers have three juniors and no sophs), so the freshmen won't have the problem of competing with sophomores for three years. They know they've got plenty of playing time ahead."

WHEN ONE WONDERS why so many talented players chose Long Beach State, Dwight has a ready answer.

"The success of our recruiting is because the players were sold on our school by other players.

"Take Francois Wise. He visited five other major schools when he narrowed down his choices—Indiana, Marquette, Providence, USC and Cal—but chose Long Beach. Our players had sold him on the idea that it was a good place to be.

"Ed Ratleff, Glen McDonald, Leonard Gray and other former stars with us have been a great help, too. Those NBA players take time out to write and talk to kids about Long Beach State."

COMPARISON OF JONES' 1976-77 squad with Jerry Tarkanian's great 24-2 team of 1973-74 naturally follows, but Dwight isn't getting carried away.

"This club doesn't compare yet with that team because that was a once-in-a-lifetime squad," he conceded. "But I think we'll win in excess of 20 games.

"Most interesting part of this season will be the early part—our first six games. If we're 6-0 or 5-1, we'll have a great season.

"We'll also have a great season if our post play is good. If it's not, we'll just be good. Our post play is our big question mark. We have to be strong enough to neutralize the best big men in the country. You can't go into the playoffs against the likes of UCLA and USF without top play from your center.

"Going against a top center like Indiana's Kent Benson without someone just as good opposing him, scares me."

UNLIKE MOST of his peers, Jones is not reluctant to rattle off a starting lineup. The former Pepperdine star has no hesitation about naming names.

"If we were to play a game tomorrow, I'd start Larry Hudson, Richard Johnson, Lloyd McMillian, Clarence Ruffen and Dale Dillon. But real quick I'd send in Donnie Martin, Francois Wise, Michael Wiley, Mark Stefl and Tony McGee.

"Instead of playing predominately just seven or eight men, I'll go with 10 players at almost equal time. Why not? We've got the talent."

Hudson, Ruffen and Dillon are returning starters, while seniors Johnson and McMillian redshirted last season. McGee also was a starter last season, with Stefl the JC all-America.

"Our first five forwards are among the best five of any team in the country,' enthused Jones. "We're so strong there that last year's leading scorer, McGee, is our No. 3 forward now (behind Hudson and the alternating forward-guards Johnson and McMillian)."

Interestingly, the 49ers' two all-America candidates this season are the redshirts, Johnson and McMillian. Jones has a singular observation about redshirts (those who sit out a season):

"Ordinarily, I don't like to see players come off a redshirt year. It's hard for them to get competitive when they return. But Richard and Lloyd are overcoming that obstacle very well."

UNLIKE THE SCHOOL'S football schedule, the 49er basketball schedule has some intersectional class this season. But Jones wants more.

"Our 97-3 home record is one reason a lot of teams won't play us here. But I'm not ashamed of our schedule this year. We're finally playing USC—or at least we're in their December Classic—and we'll meet Southern Methodist, Colorado, Illinois and Arizona State (the latter two in Long Beach Arena).

"We're in the talking stages with Atlantic Coast Conference schools, too. There's a possibility of being in a future tournament with South Carolina and Wake Forest, and also of playing single games with Maryland and North Carolina State."

Unlike many of his peers also, Jones won't close his doors to the press.

"I may need a minute to cool off after a game, but my locker room always will be open to the press," declared Dwight.

That should zoom him from 17th to No. 1 immediately.

Tech tops Texas in rouser, 31-28

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP)—Shaking his head in disbelief and trying to curb a smile stretching across his face, Texas Tech coach Steve Sloan sighed and said, "I can hardly stand up."

The personable young Red Raider coach was almost overcome with emotion as he groped for words to discuss Tech's 31-28 Southwest Conference victory over rival Texas Saturday.

"I believe this was the greatest game I've ever seen," said the former Alabama quarterback.

The come-from-behind decision kept the sixth-ranked Raiders unbeaten through six games and tied with Arkansas for the SWC lead at 3-0.

Sloan poured out praise for almost everyone, but he couldn't say enough about junior quarterback Rodney Allison, who pulled the team together when it was flirting with disaster and plagued with penalties.

"Rodney was great," Sloan said. "The biggest play of the game may have been when he was trapped trying to pass and then scrambled out for a first down there in the fourth quarter."

Allison, confronted with a third-and-seven situation, scrambled 22 yards for a first down that kept alive the Raiders' final touchdown drive, a 76-yard effort.

Billy Taylor scored the winning touchdown on fourth down, diving across the goal from inches away.

Larry Isaac, who gained 91 yards against the Longhorns, set a school rushing record at Tech, compiling 2,347 yards on 471 carries. He broke the existing record of 2,280 on 526 trips set by all-America Donny Anderson in 1963-65.

"Naturally, getting the record was a thrill, but it doesn't even come close to beating Texas," Isaac said.

Tech's defense stopped a final Longhorns drive on the Red Raider 38-yard line. Texas coach Darrell Royal disdained a chance for a tying field goal.

LBSU WINS—

Included in the Shockers' season ticket plan this year, is a money-back quarantee if the team loses at home.

Fans — they will get half their money back — hadn't had an opportunity to test the guarantee until Saturday night.

There is a stipulation in the agreement that fans must remain until the game is over, and then have their tickets validated to receive the refund.

It was unlikely many of the 8,431 Homecoming fans would have sat through 43-degree weather in Cessna Stadium to get $2 back after three periods of play.

But a blocked punt early in the final quarter and an ensuing Wichita touchdown put the Shockers back in the game with 12 minutes remaining.

Long Beach managed to turn back that rally, however, so Shocker fans will have to settle for money.

The 49ers protected their advantage much as they had in last week's 21-10 win over Lamar, by simply lining up and running the football.

Against Wichita, however, they did something different. Fullback Mark Bailey had a chance to carry the ball.

Bailey responded with his best statistical effort of the season - 98 yards in 17 carries.

He got much of that - 90 yards in 15 rushes - in the final 30 minutes.

Quarterback Joe Paopao was also impressive, passing for 191 yards and two touchdowns, on 10 completions in 16 attempts.

His scoring strikes were for 79 yards to Johnny Washington, who also scored on a 13-yard run, and three yards to flanker Jeff Jones.

Long Beach amassed 387 yards while its defensive unit was restricting Wichita (3-5) to 138, including only 54 rushing.

LBSU coach Wayne Howard had been unusually apprehensive entering Saturday's intersectional encounter, no doubt influenced by the fact that Wichita, winless (0-4) on the road, was unbeaten (3-0) at home.

The Shockers were in a good position to make it 4-0 early in the second quarter when they twice downed punts inside the 49er 10.

The first kick was touched at the one, but the 49ers, trying to protect a 7-0 lead, escaped that predicament when Woody Tresseler, standing inches from the backline of the end zone, got off a 42-yard punt.

The second punt was downed at the Long Beach eight and, on first down, Washington fumbled, Alvin Brooks recovering for the Shockers at the one.

Wichita's first play lost five yards, but Jeff Shepler took an option pitch from Adkins and scored from the six an instant later to tie matters at 7-7.

Washington redeemed himself as soon as Long Beach could get off its next offensive play.

The 49ers started their next drive at their own 31 but drew successive five-yard illegal proceedure penalties before they could snap the ball.

On first-and-20 from his own 21, Paopao flipped a screen pass to Washington, who nearly fell when he skidded on the slippery artificial surface catching the ball.

The 49ers' 150-pound tailback maintained his balance, however, and slipped down the west sideline, breaking into the open at the 50.

Bailey screened the last two defenders with a chance to get Washington for the final 30 yards to complete a spectacular 79-yard, run-pass play.

The 49ers also used the pass to get their third touchdown.

Paopao, who was 8-for-11 for 160 yards in the first half, took his offense 80 yards in five plays and 1:22 for a 21-7 intermission advantage.

The big strike was a 47-yard bomb to split end Mike Willis, who made a tumbling catch at the Wichita 27.

Willis donated 24 more yards to the march on the next snap when Tony Sumler interfered on a Willis attempt to catch a Paopao pass at the three.

With 28 seconds remaining in the half Paopao then threw three yards to flanker Jeff Jones, playing for the first time in three weeks.

Long Beach extended its advantage to 24-7 midway through the third period when Tresseler kicked a 40-yard field goal after Paopao had passed 16 yards to Dennis Byrd to get the 49ers within kicking distance of the end zone.

The 49er defense, led by front liners Glen Tenove, Kise Fiatoa, Rich Valenzuela, Gary Greene, Fran Fredette, Jeff Lyall and Ron Kip were equally impressive throughout the first three periods.

It was really no contest, in fact, until Marc Stenzel blocked Tresseler's fourth-quarter punt.

It took little more than a minute for Adkins to get his team's second touchdown, the senior quarterback passing 16 yards to wide receiver Leon Dobbs, who made a fine, tumbling catch in the back of the end zone.

The 48-yard march was aided by a pair of penalties on the 49ers—15 yards for piling on and 9 for pass interference.

Alabama's burst tops Miss. State

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama used long touchdown runs by Johnny Davis and Pete Cavan and kept the ball for most of the third quarter to beat Southeastern Conference rival Mississippi State, 34-17, Saturday.

Mississippi State led 17-12 at the half, but Alabama opened the third quarter with an 82-yard drive capped by Davis' 27-yard touchdown scamper. Jack O'Rear scrambled for two points.

Five minutes later, Cavan rambled 25 yards on a draw play to put the Tide in front, 27-17.

Alabama held the ball for more than 10 minutes in the third period.

Gamecocks run away for 27-7 victory

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—South Carolina broke open a tight struggle with two fourth-quarter touchdowns behind the running of tailback Clarence Williams to take a 27-7 victory over North Carolina State Saturday.

Williams dashed for 105 yards in 23 carries as South Carolina won its sixth game of the season against three losses and kept alive its hopes for a post-season bowl appearance.

Representatives from the Gator Bowl and the Peach Bowl attended the game.

State's record dropped to 3-51. The Atlantic Coast Conference team was within striking distance of the Gamecocks for three quarters, but USC pulled away in the final period.

Terps explode for 24-14 win

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—"A long punt or kickoff return really ignites a team," said coach Jerry Claiborne of Maryland, "and that's what happened today. We went ahead after the run by Dean Richards."

Fifth-ranked Maryland was trailing Kentucky, 7-6, with time running out in the first half Saturday, when a 49-yard punt return by Richards gave the unbeaten Terps a scoring chance and they quickly capitalized on the way to a 24-14 victory.

With a personal foul penalty tacked onto the end of the run, the Terps took over on the Kentucky 11. Three plays later, Tim Wilson scored the first of his two touchdowns and a two-point conversion made it 14-7.

That score came with 2:06 left in the first half, but the Terps still had time to storm back to the Kentucky 31 before missing a 48-yard field goal attempt on the final play. Still fired up, they drove 77 yards with the second half kickoff, with Wilson adding a clinching TD.

"We got the play on offense, and our defense did an excellent job," Claiborne said, "except for those two big plays."

He referred to two Kentucky touchdown passes, for 26 yards in the first quarter and 52 yards with one minute left in the game. Otherwise Kentucky was limited to 141 total yards.

Florida wins, 24-19, runs win streak to six

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida struck quickly on the rifle passing arm of Jimmy Fisher and running of Willie Wilder to record its sixth successive victory Saturday, 24-19 over Auburn, for a solid lead in the Southeastern Confrence.

It was the fourth SEC victory for 12th-ranked Florida, leaving the Gators the only team unbeaten in conference play and 6-1 over-all.

Fisher earned Florida its first touchdown late in the second quarter, covering 61 yards in two plays. Both were passes to wide receiver Wes Chandler.

Fisher hit Chandler with a 64-yard scoring bomb in the fourth quarter to clinch the victory.

Tar Heels in record win

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—Delbert Powell's 98-yard kickoff return set a North Carolina record and Tom Biddle's four field goals tied another as the Tar Heels routed Wake Forest, 34-14, Saturday.

Wake Forest (3-6) scored its touchdowns on runs of seven and one yards by freshman tailback James McDougald, bidding to become the first ACC freshman ever to rush for 1,000 yards in a season.

Bulldogs survive rainy day in Georgia, top Cincy, 31-17

ATHENS, Ga. (AP)—Georgia quarterback Ray Goff scored a pair of first-half touchdowns, but the seventh-ranked Bulldogs had to survive a fourth-quarter scare from aroused Cincinnati for a 31-17 victory over the 20th-ranked Bearcats Saturday.

Goff scored on runs of 13 and 14 yards, Kevin McLee added a seven-yard touchdown and Allen Leavitt booted a 33-yard field goal as Georgia (7-1) took a 24-3 lead into the final quarter in the game played in a steady rain.

But the Bearcats, suffering their first loss after six victories, erupted for 14 points in a three-minute span at the start of the final quarter to edge within 24-17.

Texas A&M crushes SMU, 36-0

DALLAS (AP)—Workhorse fullback George Woodard rushed for 155 yards on 34 carries and freshman Curtis Dickey dashed for two third-quarter touchdowns Saturday to lead Texas A&M to a 36-0 victory over Southern Methodist.

The SMU defense stopped repeated Aggie scoring threats in the first half, and only a 56-yard field goal by Tony Franklin avoided a scoreless tie at intermission.

In the third quarter, A&M went on 39- and 98-yard drives climaxed by one and nine-yard scores by Dickey to take an unsurmountable 16-0 lead.

The victory gave the Aggies a 6-2 season record and a 3-2 SWC mark. SMU dropped to 2-6 and 1-4.

LSU tramples Miss., 45-0

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Terry Robiskie and Charles Alexander each rushed for more than 100 yards and an alert defense set up five touchdowns with interceptions and fumble recoveries as Louisiana State crushed Mississippi, 45-0, Saturday night.

Robiskie, becoming Louisiana State's all-time career rushing leader, ran for 129 yards and scored the first touchdown on an 18-yard run.

The unlikeliest quarterback

"Our fans are unique . . . like, I threw six interceptions last week. They didn't boo that much. They hung right in there with me, and I really appreciated that." — Jim Zorn.

Only a lefthander can understand the misery of going through life in a righthanded world, and only a person whose surname starts with Z can appreciate being anywhere except at the end of the line.

Last in the alphabet, last in life, put down by can openers and maitre d's alike—this is the double curse carried by James Arthur Zorn, who plays quarterback for the Seattle Seahawks.

There are more than a thousand professional football players listed in the Football Register. Guess who's last.

There are only two southpaw quarterbacks starting in the National Football League. Ken Stabler is one. Name the other.

"Let me say," Zorn says, "I am pleasantly surprised by what has happened to me this year at Seattle."

JIM ZORN
Last but not least

NOBODYEXPECTED the Seahawks to win many games in their first year, so aside from playing for a team that is 1-6 coming into today's match against the Rams at the Coliseum, Zorn is in hog heaven.

He gets to throw more passes than anybody in the league—237 so far—and has more job security than James Harris, a quarterback whose team is 5-1-1.

"Zorn is our quarterback," says Seahawk coach Jack Patera. "He's going to be inconsistent because this is his first year, but when he gets time to throw he's a heckuva passer."

Seattle's offense is based on one theme: Zorn drops back to pass, then (a) Zorn throws or (b) Zorn runs for his life.

With 125 yards on 26 flights of desperation, Zorn is within 13 yards of being the Seahawks' leading rusher, and he may be that before the day is out. The two running backs ahead of him have been benched.

"I scramble when I need to," he says. "If the receivers aren't open, I can't sit in the pocket and get smacked. That kinda hurts. Ever since I was in high school, if nothing was there I'd just take off."

HIGH SCHOOL was Gahr in Cerritos, where Zorn won all-Suburban League distinction when he became a starter as a senior. The next two years at Cerritos College he was second string behind two different quarterbacks.

Cal Poly Pomona and Wake Forest were the only four-year schools subsequently interested in mining this untapped talent — "The only reason Wake Forest heard of me was because a friend of mine told the coach I was a great athlete," Jim says—but he repaid Pomona's faith by leading the NCAA's College Division in passing as a junior.

"I was thinking about a pro football career in my senior year," he says. "Scouts were coming around timing me and I got excited about it."

BUT HIS statistics tailed off in his senior season and the scouts lost interest.

"Last year was a downer," Jim admits. "I really thought I'd be picked somewhere in the middle rounds of the draft, but I wasn't selected at all. Disappointed? I mean, that was it. I was through. I wasn't going to play football anymore."

But Dick Mansperger, the director of personnel for the Dallas Cowboys, suggested signing Zorn as a free agent.

"We had seven quarterbacks in camp," Jim recalls, "not counting Roger (Staubach) and Clint Longley, and I had to beat out those guys just to be No. 3. I was feeling pretty good about that."

But a few days before the opener against the Rams, the Cowboys, hurting for running backs, jumped at a chance to sign Preston Pearson, so somebody had to go.

Guess who.

"What a blow," Zorn says. "It wasn't that another quarterback beat me out. I knew then that I could play, but I didn't know if anybody else knew I could."

THE RAMS invited Zorn to Blair Field for a tryout and were considering signing him after last season when Mansperger, now with the Seahawks, became twice Zorn's saviour. Seattle's training camp, a Devil's Island type of complex in eastern Washington, truly tested Jim's perseverance.

"When I got to camp there were nine quarterbacks—nine!" he says. "I was just another free agent—certainly not the favorite. Every day a different guy looked good.

"But I just kept doing the best I could each day and then, all of a sudden, the coach told me I was No. 1 before the opener against St. Louis."

Patera, who coached the defensive line at Minnesota for seven years, says, "Jim Zorn reminds me of a young Fran Tarkenton, the kind of quarterback that makes things happen—sometimes good, sometimes bad."

IT WAS mostly bad last week—a 41-14 loss to Detroit in the Kingdome.

"Our fans are unique," Zorn notes. "They really support us. When it's time to boo, they boo. When it's time to yay, they yay . . . like, I threw six interceptions last week. They didn't boo that much. It was amazing. Usually, you throw two and a crowd would boo you right out of the stadium.

"But they hung right in there with me, and I really appreciated that."

After his impressive showing in Dallas' camp last year, Zorn, 23, had offers from other NFL clubs but says, "I'm glad I chose the Seahawks. I like it in Seattle. I miss the sun and the surf somewhat, but it's nice."

ALTHOUGH HE is a native of the Southland, Zorn never has played in the Coliseum. He came close last year.

"When Dallas played the Rams in that charity game I just about got to play, but the Rams kept the ball the last nine minutes and ate up my time.

"It's going to be exciting because I know a lot of people. I'll be down in December after the season for awhile, too . . . see my family for Christmas and then go to the Super Bowl."

Hopefully, Jim Zorn's application for a ticket will not be filed alphabetically.

Seahawks take Northwest by storm

How to succeed without winning

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

"Every week has been like Super Bowl Sunday," the man says.

He is Don Andersen, the Seattle Seahawks' public relations man, so such hyperbole is not unexpected. But read on.

"We promote ourselves as the professional football team of the Northwest."

Good luck, you say?

"We have 350 season ticket holders in Alaska, 500 to a thousand in Vancouver and Victoria, Canada, and some in eastern Washington, Montana and Idaho.

"Three thousand come to the games by ferry from the islands in Puget Sound. They come in by private planes, private yachts, Amtrak . . ."

The team is 1-6 but still they come, those owners of 58,000 season tickets—quite a few thousand more than the Rams (5-1-1) sell, by the way—arriving by land, sea and air to cheer one of the most incredible success stories in sports.

But success as in spinning turnstiles, not in wins and losses. Yet.

The Seahawks are 21-point underdogs against the Rams in the Coliseum today (1:05, Pacific Standard Time). Coach Jack Patera does not argue with the odd.

"We don't pay a whole lot of attention to whether we're big underdogs," he says. "We were favored against Tampa Bay. We really didn't know how to handle that."

Season records

	RAMS (5-1-1)
30	Atlanta	14
10	Minnesota	10
24	N.Y. Giants	10
37	Miami	26
0	San Francisco	16

21	San Francisco	37
13	Dallas	28
20	Green Bay	27
13	Tampa Bay	10
14	Detroit	41
112		204

That was Seattle's only win, 13-10, a result to which Patera ties little significance.

"Tampa Bay lost and came back and nearly beat Miami," he says. "We won and came back and got trounced by Detroit."

Halfway through the first season, Patera offers no evaluation.

"We didn't set anything we'd like to do except win every game, and we certainly haven't done that," he says. "We felt if we could put a solid foundation down, the qualification would be made next year.

"We've tried to be consistent in what we've done. We've made some really good plays, but where are they when you need them?"

Patera came into the job defensively oriented—a pro linebacker for seven years, a defensive line coach for 13.

His first selection in the college draft was Steve Niehaus, a defensive tackle from Notre Dame. In the expansion draft, he plucked linebackers Mike Curtis from Baltimore and Ken Geddes from the Rams.

But offense—specifically the passing game

ROBERTS' ROUSER:
Rams 31, Seahawks 10

exercised by rookie quarterback Jim Zorn—has been the team's strength. Defensively, the Seahawks have given up more points (204) than any NFL team except Kansas City (213).

"With the defensive background I have, I think it was interpreted that I'm going to have a great defense," says Patera, who developed the Rams' Fearsome Foursome of the sixties.

"Curtis happened to be our 'name.' I don't think Tampa Bay came out of the veteran allocation with a name—but the first thing they did was trade for a quarterback.

HARRIS STARTS TODAY

James Harris, who missed two games due to a shoulder injury, will be the Rams starting quarterback against the Seattle Seahawks today.

"James Harris' shoulder is well," coach Chuck Knox said Saturday. "He has been throwing well in practice and has earned and deserved to start and be the No. 1 quarterback."

Harris' three-year record as a starter is 19 victories and 5 losses. He currently ranks fourth among NFL passers.

Pat Haden will be the first backup, ahead of Ron Jaworski.

"So John McKay became an offensive coach with Steve Spurrier and I became a defensive coach with Mike Curtis. I do feel that to become a champion, you have to build a very solid defense, but a lot of this stuff gets blown out of proportion."

The other side of the oddity is that Seattle has scored twice as many points (112) as Tampa Bay.

It's a far cry from Super Bowl Sunday, but it's a start.

RAMBLING: The Ram quarterback situation has been in such a state of flux that if James Harris were not to throw at least one pass today, he would not qualify for next week's league ratings for lack of enough attempts. As it is, he rates fourth in the NFL (97.0) behind Dallas's Roger Staubach, 107.1; Baltimore's Bert Jones, 103.3, and Oakland's Ken Stabler, 100.7. Zorn is far down the line at 48.5 and leads the league in interceptions with 15. The Ram secondary also leads in interceptions with 16, and Monte Jackson remains the individual leader with six. . . . The Seahawks are without their best offensive lineman, tackle Norm Evans (ex-Miami), who has missed three games with an injured knee. . . . The Rams' Larry Brooks and Seattle's Niehaus lead their clubs with six sacks each. . . . About 55,000 "extras" are expected to be on hand. During the first five minutes of halftime a sequence will be shot for a TV movie, The Loneliest Runner. . . . Fullback John Cappelletti left the New Orleans game early with a pulled hamstring but is expected to start today.

BRUINS SMASH SEATTLE JINX, 30-21—

The talkative Brown also delivered some kind words about his roommate, Owens.

"J.O. came in during a pressure situation and really came through," said Brown. "His TD was the key one."

UCLA led by only four points, 17-13, with five minutes of the third quarter remaining when the offense took possession at its own 36. Six plays and a costly pass interference penalty later, Owens slashed over Eck and Coppens, broke one tackle, veered to his left and sidestepped another Husky before crossing the goal line. Frank Corral's kick pushed the advantage to 24-13.

It was not a good day for the kicker — or even a good weekend. He missed the team plane Friday morning and arrived too late for the afternoon workout. Saturday he missed field goals of 51, 47 and 30 yards and even an extra point.

Luckily for the Bruins, those points were not vital. The offensive line saw to that.

"They just blew Washington off the line and all I had to do as find the hole," said Owens. "That, and concentrate on holding onto the ball. I knew I'd get a chance some time and I had to prove myself to the coaches."

"When one of your backs runs 9.3 (Owens) and the other 9.6 (Brown), our job isn't that tough," said Taylor, a guard. "I think Washington saw what Stanford did against us with a 4-3 front and thought that could stop us. But it takes a whole year to perfect that — not one game."

The Huskies deployed in a five-man, Okie front early, but jumped into a 4-3 with nose guard Charles Jackson playing middle linebacker.

"We had never seen that in their films," said Kahn, "and I think it hurt them to use it. Jackson isn't fast enough laterally and I was able to get to him and cut him down on nearly every play."

The Bruin offense was somewhat hampered by the wet sidelines and failed to get their pitch game in gear.

"I switched from dry to wet turf shoes in the third quarter," said Brown, "but that didn't seem to help. They did a great job shutting us off outside."

That was about the only phase of Washington's game plan that worked.

GAME OF THE WEEK
Dallas 24, Washington 17

The Dallas Cowboys meet the Washington Redskins in the nation's capital today in what could be a shootout between crippled quarterbacks for the National Football Conference East Division lead. The division-leading Cowboys have won six of seven, losing only to St. Louis two weeks ago. Washington, 5-2, is tied with the Cardinals for second place. Important, however, is that a victory by the Redskins would leave them the only team without a loss to another team in the division. Starting quarterbacks for both teams, Dallas's Roger Staubach and Washington's Bill Kilmer, have been injured this season but it is doubtful that either will sit out this important contest. Despite tradition of Washington beating Cowboys at RFK and Dallas returning favor in Texas Stadium, game pits youth vs. age and therein lies the difference. Forecast of Dallas win is based on Staubach's playing.

The rest of the winners:

Home team capitalized.
SR: Series record includes official league games only.

TODAY

RAMS 31, Seattle 0 — Seattle's nightmarish experience vs Detroit last week may be a portent of things to come. Unable to run the ball, Seahawks will find airlanes clogged by Ram interceptors. Statistics tell the story of Seattle's pathetic defense. Ram runners, receivers and passers, whoever they might be, should have a field day.

SR: First meeting.

BUFFALO 27, N.Y. Jets 13 — Both teams plagued by problems on and off the field. Can't believe Jets capable of sweeping anyone this season. Gary Marangi may give Buffalo shot in arm and O.J. is getting rhythm back.

SR: Buffalo, 18-15.

CINCINNATI 27, Cleveland 17 — Cincinnati has won nine of last 10 regular season games in Riverfront and rare but decisive win at Houston suggests team is beginning to reach potential. Cleveland had lost 11 in a row on road before nipping Atlanta two weeks ago. Bengal defense ranks among top three in NFL. Condition of Ken Anderson and Greg Pruitt an important factor for Cincy.

SR: Cleveland, 7-6.

DETROIT 20, Green Bay 13 — Green Bay's 212 rushing yards against Lions in earlier meeting this year were the most by Packers since end of '73 season. Pack has played four good games in a row but team is 3-15 on road over the past two-plus seasons. When aroused, few teams play defense more tenaciously than Detroit. Lions will be aroused after upset loss to Packers a few weeks ago.

SR: Green Bay, 45-35-6.

Kansas City 27, TAMPA BAY 16 — Don't believe Tampa's 20-point splurge last Sunday represents a significant change in over-all inept attack. Chiefs don't own the best defense around but have more than enough scoring weapons to outpoint Bucs.

SR: First meeting.

Minnesota 20, CHICAGO 13 — Bears have been waiting for this since they blew opportunity to win first meeting three weeks ago by missing two extra point attempts. Opportunity will not knock twice. Vikes have begun to blend running with passing and there's no reason to believe they won't rack up ninth in row over Chicago.

SR: Minnesota, 16-13-2.

New England 27, MIAMI 17 — Although Pats have not defeated Miami in Orange Bowl since Dolphins' first year in the league (1966), Grogan's Heroes appear primed to end that streak. New England's 278 rushing yards bowled over Miami last month, most ever recorded against a Don Shula-coached Miami team. Dolphin defense a near-disaster area.

SR: Miami, 13-7.

New Orleans 20, ATLANTA 14 — First meeting this year saw Saints chalk up most decisive victory (30-0) in club's history. Atlanta couldn't have played worse — seven turnovers. Falcons among really weak teams in NFL, while New Orleans is proving it is a cut above that category.

SR: Atlanta, 10-5.

N.Y. GIANTS 20, Philadelphia 17 — Giants' situation is growing more desperate every week. However, most brutal part of schedule is over now. Question remains whether even drop in class vs. wounded Eagles, who are in own tailspin, will really help.

SR: New York, 49-34-2.

OAKLAND 23, Denver 10 — Surprisingly, Denver has fought Raiders tougher at Oakland than at home where, earlier in season, they blew 10-0 lead and lost, 16-10. Oakland's specialty teams among league's best and could neutralize much of Denver's offensive thrust by keeping Upchurch in tow. Must win for Denver but Stabler & Co. too explosive.

SR: Oakland, 25-6-2.

PITTSBURGH 27, San Diego 14 — Indications are the "real" Steelers have returned and are quite serious about defending their title. Chargers have demonstrated an ability to score — only once held to less than 17 points — but Steel Curtain playing with great pride and that's bad news for Dan Fouts' confidence.

SR: Pittsburgh, 4-0.

San Francisco 20, ST. LOUIS 17 — Classic matchup between high-powered Card offense and airtight 49er defense, which hasn't yielded a touchdown in last three games. Scheduling break for San Francisco, which has played its best games on the road this season. 49ers get eight days between games, St. Louis only six.

SR: St. Louis, 4-3.

MONDAY NIGHT

BALTIMORE 34, Houston 13 — Colts look like the complete team. Bert Jones is best young quarterback in the league and Baltimore defense has to rank near the top. Once highly-rated Houston defense has been shredded past two weeks and there has always been some question about Oilers' ability to compete with quality teams. Baltimore, with eight consecutive regular-season victories at home, is definitely a quality team.

SR: Even, 1-1.

Bears bemoan errors, laud 'physical' Troy

BY DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Mike White had a few words for his California Bears immediately following their 20-6 demise at the Coliseum Saturday against USC.

They were hardly complimentary.

The general consensus in the Golden Bear locker room was that it wasn't only the Trojans who defeated the Bears, it was also the Bears themselves. Quite handily, as a matter of fact.

"It was a combination of both," said a disconsolate White. "We beat ourselves as much as USC did. We made too many mistakes for the eighth week of the season.

"And by mistakes, I mean both in execution and in silly penalties."

Almost bereft of a rushing offense—the Bears netted a meager 18 yards on the ground—quarterbacks Joe Roth and later Fred Besana were obliged to do what the Bears do best—put the ball in the air.

But the redoubtable Trojan secondary took that away, too.

"Their pass defense was fantastic," observed Roth, quietly stripping a protective bandage from his tender right knee, a knee that was banged up again in the fourth quarter when he took an illegal shot from Harold Steele that cost USC 15 yards and cost Cal the services of Roth for the remainder of the afternoon.

"I fell right on the knee again," Roth said. "But I could have gone back in.

"It was very hard to find somebody open...their coverage was great," Roth continued.

To compound Cal's misfortune, wide receiver Wesley Walker viewed the second half from the Bear bench, attired in a swath of bandages that encased his entire right leg. He was missed, said Roth.

"Wesley opens up a lot of things for us. We can't go deep when he's not in there. If we try to, we certainly don't have as much room."

Walker went out late in the second period when Trojans David Lewis and Rick Odom made a sandwich out of him.

That was typical of the fierce Trojan play in the secondary all day.

"They were chopping off our wide men at the line of scrimmage," White said, "and trying to disrupt our pass routes. Their pass defense concept was very good. They also put a lot of pressure on our passers."

In an attempt to circumvent the USC rush, Cal utilized the shotgun formation for the first time this year but the results were low calibre.

"We wanted to give Joe a little more time and also try and protect his knee," White explained.

But even the shotgun didn't help and Roth once was sacked for a 19-yard loss by Gary Jeter.

It was like that much of the afternoon for the suddenly punchless Bears, once one of the most feared offensive machines on the West Coast.

"I felt we had a good game plan and we would have had a chance to win if we had played more tenaciously," White said. "But when you're 2nd and 20 and 3rd and 35 you can't expect miracles."

Naturally, the Bears were asked to compare the basic talents of the Trojans and UCLA.

Several responded.

"UCLA's offense more closely approximates that of Georgia and Oklahoma," White answered. "USC has the best defense we've seen since Oklahoma. They are definitely in the Sooners' class...and better. UCLA has great defensive quickness and they're going to need that quickness against USC's strength and power. The Trojans have the physical people."

"They're similar on defense," Roth analyzed. "I'd say USC has more team speed but I've been rushed harder than today."

Phil Heck, the superb California linebacker, claimed the Trojans are "far more physical than UCLA."

"I felt we beat ourselves with a lot of mistakes and basically, we didn't tackle anybody. They ran right through us."

Heck was of the opinion that Ricky Bell, who appeared far from peak form while managing only 78 yards in 24 carries, wasn't himself.

"He didn't run as recklessly...or as hard as he did last year. Charlie White was the guy that hurt us. Boy, has he got a future."

The future, of course, includes a Nov. 20 date with UCLA. And if California sentiments are correct—tab the Trojans.

Trojans slicker Cal

USC's Mosi Tatupu (36) lumbers straight head for nine-yard touchdown run in third period Saturday at the Coliseum after taking handoff from quarterback Vince Evans (8). Evans' fake before handoff is so effective Cal defender Wade Johnson (foreground) doesn't even see Tatupu. Trojans won, 20-6.

TROJANS' DEFENSE SMOTHERS CAL—

California chopped the Trojan lead to 7-3 in the second quarter after USC's Dennis Thurman fumbled at the USC 25 and Charlie Yauman recovered for the Bears.

California moved to the 16, then got a 33-yard field goal from Breech.

With 1:03 left in the first half, Breech missed a 52-yard attempt, and the Trojans moved 80 yards in 56 seconds for a touchdown that took a toll on the Bears.

Evans' 55-yard pass to Simmrin moved the Trojans into scoring position at the Cal 27 with 41 seconds remaining. Another nine-yarder to Simmrin moved the ball to the 18, and a screen to Bell punched it to the 16.

USC took its last timeout of the half after Evans scrambled to the 8. The Trojan quarterback attempted to pass on the next play, was nearly pulled down at the 20 by Cal's Burl Toler, then broke loose up the middle for a touchdown, bursting through three Bear defenders near the goal line.

Although Glen Walker's conversion was wide, the 13-3 margin the Trojans took into the dressing room forced Cal to revise its plan of attack.

Roth tried everything, even working out of a Shotgun formation for the first time this season. But the Bear quarterback never took his club into deep contention.

Perhaps the most telling series occurred early in the third quarter after Ken McAllister had returned a punt 60 yards to the USC 34.

Poised to put pressure on the Trojans, the Bears were hurled back.

On first down, running back Oliver Hillmon was stopped for no gain. On second down, Jeter knocked Roth down for a 19-yard loss. After a delay of game penalty had moved the Bears back to their 42, Hillmon lost six on a vicious tackle by USC linebacker Rod Martin.

Faced with fourth and 40, the Bears punted and were heard from only once after that, when Breech kicked a 47-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

But that came after the Trojans had taken a 20-3 lead on a 60-yard, third-quarter drive that was finished off by Tatupu's nine-yard rumble up the middle.

Bell said he should be ready for the Stanford game at Palo Alto next Saturday.

"With a little bit of God's help, I should be able to come back," he said.

Asked how he thought his Heisman Trophy chances were now that his rushing average per game had dropped to 164.8, Bell laughed: "Heck, if it's a popularity contest, why should this hurt my chances? All you Heisman voters like me, don't you?"

Inside linebacker Eric Williams, who had 15 tackles, 10 unassisted, looked back upon the Missouri game as motivation for USC's strong defensive performances in the last six contests.

"We were embarrassed," he said. "But that's when we came together as a team. There was no more individual stuff after that.

"Today, we just mixed up our defenses to confuse Roth. He was hounded all day. I felt kind of sorry for him."

The Trojans picked a fine way to show sympathy.

WHY ITASCA HAD THE GUTS TO TRIPLE THE AVERAGE MOTOR HOME PROTECTION.

The 1977 Itasca Owner Protection Plan is already an industry phenomenon. It'll cover you for no less than three years or 36,000 miles. And not just on a few isolated parts, either. We'll cover the inside, the outside, the underside—anything operational, except normal replacement items like spark plugs and oil filters.

In fact, if you keep your 1977 Itasca serviced regularly, we'll assure you that for three years or 36,000 miles, no repair job resulting from a mechanical malfunction will ever cost you more than $25. And for the first year or 12,000 miles—Itasca's Limited Warranty period—it won't even cost you a penny.

How can we afford to offer such a plan? Because we think our Itascas can stand up for a lot longer than three years or 36,000 miles.

And we've got more than a few reasons for feeling so confident.

WE'RE BUILT ON A SOLID FOUNDATION
The Itasca chassis, drivetrain and engine are built and backed by Chevrolet. And you can't get much more reliable than that.

WE ONLY INSTALL EQUIPMENT WE CAN STAND BEHIND
Every interior appliance we install is thoroughly tested. It has to be. Because we also back our appliances for three years or 36,000 miles.

WE'VE GOT THE DEALERS TO MAKE IT WORK
Itasca is one of the fastest growing motor homes in years. And one reason is because we already have over 150 carefully screened, qualified dealers around the country.

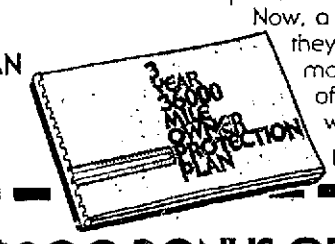

If you have a problem with your Itasca, no matter where you are, there's an army of people who can solve it.

WE'VE GOT THE BACKGROUND TO GIVE YOU THE BEST
Itascas are built by the people who make Winnebagos. No doubt, you've heard of them.

Winnebago people have been doing things right for a long, long time. And we think Itasca is the culmination of all that know-how and experience.

Our background has taught us how to offer comfort and quality at prices as low as $15,037* for our 25' mini, $17,526* for our 25' full-size motor home. And these manufacturer's suggested retail prices even include transportation.

Now, a lot of other people will tell you they're just as proud of their motor homes. But how many of them will back up their words with 36,000 miles of protection?

*DEALER PREP AND TAXES ARE EXTRA.

$300 BONUS OFFER
The first sixty buyers of a new Itasca, from October 21 through November 28, 1976, will get their choice of a microwave oven, a portable color TV or a $300 cash rebate. Make your best deal with a participating Southern California dealer, then present this coupon for your bonus.

Dorsett, Pitt trim Syracuse

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tony Dorsett rushed for 242 yards, including a 33-yard bolt for the winning touchdown, as second-ranked Pitt survived a scare and defeated aroused Syracuse, 23-13, Saturday.

The Panthers (8-0) fell behind 13-10 at 6:12 into the third quarter when Syracuse's Dave Jacobs booted a 55-yard field goal, longest ever at Pitt Stadium.

However, Dorsett capped an ensuing 80-yard touchdown drive with his 33-yard scoring run.

Dorsett, who sat out most of the first quarter with an elbow injury, piled up his yardage on 34 carries, which also included a second-quarter scoring plunge.

He now has 1,314 this season and 5,448 yards on his career.

After breaking Archie Griffin's NCAA career mark of 5,177 yards the week before against Navy, Dorsett also surpassed an unofficial mark of 5,297 yards set by Howard Stevens at Louisville and in two years of small college play for Randolph-Macon.

Penn State edges Temple

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Chuck Fusina threw touchdown passes of 66 and 23 yards and scored on a one-yard bootleg play Saturday as Penn State edged Temple, 31-30, by breaking up a two-point conversion attempt after time had elapsed.

Coach Joe Paterno's Nittany Lions claimed their fourth consecutive victory and boosted their record to 5-3 after barely surviving Temple's two long touchdown drives in the final six minuetes.

Temple, trailing 31-17, drove 80 yards for a touchdown on a 34-yard pass from quarterback Terry Gregory to Ken Williams to reduce the lead to 31-24 with 4:45 remaining in the game.

Bobick belts out decision over 'Sanford'

LAS VEGAS (AP)— Undefeated heavyweight Duane Bobick won his 38th professional fight Saturday when his jarring body blows brought him a unanimous decision over Fred (Young Sanford) Houpe.

Bobick, 214, from Bowlus, Minn., lost the opening round to the 195-pound Houpe from Oakland, but by the fourth round his body shots had slowed his slim opponent.

Houpe had not lost in 12 previous bouts, but by the end of this fight at the Aladdin Hotel Theater for the Performing Arts, his left eye was closed and even a rally in the final round could not bring him the victory.

A crowd of 4,000 watched as the Bobick-Houpe was the second of two nationally televised 10-rounders.

In the first, Mike Quarry of Orlando, Fla., scored an upset in out-pointing Tom Bethea of New York in a light heavyweight bout.

Quarry used his left hook to full advantage in taking the victory in a brawling battle.

Michigan St. rips Purdue

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan State exploded for five second-half touchdowns, three on scoring passes by quarterback Ed Smith, and came from behind Saturday to swamp Purdue, 45-13.

Trailing 13-10 at the half, Smith hit split end Eugene Byrd for 24-yard strike and then tossed eight yards to fullback Levi Jackson for another score. Moments later, reserve tailback Leon Williams roared 33 yards in three plays, the last a 12-yard sweep to cap a third-period scoring spree.

Rockets host Mets at LBCC

The Long Beach Rockets, off to a less-than-auspicious start, host the L.A. Lions in Southern California Winter League play today at Long Beach City College at 1:30.

Despite the presence of Bobb Grich in the lineup and the outstanding pitching of Greg Harris, the Rockets went down to their second defeat in three games last Sunday when the Robinson Mets broke open a scoreless game in the ninth inning to post a 3-0 win.

Grich is in Baltimore this week on personal business, so will not be in the Rocket lineup this afternoon, but his Oriole teammate, Tony Muser, has joined the team and will be at first base.

Harris will again open on the mound for the Rockets with Don Driskill in relief. Doug Stodgel will be behind the plate.

Clyde Wright star in Japan series

NISHINBMIYA, Japan (AP) — Clyde Wright, a former pitcher in the American League with the Angels and Texas, held the Hankyu Braves to six hits in 7⅔ innings and powered a two-run homer to spark the Yomiuri Giants to a 5-3 victory Saturday in the fifth game of the Japan World Series.

Lakers tackle Pistons, bid for 2nd home win

The Detroit Pistons will try to end a long losing streak on the West Coast tonight when they take on the Lakers at the Forum in a 7 o'clock game.

Detroit has not won on the road against a Pacific Division team in more than a year, spanning 15 games. The Pistons lost in Seattle Friday and Portland Saturday on their current four-game road trip.

Center Bob Lanier leads the Pistons' attack. Two newcomers are Ralph Simpson, an all-ABA guard acquired in a recent trade; and forward M.L. Carr, who teamed with Marvin Barnes at St. Louis last year. Barnes is on the suspended list.

The Lakers come off an impressive win over Atlanta Friday in their home opener. A win tonight would level their season record at 3-3.

SHORT SHOTS: Detroit is loaded with guards. Simpson, a 20-point career scorer in the ABA, is only No. 3 behind veterans Eric Money and Chris Ford. Then comes Kevin Porter and rookie Phil Sellers of Rutgers . . . John Mengelt is still another but he is injured and unsigned. No wonder Detroit let Bo Lamar go to the Lakers, who had to give up a second-round draft choice in 1978 . . . Laker coach Jerry West says he will rotate his four guards. Here are their number of minutes, shooting percentage and points average: Lucius Allen 175, .422, 10.6; Don Chaney 115, .344, 4.4; Mack Calvin 93, .400, 11.0; Bo Lamar 75, .548, 10.0 . . . Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is averaging 37 minutes, 29 points, 16.8 rebounds, 3.2 blocks and is shooting .602 from the field . . . The Lakers are idle until next weekend when the New York Knicks and Kansas City Kings come to the Forum.

VAGABONDA, under a hustling well timed performance, lagged while being outrun, moved nearer in traffic between horses on the far turn, eased out for a clear path leaving the quarter pole while continuing her full stride, responded to aggressive hand urging most of the way through the stretch and nailed BASTONERA II in the final strides to win going away. The latter raced with easy striking distance of the leaders, saved ground to come between horses and briefly held the edge between calls then could not hold the winner. ACCRA II broke alertly to force the pace, wore down Lucky Spell to be first into the stretch and gradually slackened. GO MARCH, in traffic on the backstretch, maneuvered and improved her position while really never a strong threat. CHARGER'S STAR slipped through on the rail for her best bid about the quarter pole and tired. SUMMER EVENING raced close up lost a little ground into the stretch with her best bid and tired.

The latter was taken well in hand early and reserved off the pace from along the rail, responded to move clear into the final furlong and gave way grudgingly. Vagabonda upset S'Anita winner

Outsider Vagabonda, saving her best for the last furlong, scored a thrilling come-from-behind victory over favored Bastonera II Saturday to win the $57,000 Las Palmas Handicap at Santa Anita.

Carrying 118 pounds including jockey Octavio Vergara, Vagabonda lagged far behind the leaders early in the race and was still eighth as the 12-horse field drove along the backstretch.

But when pace-setting Lucky Spell suddenly dropped back and Accra II assumed command, Vagabonda found running room inside and moved into third.

In the final furlong, the team of Vergara and Vagabonda simply showed more speed over the turf course to win by three-quarters of a length, with Accra II third, 1¼ lengths back of Bastonera II.

Vagabonda, a 5-year-old mare owned by Arno D. Schefler, ran 1⅛ miles in 1:48⅗. The lightly regarded, Kentucky-bred Vagabonda paid backers $18.20 to win, $5.60 to place and $5.20 to show.

Bastonera II, the 3-2 favorite, carried the nation's second-leading rider, Laffit Pincay. She returned $3.20 and $3. Accra II, who went off at 27-1, had Jerry Lambert in the saddle and returned $9.80.

The victory was a repeat performance for Vagabonda, who previously had scored an upset over Bastonera II in the San Rafael Stakes at Santa Anita last April. Later she won Del Mar's Ramona Handicap, and in 1976 has four victories in 13 races.

Bastonera II, who had to carry 122 pounds, has been in the running for the title of best older filly or mare in the country after several stakes conquests at Hollywood Park and placings in the Beldame and Ruffian races in New York earlier this year. However, it was Vagabonda, who earned the $34,500 first prize.

TELEFERNER, The West's No. 1 filly candidate for the 1977 Kentucky Derby, goes after her fourth consecutive victory today when she takes on seven rivals in the $121,900 Oak Leaf Stakes.

The richest race in the West for 2-year-old fillies, the Oak Leaf pits Teleferner against such local stars as Lullaby, Asterisca and Any Time Girl.

Telferner, owned by J.C. Polalard, has won the Anokia Stakes, the Del Mar Debuatante and Del Mar Sorrento Stakes.

Her rider in the race offering more than $73,000 to the winner will be Pincay, who is battling Sandy Hawley for national riding honors.

Bill Shoemaker has the ride on Lullaby, who was second in the Hollywood Lassie Stakes to Wavy Waves and won Del Mar's Junior Miss Stakes before running second in the Sorrento.

Any Time Girl, voted top 2-year-old filly at Longacres this year, won Bay Meadows' Debutante Stakes in her most recent outing.

Distance of the Oak Leaf is 1 1/16 miles and all entrants will carry 115 pounds.

Completing the field are My Fantasy, Alis et Animo, Glenaris and Lady TV.

RV show to start at Dodger Stadium

If the sailboats don't grab you before closing time at 7 tonight, the recreational vehicles will have their turn next. The 24th Recreation Vehicle and Manufactured Housing Show will open Saturday for a nine-day run at Dodger Stadium.

The Long Beach Sailboat Show ends a successful run tonight and the sponsoring Southern California Marine Association is happy with the results. More than 250 boats of all sizes are still on display today, and there are several sold signs on some of the larger boats in the Arena and the adjoining tent.

SCMA officials say that next year's show will be even larger. The new Convention Center building will be completed and a section of that will be used, along with the Arena.

Dodger Stadium, always idle at this time of the year, won't look that way when 1,400 units are placed in and around the Stadium for the RV show. As with the boat show here, there will be units priced from what one might call "moderate" to several at and above the $50,000 mark.

There will be campers, camper shells to fit on small trucks, self-contained vehicles of 35 feet and even one fifth-wheel unit that is 40 feet long. Not only that but the 40-foot unit has a tilt-out room for more space, washer and dryer and even a trash compactor.

THE DODGER STADIUM SHOW is sponsored jointly by the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association and the Manufactured Housing Institute. Dealer days will start on Wednesday; the general public period will begin Saturday at 10 a. m. Hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays and noon to 9 weekdays. Admission prices are $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for juniors (6 to 16 years) and free for those under 6.

The MHI part of the show will feature complete homes that can be hauled to home sites. Some of those units will amaze you because there is more square feet of floor space than a person finds in the average two- or even three-bedroom house.

While there are numerous RV shows throughout the year, this is the one where both RVIA and MHI have an opporunity to pull out all the stops and show virtually everything that is made.

A few examples: Executive Industries will show a self-contained unit that has a plush rear lounge entertainment area. Six persons may sit there in comfort. Vogue's 35-foot model has a carousel bar; King's Highway has a 35-footer with an eye-level oven and double sinks; Born Free will be showing a motorhome that has been road-tested to give 10 to 12 miles to the gallon; Holiday Rambler has a huge bay window for panoramic viewing.

OUTDOOR MINIS—Barcum House of Wheaton, Ill., which introduced a series of fish Ident-I-Cards last spring, now has a nine-card set about waterfowl, all in color and encased in plastic. The complete set shows the 36 species of ducks and geese that are hunted in North America. The cards are weatherproof, 4x6 inches and designed to fit in a hunter's coat pocket. They are available at some sporting goods stores.

Folsom Lake has a new schedule that goes into effect Monday — 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. All of the boat ramps at Folsom are closed because of low water except for shallow-draft and car-top boats that can be launched by hand. The two ramps on Lake Natoma, downstream from Folsom, are open the year around. Geese are beginning to arrive at Folsom, but they are for "looking," not shooting.

Larry Hopper, Santa Ana, repeated his 1975 victory at Lake Mohave with another win in the Western Bass Association tournament at Cottonwood Cove. He caught 33¾ pounds of bass in two days to top a field of 175 anglers and take home the first prize of $1,000. The next WBA event will be conducted at Lake Don Pedro in Central California Nov. 20-21, with a guaranteed purse of $10,000.

Johnson Motors has produced three new films, Canada's Salmon Coast, Lake Michigan and Obregon Bass Fishing, each of which runs 30 minutes. The films are available at no cost except for return postage. Write to Solana Studios, 4365 N. 27th St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53216.

LBSU volleyball team faces a formidable week

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Hopefully, Long Beach State's volleyball team is enjoying a relaxing weekend. Monday things will be different.

Upcoming for LBSU may well be one of the toughest weeks on the 49er schedule. The 49ers face top-ranked USC Tuesday evening, Brigham Young here Wednesday and then prepare for the UCLA National Volleyball Invitational Friday and Saturday at Pauley Pavilion.

Weakened by injuries, LBSU lost to Pepperdine in five close games Thursday evening at the Malibu campus. Coach Dixie Grimmett hopes Eleanor Zazueta and Rene Rasmussen will be back in the lineup for the USC clash.

The Trojans, who beat LBSU earlier in the season, cemented their first-place standing nationally Thursday evening with a win over UCLA.

Coached by Chuck Erbe, the team was ranked No. 1 in a pre-season poll by Volleyball Magazine, followed by the defending national collegiate champion Bruins.

USC will one of the 24 teams participating in the UCLA event. By coincidence, the 49ers first opponent in pool play will be Pepperdine.

The tournament has been a good indicator of volleyball strength nationally. The tourney winner has gone on to win take the collegiate title each of the past five years.

MINUS THE full-time services of two top offensive players, Long Beach City College's basketball team squeaked by El Camino, 48-46, Wednesday...Joan McLean, who was out with a sore knee, and Toni Bell, who sat out part of the game with a touch of flu, generally generate high double figure scores. As it was, Toni managed to take scoring honors with 16 points. Rhonda Henderson had 11, Vicki Llewelyn, 8... Because of coach Donna Prindle's bench depth, LBCC was able to hold El Camino to 17 points in the second period after the Vikings trailed 20-22 at half time...Defensive leaders were Brenda Pinesett, Irene Flanagin, Vicki and Elvanor Fields. Cathy Kellis and Rhonda made key free throws at the end of the game to insure the two-point win...Coach Prindle described her JV team as "balanced," an adjective the squad lived up to by outpointing Santa Ana, 33-31. Dawn Wiley scored 8 points, had four steals and four assists. Jane Baker, Virginia Lozano and Veronica Viceroy each added six points. Jane also was high with 14 rebounds and contributed three asssits.

CYPRESS may have been hungry for a win against the Cerritos cagers but the Falcons showed superior strength to earn a 76-54 victory...Double figure scorers for Cerritos were Connie Vanderberg, 19, 56 per cent from the floor; Donna Schultz, 16; Barbara Reinalda, 11, and Janice Viano, 10...The Falcons are on the road for the month of November. The next home game will be Dec. 1.

THERE WAS good news and bad news last week for the LBCC volleyball team. The Vikings opened with an easy 15-8, 15-0 win over Cypress...Then the Vikings "played the best I've seen them play," according to coach Merri Machado, but lost to El Camino, 15-4, 15-11, 16-14...In the recent San Bernardino tournament, the winning teams were those with the best depth to outlast the grueling schedule. LBCC lost to L.A. Valley during its seventh match of the day. Longest break of the day was 30 minutes of rest.

IF THE LBCC field hockey team can skip by Rio Hondo and Pierce Colleges, its league record would climb to 4-1. The Vikings host Rio Hondo Tuesday and play at Pierce Thursday...Patty Cape was a one-woman scoring machine Tuesday in the Pasadena match. Driving in every goal, Patty, backed by fine team play, sparked the Vikings to a 4-0 win.

PREP PATTER — The volleyball race at the high school level is gathering momentum as competition among Millikan, Wilson and Lakewood fires up...Tuesday, Millikan varsity handed Wilson its first loss of the year in two games, 15-4, 15-9, leaving the Bruins tied for first place with Lakewood. Millikan remains second...For the confident and elated Rams, the win evened the score for an earlier loss on the Bruin home court. Millikan coach Suzzane Miguel said her team is pointing toward its game with Lakewood. "The first game was close, and I think the next time we are going to do it."...Wilson and Lakewood maintained their one game edge over Millikan during Thursday's round of play. Jordan fell to Wilson, 15-9, 15-10...Lakewood took Poly in three games, 2-15, 16-14, 18-14...In other matches, Millikan and Poly topped Compton and Lakewood beat Jordan...In JV competition Wilson pushed Millikan out of first place leaving the spot open to the Bruins.

RACE ROUNDUP

ROOSEVELT RACEWAY — Windshield Wiper roared from behind on the far outside in the stretch and punctured the dream of Keystone Ore to win the Pacing Triple Crown by winning the $161,290 Messenger Pace Saturday night. Keystone Ore, the 1-2 favorite with Stanley Dancer in the sulky, had burst out of the pack, coming to the head of the stretch and appeared on his way to becoming the first Triple Crown winner in six years. But it was all in vain. Billy Haughton brought Windshield Wiper to the far outside and sped down the stretch to beat the odds-on favorite by three-quarters of a length in 2:00 for the one mile. Windshield Wiper went off at 9-2 with the crowd of 17,400 and paid $11, $3.40 and $2.60. Keystone Ore, who finished a neck ahead of Raven Hanover, returned $2.40 and $2.10. Raven Hanover, handled by George Sholly, returned $2.80 to show. Keystone Ore had won the first two legs of the Triple Crown, the Cane Pace at Yonkers and the Little Brown Jug at Delaware, Ohio. Windshield Wiper earned $80,640 for his seventh victory in 23 starts this year.

AQUEDUCT — My Juliet, a 3-year-old filly on the comeback trail after a leg injury suffered last May, upset Bold Forbes, the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner, in the $55,200 Vosburgh Handicap. A crowd of 26,960 saw the daughter of Gallant Romeo ridden by Anthony Black and overlooked at 9-1, lead all the way in running the seven furlongs in 1:21⅘, under 120 pounds. At the finish, she was two lengths ahead of Bold Forbes, the 1-2 favorite under top weight of 126 pounds. Bold Forbes was one length ahead of It's Freezing, was disqualified from second place and dropped to third after Jacinto Vasquez, the rider of It's Freezing, claimed interference in the stretch run. Another claim of foul against Bold Forbes, this one by Mike Venezia, the rider of Soy Numero Uno, the 5-2 second choice, was dismissed. My Juliet paid $20.20.

HAWTHORNE — Almost Grown led all the way to win the $126,720 Hawthorne Gold Cup before 15,505 spectators. Teddy's Courage, in contention all the way in the 1¼-mile race, finished a neck back in second. Romeo was a close third in the field of 10. American History, the 5-2 favorite, finished ninth. Almost Grown, scoring his first stakes victory, earned $96,720 and paid $9.80.

KEENELAND — Optimistic Gal, sent off as the odds-on favorite, coasted to an easy victory in the $81,550 Spinster Stakes. Rokeby Stables' Ivory Wand was closing ground at the finish, but jockey Craig Perret never used his whip on Optimistic Gal, who scored by five lengths. Ivory Wand had a 14-length margin over Rocky Trip, with Enchanted Native another length back. The winner, timed in 1:51⅘ for the 1⅛ miles, paid $3.40.

Sex showman scores again

NEW YORK — Hillard Elkins doesn't mind being controversial.

Back from England and on the way to Hollywood, he padded about his East Side townhouse, while his fifth bride, Judith Wilson from England, was napping somewhere upstairs. It was mid-afternoon.

In his hands were sheaves of London newspaper clippings, mostly critical of his sequel to "Oh! Calcutta!" The Evening News said that "Carte Blanche," the sexy musical, was "just a crude shocker," with splendidly endowed ladies and lots and lots of naughty words.

"I'd say the reviews were mixed," smiled Hilly as he hurried in from the kitchen with some freshly brewed coffee. "They went from raves to absolute kills. Even the kills had some good things we could put on the marquees.

"I think 'Carte Blanche' goes further than 'Oh! Calcutta!'" he said, producing still more clippings. "We get a little more serious. In 'Calcutta' we treated sex humorously.

"We've got some fetishes . . . you name them, we've got 'em. We've got a little bit of whipping, flashing and some bestiality to keep everybody happy. What kind? Just a dog. The man they called 'Lord Porn,' one of the guys championing purity, sat through it and didn't object."

"SO WHEN will 'Carte Blanche' hit Broadway?"

"Not for a year." Still amused by the reviews, Hilly handed over one that said, "To call the evening rubbish is to dignify the trash can."

The headline, when he got married a couple of weeks ago, said the "Carte Blanche Man Weds." He told one paper that sexy shows had no influence on his private life.

"Are you going to be proud of being called a producer of pornography?"

"But I'm not!" he said quickly. "My objective is not exploitation but to entertain. I'm proud of the fact that I had a show that had the first love affair between a black and a white. (Sammy Davis Jr. and Paula Wayne in 'Golden Boy.') That was the year the networks got upset because Harry Belafonte touched Petula Clark on television.

"That was a long time before 'The Wiz.' I'm proud of bringing over from South Africa the shows 'The Islands' and 'Sizwe Banzi Is Dead' and the awards they got.

"I think I'm going to have trouble bringing 'Carte Blanche' to Broadway. The League of New York Theaters tries to be a censor. Sex on the stage and in films has become a political football. It's very easy to get votes if you attack a sex show.

"I JUST don't believe that a man who pays 0 to see a sexy show is going to leave the theater and try to rape the first woman he sees. In London both my shows are running 10 blocks apart, and they're both selling out."

Elkins at 47 has many precious projects ahead. He has three movies in mind, plus "An Evening of Newley and Bricusse" at Chelsea Town and "The Innocents," based on Henry James' "The Turn of the Screw." And he and Judy, former wife of film producer Gene Gutowski, will be having a honeymoon in Hawaii.

"We met 11 years ago and then saw each other again a year ago and fell in love," he said.

A story was circulated that Hilly owned a theater and gave it to Claire Bloom as a wedding present, one marriage ago. Hilly looked wistfully around the room, at the various paintings, including one of Napoleon.

"I wish I had owned one," he said. "I'd have made half a million on 'Calcutta' if I'd had my own theater."

Today's Best Laugh: Comic Mickey Freeman was given a plaque by a fraternal group during dinner at a restaurant. "It's the first time," he said, "I ever got an award with a choice of two vegetables."

Wish I'd Said That: Once a dirty book was something to be dusted. Now it's reissued as a paperback.

Remembered Quote: "When you borrow money from a friend, think first of which of the two you need most." — Raymond Serra.

Earl's Pearls: A flabby friend tells us he can't wear those new continental-styled tapered shirts: "Not until I start tapering when they do."

Comedian Bob Melvin snapped at a ringside heckler: "You're a real misfit. You're the kind of guy who eats a frankfurter on a hamburger roll."

Kenton doesn't jive much about jazz—he plays it

By BARBRALU FRIED
Ridder News Service

Stan Kenton is as reticent with words as he is prolific in his music.

Pianist, arranger, big-band conductor, composer, teacher and record executive, Kenton has "influenced and haunted the contemporary American music since his first band opened in 1941, according to Hi-Fi magazine.

Kenton just doesn't have a lot to say about it—he's too busy doing it.

The 64-year-old Kenton has been involved in music since age 16. Now his career has crystallized into three main energy outlets: directing his band, leading clinics at schools throughout the country and running his recording and distributing firm, Creative World.

Behind all three activities is Kenton's dedication to jazz. "It's the most important music," he said during a phone interview.

The clinics Kenton conducts for high-school and college music departments are an attempt to help both teachers and students become more aware of jazz, how to play and teach it. Kenton and his musicians teach improvisation, rhythm and how to play in a group.

Kenton started the clinics in 1958 because "20 years ago there were no jazz teachers, no books, no nothing. Professional musicians never had the time."

Now Kenton finds the time, although he is on the road at least 49 weeks a year and performing every day.

Kenton's current 19-member band is the latest of a long string of bands he's been involved with since he played with local Los Angeles groups in the early 1930s. He has been associated with dozens of musicians and arrangers, some of whom went on to their own impressive careers, like Kai Winding, Maynard Ferguson, Chris Connor and June Christy.

Kenton has explored just about every format into which jazz can delve.

Star of 'Star Trek' treks down 10 years of memory

By LINDA CORNETT
Ridder News Service

Capt. Kirk is an officer totally in command of his ship and his crew, a determined explorer who would not flinch at facing a whole battery of Klingons to reach the ghost ship, mysterious force or intergallactic meddler beyond, a warm man with a deep concern for his crew and friends and a comfortable collection of human faults.

William Shatner is a man who insists "I am not Captain Kirk" but takes pride in being "known" at Cape Kennedy.

Shatner discussed the 10-year phenomenon of "Star Trek," plans for a "Trek" movie and lack of plans for a return of the long-remembered, often-rerun television series in a brief telephone interview from his California home.

"Star Trek," which followed the star ship Enterprise and her crew on two years of space-roving adventure, was officially put to rest in 1968. Unofficially the television program lives on in reruns and the memories of thousands of fans and the near-fanatical Trekkies.

The explanation, Shatner stated, is elusive. However, he offered a series of "one-liners" that probably contribute to the continued following:

"The congeniality of the family within the stories; the excitement of action adventure; the underlying theme that had a deeper meaning than the story line; the personal appeal of members of the cast; the adherence to standards of good science fiction."

Trekkies, Shatner confessed, leave him "amazed at the whole thing, quite frankly."

The amazing perseverance of the fans has brought a revival of sorts—a feature-length "Star Trek" film. Shatner, who has signed for the film, refuses to disclose the plot. It exists at present, he said, as a scenario that will be "talked about, changed and rewritten" several times before shooting begins in March.

The film, Shatner hopes, will be only the first of a series of movies with the original crew (Leonard Nimoy is negotiating a contract for the first) and the "basic layout of the star ship." There will be "some big names" in the series, Shatner predicted.

Although "nobody knows" the chances for a revival of the television "Star Trek," Shatner said he prefers the movie option. He is not sure, he said, that he would agree to return to the "lot of work" of a television series.

Although he has not stepped onto a set as Capt. Kirk for eight years, Shatner said he still has an interest in the country's space program.

"I get back and forth to Cape Kennedy quite a lot," he said with pride. "Yesterday I was on a nuclear sub."

However, he insists, "I am not Capt. Kirk."

Singer plans new tour of Soviet Union

NASHVILLE (AP)— Country music entertainer Roy Clark is making plans for his second concert tour of the Soviet Union.

Last winter, Clark was the first country music artist to headline his own show in the Soviet Union.

No dates have been set for a second tour, a Clark spokesman said Saturday.

Elsewhere on the Nashville music scene, country music singer Loretta Lynn said she had gained 36 pounds in the past year.

"A year ago I was a scrawny 100 pounds," she said. "Now I am up to 136. I feel much better."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Begins a busy year of many small lessons in pragmatism. The main problem is to stick with a given project long enough to see if it works and learn why if it won't. Unused resources are either brought into amazingly productive use or left for others to exploit. Relationships are liable to changes from outside causes; it's up to you how to react. Some of today's natives conceal one grand ambition under a casual surface, others scatter their attention over a wide area. Those born this year will be impatient.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Your workweek begins with an obstacle or show of resistance. Forcing issues won't bring desired results. Try another approach with a different group.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Fortune smiles on your candid efforts. See that you smile back, as the going is a bit rough. Make sure what you say is solidly upheld by reliable evidence.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Competition is brisk and a trifle harsh. A lackadaisical attitude doesn't escape notice. Be quick to check your figures. File petitions for what you want.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): It's so easy to overstate your case, but you're better off in long run by saying little and doing more via practiced methods. A looked for contingency finally comes.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Strive for consistent planning and sensible behavior. Take a strong stand on topics, and be sure to keep informed. Practical jokes are out of order.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your chances of getting the upper hand are good if you don't react to needling. Do exactly what you decide without comment. Use your sharp eye to detect fine points.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Choices are already made; get busy on constructive work set in motion. Take advantage of current opportunity. Don't hold onto unprofitable items.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In spite of yourself, you do something obstinate or whimsical with your work. Straighten matters out and get into production again.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Travel and self-promotion are heavily favored. Announce plans and have alternatives to accommodate unforeseen conditions. You can enlist aid for imaginative schemes.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You've let yourself in for more adventurous experience than planned. Be precise with details and refuse a temporary compromise. A bargain is anything but.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're in for extra spending, like it or not, so bring cash, references and a notebook for accurate records of purchases. Don't spend time objecting.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): You can drive a fair bargain. It's wiser to deal with people you're acquainted with than to dicker with strangers. Romance is intense.

Self-picture of boorish tyrant

By GENE SISKEL
Knight News Service

A documentary film on the Uganda tyrant, "Idi Amin Dada," made in 1974 by a French film crew, has been called a rare work of documentary film art, principally because of its dispassionate attitude toward its monstrous subject.

Well, there's no question the 90-minute film conveys a stunning reality — that a boorish killer actually is running a nation of 10 million — but, beyond that, I found "Idi Amin Dada" to be more routine than anything special.

Filmmaker Barbet Schroeder and his small crew apparently went to Uganda in 1974 and asked Amin to help him make a documentary — about Amin. The strategy was shrewd. Amin is nothing if not an egotist, and he began staging events for Schroeder's camera.

Long a foe of Israel, Amin stages for Schroeder's film crew a fake invasion of Israel's Golan Heights. This he does with a couple of tanks, maybe 20 men and a jet airplane. It's all staged on a hunk of desert with Amin, in his ever-present military uniform, whooping it up like the power-drunk cowboy bombadier in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove."

The film "Idi Amin Dada" (it's never explained whether "Dada" is Amin's real last name or just a self-applied moniker that crudely marks him as the father of his country) is very good at depicting Amin's personality traits.

He's an incurable braggart. He boasts of his nation's navy, even though Uganda is land-locked. He boasts of his sexual prowess, after showing some of his 18 children, by saying, "I have 12 boys and six girls. I am a very good marksman, yes."

What the documentary doesn't show, however, is how Amin rose to power and how he stays there. The film also is sketchy about background details of Amin's life. Instead, the picture concludes abruptly with a narrator asking, "After a century of colonialism (in Uganda), isn't it a deformed image of ourselves that Idi Amin reflects?"

A little research into Amin's background reveals that Amin has refined colonial atrocities into a fine but blunt art. The documentary slides over the fact that 18,000 to 80,000 Ugandans have been listed as missing persons since Amin's military coup in 1971. The pictures avoids discussing the widely held opinion that Amin is suffering from an advanced case of syphilis.

No mention is made of the fact that one of Amin's wives was found dead, chopped into little pieces, following a rumor that she was carrying on with another man. One opinion has it that Amin was mistaken about his wife's tone of four) infidelity. She was murdered, apparently, shortly after she had visited her gynecologist.

"Idi Amin Dada" does show us a garrulous giant of a dictator who is charming in a crude way. And maybe that's the source of his power within the world at large. He's thought of as a crazy buffoon, so the big powers leave well enough alone.

But "Idi Amin Dada" is not as successful in presenting Amin's position within his own country. True, we see the deference paid to him at every turn. True, we see him wander about the nation as if it were his own back yard. But the film never investigates Amin's absolute control of the military, the source of his stranglehold on 10 million human beings.

FILM NOTES: I spoke to director Schroeder while he was in New York City for the New York Film Festival. He said that Amin stays in power because "he is very cunning, very clever and he is ruthless.

"Certainly one day he will be killed," Schroeder says. "He is dangerous because he believes in what he is doing. He's not the sort of dictator who one day will run away to Switzerland where he had hidden a great deal of money. He thinks what he is doing is right. He thinks he is making a revolution.

Actually what he is doing is giving more and more power to the army." And that, according to Schroeder, ultimately may be what destroys Amin, when a new strongman emerges within the army.

Schroeder also elaborated on the last line of narration in his film, which positions Amin as a logical end-point of colonialism. "He had no moral values taught to him," Schroeder explained. "He was in the British colonial army. That was his school.

"He participated in the repression against the Mau Mau liberation forces, and that's not the best place to learn about human rights. He got used to killing then. I don't think he has any moral standards."

Rites slated for guitarist

Private services for Phil Reed, 25, lead guitarist of the Flo and Eddie rock band, will be held today on a boat near San Pedro.

Reed, who died last Sunday after a fall from the ninth floor of his Salt Lake City hotel room, was cremated Wednesday.

Salt Lake City police were investigating reports that an illegal entry into the room adjoining Reed's might be connected to his death.

Batman's boy Robin says he's bigger than ever now

By VICKI AVIDIVA
Knight News Service

In his second year at UCLA, where he was majoring in drama, the young man picked up his real-estate license as well.

He sold a home to a Hollywood producer and, in the course of things, was put in touch with an agent.

Some chapters later, student Burt Ward was Robin, Boy Wonder, on the "Batman" TV series, which some called a new low in video trash and others the supreme satire.

Burt says 120 episodes were filmed while the show was in prime time for more than two years.

The Robin of the 1966-68 TV series says his fame is greater than ever, due to reruns: "In prime time the show only went throughout the western half of the U.S. Once syndicated, it went all over. It is now known in 88 countries."

These days he can be found engrossed in law books. "I'm studying law right now—only as an interest, though, kind of a continuing self-education plan. I do not want to become a lawyer, but I've been considering something in politics."

He says, looking back, that the series was "way ahead of its time."

Liza went out on a limb, sawed it off

By SUSAN STARK
Knight News Service

With "A Matter of Time," the disaster movie takes a new turn. This one is not about a disaster; this one is in and of itself a disaster — for Vicente Minnelli, the director, for his daughter, Liza, for her co-star Ingrid Bergman, and for the audience which, with good reason, had expected nothing less than a dazzling entertainment from their three-way collaboration.

Minnelli, who in the past has given us some of filmdom's all-time great musicals, like "Meet Me in St. Louis," "An American in Paris" and "Bandwagon," has reportedly disavowed the new film.

The word is that someone else cut the film and that Minnelli, after viewing the work of the outside cutter, said the film was not merely someone else's version of his film — it was not his film at all.

Be that as it may, it is impossible to imagine how Minnelli himself might have pulled a substantially better movie out of the existing footage. Perhaps the work might have had continuity, perhaps he'd have seen to it that the prints were color corrected, but there is not much he could have done about the picture's most noticeable flaw, which is the casting of Liza Minnelli in the lead role.

Minnelli, vibrant and dynamic and affecting a performer as she is, simply cannot pull off the role of a young woman who, by her beauty, takes the world by storm. They can dress her up and make her up from here to kingdom come. They do. And she still looks like . . . well, like Liza.

As Nina, the country girl who comes to Rome to work as a chambermaid in a once-elegant hotel, Minelli must grow gradually into the kind of woman Ingrid Bergman's Contessa Sanziani once was. The countess — old, broke and dotty — regales the chambermaid with tales of her ultra-glamorous past, of the days when the richest and most gifted men in Europe vied for her favors.

The film visualizes her recollections, putting Minnelli at the center of them, decked out to kill, with consistently ludicrous results. Not casting someone who looked at least a little like the young Ingrid Bergman, someone beautiful, in the Nina role, sabotaged the film's chance for success going in. And Minnelli has no one to blame for that but himself.

Nicklaus has 2-shot lead in Aussie Open

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Defending champion Jack Nicklaus opened a two-stroke lead in the Australian Open golf championship Saturday with a 54-hole score of 215.

Nicklaus overtook the second-round leader, American Curtis Strange, after a par-72 on the tough 7,100-yard Australian Club course.

Strange, who had a four-stroke lead before Saturday's play, slipped to second after shooting a five-over-par 77.

Australia's David Graham is in third place at 219 after three rounds. One stroke behind Graham is Australian Bruce Crampton, who had a 68 for Saturday's low round.

Other scores include Maurie Bembridge, Britain, 220; Terry Kendall, New Zealand, 221; Darrell Welch, Australia, 222; Ken Nagle, Australia, 223; Bill Brask, USA, 223; Barry Burges, Australia, 223; Clyde Boyer, Australia, 223; David Good, Australia, 223; Rodger Davis, Australia, 224; and Bob charles, New Zealand, 224.

The fourth and final round will be played today.

U.S. PROS TRAILING IN JAPAN

SODEGAURA, Japan (AP)—Hsieh Min Nan of Taiwan scored a four-under-par 68 Saturday and took the third-round lead by two strokes in the $100,000 Bridgestone golf tournament.

The leading American is Hale Irwin, who moved up to a 14th-place tie after shooting a one-under-par 71 Saturday for a three-round total of 216.

Americans Forrest Fezler and Orville Moody, the 1969 U.S. Open champion, were in a 20th-place tie at 217.

Pensacola golf rained out

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP)—A torrential rainstorm washed out Saturday's play and postponed until Monday the scheduled windup of the $125,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament, the last individual event on the pro tour this year.

Jack Tuthill, tournament director for the PGA Tour, ruled the Pensacola Country Club course unplayable Saturday morning and announced single rounds of 18 holes will be played both today and Monday.

The storm, which caused some local flooding, hit Pensacola during the night and turned greens, tees, fairways and bunkers into lakes.

"The course was completely unplayable," Tuthill said.

"With the large cut (83 men qualified for the final two rounds), plus the short daylight hours at this time of the year, plus the fact that it's going to take us some time to get the course in shape, it's almost impossible to go for two rounds on Sunday," he said.

No one had teed off when play was washed out Saturday.

After 36 holes, defending champion Jerry McGee led at 137, five under par. Former Masters champion Tommy Aaron was one shot back at 138.

ELECTION '76

A slip-and-slide race to a photo-finish

By BILL BROOM
National Bureau Chief

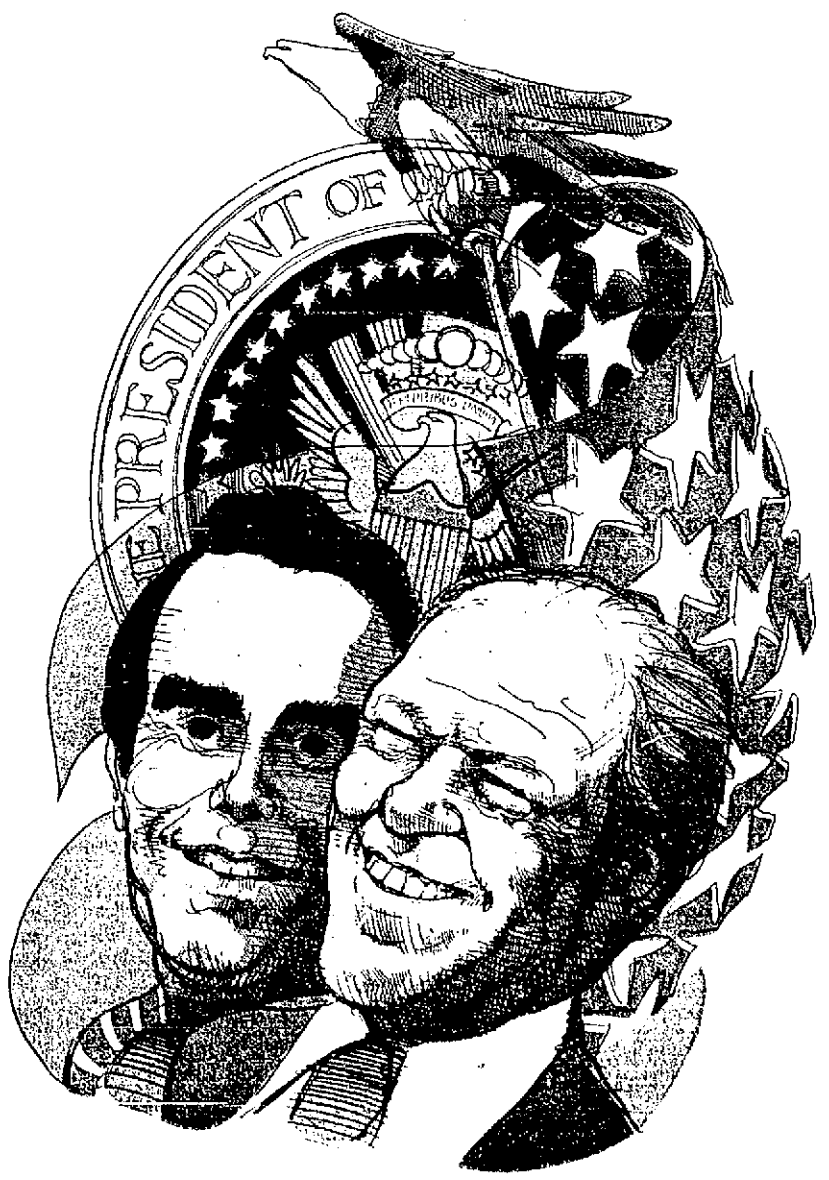

WASHINGTON — At the start, the 1976 presidential election looked like a runaway. Into the homestretch, it began to resemble a photo finish.

Jimmy Carter, overwhelming favorite to become the first southerner elected President since Zachary Taylor in 1848, saw his 30-point lead in the public opinion polls shrink in 75 days to a mere 3 to 6 point margin.

President Ford, bearing the scars of Watergate and handicapped by a sagging economy with the highest unemployment rate in any election year since the Depression, somehow was narrowing the gap.

"The polls are so close that I think we have an excellent opportunity to pull the political surprise of the century and to come back and win," an ebullient Ford said as he left the White House for the third and final television debate.

Key offices, issues Tuesday

When voters go to the polls Tuesday, their ballots will call for votes on a half dozen races, from the Presidency down to judicial offices; on 15 state propositions and on a variety of local measures.

All of the candidates and issues deserve careful consideration, but some are more important than others. The Independent, Press-Telegram in recent weeks has been making recommendations on ballot measures. Today, we summarize our recommendations on what we believe to be the major offices and issues, as follows:

PRESIDENT — We believe the major concern of American citizens this year is their growing tax burden. We believe that burden can only be relieved by cutting back on government programs and employes. We believe that President Gerald R. Ford is committed to that sort of program.

Democrat Jimmy Carter, heavily backed by union bosses — but not always by union members — proposes that if he is elected he will institute many new government programs. He also promises tax reductions, but you can't have it both ways. More government means more taxes.

We favor Ford's program of paring down the federal government, cutting federal spending and working toward a balanced budget. This program already has halted double-digit inflation and produced a recovery in the economy. We recommend the re-election of President Ford to continue that program.

U. S. SENATE — For the same reason that we recommend re-election of President Ford, we advocate the election of S. I. "Sam" Hayakawa as a U. S. Senator. Hayakawa, too, believes government is too big and that the cost of maintaining it is an unreasonable one for the taxpayers.

The Democratic incumbent, John V. Tunney, on the other hand, sees new federal government programs as the answer to all the nation's problems. Tunney, we believe, is one of the "big spenders." Unfortunately, he isn't "the last of the big spenders."

There is an additional problem with Tunney as a senator. He too frequently is absent from Congress. As we outlined in an earlier editorial, he has missed many votes which were important to his Californian constituents and to the nation as a whole.

California needs two full-time Senators. Hayakawa will give the job his full time, and will work toward less government and lower taxes.

CONGRESSIONAL — Our endorsement in the 34th Congressional District is based on the belief that a vote for Dan Lungren is a vote for economy. Lungren said earlier in his campaign he is running for Congress, "because I'm tired of seeing nearly half my income taken in taxes; because we must bring an end to foolish programs that waste billions of our dollars each year." With this, we wholeheartedly agree.

Lungren is a young man, 30 years old, but he has had jobs where he had to work hard for his money: a shipyard worker, a department store salesman and a construction laborer. He is now an attorney. While going to Georgetown University in the nation's capital to get his law degree, he learned about government by working for two senators and as a staff assistant to Anne Armstrong, U. S. ambassador to Britain.

We believe the voting record of the Democratic incumbent, Mark Hannaford, is one in support of big government spending programs. He voted, for example, with the House majority to boost President Ford's budget by more than $18 billion.

We believe the voters must elect men who will vote against increased government spending and the resulting higher taxes, and we recommend the election of Dan Lungren, who we believe is such a man.

STATE SENATE — Incumbent Senator George Deukmejian has served a total of 14 years in the State Senate and Assembly, and has built a solid reputation for opposing unnecessary spending, and yet introducing and supporting legislation to correct real problems of Californians.

Senator Deukmejian was elected by his Republican colleagues as Minority Floor Leader, the No. 2 man in the Senate. This key position of responsibility in the Legislature gives Long Beach added strength in its Sacramento representation.

The more than 150 bills which Senator Deukmejian has authored and which now are state law range from those imposing tougher penalties on crimes of violence to appropriations for education in Long Beach, from one establishing the Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance Program to several on treatment of alcoholics, drug abuse and delinquency prevention.

We recommend that voters in the 31st Senate District re-elect Senator Deukmejian.

STATE ASSEMBLY — Long Beach's two Assemblymen, Mike Cullen in the 57th District and Fred W. Chel in the 58th District, have done a good job of representing their constituents and in working with city officials, and both deserve to be re-elected.

Cullen especially was effective in working out a compromise on the new California Coastal Conservation law among environmentalists, local governments, developers and organized labor. He helped Long Beach city officials make known their concerns to state legislators.

Chel has been an assemblyman for only one term, but has shown a good understanding of government. He has announced his intention of working for property-tax reform and an increase in jobs through private enterprise. We support both objectives.

STATE MEASURES — The 15 state propositions have varying degrees of importance, but only two, we believe are very controversial: Proposition 13 to establish gambling on greyhound racing, and Proposition 14, the United Farm Workers' initiative.

Proposition 13 should be defeated. There are many problems concerned with inhumane treatment of the animals and the concern of law-enforcement officers that the gambling would attract organized crime. The major reason for its defeat, however, is that it is rigged to turn over a multimillion-dollar gambling operation to the promoters.

As the proposition is written, virtually no one but George Hardie, the front man for the gamblers, and his cohorts would be able to get one of the licenses which would grant them a monopoly on greyhound racing in California. The provision that some of the revenue would be turned over to various charitable uses is a sham, because the amount is a small fraction of what the proponents would pocket.

Proposition 14 also should be defeated, primarily because it is unnecessary and, because it is an initiative, would freeze what should be flexible labor law into a statute that could be changed in even the smallest degree only by another statewide election.

The rights of farm workers to vote in secret elections for or against union representation are guaranteed in the existing Agricultural Labor Relations Act of 1975. Although there was a period last year when the Agricultural Labor Relations Board ran out of funds, the Legislature has appropriated money for fiscal 1976-77, and the ALRB is fully financed and active.

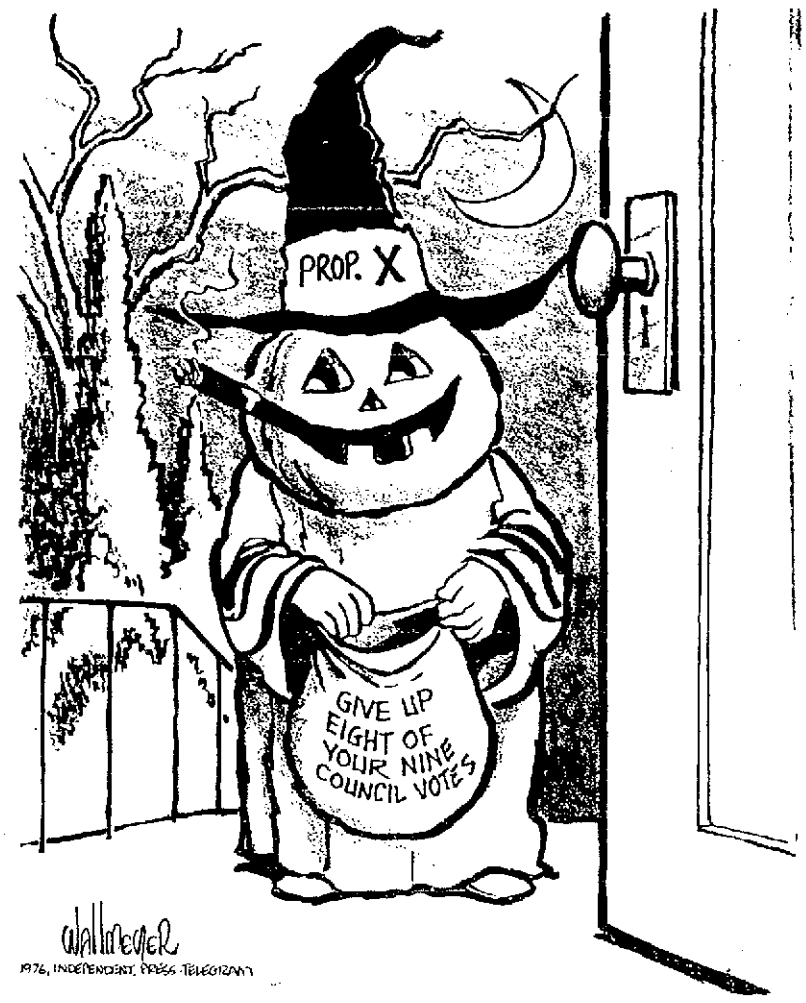

LONG BEACH PROPOSITIONS — Only one of the two city measures, Proposition X, is of significance. Proposition Z merely eliminates from the charter a section pertaining to the "Department of Public Welfare," which no longer exists.

Proposition X concerns the nomination and election of City Council members. At present, they are nominated by district, with only voters in each district voting for their representative. The two candidates with the most votes in the primary run citywide in the general election. Proposition X would provide that both nomination and election would be by district, and only voters in the district would vote for the representative from that district.

We believe the present system requires a council member to be responsive to his district, because he is nominated by the district, but he must also be responsive to citywide problems, because he is elected by voters citywide.

The key argument against Proposition X, we believe, is that if it is adopted, Long Beach voters will be able to vote for only one council member. They now can vote for or against all nine. Because council members now have four-year staggered terms, a voter would get to vote for only one council member once every four years.

This is completely inadequate representaion, and we recommend a NO vote on Proposition X.

TRICK OR TREAT TIME IN LONG BEACH

Race 'up for grabs'

WASHINGTON — As this is written, the presidential election is up for grabs, winnable by either President Gerald Ford or James Earl Carter Jr.

We have that on the authority of George Gallup and Lou Harris, panjandrums of the polling business. In fact, "up for grabs" is the exact phrase Harris used in an appearance before Washington reporters Wednesday.

"If Jimmy Carter loses this election, and I for one would not rule out that possibility...he will have booted, by far, the biggest lead in modern political history," said Harris.

Gallup, who has been taking the public pulse since 1935, said there has been a greater shift of opinion in the last few weeks than he has ever encountered.

AS THE POLLSTERS spoke, Carter's 35 point margin over Ford had shrunk to a 3-4 point edge in Harris' reckoning and six points in Gallup's.

By any measure, Carter has run the worst campaign, shown himself to be the least effective candidate since Barry Goldwater. Let's throw in Herbert Hoover for the hell of it. Even St. George McGovern put up a better fight.

The Carter bloom was never fuller than on the concluding night of the Democratic National Convention last July in New York. In seriatim, he wilted his candidacy with nine major blunders.

While the six weeks between the convention and Labor Day dribbled away, Carter drained his fish pond, played softball with the press (thus easing their culture shock at encountering Plains) while the chore of assembling a national organization and planning the campaign went undone. He thus began his travels, on Labor Day, with an inept advance team, non-existent liaison with state and local Democratic organizations and no clear idea of what lay ahead.

While shirking his organizational chores, Carter entertained at Plains a succession of his party's elder statesmen and gurus. The intent was to show that this inexperienced one-term governor was exposing himself to the Democratic party's wisest counsel. The effect however undercut the outsider-populist-common man image, free of ideological taint, he had so carefully contrived in his winning drive through the primaries.

THE THIRD AND fourth mistakes sound contradictory but are not. Carter failed to expand the small staff of talented Georgians who had served him so well in winning the nomination to include men and women with prior experience in a national campaign. Meanwhile, he reached a decision to impose state campaign directors from outside the states in which they were assigned to perform. The local leaders were furious and insulted and their performance has shown it, particularly in California.

With a $24 million limit on campaign spending, Carter's Atlanta headquarters failed to establish budget controls. A wad of dough was blown on aimless, criss-crossing of the country in September at great expense. When big money was needed for the final two weeks, the cupboard was almost bare.

As a campaigner, Carter abandoned the message that had served well in the primaries — that of the outsider seeking to cut through the cynicism and knavery of Washington with humility and compassion and good intention. It broke his rhythm, disillusioned thousands and raised the suspicion he had conned everybody during the primaries. The anti-hero looked like any other pol willing to change his tune to please his audience. Good Jimmy. Bad Jimmy. Will the real Jimmy please stand up?

Meanwhile, Carter talked too much about himself. He had some desperate need to explain his religiousness, southernness and ruralness. Some people would call this inferiority complex.

AS THE CAMPAIGN got rough and the opposition started to attack, Carter proved to be thin-skinned. He also proved to be a stubborn man who bore criticism from his own camp not at all, or gracelessly. His reaction to pressure was to reveal a mean and nasty streak in his character. The quiet eloquence of Carter in the spring gave way to shrill hyperbole in the autumn ("the tax laws are a disgrace to the human race," etc).

In short, Carter failed to perceive the difference between running for the nomination and running for the presidency, where the stresses are greater, the demands more complex, and the media unrelenting.

A similar failure, should he be elected, could cost the country dearly. Let us pray he is the fast learner his issues advisers say he is.

Ladies room in the Senate

(From Our State Bureau)

SACRAMENTO — Women acquired the right to vote in the United States in 1920, and in 1922 helped elect five women to the California State Assembly.

There has never been a greater number serving at the same time, but there should be when the 1977-78 session gets under way next Dec. 6.

Three women now serve in the Assembly: Pauline Davis of Portola, Leona Egeland of San Jose, and Teresa Hughes of Los Angeles. Mrs. Davis is retiring, but four women are definite favorites to join Egeland and Hughes.

The four favorites are Carol Hallett in the 29th District which includes Monterey and San Luis Obispo; Jane McCormick Tolmach in Ventura's 36th, Maxine Waters in Los Angeles' 48th, and Marilyn Ryan in the Palos Verdes Peninsula-beach cities' 51st.

Mrs. Ryan and Hallett are Republicans. The others, along with Egeland and Hughes, are Democrats.

Betty Smith in the 1st District, and Cindy Wear in Gardena's 53rd, are also possible winners. Both are Democrats.

In all, there are 37 women seeking Senate and Assembly seats. Thirteen are Democrats, 12 are Republicans, nine represent the Peace and Freedom Party, and three wear American Independent labels.

Since the first California Legislature convened in Monterey in 1849, 16 different women have won 62 elections for Assembly seats, but no woman has ever served in the Senate.

That fact is a key campaign issue in four Senate races.

Long Beach City Councilwoman Renee Simon is taking on veteran Republican Sen. George Deukmejian in the 31st District, which as a consequence of reapportionment consists entirely of the City of Long Beach.

Much of the district is therefore new to Deukmejian, although he is well known throughout the city because of his long service. He was first elected to the Assembly in 1962, and moved to the Senate in 1966.

Another incumbent Republican forced into a defense of his record is Lou Cusanovich in the San Fernando Valley's 19th District. Cusanovich was elected to the Assembly in 1956 and to the Senate 10 years later. He is opposed by Sabrina Schiller, an actress and a consumer's lobbyist, and she has put together a slick campaign which is giving the veteran fits.

A third woman aspirant for a Senate seat is Rose Ann Vuich in the San Joaquin Valley's 15th District. She is a long-time party activist who is taking on GOP Assemblyman Ernest Mobley for the seat vacated by the retiring Howard Way.

One of the two senate districts newly created by reapportionment includes the Whittier-Santa Fe Springs area. Assemblyman William Campbell, a Republican, is well known in the district and should win, but his opponent, Betty Wilson, is also well known.

Republicans feel confident they can win all four seats, but Capitol planners, at least, are taking no chances.

Unlike the Assembly, the Senate chambers in the 106-year-old Capitol have never had a women's rest room. Earlier this year temporary chambers were constructed to be used while the old building is being brought up to earthquake-safe standards.

The new Senate chamber includes a women's rest room.

Capitol ethics need change

WASHINGTON — The integrity of Congress was enunciated in its earliest days by Thomas Jefferson, who returned a gift to a Baltimore merchant and wrote sternly, "It is a law, sacred to me while in public character, to receive nothing which bears a pecuniary value."

Jefferson's words were read, admired and quickly forgotten. From the earliest days of the Republic, the votes of congressmen have been bought by lobbyists, compromised by women and traded for large and small favors.

Even as we write this, the Justice Department is investigating allegations that South Korean agents have passed out cash and gifts to members of Congress. There are also 101 other ways that congressmen cheat the taxpayers. We have written about them until the words are tired.

Congress has produced an occasional statesman, but more typical has been the limited politician with a narrow background and parochial interests. His is not the ennobling power to shape bold national policies or the awesome authority to make great decisions.

More characteristically, his is the petty privilege to frustrate and delay the proposals of others, to hold up the appointments recommended by the President, to bargain selfishly for patronage and pork as the price of his support for national programs.

He inhabits a private, privileged world that is largely insulated from the outer

world. Capitol Hill has its own police force, its own banks, its own ways and means. It has barber shops and beauty shops; shops for carpentry, electrical work and, to insure that congressional bottoms are properly cushioned, upholstery shops. There are steam baths, swimming pools and gymnasiums, where overweight legislators can cavort in private.

The trappings and the traditions alike are dedicated to the comfort and convenience of the members. It is a spoils system — a system contrived, that is, to spoil the congressmen. Even the elevators, marked MEMBERS ONLY, whisk the annointed to their floors leaving their constituents to struggle for space in the public lifts.

EACH MEMBER is provided a suite of ornate offices, complete with carpeting, paneling and leather appointments. Enthroned behind a massive desk and framed by flags, he is attended by truckling subordinates. The office walls usually are adorned with plaques, scrolls and inscribed photographs of the great, all attesting to the excellence and imporance of the occupant.

The senior members are assigned private hideaway offices in the subterranean recesses of the Capitol building. In protected isolation, they can catch a nap, rendezvous with a pretty secretary or simply get away from the hurly-burly.

Senators John Sparkman, D.-Ala., and Frank Church, D.-Idaho, happen to have adjoining hideaways, linked by a bathroom-bar which could be entered from either side. But the 76-year-old Sparkman, by right of seniority, outranks the 52-year-old Church. So orders went out to board up Church's entrance and leave Sparkman with his own private toilet and boozing facilities.

Congress also exempts itself from many of the laws it enacts for others. The civil rights laws, work safety regulations and other strictures don't apply on Capitol Hill. The government departments, whose appropriations come from Congress, are also eager to placate its members. Senator Charles Percy, R.-Ill., for instance, commanded a Pentagon limousine and an Army helicopter to rush him to Dulles airport because he was late for a plane. It flew him to Denver for a skiing vacation.

Members of Congress receive deferential and obsequious treatment from many quarters. The flattery tends to inflate them with self-importance, although outwardly they maintain a humble pose. For the public doesn't abide arrogance in elected officials.

SOME ARE exemplary public servants whose contributions will never be adequately appreciated. But others are irresponsible opportunists who slide through their careers without making any real contributions.

The collectivity and secrecy obscuring the unheralded dedication of the former also cover up the dereliction of the latter. Only the insiders can truly distinguish the doers from the drones. The rules and customs that prohibit one congressman from disparaging another prevent the public from ever sharing in this knowledge.

The system is ideally constructed, therefore, for the person who regards his membership as an avenue to special privilege and personal gain. There is a code of conduct which is seldom enforced. The only real guide is the individual's conscience.

The wining and dining of legislators is a major industry in Washington. Campaign contributions sometimes become almost indistinguishable from bribes. In addition to the annual $44,600 salary, each member can trim half-a-dozen congressional allowances. The stationery shops, restaurants and other Capitol Hill establishments offer only bargains — all subsidized, of course, by the taxpayers.

THE MINOR excesses invariably lead to larger outrages, which are countenanced by Congress. The transgressions of morality and the law have become all too commonplace on Capitol Hill.

The tragedy is that most members of Congress are honest and honorable men who serve the nation better perhaps than the voters deserve. But in the convivial and confidential atmosphere under the Capitol dome, they condone the outrages, protect the perpetrators and resist reforms.

For our regular readers, not much in this report is new. We have harped on the same theme for years. We raise it again because Tuesday is election day. The voters can bring about a change in the ethical standards of Congress by mandating a change in its membership. The least that conscientious citizens should do is to demand some genuine reforms in exchange for their votes.

Letters to the editor

Survey says NO on X

As election day approaches, the Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce has been made aware of the latest in the series of public surveys conducted by some 28 students of the Distributive Education Clubs of America chapter at Long Beach City College. These surveys have been done as a community project that will be entered into national competition by Long Beach DECA, which last year was judged No. 1 chapter in the state and No. 4 nationally.

This survey was of particular interest as it dealt with the subject matter to be voted on as Proposition X on Tuesday's ballot

Although the DECA questionnaire did not mention the ballot measure by name or use the exact words of that measure, which is written in a way that many find confusing, it did ask the direct question: "Do you favor a change to district elections for city councilmen in place of the current citywide election system?" Out of more than 800 answers, 44 per cent said no, while only 37 per cent said yes. The balance were undecided. That means that if these views were translated into votes on Proposition X, the measure would likely be defeated.

A second question asked: "Do you feel your representation at City Hall will be weakened if you are limited to voting for only your district's councilman instead of all nine?"

That is exactly what Proposition X proposes, and this question was answered yes by 47 per cent and no by 36 per cent. This set of answers also would indicate that a No vote on Proposition X would be called for.

The DECA students mailed a random-sample poll to about 3,000 homes spread throughout the city's postal zones to secure the above results.

We salute the students involved in DECA at Long Beach City College for their participation in community events and will be most interested next Tuesday to see if the voters in Long Beach prove them correct with a NO on X.

League's liberal bias

Not content with having excluded our minority candidates from the presidential debates, a decision guaranteed to present to the American public a choice between liberal Mr. Ford and even more liberal Mr. Carter, the national League of Women Voters completed its "stacking of the deck" by personally picking panelists from notoriously liberal newspapers for the third debate. It should be noted that this selection was made solely by the League. Neither candidate had, or asked for, veto power over the League's selection.

Selected as panelists were Robert Maynard of the Washington Post, the noted liberal syndicated columnist; Joseph Kraft, and Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times. Barbara Walters served as moderator. Quite predictably, their performance, as gauged by the questions they asked during the debate, served to enhance and propagate the liberal point of view.

Sen. Dole's criticism of the League for its liberal bias, which he made during his vice-presidential debate with Sen. Mondale, was well-deserved and long overdue. It was high time that someone peeled off the League's transparent cloak of nonpartisanship and exposed their ultra-liberal bias on issues. The claim by Sen. Mondale, well-known as one of the most ultra-liberal members of Congress, of having received a 100 per cent (correct voting) rating by the League merely served to prove Sen. Dole's point.

Israel an asset

General Brown's charge that Israel is a burden to the United States is simply not true. Israel is, in reality, America's frontier in the Middle East.

The logistics of transferring and maintaining 3 million American Marines in the Middle East are nigh on impossible. If it could be done, the cost would run into trillions of dollars, with highly dubious military or other benefits for the United States. However, in Israel we have the equivalent of 3 million Marines permanently stationed in an area of vital U.S. interest, serving in effect to extend America's frontier to the Middle East, with the priceless additional benefit of sparing the blood of American soldiers.

Israel stands for the best ideals and principles of the United States, has single handedly stopped the advance of communism in the Middle East with the blood of its brave men and women.

The implication that General Brown has left with the American people is that our Joints Chiefs of Staff would abandon this gallant country for the very same Arab countries that played Russia off against the United States, imposed an oil embargo on the United States, blackmailed us with threats of further embargoes and high oil prices and, ironically enough, are today independent from Russian domination only because the gallant Israeli defenders gave their lives battling Russian client states.

The facts show that Israel is an asset to the United States and the development of a permanent and true alliance between Israel and the United States is as important to United States interests today, and in the future, as was the western extension of the United States with the Louisiana Purchase by the visionary Thomas Jefferson in 1812.

A call to voters

Let's all pull together before we go to the polls Tuesday and take a good, hard look at who we are going to have in office for the next four years. We have had nothing but promises ever since World War II, but how many of those promises were ever kept?

You and I are the government. It's up to each of us to clean up the corrupt mess this administration has us in. This present administration is shameful. When in our history did we have a vice president and a president either have to resign or be impeached? I am ashamed of it.

Why we, the people of Southern California, have to sit back and accept whatever they hand us while Richard Nixon lives like a king? After all, he is responsible or the mess our country is in.

Think about the unemployment in California alone. Big time spenders — haven't we had enough?

Let's all take a good, hard look before we put our X alongside the name on the ballot. We need a new broom and a clean sweep.

Please help. We need each and every one of you out there to cooperate.

Campaign of tactics, not issues

In an ordinary year, the drama of a campaign turnaround, of the tension produced by personal confrontations in debates before the television cameras might have aroused intense emotions and involvement by the electorate.

But the outlook for the bicentennial election is for a low voter turnout, possibly fewer than 50 per cent of those eligible.

Some observers thought the public's disillusionment and apathy was caused by a reaction to Watergate. But others attributed it to the lack of dialogue between the candidates. Neither seemed willing to commit himself to any serious discussion of issues. And in the absence of any clear concensus among the American people about where the country should be headed, such caution appeared justified.

Ford and Carter defeated more ideologically-oriented opponents for the nomination by conscious avoidance of issue-oriented campaigning. But their focus on personalities and "themes" has resulted in one of the more barren and petty general election campaigns within memory.

George McGovern, the 1972 Democratic nominee said he doubted he had "ever seen an emptier campaign, a pettier campaign" and there were widespread complaints among party professionals that neither candidate was giving the voter anything to vote for.

INSTEAD, the media and the public focused on mishaps. Carter's standing in the polls sank after he gave an interview to a girlie magazine and the President's comeback was stalled for almost 10 days because of a verbal lapse in discussing eastern Europe.

These relatively trivial episodes were magnified into major debates about the fitness of the candidates Carter's judgment in agreeing to an interview among the pinup girls and Ford's poise and precision of thought.

Such was the superficiality of the campaign as it entered the final stage. And that resulted in another of a series of anomalies and contradictions that have marked the 1976 campaign.

As election day neared, more voters were undecided about their preference than at the start.

The economy, a dominant issue in all U.S. elections, was having relatively minor impact.

BECAUSE OF widespread disenchantment with Washington caused by Watergate and scandals in Congress, this was thought to be the year of the outsider. Carter won his party's nomination by campaigning as the quintessential outsider and then shifted in September to claiming kinship with Harry S. Truman, and parading the streets of Chicago with that insider's insider, boss Richard Daley.

The President began his thematic and stylistic campaign as the protector of the public purse, boasting of vetoes that had saved almost $10 billion in federal spending. By early October, he was boasting to New York audiences about federal aid to cities and had given a windfall of hundreds of millions of dollars to wheat farmers through new crop support levels.

At the outset, a series of televised "debates" between the candidates was expected to fire voter interest as it had in the 1960 election, the first and only time they were tried.

THE DEBATES turned out to be fully as decisive as the candidates expected them to be, but lacking in content. The candidates were judged by the media and the electorate not on what they said, but how they acted and looked while saying it.

The result has been an electorate with no real commitment to either candidate. Neither the President nor his challenger started the campaign with a national following. And only the final days of the election offered either an opportunity to firm up the undecided and the millions of others who offered only tentative backing.

Nevertheless, Carter held his spot as the favorite. The massive advantage Democrats hold in voter registration and the distribution of electoral votes will be hard for Ford to overcome.

But the prospect of a light turnout and the paradoxical nature of the campaign placed an even greater emphasis on the personal favtor as the chief ingredient of the election.

PRESIDENT FORD, the polls indicated, is perceived by the electorate as a decent man who means well and tries hard, but lacks imagination and the know-how expected of a president.

Sputtering down the stretch, either candidate seemed capable of losing the election, and neither appeared able to mount an initiative that would win it. That being the case, the race seemed likely to go to he who avoids the disasterous mistake.

No other candidate in modern political history has lost as much ground as fast as Carter did. Few observers credit the President with achieving that shift. If anything, Ford's campaign has been marked by failed tactics and fumbles of a magnitude seldom achieved by an incumbent.

What appears to have happened in the post-Labor Day stage of the campaign is a growing uncertainty among voters about Carter's character and capacity for leadership. The Democrats reenforced those feelings by engaging in abrasive tactics, harsh rhetoric, and a tendency to over-promise.

MEANWHILE, the President seemed to be gaining ground faster when he was not campaigning. But his celebrated boo-boo in the second television debate, the statement that Eastern Europe is free of Soviet domination forced him on to the campaign trail to recover lost momentum.

Ford's performances there did little to elevate the rhetorical level or common sense content of the campaign. He acceded to the advice of his advisers that the time had come to get tough with Carter as Carter had been with him after the second debate.

Carter enters the stretch with a slight lead in the polls that can hold up if the Democrats succeed in turning out a big vote, a 50-50 likelihood. The Democratic registration drive was only partly successful. About two million new Democrats were added to the voting list in big city areas, but it wasn't enough to compensate for even greater loses in registration since 1972.

California registration has dropped almost a half million in the past four years. In Cleveland it is down one hundred thousand and in New York, one million.

OTHER HANDICAPS to the Carter campaign were beginning to mount. Because of federal spending limits, Carter lacked the money to visit all the cities where local Democratic leaders say it would help get out the vote.

Ford on the other hand carefully rationed his spending. He had enough left to finance a major 10-day closing campaign swing through the eight largest states. His campaigns manager said he needs to win five of them to have a chance of winning the election, but the President was said to be leading in only two — California and Michigan.

But Ford hoped that his 10 days in the stretch would generate the kind of ground swell that carried Harry Truman to an upset victory in 1948. He often compared his campaign to Truman's.

Ford also had enough money to generate a major blitz of television commercials, far more than Carter will be able to finance.

GOP strategists also noted that Carter is particularly vulnerable to last-minute slippage. In the late northern Democratic primaries Carter ran well behind his strength as shown in polls in Michigan, Maryland, California and New Jersey. Ford's advisers hoped that would happen again.

During the final period Ford will do everything possible to provoke Carter into making a major mistake.

The pettiness of the campaign has given rise to a new kind of political jokes. The one that probably summed up the campaign most accurately and most tersely came from the writers on the Johnny Carson television show.

Said Carson: "This election is a contest between fear of the known and fear of the unknown."

For Ford, Dole an uphill campaign all the way

By GIL BAILEY
From our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — If Gerald Rudolph Ford's plans had worked, this would have been the first election since 1946 in which he was not a candidate.

Rep. Ford, R-Mich., House minority leader, in 1973 had planned to retire at the end of this Congress, convinced that the Republicans would not gain control of the House and he would never achieve his ambition of becoming Speaker of the House.

Instead Richard Nixon selected Ford to become vice president, replacing the disgraced Spiro Agnew. The Congress agreed after Ford promised not to run for president in 1976.

Nixon resigned and Ford became the first non-elected president in the history of the United States.

NOW, HE SEEKS to be elected to that post on the basis of his "proven leadership."

Ford, despite his incumbency as President, has faced an uphill fight with the early polls showing his Democratic opponent, Jimmy Carter, in the lead.

In an election short on major issues, such as the Vietnam War or civil rights, image has become the key in the race.

Is Jerry Ford more honest and trustworthy than Jimmy Carter?

Is Jerry Ford a bungler who "can't chew gum and walk at the same time," as the late Lyndon Johnson is quoted as saying?

Has Jerry Ford "saved" the economy or is he responsible for the still high unemployment?

These are the issues that surround President Ford as he strives to win his first national election.

JOINING HIM in the race is another man who had planned to sit out this election, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who barely survived the 1974 election.

For Dole, who had faced heavy criticism for his role as chairman of the Republican National Committee from 1971 to 1973 during the Watergate years, 1976 was to have been a "free ride," a chance to watch others struggle for election.

Thus, the Ford-Dole ticket was built on the unique history of the presidency from 1972 to 1976. First Agnew, then Nixon stepped down. First, Ford was named vice president to become president, then Nelson Rockefeller vice president only to announce that he would not seek election.

When Ford was first nominated for vice president there were questions about his competency and some of those questions are still being asked in this campaign.

FORD POINTS to his record as president as an answer to those who doubt his capabilities.

He is the first president since Dwight David Eisenhower who can truthfully say the United States is at peace.

He says that inflation has been slowed and that the economy is improving.

He attacks the "big spenders," Democrats, in Congress.

Some of the toughest criticism to come Ford's way has come from within his own party where a determined challenger by the name of Ronald Reagan almost defeated him for the nomination.

Yet Ford's 25-year record in Congress is clearly that of a conservative as is his record of vetoes of spending bills.

"They'll rue the day. He's more conservative than Nixon and his judgment's not as good," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., a liberal shortly after Ford was picked as vice president.

Edwards and the liberal wing of the Democratic Party have not changed their minds but for a time conservative Republicans felt that Ford was just too liberal. As a result the Republican Convention was a chancey time for Ford who survived one test by a bare 10 votes.

HE WON BUT in his winning found his party divided. In selecting Dole as his vice presidential running mate, Ford chose his partner in an effort to mend some of his damaged political fences.

Many in the farm states were angry with Ford over the Soviet wheat embargo and his farm policies generally. Dole is a farm state senator and he can and has appealed to the farm vote.

Dole is quick on his feet with a sharp sense of humor. In this area, too, he aides a President who is not a classical orator.

Dole is a conservative and that is reassuring to the conservative wing of the Republican Party.

Their current task is build a Republican minority into a majority of the Electoral College votes.

Generally, both Ford and Dole have waged their campaigns on traditional Republican issues: economy in government, military preparedness and experience in government.

HOWEVER, the underlying issue of the campaign seems to be "trust" — who is more trustworhty.

Ford, the ex-All American center from the University of Michigan, presents an image of "Mr. Good Guy, but that image was damaged somewhat when he pardoned former President Nixon before Nixon was charged with any crime.

In addition the Watergate Special Prosecutor is investigating allegations made concerning Ford's handling of campaign contributions. However, Ford's finances were investigated by both House and Senate committees during vice presidential confirmation proceedings and both House and Senate confirmed him.

Ford at age 63 radiates health and an increasing sureness in his role as president. In fact he now admits that he hopes to follow in the footsteps of another president, Democrat Harry Truman, in showing the polls to be wrong by bringing in an upset victory.

PERHAPS, Ford's greatest weakness has been in the area of both verbal and physical stumbling although at least some of Ford's stumbles on the ski slopes may have drawn more amused sympathy and identification than disrespect.

One of his advantages has been his wife, Elizabeth (Betty) Ford, and children.

A number of Democrats have said, "I'd vote for Ford if it was Betty Ford."

The President's wife has spoken out on such issues as abortion, sometimes contradicting her husband's positions. She has also behaved with grace in the face of her own cancer operation and her continuing pain because of a neck condition.

The Fords as a couple and as a family have become a familar and satisfying symbol of stability on the American scene.

Dole on the other hand at 53 is a relative unknown on the national scene.

A wounded and decorated World War II Army veteran, he has never lost an election, first winning a seat in the Kansas legislature in 1950. Dole has spent 16 years in the House and then the Senate, winning re-election to the Senate in 1974 in a close race.

HE IS KNOWN in the Senate for the sharpness of his tongue as he battled Democrats attacking the policies of former President Nixon. During his years as chairman of the Republican National Committee such Nixon attackers as the Washington Post also received verbal lashings from Dole.

Only during the last few months of the Nixon regime did Dole criticize the former president. His support of the Nixon became a campaign issue in 1974 with Dole winning re-election in Kansas with a slim 50.9 per cent majority.

In 1972 Dole and his first wife of 24 years, Phyllis Holden, were divorced. On Dec. 6, 1975 Dole married Federal Trade Commissioner Mary E. Hanford.

The Ford-Dole ticket is a classic Republican one. Their task is to convince the American people that their minority party should draw the support of a majority of the American voters and in order to do so they must convince millions of Democrats to vote Republican.

A preposterous idea but it really worked

By AL EISELE
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Shortly after watching the 1972 Democratic National Convention pick Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota as its presidential nominee, then Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia called together his wife Rosalynn and a few close friends and aides to discuss the possibility of running for president himself in 1976.

For anyone but Carter and his confidantes, it was a preposterous notion, and they took special care not to let word of the meeting at the governor's office in Atlanta leak out lest they be ridiculed for their unrealistic ambition.

The 47-year old Carter, who had completed only two years of a four-year term as governor and would remain sufficiently obscure to stump the panel on the television show "What's My Line?" a year later, asked each of those present at the 1972 meeting to help him assess his chances as a national candidate.

IT WAS quickly pointed out to Carter that he had numerous disadvantages. He was relatively unknown, he was a southerner, he had no Washington power base and he would be out of a job in 1974 because of Georgia's one-term gubernatorial limit.

But Carter, displaying the supreme self-assurance and almost fanatic determination that were to become his most distinguishing characteristics, pointed out that those same disadvantages could be turned into politically powerful advantages.

Instead of being an unknown southerner, he could be a fresh face from a part of the country that was ready to rejoin the nation's political mainstream. Instead of having no power base in Washington, he could be an outsider who could restore faith in government. Instead of being politically unemployed in 1975-76, he would be free to campaign fulltime.

But the clincher that persuaded Carter to run and ultimately changed the course of American political history was that he was now convinced that he was as good or better in any of the others who aspired to the presidency.

BEFORE BECOMING governor in 1970, Carter was a former Naval officer, a South Georgia peanut farmer and a state legislator who looked with awe and even reverence on the office of the presidency and those who sought it.

"Then in 1971 and 1972," he later wrote in his aptly-titled autobigraphy, "Why Not the Best?", "I met Richard Nixon, Spiro Agnew, George McGovern, Henry Jackson, Hubert Humphrey, Ed Muskie, George Wallace, Ronald Reagan, Nelson Rockefeller and other presidential hopefuls, and I lost my feeling of awe about presidents. This is not meant as a criticism of them, but it is merely a simple statement of fact."

Despite its far-fetched appearance at the point of origin, Jimmy Carter's decision in late 1972 to run for president turned out to be one of the smartest decisions he or any other American politician has ever made.

But just four short years later, James Earl Carter Jr., the born-again Baptist peanut farmer from Plains, Georgia, has taken control of the nation's oldest political party, made himself one of the most famous Democrats of his time, and brought himself to the point where he has excellent chance of being the next president.

Jimmy Carter's meteoric rise from political nobody to Democratic superstar is one of the truly remarkable stories of modern American politics. Few people have come so far and so fast.

After establishing a tenuous political base as chairman of the Democratic party's 1974 campaign committee, a post that enabled him to travel around the country and study the politics of each state and region, to establish a loose network of supporters and to probe the mood of the electorate, Carter took the first major step toward the White House.

ON DEC. 12, 1974, one month before his term as governor ended and nearly two full years before the 1976 election, he announced his candidacy for the 1976 Democratic nomination in a speech before the National Press Club in Washington.

In that speech, Carter announced the major themes of his campaign: restoring public trust in government, reforming government to make it more efficient and responsive; overhauling the nation's tax and welfare systems, instituting a comprehensive national health care program and eliminating waste in the military budget.

Carter's strategy as he set out on the long, difficult road to the White House was a daring one. It was to run everywhere, both in the states that would have presidential primaries in 1976 and in the states where convention delegates would be chosen by their peers.

Carter spent most of 1975 on the road in a relentless and grueling quest for support. He planned to spend 250 days on the road, but he spent close to 300, traveling to all major cities and almost every state and often staying in the homes of supporters.

BY LATE 1975, Carter was satisfied that he was making progress, having raised nearly $750,000 and qualified for federal matching campaign funds. But his progress as measured in the all-important public opinion polls was agonizingly slow.

By year's end, Carter was still unknown by 97 per cent of the American people, and was receiving little attention, other than for the novelty of being a peanut farmer with an engaging smile who was running for president.

But on Jan. 19, 1976, Carter's long-shot campaign and his political prospects changed dramatically when he led all other candidates in the first big political event of the year, the Iowa precinct caucuses.

Although Carter won only a scant 28 per cent of the vote in Iowa, it was a major breakthrough that won him his first national headlines and media exposure and transformed him from "Jimmy Who?" to a bona fide presidential contender.

President

GERALD R. FORD, 63, Republican, is seeking election to the office of President of the United States, to which he succeeded Aug. 9, 1974, following the resignation of Richard M. Nixon. When President Ford assumed the office, the nation was suffering the worst inflation in its peacetime history, was moving into its worst recession in a generation and still was involved in the divisive Vietnam War. The faith of many people in their government had been shaken by Watergate. In the two years Ford has served as 38th President, inflation has dropped from an annual rate of 12.2 per cent to 4.6 per cent. Unemployment was cut from a peak of 8.9 per cent to about 7.5 per cent, with employment up about 3 million. The nation is at peace aboard for the first time in more than a decade, and there is a returning confidence in the White House. Seeking his first full term as President, Ford basically promises to carry on the same type of programs. His Vice Presidential running mate is Senator Robert Dole of Kansas. — X

JIMMY CARTER, 52, Democrat, governor of Georgia since 1970, previously had served eight years in the Georgia State Senate. In 1973, the Democratic National Committee asked Governor Carter to become the party's national campaign chairman for the 1974 elections. He officially became a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination on Dec. 12, 1974. He outdistanced other Democratic candidates in the primaries and was nominated by the Democratic National Convention. Carter advocated support of the Full Employment Act of 1976. He proposes reform of the national tax system, welfare reform, with substantial federal funding; creation of a federal Department of Education; a national halth insurance program; increased funding for public mass transit and housing; creation of a national consumer protection agency. He opposes deregulation of the price of "old" oil and favors putting importation of oil under govenment control. His Vice Presidential running mate is Senator Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota.

PETER CAMEJO for President and WILLIE MAE REID for Vice President are Independent candidates.

GUS HALL for President and JARVIS TYNER for Vice President are Independent candidates.

ROGER L MacBRIDE for President and DAVID P. BERGLAND for Vice President are Independent candidates.

LESTER G. MADDOX for President and WILLIAM D. DYKE for Vice President are the American Independent Party candidates.

MARGARET WRIGHT for President and BENJAMIN SPOCK for Vice President are the Peace and Freedom Party candidates.

U.S. Senate

DR. S. I. "SAM" HAYAKAWA, Republican, is most noted for halting the riots and resuming classes at San Francisco State University in 1968. He advocates stimulation of agriculture, business and industry to combat unemployment; a strong national defense; tougher crime laws; development of nuclear energy; a balanced program between environment and economics; "self-destruction" of federal programs unless re-enacted by Congress; "mutual responsibility" in foreign aid. — X

JOHN V. TUNNEY, Democrat, is seeking re-election to a second term. He has been criticized for absenteeism, but contends he does most of his work in committees. He first cosponsored, with Sen. Ted Kennedy, a national health insurance plan, but later withdrew his support. He voted against delay in production of the controversial B-1 bomber and repeal of the depletion allowance for oil companies. He voted for a $5.1-billion public works program and an increase from $160 million to nearly $280 million in President Ford's budget for solar-energy research.

State Measures

1 Provides for $500 million bond issue to provide funds for financing housing. — YES

Pro: Like the successful Cal-Vet loan program, this would increase housing for low and medium-income people without cost to taxpayers because interest charges and fees on the loans will finance the program.

Con: Financing housing should be left to private enterprise. If the loan program should fail to be self-supporting, taxpayers might end up paying off the bonds.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This measure will help alleviate a shortage of housing units for low and middle-income people without cost to taxpayers.

2 Provides $280 million for park, beach, recreational and historical preservation purposes. — NO

Pro: More park and recreation land is needed and, as property costs continue to rise, delay in acquisition could mean some land, particularly coastal property, would be lost to the public.

Con: Parks and recreation should be financed from the general fund to eliminate high interest costs. State acquisition of land removes it from the tax rolls. Operating the new facilities would be added cost, because revenue from parks and recreation covers only 30 per cent of operating expenses.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Taxpayers still are paying off the $150-million bond issue of 1964 and the $250-million issue of 1974 for park and recreation land. The new issue, when interest is added over the 20-year repayment period, would cost $456 million. Government owns much undeveloped land in California and this should be developed before buying new acreage and taking it off tax rolls.

3 Provides $25 million for financing residential energy insulation and solar heating and cooling systems. — NO

Pro: The state should encourage use of solar energy to conserve resources. State loans for insulation would help many homeowners who cannot afford conventional loans for such installation.

Con: Solar energy still is too expensive for even middle-income families. It is premature, at least, for the state to use its credit for this type of loan program.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This would be a gift of public funds to certain homeowners, which is the reason for Prop. 12 on the ballot. Because the present cost of solar energy is too high for middle-income families, even with state loans, this would be a gift of public funds to those who need it least, the well-to-do.

4 Authorizes Legislature to call for competitive bidding on contracts at the University of California. Prohibits denial of admission for race, religion or ethnic heritage. — NO

Pro: The Legislature should have authority to see that U.C. adopts bidding procedures which insure that the regents act responsibly in spending the taxpayers' money. The additional anti-discrimination clause would make state constitutional provisions more complete.

Con: Independence from political interference has enabled U.C. to develop into one of the nation's top universities. This would lessen this independence. The regents already require competitive bidding in almost all instances. The added anti-discrimination clause is unnecessary because it is covered by federal law and university policy.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This is another attempt by the Legislature to get politial control over the university. Competitive bidding is now the policy. The anti-discrimination provision is unnecessary because it is mandatory under federal law, so obviously is just an attempt to pick up additional votes.

5 Increases maximum contract rate of interest collectible by nonexempt lenders for nonpersonal, nonfamily and nonhousehold loans. — YES

Pro: This puts a more realistic ceiling on business loans, bringing more money into the state to stimulate the economy and create jobs. It keeps a ceiling on interest by tying the maximum rate to the discount rate, charged by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco on money advanced to member banks.

Con: Present constitutional provisions have protected the public against high-interest rates for 40 years. Increased borrowing costs for business would be passed along to consumers. Consumers would have difficulty getting loans because available money would go to business loans.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This makes no change in the present 10-per-cent ceiling on interest on loans for personal, family or household purposes. It applies only to business and industrial loans. The present limit is unrealistic and California businesses have difficulty getting funds because lenders prefer to lend money in states where earnings are better.

6 Extends time for governor's veto and changes effective date of statutes under specified circumstances. — YES

Pro: It is difficult for the governor to give sufficient study, in the 12 days now allowed, to the numerous bills he receives after the Legislature adjourns for its mid-session recess. This measure would extend the time to 30 days. The right of referendum is protected.

Con: The benefit of giving the governor added time to consider bills is not worth the price of confusing the referendum process. The measure also shortens the time for the public to become aware of a new law before it takes effect.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: With adequate protection of the referendum, it is a big improvement to give the governor 30 days, instead of 12, to consider bills before he has to act on them. Under present law, some bills do not become law for 12 to 14 months. This would make them effective on the Jan. 1 following the day they are signed.

Candidates and measures

7 Renames the Commission on Judicial Qualifications, authorizes it to admonish judges, expands grounds for censure, removal of judges. — YES

PRO: At present, the commission may recommend to the Supreme Court the reprimand, suspension, removal or retirement of a judge only for willful failure or inability to perform his duties. This would eliminate the "willful" requirement and make possible the handling of problems arising from age and health.

Con: There is no organized opposition.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The measure will change the name to the Commission on Judicial Performance and increase its power to monitor the performance of judges to insure that Californians get the best possible judicial system for their tax dollars.

8 Authorizes appointments of county school superintendents, establishment of joint county school boards and superintendents, by majority vote. — YES

Pro: Would give voters in the 47 general-law counties the option of having the county superintendent of schools elected or appointed, as now is the case in the 11 charter counties. They now must be elected. Voters in small adjoining counties also would have the option of combining two or more county boards.

Con: Elected superintendents can be voted out of office for incompetency; voters would have less control over an appointed superintendent. If county boards were merged, voters might have to travel long distances to attend meetings.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Charter counties such as Los Angeles County have the option of appointing or electing county school superintendents. General-law counties, such as Orange County, should have the same choice. The decision would be made by majority vote of the citizens.

9 Requires legislative confirmation of the governor's appointees in state constitutional offices. — YES

Pro: The offices of lieutenant governor, secretary of state, controller, treasurer, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction and members of the Board of Equalization normally are filled by election. If a vacancy occurs, the governor appoints a successor. Requiring the Legislature to confirm such appointments would widen the scope of review of the appointee.

Con: The governor is elected as the people's representative to fill such vacancies when necessary. This measure would hinder his responsibilities and could cause delays in filling vacancies.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Because these top state offices usually are filled by election, it is logical to require that appointments to fill a vacancy be considered by as many elected representatives as possible. A review by the state's senators and assemblymen would provide greater public input than by just one man, the governor.

10 Prohibits a property tax, without voter approval, in a new district that includes all or portions of two or more counties. — YES

Pro: Would protect property taxpayers from imposition of a tax for a special, multicounty district without their approval. Such districts usually are created by the Legislature which, under present law, could waive a vote on a maximum tax rate for the district.

Con: This would make it more difficult to create and finance a necessary special district. It also is inconsistent, because the Legislature still could create a special district within one county, set a tax rate and waive the requirement for voter approval.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This measure would return to the taxpayers significant control over property taxes for certain special districts.

11 Requires the Legislature to adjust ratios to maintain equality between secured and unsecured property. — YES

Pro: In any year the assessment ratio is changed, such as from the present 25 per cent to 100 per cent, the Legislature can adjust the tax rate on secured property, land and buildings, to maintain the same tax levy. This proposition would make possible a similar adjustment on unsecured, or personal, property.

Con: This does not take into account the possibility of establishment of different assessment rates for business and residential property.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This will not increase or shift anyone's property taxes. It merely will make possible the adjustment of tax rates on both secured and unsecured property in any year in which the assessment ratio is changed.

12 Would authorize the Legislature to establish a loan program as described in Prop. 13. — NO

Pro: Would make possible a state program to stimulate a market, through low-interest loans, for solar heating and cooling and energy-saving insulation programs.

Con: The state constitution prohibits the Legislature from giving public funds to aid any person or corporation. This measure would permit such gifts for solar energy, under a program to be established if Proposition 3 is approved.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The prohibition against gifts of public funds is a good one, and the low-interest loans for solar heating and cooling and special insulation would be a gift to people who need it least, the well-to-do. Low and moderate-income families cannot afford such frills, even with low-interest loans.

13 Establishes a state commission to license and regulate the conduct of wagering on greyhound dog races. — NO

Pro: The state allows betting on horse races; why not on dog races? The initiative has safeguards to insure humane treatment of the dogs. The racing would provide new revenue for state and local governments and for specified programs to aid children, senior citizens and medical research.

Con: Gambling is detrimental to society and the state should not legalize more. Crime has always been associated with gambling, and greyhound racing would increase police problems. The activity can be cruel and inhumane to the dogs. Provisions of the bill virtually give its promoters monopoly on the multimillion-dollar gambling operation.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This is an attempt by a group of promoters, headed by George G. Hardie, to get a monopoly on a lucrative gambling empire. Law enforcement officers throughout the state say the gambling would be "an open invitation to organized crime." The charitable groups supposed to benefit from the revenue actually would get only a small part of the huge profits; the promoters would get most of the money. Humane groups say that, despite safeguards, it almost is inevitable that the animals will be mistreated.

14 Reenacts the Agricultural Labor Relations Act of 1975, with amendments, and requires the Legislature to implement it. — NO

Pro: The measure is needed to protect the rights of farm workers to vote for their representation in labor negotiations. The "access rule" does not violate private property rights, and has been upheld by the Supreme Court. The state legislative counsel has ruled the Legislature would retain final power over financing.

Con: Farm workers already have the right to vote, by secret ballot, for labor-union representation under the Agricultural Labor Relations Act adopted by the Legislature in 1975. Because Prop. 14 is an initiative, it can only be changed by another statewide vote of the people. If the Legislature wanted to make even the most minor change in the law to iron out a problem in its operation, it could not do so. The proposition requires the Legislature to appropriate funds "as may be necessary" to the ALRB, giving a "blank check" to a board which overspent its 1975-76 budget in less than six months.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: All of the rights demanded by the United Farm Workers already are provided by the existing Agricultural Labor Relations Act. Prop. 14 is unecessary and would freeze into law, which could only be changed by another statewide vote, provisions which must be kept flexible so that the Legislature can, if necessary, adopt amendments to make it workable and fair to farm workers, growers and the public.

15 Adds two public members to the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners and increases educational and licensing requirements. — YES

Pro: Gives consumers a direct voice in health matters involving chiropractic, insures that doctors of chiropractic continue to meet high standards of qualification, and eliminates duplication of testing.

CON: Would be an additional burden on individuals seeking to practice chiropractic in California and would not necessarily make them better chiropractors.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This will increase the standards for chiropractors in California and give consumers a direct voice in matters pertaining to the profession. The proposition is supported by state and national chiropractic associations and by the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

County Measures

A To amend the county charter, creating an elected mayor and giving him executive powers now vested in the Board of Supervisors. — NO

Pro: A countywide elected mayor would be a check on uncontrolled spending by the supervisors. The present system encourages each supervisor to represent only his own district, not the county as a whole, and the mayor would represent all of the people. Limits would be placed on the number of staff members for the mayor and the supervisors.

Con: A county mayor would be the most powerful financial figure in California and would dominate the supervisors by his power to prepare the budget and control construction contracts, lease awards, architectural assignments and zoning arrangements. The mayor could make in private most of the decisions the supervisors now make at public meetings.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Transfer of executive powers from supervisors to mayor would take away virtually all of their responsibilities. They would be left with legislative and judicial functions but, at county level, there are few such functions. The mayor, as an individual, would not be subject to the Brown Act, which requires that public business be conducted at public meetings.

B To amend the charter to provide for an increase in the number of supervisors from five to nine. — NO

Pro: Today, each supervisor represents a population of more than 1.4 million, more than that of 15 states. Supervisors' deputies would be cut from high of 17 to a maximum of five each.

Con: A larger legislative body will increase costs and decrease the responsibility of individual supervisors. In the unincorporated areas, which the supervisors serve directly, each supervisor represents only about 200,000 persons. The others live in cities.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Although the proposition sets an initial limit on deputies, their number can be increased later. The larger board eventually will mean greater cost. The proposition includes no plan for redistricting. Districts could be gerrymandered so cities like Long Beach have minimum representation on the board and downtown Los Angeles interests dominate it.

C To authorize $40 million in bonds to help finance construction of a cancer hospital and research institute. — YES

Pro: Los Angeles County has the largest urban population in the world without a cancer hospital and research institute. The county now has outstanding general obligation bonds totaling only $25 million, which is low for its financial capacity.

Con: There already are thousands of cancer research organizations and another is not needed. Total cost, including interest, would be $64 million, plus annual costs of operating the facility.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Each year, Los Angeles County records more than 22,000 new cases of cancer. The hospital and research institute, to which the federal government and the Unversity of Southern California Medical School also would contribute funds, would help make progress in the treatment of the disease.

D To provide that reimbursement for travel expenses of county employes in performance of their duties be established by ordinance, rather than by charter provision. — YES

Pro: Because of such charter provisions, the county is placed at a disadvantage when it begins bargaining with employe organizations. The clause will cost the county millions of dollars in future years if not removed from the charter.

Con: The charter specifically defines travel reimbursement as a protection for employes and the provision should not be removed. It would be a mistake to put such decisions in the hands of the supervisors.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The charter provides that employes be reimbursed for "actual, necessary expenses." Supervisors set a maximum uniform price for lodging and meals, but transportation is paid at a per-mile rate. Employe unions recently won a law suit on their contention that the reimbursement did not met the charter provision. Unions use the charter provision as the starting "base" for collective bargining on travel reimbursement.

E (This proposition is on the ballot only in unincorporated areas.) To permit the County Housing Authority to construct or acquire, with state and federal funds, up to 10,000 low-income dwelling units for senior citizens. — YES

Pro: Decent low-rent housing for the elderly poor is needed and can be provided at no increase in local taxes.

CON: Low-rent housing is not low-cost housing, and taxpayers would have to pay for this high-cost housing, which rents for less than it costs.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The County Department of Community Development estimates there are more than 250,000 senior citizens in the unincorporated areas who would qualify for this housing, and that 170,000 additional units are needed. The program is similar to the successful Long Beach Housing Authority program.

F To create a new county, Canyon County, from 761 square miles at the northwest corner of Los Angeles County. — YES

Pro: County officials estimate it costs taxpayers $10 million annually to deliver services to this outlying area. This expense would stop if Canyon County is established.

Con: Los Angeles County will lose $14.7 million in assets, and its taxpayers will have to subsidize the new county by as much a $15.5 million.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Voters in the area petitioned for the new county. The proposition will have to get majority votes in both the area of the new county and the whole of Los Angeles County as it now exists. If voters in an area want to form a new county, they should have that right.

Long Beach Measures

X To provide that members of the City Council be elected only by voters of the district to be represented. — NO

Pro: District elections would make council members more responsive to voters in their district, help minimize influence of big-money interests and the local newspaper, reduce the cost of election campaigns and make the office more available to voters.

Con: The present system, nominating council members by district and electing them citywide, makes them responsive to both their district and the city as a whole. Problems facing City Hall today cross district lines and are citywide in nature. Voters pay taxes for the city as a whole, and should be able to vote for all representatives who decide how that money is spent.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Voters now can vote for or against all nine members of the City Council. If this proposition is adopted, they will be able to vote for only one council member, once every four years. Candidates who have been active in civic affairs are well known and need not spend a large amount of money to be elected. Endorsement by the newspaper or support by so-called "big money interests" does not mean automatic election, as present council members know.

Z To remove from the city charter one section referring to a "Department of Public Welfare," which was abolished by city voters in 1960. — YES

Pro: This is simply a "housekeeping" change to remove from the charter an obsolete section and to bring the charter into conformance with state law.

Con: No arguments were filed.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: State law assigns public welfare as a reponsibility of the county. The section to be deleted inadvertantly was left in the city charter when voters in 1960 approved deletion of all other references to a city Department of Public Welfare.

Pros and Cons of Proposition X

These Pros and Cons are presented as part of the Voter Service Program of the League of Women Voters of Long Beach Area. They have been compiled from arguments supplied by proponents and opponents of the various ballot measures. The League does not judge the merits of the arguments nor guarantee their validity.

Proposition X

The Long Beach City Charter now provides for City Council members to be nominated by district in a primary election and then elected citywide in a general election.

The proposed amendment would require that council members be elected only by the voters in their district. In the primary election, if any one candidate received more than 50 per cent of the votes cast in the district, he/she would be elected. In districts where no one candidate received more than 50 per cent of the primary vote, there would be a run-off, within the district, of the two receiving the highest number of votes.

Pro

1. District elections would make council members more responsive to the voters in their district.
2. District elections could help minimize the influence of the big money interests and the local newspaper by eliminating the expense of a citywide campaign. People known in their district could run for council without extensive financial backing.
3. Local government is supposed to be the level closest and most available to the neighborhood and the individual citizen. District elections would increase this availablility.
4. With district-elected council persons representing and working for various areas of the city, developments which should benefit all taxpayers might be dispersed more evenly, rather than being concentated in the geographically small downtown area.
5. State and national representatives, elected by district, are expected to consider both their district's concerns and those of the state or country as a whole. Voters should expect the same principle from council persons.

Con

1. The present election system encourages council members to be responsive to the district where they are nominated, while requiring them to be responsive to citywide concerns.
2. Council members are not presently controlled by special interests because they are accountble to both their districts and the voters of the entire city. Because of the relatively manageable size of the city, unduly large amounts of money are not necesssary for a citywide campaign, especially if a candidate has been involved in community activitiees and is familiar to many voters.
3. Problems facing City Hall today cross district lines and need to be addressed on a citywide basis for the good of the entire community.
4. Since voters pay taxes for the city as a whole, they also should be able to vote for all the representatives who decide how those monies are spent.
5. District representation would encourage "favor trading" among council members whose primary concern would be their particular neighborhoods. It would discourage a cooperative working spirit for the good of the city as a whole.

Proposition Z

This would remove from the charter references to the "Department of Public Welfare" which was deleted in 1960 by a vote of the people.

Pro

This is simply a "housekeeping" change to remove inappropriate references and bring the charter into conformance with state law.

Con

No arguments filed.

Congress, State Senate and Assembly candidates

31st Congressional

U.S. Rep. Charles H. Wilson, 59, D-Hawthorne, who has served as congressman from the 31st District since 1962, is unopposed for reelection.

In 1954 Wilson was elected to the State Legislature as assemblyman from the 66th District. He served in that office until elected congressman. His committee assignments include Armed Services, Post Office and Civil Service; chairman subcommittee on Postal Facilities, Mail and Labor Management.

The 31st Congressional District serves the cities of Compton, Gardena, Hawthorne, Lawndale, Lynwood, Paramount, most of north Torrance, sections of Los Angeles City and some unincorporated areas.

The Democratic registration is 112,563 and there are 29,121 registered Republicans.

32nd Congressional

Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Harbor City, 63, a former mayor of Hawthorne, an assemblyman from 1943-51 and lieutenant governor from 1958-67, seeks a fifth term in Congress and is challenged by Republican Clifford Young, 30.

Young, of Carson, is president of Stewart Lithograph Inc., of Los Angeles. He is a graduate of California Baptist College, Riverside, where he was student body president. He is a formermember of the Republican State Central Committee and was a deputy campaign director in 1974 for the Houston Flournoy gubernatorial campaign.

Anderson is a member of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee (chairman of its Aviation subcommittee) and the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

The 32nd District includes the west portion of Long Beach, all of Harbor City, Lomita, San Pedro and Wilmington and portions of Carson, Torrance, Compton and Los Angeles and the islands of San Clemente and Santa Catalina. The Democratic registration advantage over Republicans is 64.4 to 28.2 per cent.

33rd Congressional

Rep. Delwin (Del) M. Clawson, 62, R-Downey, is being challenged for his seat as U.S. representative from the 33rd District by Democrat Ted Snyder, 52, of Whittier, director of community relations at Rio Hondo College.

The 33rd Congressional District encompasses a major part of Cerritos, Downey, Diamond Bar, East Whitter, Hacienda Heights, La Habra Heights, La Mirada, Norwalk, Santa Fe Springs, Whittier, and sections of Pomona and Walnut. Approximately 54 per cent of the voters in the district are Democrats and 41 per cent Republicans.

Clawson was elected to Congress in a special election in 1963 and was reelected each term since.

Democrat Snyder is a 21-year resident of the district. In addition to his public relation position at Rio Hondo College, he teaches an evening class in U.S. government at the college.

Registered voters in the district number 119,902 Democrats and 86,715 Republicans.

34th Congressional

First term Democratic incumbent Mark Hannaford, 51, is opposed by Republican Dan Lungren, 30, a Long Beach lawyer.

Hannaford is a member of Banking, Currency and Housing and the Veterans Affairs Committees of Congress and is vice chairman of the group of 75 members elected in 1974. He was an associate professor of political science at Long Beach City College from 1966 to 1974, during which years he was also a Lakewood councilman. He was mayor of Lakewood from 1968-70 and from 1972-74. He has a master of arts degree from Ball State University and was a John Hay fellow at Yale.

Lungren, member of a Long Beach law firm, was a 1968 honors graduate of the University of Notre Dame, studied law at USC and received his J.D. degree from Georgetown University Law Center. He served on the Washington staffs of former Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., and Sen. Bill Brock, R-Tenn. He was a special assistant to the cochairman of the Republican National Committee and was a political consultant to former HEW Secretary Robert Finch.

The 34th District includes East Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill, Hawaiian Gardens, Artesia, Bellflower, Cerritos and, in Orange County, Rossmoor, Seal Beach and parts of Westminster and Huntington Beach. Registration: Democrats, 58.2 per cent; Republicans, 35.4 per cent.

38th Congressional

Rep. Jerry M. Patterson, 40, former mayor of Santa Ana, is seeking his second term in the U.S. Congress from Orange County's 38th District, and is opposed by James O. (Jim) Combs, 49, a minister and business man.

Patterson, an attorney who was graduated from Long Beach State University in 1960 and who won his law degree in 1966 at USC, serves the Banking, Currency and Housing Committee and the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee in the House. He is a Democrat.

Combs, who lives at Costa Mesa and who has served as secretary-treasurer of the Continental Institutional Corporation in Long Beach, has had pastorates in Baptist churches in San Antonio, City and Joplin, Mo., and in Costa Mesa. He also was an instructor at the Christian Heritage College at Anaheim. He is a Republican.

Registration in the district includes 120,435 Democrats and 76,305 Republicans.

27th State Senate

A Republican stalwart and a Democratic maverick are squared off in the 27th Senatorial District from which Sen. Robert Stevens is retiring.

Republican Robert G. Beverly was a Manhattan Beach city councilman before being elected to the Assembly in a 1967 special election. Beverly, who gave up his post as Assembly minority leader when he entered the Senate race, has authored more than 130 bills that have become law, specializing in the fields of criminal justice reform, tax relief, and environmental protection.

Democrat James Q. Wedworth is already in the Senate but no longer has a district to call his own. He moved out of the remains of his former district when reapportionment gave most of it, including Hawthorne where he had been mayor, to Sen. Ralph Dills, D-Gardena. Wedworth is the co-author of the Wedworth-Townsend Act of 1970, which authorized the paramedic program.

The district includes the Wilmington-San Pedro area, Lomita, Torrance, Redondo Beach, Hermosa Beach, El Segundo and all four Palos Verdes Peninsula cities.

There are 126,191 registered Democrats and 96,980 Republicans in the district.

31st State Senate

Boundaries of the new 31st Senate District, apportioned in 1974, encompass all of Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill, Hawaiian Gardens and parts of Carson and Dominguez.

Because of reapportionment it is an open district but State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, seeks to return to the Senate under the new number. The new district includes a part of his former 37th District.

He is opposed by Long Beach Councilwoman Renee Simon, 48, the Democratic nominee. Mrs. Simon was elected to the council in 1972, reelected in 1975.

Deukmejian, 48, was elected to the Assembly in 1962, to the Senate in 1966. He is a member of Judiciary, Government Organization, Revenue and Taxation and Business and Professions Committees, the California Job Development Board and the Joint Audit Committee. He is chairman of the Narcotics Trafficking subcommittee of Judiciary. He is Republican floor leader of the Senate.

District registration: Democrats, 60.1 per cent; Republicans, 33.3 per cent.

33rd State Senate

Vying for the State Senate seat in the newly created 33rd Senate District are William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights, who is currently serving as assemblyman from the 64th District and Betty Wilson, Democrat, who is now serving her fourth term as mayor of Santa Fe Springs.

Campbell, now in the fourth term in the State Assembly, was first elected in 1966 in an overwhelming Democratic district. A former school administrator, he is a member of the Assembly Education Committee, the Government Organization and Housing and Community Development Committees. He is also chairman of the Assembly Select Committee on Fire Services.

Mrs. Wilson was elected as the first woman mayor in Los Angeles County in 1957 when Santa Fe Springs voted to incorporate. She was the first woman chairperson of the committee of National League of Cities, is listed in "Outstanding Civic Leaders of America, and is the winner of Peace Dollar — the highest award presented by People to People International Program.

The new 33rd Senatorial District includes Diamond Bar, Walnut, West Covina, Rowland Heights, Hacienda Heights, La Habra, Whittier, La Mirada, Norwalk, Downey, Artesia, Santa Fe Springs and Cerritos.

The latest voter registration count in the new district included 127,838 Democrats and 92,010 Republicans.

37th State Senate

In the newly created 37th State Senate District, Democrat Assemblyman Paul B. Carpenter, now representing the 71st District, is opposed by Republican Loran Norton of Santa Ana.

Carpenter, a 48-year-old Cypress resident, holds a Ph.D. degree in experimental psychology and is a former teacher in the California State College system. He is presently a member of the Education Committee and vice chairman of the Human Resources Commimttee.

Norton, who uses the nickname "Kojak" in his campaign literature, is a former Santa Ana police lieutenant and a former alternate member of the California Coastal Commission.

The candidates

52nd Assembly

Democrat Vincent Thomas of San Pedro, the "dean" of the Assembly with 36 years seniority, is being challenged by Torrance Republican Verna Mattox. Also in the race is Ida Bader of Lomita for the American Independent Party.

Thomas is chairman of the Assembly Intergovernmental Relations Committee and a member of the committees on Human Resources and on Labor Relations; the permanent subcommittee on employment and economic development; and the Pacific Marine Fisheries Commission.

Mrs. Mattox has held no previous elective office, although she ran for the Torrance City Council two years ago. She has been active in party circles since 1952.

The district includes all of San Pedro, Wilmington, Harbor City and Lomita, Catalina and San Clemente islands, the eastern two-thirds of Torrance, part of Rancho Palos Verdes, and the unincorporated area known as West Carson.

Registered voters include 60,687 Democrats and 31,604 Republicans.

53rd Assembly

Republican Paul Bannai, the only Nisei member of the Legislature, has won two close elections (the latest by 365 votes) in this heavily Democratic district where he is being challenged by Cindy Wear, who won the three-way contest in the Democratic primary by only five votes.

Bannai is a member of the Assembly committees on Finance, Insurance and Commerce; the Judiciary; and Revenue and Taxation. He also serves on the Commission for Economic Development, Joint Legislative Committee on Job Development, and the Commission of the Californias.

Ms. Wear is making her first bid for elective office, although she has been a field consultant to Sen. Alan Cranston and worked at the state Democratic Convention for the selection of former assmblyman Charles T. Manatt as party chairman.

The district consists of the northern and eastern half of Carson, three county unincorporated areas including Lennox, and the cities of Gardena, Hawthorne, and Lawndale.

Registration includes 61,524 Democrats and 20,339 Republican voters.

54th Assembly

Assemblyman Frank E. Vicencia, 45, D-Bellflower and 54th District representative in the State Legislature, is being opposed by Republican Richard G. Coxson, 48, of Bellflower.

The 54th Assembly District includes the cities of Bellflower, Paramount, Compton, Lynwood and unincorporated Willowbrook. Approximatly 77 per cent of the district's registered voters are Democrats and 19 per cent Republicans.

Vicencia, a native of the Southland, operated a dairy supply business and later a public relations firm before he was elected to the State Legislature in 1974.

Coxson was born in Chicago, Ill., graduated from Augustana Academy at Canton, S.D., and earned his B.A. degree in math and business administration at Luther College in Decorah, Iowa. Coxson and his wife Ferne and eight children have resided in the Bellflower area for the past 20 years.

There are 61,664 registered Democrats and 13,516 registered Republicans in the district.

57th Assembly

Assemblyman Mike Cullen, 49, is seeking a sixth term. His Republican opponent is Edd Tuttle, 29, member of a family-owned photography business in Bixby Knolls.

Cullen received his B.A. degree from George Washington University and his law degree from Yale. He is chairman of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee, vice chairman of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee and a member of Assembly Committees on Governmental Organization, Intergovernmental Relations and Local Government.

Tuttle received his AA degree at Long Beach City College and attended UCLA and Chico State College. He is a parttime teacher at City College.

The district includes West Long Beach, Carson and Dominguez. Registration: Democrats, 63.5 per cent; Republicans, 29.8 per cent.

58th Assembly

Assemblyman Fred Chel, 46, D-Long Beach, is seeking his second term. He is opposed by Republican Dale Dykema, 46, owner of Dykema Travel, Lakewood.

63rd Assembly

Republican Assemblyman Bob McLennan, 61, who has represented the 63rd Assembly District since 1963, is opposed by a Cerritos business executive, Democrat Bruce Young.

The 61-year-old McLennan, who is the only medical doctor in the California Legislature, is a member of the Assembly committees on Election and Reapportionment, Health and Intergovernmental Relations.

Young, a 30-year-old marketing director for A&W Root Beer, is a member of the ABC School District board of trustees.

71st Assembly

Orange County's newly realigned 71st Assembly District, which does not have an incumbent running, will be wide open for a battle between Chet Wray of Westminster and Phil Seitz of Anaheim.

Wray, 53, a Democrat long active in party politics, was born in Searcy, Ark., and got his early education there.

He has been with General Motors for 23 years, mostly in quality control.

Seitz, 31, is a Republican; he served as a field representative for Sen. Dennis Carpenter in 1971 and then for Assemblyman Robert Badham.

The 71st Assembly District includes Buena Park, Cypress, west Anaheim, Stanton, Westminster, Los Alamitos, Rossmoor, west Garden Grove, and parts of Fountain Valley and Huntington Beach.

The district has 68,932 registered Democrats and 44,904 Republicans.

73rd Assembly

Republican Assemblyman Robert H. Burke, who has served in the Assembly since 1966, is again being challenged in the 73rd Assembly District by Democrat Dennis Mangers, the man who almost defeated him in 1974.

Burke, a 54-year-old engineering graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, is vice chairman of the Rules Committee and a member of the Ways and Means and Transportation Committees.

Mangers, a 36-year-old vice president of the American Learning Corporation of Long Beach, lost the 1974 election to Burke by the narrow margin of 1,620 votes.

9. You'll lose your right to vote on all nine City Council members (You'll be allowed to vote for only one.)
8. You'll lose millions of your tax dollars squandered by officials who don't have to be responsible to you. (Isn't your tax bill high enough now?)
7. You'll lose when "ward" politics make Long Beach more susceptible to the corruption you want to stop. (Ward politics won't solve our city's problems.)
6. You'll lose when city problems are answered by political trade-offs between council members from each "ward." (We can't afford this kind of "wheeling and dealing" at public expense.)
5. You'll lose when council members no longer are answerable both to voters in their districts and city-wide. (If you're dissatisfied with elected officials, get rid of them, not your right to elect them.)
4. You'll lose the city-wide voting protection against the danger of "big money" buying elections. (It's easier for special interests to "buy" a district than the whole city.)
3. You'll lose your right to recall all nine City Council members. (You'll be allowed to vote recall of only one.)
2. You'll lose your opportunity to vote for strong, competent leaders you respect in other districts. (And you'll lose the right to vote against candidates you may distrust or disfavor.)
1. You'll lose the ability to block projects detrimental to your district. (Prop. X invites more noise, pollution, etc.)

County Propositions A and B are vital and complex issues

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

Everyone agrees that passage of Proposition A — calling for creation of an elected county mayor — will bring about dramatic changes in the present form of county government.

But the almost impossible question for voters to decide is whether those changes will be better or worse for the taxpayer.

And, to compound, or confound, the issue, voters also are being asked to consider expanding the Board of Supervisors from five to nine members under Proposition B.

The two measures are separate. Expansion of the board would become effective only if voters approve creation of the County Mayor.

BUT THOUGH they are separated on the ballot, the two issues are in reality integrally intertwined.

For many years Supervisor Kenneth Hahn tried to initiate a ballot measure aimed at creating a separation of powers by way of electing a County Mayor.

Under the present form of government the five supervisors, elected by district, administer the executive, legislative and quasi-judicial functions. Hahn's argument has been that a separation of powers is necessary to obtain a system of checks and balances as exists in most traditional forms of government in America.

Hahn's many efforts to get the issue on the ballot failed this year when the concept was boosted by a report from the public commission on county government, working under the aegis of the county bar association on a Haynes Foundation grant.

WHERE HAHN'S arguments failed in the past the commission's proposal caught on like wildfire and were widely touted as the answer to the economic and efficiency problems facing the county.

One of the key questions facing voters is: If the county mayor proposal was not considered attractive enough in past years to make the ballot, what has changed to make the proposal viable in 1976?

Outside of the boost from the commission's report and the attendant support from many agencies plus a shift in philosophy in the Board of Supervisors, no other answer is apparent.

But even if all the arguments in favor of a County Mayor were acceptable the question of expanding the Board of Supervisors appears to redound against the concept.

SIGNIFICANTLY, many of those supporting the county mayor concept, including one of its main backers, Supervisor Pete Schabarum, are not in favor of board expansion.

Proponents of the County Mayor have often used the argument that the elected executive is necessary to relieve supervisors of the vast amount of work they are now saddled with by being the executive-legislative quasi-judicial arm of government.

Opponents however seize on this to say that if supervisors' workloads are significantly reduced there is a strong argument to either reduce the size of the board or cut their $49,000 annual salaries to a level commensurate with their lesser duties.

Proponents also have argued that the new form of government would reduce county costsor two reasons: One the give-and-take of a mayor's veto power over budget appropriations; the second that the charter amendment would limit the size of professional staffs for both the mayor and the Board of Supervisors.

OPPONENTS counter this by saying an increased layer of government usually translates into increased costs and they express the doubt that staff sizes will be limited for very long.

If Proposition A passes, the new mayor would first be elected in November 1978. He would become responsible for the executive and administrative functions of government, including preparation of the annual budget and direct responsibility for collective bargaining with county employes.

Supervisors would have to authorize expenditure of all county funds, and would set the property tax rate. The mayor would be able to veto or reduce appropriation items which then would require a two-thirds vote of the board to be overridden.

The mayor would appoint all members of boards, commissions and committees as well as most department heads. Thes appointments all would be subject to approval by the Board of Supervisors.

The mayor may appoint his own seven deputies without confirmation by the board, but the assistant county mayor appointment must be confirmed.

If Proposition B is approved along with Proposition A, the other four supervisors would not be elected until 1980.

Proponents have argued that with only five supervisors the representation ratio is one board member for 1.4 million people. Expansion is necessary to allow for better representation (nine supervisors would each represent about 750,000) and to allow for minority representation on the board.

Opponents counter by pointing out the mayor would represent seven million people — which in terms of funding and provision of services leads the individual taxpayer with even less say in government.

NEW CAR SHOW '77

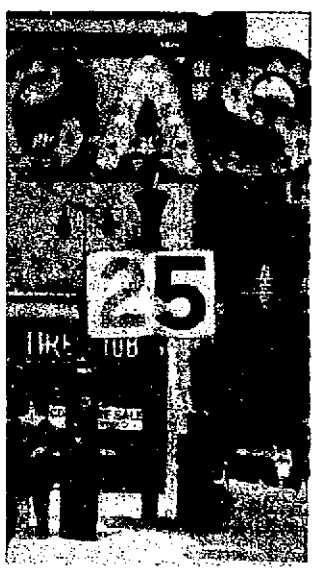

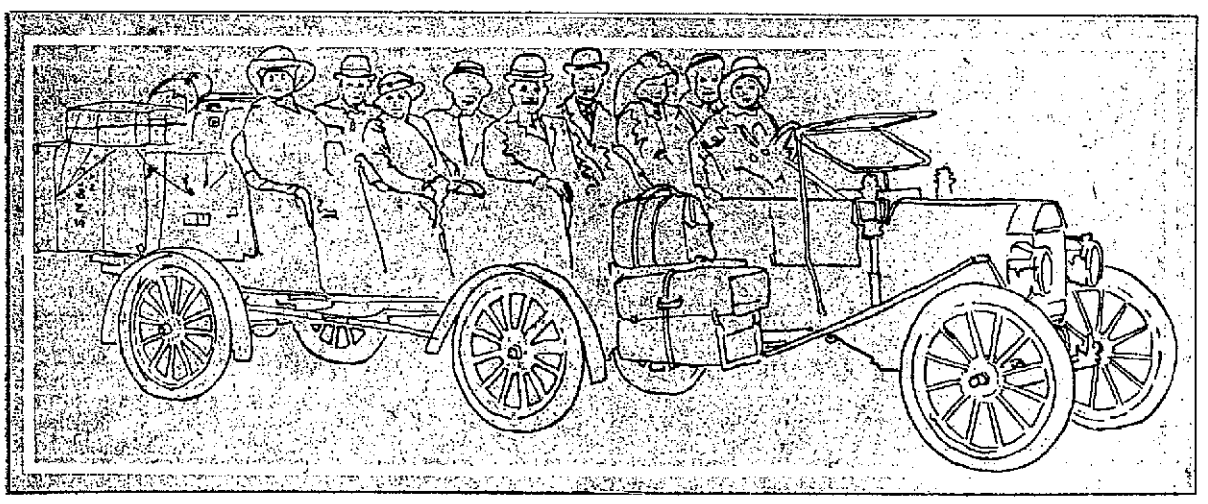

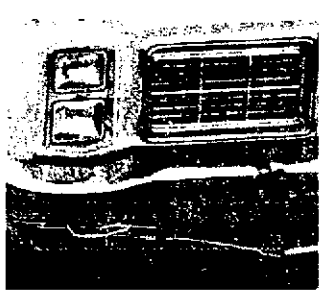

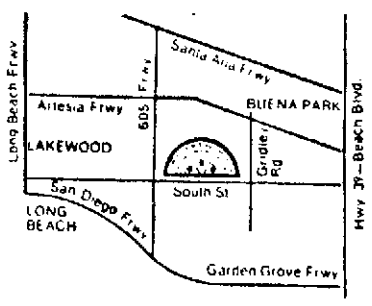

NOV. 1-7

Don't travel all over Southern California, see the new 1977 models under one roof. Park free and browse leisurely in air-conditioned comfort while viewing over 100 new cars. Sports cars, standard cars, imports, compacts, mini, midi and maxis . . . They're all here. Monday, November 1 through Sunday, November 7 at "The Mall for All Seasons."

Los Cerritos Center

605 Frwy. at SOUTH ST., CERRITOS

Auto show set at Cerritos Center

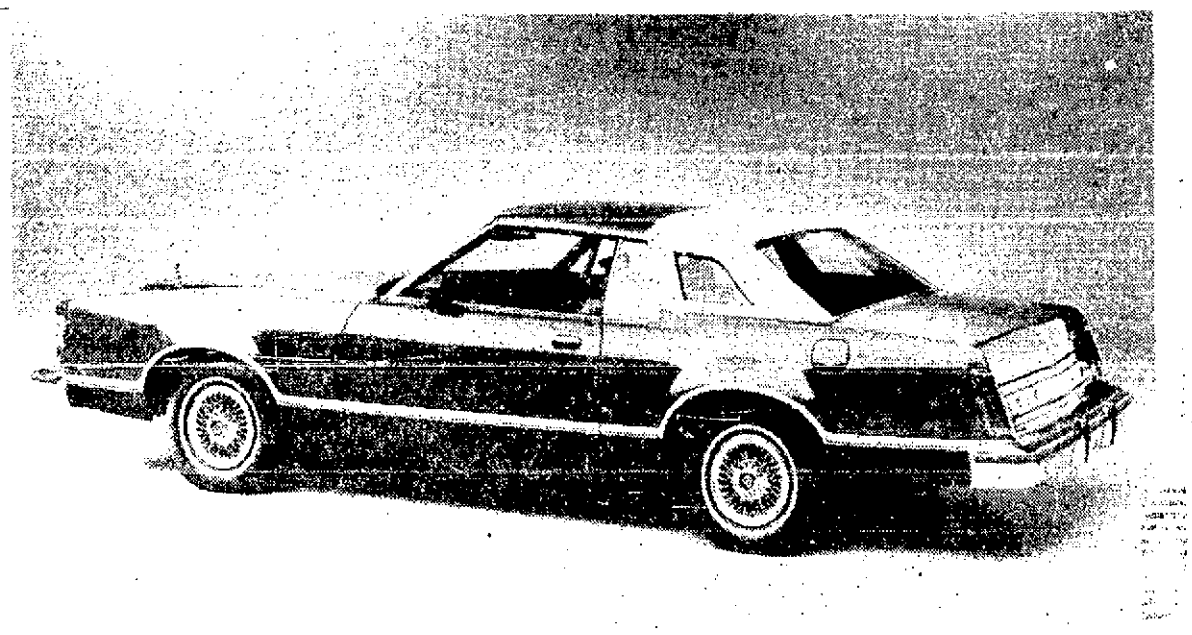

Over 200 cars and their exhibitors will be featured at the Fifth Annual Los Cerritos Center New Car Show Monday through next Sunday, Nov. 1-7. The show, which has been an annual event at the Center since 1972, will showcase the entire spectrum of the 1977 line of domestic and foreign cars.

The show has become a popular concept in exhibiting automobiles by highlighting the full range of next year's models under one roof for prospective buyers to examine at their leisure.

Ms. Pat McGrath, Advertising Director for the center said, "When we first started the show five years ago, it was an almost unheard of method for displaying the upcoming models in that it didn't cost the public anything to see the show and they were all in one place.

"However, it was such a tremendous success with the dealers and the public that we've made it an annual feature for the benefit of the public who does not want to travel all over the Southland looking over the new car models."

The seven-day show will be viewed by an estimated quarter of a million spectators who travel from all over Southern California to see the new line of imported and American model cars.

A new sporty, two-door model of the Thunderbird is among the multiple choice offerings from Ford for 1977.

Thunderbird takes off in new direction

Thunderbird, the famed and prestigious Ford Motor Company product that created the personal luxury-car market, takes off for 1977 in a new direction, in a new size and with a new, lower price tag.

Built on a 114-inch wheelbase, it is a mid-size car that retains many of the traditional Thunderbird styling touches that more than a million owners and millions of admirers have come to know over a period of 21 years.

The new Thunderbird is slimmer and sleeker and will expand its reach to compete in the upper end of the intermediate segment of the market when introduced this fall.

"We expect the 1977 Thunderbird to be the high-flyer in the intermediate segment," William P. Benton, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager, said. "For a mid-size price, it offers good looks, good handling, a quiet, smooth ride and high levels of standard equipment."

The appearance of the 1977 Thunderbird is spotlighted by a unique wrapover roof treatment, featuring beveled glass opera windows in the center pillars. Other distinctive features include a chrome-plated grille, hidden headlamps and wall-to-wall taillamps.

Thunderbird emblems are placed tastefully on the opera windows, the taillamps, the hood ornament and the wheel covers. The Thunderbird script is on the left door of the hidden headlamps and on the trunk lid.

Standard equipment on the 1977 Thunderbird includes:

—A 302 CID eight-cylinder engine and automatic transmission.

—Power steering.

—Power front disc brakes.

—A nimble handling suspension with a rear stabilizer bar.

—An Aeronutronic Ford AM radio (customer may delete).

—An extended-range 26.5-gallon fuel tank.

—An illuminated electric clock.

—A dual note horn.

Also included as standard features are functional fender louvers, drip moldings, door-belt moldings, roof wrapover moldings, rocker panel and wheellip moldings and full-wheel covers.

Sixteen exterior paint colors are offered for the 1977 Thunderbird. New vinyl roof colors are rose, dove grey and chamois, increasing the total to 12.

On the inside, comfort is accented by elegance and luxury.

—A new five-pod instrument panel features European-type graphics and woodgrain applique.

—Standard bench seats and optional split bench and bucket seats have handsome new sew styles.

—The quarter trim panels are "coved" for maximum rear-seat elbow room.

—Seven interior trim colors include the new dove grey and chamois.

To heighten appeal and retain Thunderbird's traditionally high levels of interior comfort, luxury and elegance, an interior Decor Group is available. It includes split bench seats with a manual passenger recliner for bucket seats with a console at no extra charge), cut-pile carpeting, decor door trim panels, color-keyed deluxe belts, quarter trim panel armrest pads and a passenger visor vanity mirror.

An optional exterior Decor Group includes a vinyl roof, dual remote-control sport mirrors, dual accent stripes and styled road wheels.

Major options available to the Thunderbird buyer include automatic temperature control air conditioning, fingertip speed control, power side windows, six-way power seats, a power moonroof, a vinyl roof, a new illuminated entry system, an AM/FM "search" radio and an AM/FM stereo radio with Quad-8 tape player.

Powertrain options include a 351 CID two-barrel or 400 CID two-barrel eight-cylinder engine.

Olds chassis features

Oldsmobile's redesigned family-sized Delta Eighty-Eights and Ninety-Eights include a number of chassis changes. Following are highlights of some of the main changes for 1977:

Frame: The front, center and rear frame rails plus the front-engine crossmember have increased section size to provide equivalent structure with reduced weight by more efficient use of material. The deeper center side rails are below the converter and provide added protection to the converter.

The front torque box has been extended rearward to provide a mounting surface for the transmission crossmember. This also improves the structure and reduces the weight of the transmission crossmember.

The front suspension has been redesigned to improve ride isolation and to optimize ride and handling characteristics. The front ride travel has been increased and uses longer springs with a lower operating stress. Spring rates are reduced and matched with new shock absorber valving to maintain big car ride feel.

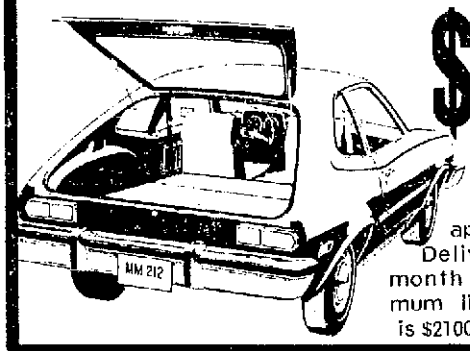

Rear Suspension: The new rear suspension is a conventional four-link design. It has increased ride travel and uses longer, lower rate springs to reduce stress and to maintain a soft ride.

A TRADITION CONTINUES

America's No. 1 sports car, the Datsun 280-Z, retains its overall configuration for 1977, but there are 18 engineering and styling changes from stem to stern.

Five-speed gearbox on Datsun 280-Z

The 1977 edition of Datsun's 280-Z sports car is now on sale with more engineering improvements and styling refinements than any of its predecessors.

An optional five-speed overdrive transmission heads the list of mechanical features. Also added for '77 are functional hood louvers, a Space Saver spare tire, upgraded radios, restyled bumpers and stylized wheel covers.

Inside the Z car, designers have added such touches as breathable vinyl seats, cut-pile carpeting, visor vanity mirror, padded armrest lid for the center console box and an ashtray lamp.

America's most popular sports car continues to be powered by an overhead cam six-cylinder engine with electronic fuel injection that delivers 170 h.p.

The long list of standard features continued for this year includes power assist brakes, fully independent suspension, rack and pinion steering, radial tires, 8,000-rpm tachometer, reclining bucket seats, power antenna and AM-FM radio.

Transmissions include the standard four-speed manual, an optional automatic or the new five-speed.

Robert O. Link, vice president and general sales manager of Nissan U.S.A., said the '77 changes follow a tradition of making annual improvements to the Z car without obsoleting prior models. Link continued:

"Like the earlier additions of electronic fuel injection and the 2+2 model to go with the two-seat coupe, our 1977 model gives customers more refinements in performance, comfort and convenience. The typical 280 buyer has an income well above average but he still demands value for his dollar."

Datsun's sales of Z cars since the first 240-Z was introduced in 1970 have been limited only by production capacity. Link said volume of the 1976 models will top 56,000 units and he predicted a similar performance for 1977.

The distinctive shape of the Z will be unchanged for '77, although the new bumpers add 0.2 inches to the overall length (173.4 for the coupe and 185.6 for the 2+2).

Buyers will have their choice of 10 colors, three of them new: Sunburst Yellow, Light Gold metallic and Sparkling Burgundy metallic.

The new 280-Zs deliver a combined city-highway fuel economy of 21 miles per gallon with manual transmissions and 20 m.p.g. with automatic, according to EPA tests. In California, where stricter emission standards are required, the manual transmission delivers 19 m.p.g. and the automatic 18 m.p.g.

Suggested retail prices for the 280-Z with the standard four-speed transmission was $6,999 for the coupe and $7,799 for the 2+2. The five-speed transmission carries a suggested price of $165. The automatic lists for $320. California models are $95 higher because of special emission controls.

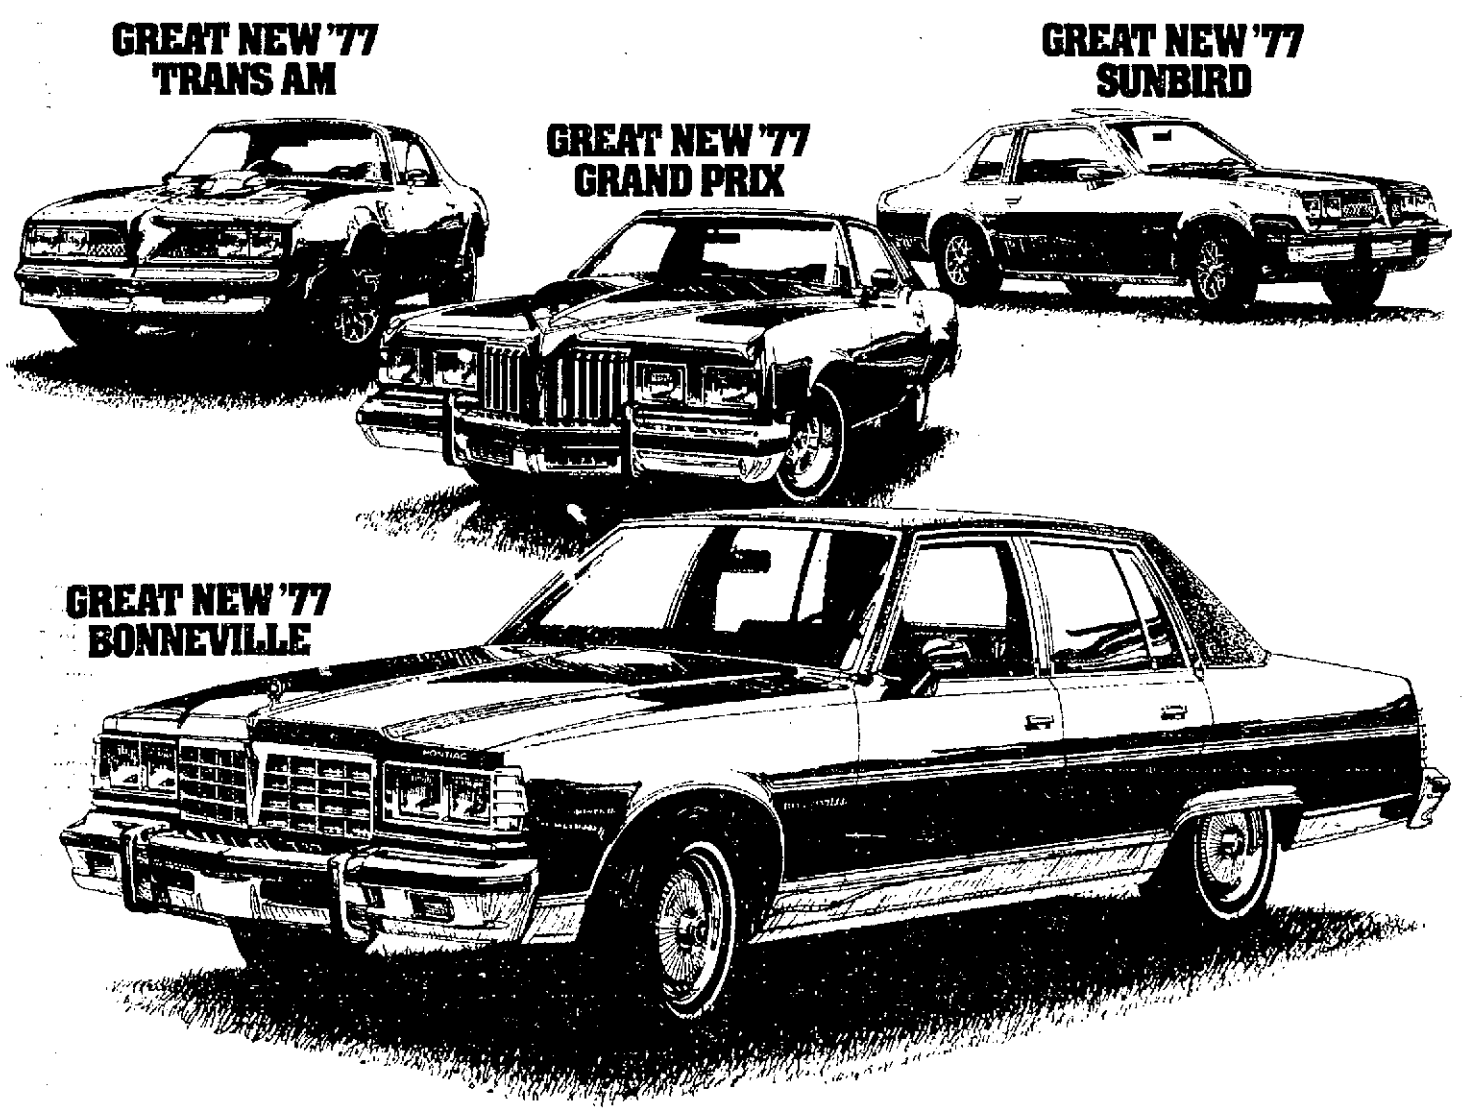

More improvements made on 1977 Comet

In keeping with a strategy employed since the car was introduced in 1971, Lincoln-Mercury Division's compact Comet is little changed in appearance for 1977 but further improved functionally.

"Comet justifiably has earned a reputation for outstanding reliability and durability at modest cost," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and division general manager.

"We've improved and refined it each year since its introduction and 1977 is no exception.

Every show has its main attractions.

A businessman has to know where his money is going. You get a detailed monthly accounting of all expenses pertaining to your lease.

A businessman tailors his outgo to his income. So you can pick the type of lease, length of lease and model Volvo that suits your needs. And income.

Two all-new engines in Pontiac lineup

ROOM TO SPARE

Pontiac's full-size 1977 station wagons, Catalina Safari and Grand Safari, are shorter and lighter than their 1976 counterparts while continuing to offer a spacious interior. Full-size Pontiac wagons feature a new three-way tailgate, a rear-facing third seat option and two lockable storage areas, one in the load floor and one in the left rear quarter.

Pontiac's 1977 model lineup, highlighted by a new generation of full-size cars and the introduction of two all-new Pontiac engines, have been introduced.

Smaller on the outside but roomier on the inside, Pontiac's new full-size models incorporate comfort and convenience in a new size designed for today's motoring needs.

Inside, Catalina, Bonneville and Bonneville Brougham models have more head room, more rear leg room, and one-and-a-half cubic feet more usable trunk capacity than comparable 1976 models.

Occupant entry and exit is substantially easier for the 1977 models because of the new exterior design, which features less door glass curvature and a higher roof line. Seat height also has been increased for improved comfort. Full-width, flat-contour instrument panels provide better accessibility for both driver and passenger.

Catalina models feature dual rectangular headlamps and a new brushed-knit Dover cloth interior. Catalina's standard engine is the 3.8-litre (231 c.i.d.) V-6 with V-8 optional engines including the new 5.0-litre (301 c.i.d.), the 5.7-litre (350 c.i.d.) and the 6.6-litre (400 c.i.d.).

A flush central grille theme accentuates the front of the Bonneville. Available in a two-door coupe and four-door sedan, Bonneville interiors are available in rich, Lombardy velour cloth or Morrokide. Standard engine on Bonneville models is the 5.0-litre V-8, with the 5.7-litre and 6.6-litre V-8 engines available as options.

Bonneville Brougham includes all standard features on the Bonneville plus the "Brougham" luxury interior package. Valencia, a new luxurious trim of Lombardy and Plaza striped cloth, is available on Bonneville Brougham models only.

Catalina Safari and Grand Safari station wagons feature a new three-way tailgate, increased cargo loading height and width, two lockable storage areas and a rear-facing third seat option. Standard engine on all full-size wagons is the 5.0-litre V-8, with the 6.6-litre V-8 available as an option.

Citizens Band (CB) radios are offered on all full-size Pontiac coupes and sedans in two versions.

The 1977 full-size Pontiacs, built on a 116-inch wheelbase, are designed for efficient packaging and fuel economy and feature an engine electrical diagnostic connector, an air conditioning electrical diagnostic connector and a Freedom Battery that never requires additional water. General body construction of the full-size Pontiacs permits less maintenance and better durability.

Pontiac's two new engines are a cast iron 2.5-litre (151 cu. in.) L-4 and the 5.0-litre V-8. Both engines have a four inch by three inch bore-stroke measurement.

The smoothly-performing L-4 develops 90 horsepower at 4400 rpm's, while the V-8 turns out 135 horsepower at 3800 rpm's. The 452-pound V-8 is among the lightest of all domestically-produced eight-cylinder engines. It will provide customers with six-cylinder-type economy along with true V-8 style performance.

Cylinders on the new V-8 are bored and honed with a simulated head bolted into place to ensure a perfect piston ring fit when the actual cylinder head is finally bolted on. This reduces engine friction.

The new four-cylinder engine will be utilized on Pontiac's Astre and Sunbird, as well as on the Ventura coupe and sedan, which will be the domestic industry's only four-cylinder compact cars. The 5.0-litre V-8 will be available on Ventura, Firebird, LeMans, Grand Prix and full-size models.

Bold new front styling, highlighted by dual rectangular headlamps, will offer a dramatic change for Pontiac's popular sporty Firebirds, available in four models: the base Firebird, the stylish Esprit, and the performance-oriented Formula and Trans Am. Built on a 108-inch wheelbase, Firebird engine availability ranges from the 3.8-litre V-6 to the 6.6-litre V-8.

A new hood with simulated air scoops and a standard rear spoiler are featured on the Formula. A special version of Pontiac's largest engine is available as a Trans Am and Formula option. Called the TA/400, it tion. Called the TA/400, provides improved performance.

A stronger front grille design and a more luxurious interior, highlighted by a new, Grand Prix-style instrument panel, are included in the compact Ventura series for 1977. Both the Ventura and the Ventura SJ are offered as a two-door coupe, three-door hatchback coupe and four-door sedan. The base Ventura coupe and sedan offer the new 2.5-litre L-4 engine; other engine availability includes the 3.8-litre V-6 and the 5.0-litre V-8.

Three distinct models of Pontiac's popular personal luxury car, the Grand Prix, will be available for 1977: the regular Grand Prix, the sporty Grand Prix SJ and the luxurious Grand Prix LJ. The new 5.0-litre V-8 will be standard in the base Grand Prix and the LJ, with engine options.

Ford offers widest choice of cars available

From subcompact to full-size, Ford Division's 1977 lineup offers customers the widest choice of car sizes available.

Heading the list are two all-new mid-size cars — the luxurious Thunderbird, a two-door hardtop, and the LTD II, offering sporty-looking two-door models as well as elegant four-door models and station wagons.

Other 1977 entries include the full-size LTD, with its renown for quiet, comfort and ride; the Granada, Ford's hot-selling "swing" car; Pinto, America's most popular subcompact; Mustang II, a small specialty car sales leader; Maverick, the proven, durable compact, and the highly popular Econoline Club Wagon. All 26 models in these eight car lines go on sale at Ford dealerships Friday, October 1.

"For 1977, Ford Division cars are uniquely in step with the market," said William P. Benton, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager. "Our lineup gives customers the opportunity to select the right size car to meet his driving needs."

The 1977 Thunderbird, for example, is a specialty car on a 114-inch wheelbase. Overall length is 215.5 inches. Thunderbird offers high levels of standard equipment, a quiet, comfortable ride and excellent handling — all at an affordable price.

Ford Division's other new mid-size entry, the LTD II, comes in three series. The base LTD II "S" and mid-series LTD II each feature a two-door hardtop, a four-door pillared hardtop and a station wagon. The top-of-the-line LTD II Brougham offers a two- and a four-door model, and the elegantly appointed LTD II Squire is Ford's high-series mid-size station wagon.

All LTD II models have a lean, sculptured look, yet offer six-passenger comfort.

"Both of these cars will greatly strengthen our position in the largest segment of the automobile market," Mr. Benton said. "The Thunderbird and the LTD II two-door models give Ford Division a powerful one-two punch in the specialty or upper end of the segment, and the four-door LTD II models and station wagons are ideal for buyers seeking six-passenger comfort and other full-size car attributes — at a smaller price."

For 1977, all Pinto models have a new, sportier-looking front end. A new all-glass third door (a no-extra-cost option) gives three-door Pinto models a fresh, modern look, and, two- and three-door Runabout models are in a lower inertia weight class (2,750 pounds) — the same as the 1976 Pinto Pony models.

Addition of a Pinto Cruising Wagon in 1977 will greatly expand the subcompact's appeal in the youth segment of the automobile market. Other new Pinto options include a flip-up open air roof, a Sports Rally Package with tachometer and gauges and a four-way manual driver's seat.

In 1977, Granada becomes the first domestic car to offer a four-speed manual overdrive transmission as standard equipment.

The Ford LTD remains full-size for 1977. The top-of-the-line LTD Landau has been repositioned into the price class of the LTD Brougham — which has been deleted from the lineup — but continues such standard luxury features as hidden headlamps, wide, color-keyed bodyside moldings and a high level flight bench seat with a fold-down center armrest.

Mustang II for 1977 offers a host of improvements, including added standard equipment on 2+2 models at no added cost, the flip-up open air roof and four-way manual driver's seat, a Ghia Sports Group and other exciting new options and money-saving packages that group popular optional items.

Maverick also offers new options and convenience features, including four-way manual seats, wire wheel covers and wide bodyside moldings.

New exterior paint, vinyl roof and interior trim colors add sparkle to the appearance of 1977 Ford Division cars.

To meet the U.S. government's more stringent 1977 model year emission control standards, most Ford cars have revised emission control systems that include a larger volume catalyst and Ford's new Duraspark high-energy solid-state ignition system which provides increased voltage at both starting and running speeds, allowing leaner air-fuel mixture and even longer spark plug life.

New wiring designs for '77

All Dodge 1977 models built in North America use a new terminal system for more positive locking, increased lead-in for better alignment, superior electrical performance and more reliable assembly.

Each terminal has a solid male blade, improved female receptacle and corresponding insulators, which provide the locking feature.

'77 Pacer two-door is distinctive design

The new two-door Pacer station wagon is as distinctive as the innovative Pacer sedan introduced in 1975.

It brings to the station wagon market the same features which make the sedan a uniquely functional car — exceptional interior room and comfort within trim exterior dimensions, and superior visibility — front, rear and side.

Designed with convenience in mind, it has asymmetrical doors with the passenger door being four inches wider than the driver side. With all its spacious interior dimensions, the Pacer wagon is only 174 inches overall (four inches more than the sedan) and provides 46 cubic feet of cargo capacity and increased front and rear headroom.

Even with its additional usable space, the wagon weighs only 76 pounds more than the sedan.

The wagon's long liftgate extends down to a bumper height floor for ease of loading and unloading. For ease of operation, the enclosed lift supports utilize compressed gas cylinders. Vertical taillamps, which permit the long liftgate, distinguish the rear styling of the wagon.

The wagon shares with the Pacer sedan the comfortable ride and handling qualities associated with much larger cars. Both feature rack-and-pinion steering and isolated front and rear suspension.

Standard engine for both wagon and sedan is the AMC 232 CID six, with the 258 CID six available as an option.

1977 AMC MATADOR COUPE

Continuing AMC value

The 1977 AMC cars represent a major step-up in American Motors' continuing escalation of product values in the Gremlin, Hornet, Pacer and Matador lines.

All 1977 AMC models offer higher levels of standard equipment, more efficient performance, and added appearance and convenience features.

An all-new, spacious Pacer wagon joins the AMC lineup for 1977, along with a freshly-styled Gremlin and a sporty AMX version of the popular Hornet hatchback.

The intermediate-size Matadors are upgraded to offer exceptional combinations of standard equipment, luxury and convenience that contribute to the pleasure of fine car ownership.

Adding substantial value to the 1977 AMC cars in terms of warranty and service are the exclusive AMC Buyer Protection Plan, the industry's only full warranty, and the Service Protection Plan, which guarantees all customer-paid service work on any AMC car regardless of year manufactured.

With these programs and the extra values offered in the 1977 cars, American Motors strengthens its commitment to responding to the needs of car buyers, both in product design and features and in the best warranty and service protection available.

The 1977 Matador coupe, four-door sedan and station wagon, AMC's entries in the growing intermediate market, offer a long list of standard equipment, including power steering, power front disc brakes, automatic transmission, individual reclining seats, custom steering wheel, light group, custom door trim panels and other convenience and decor items that previously were optional or part of a luxury Brougham package.

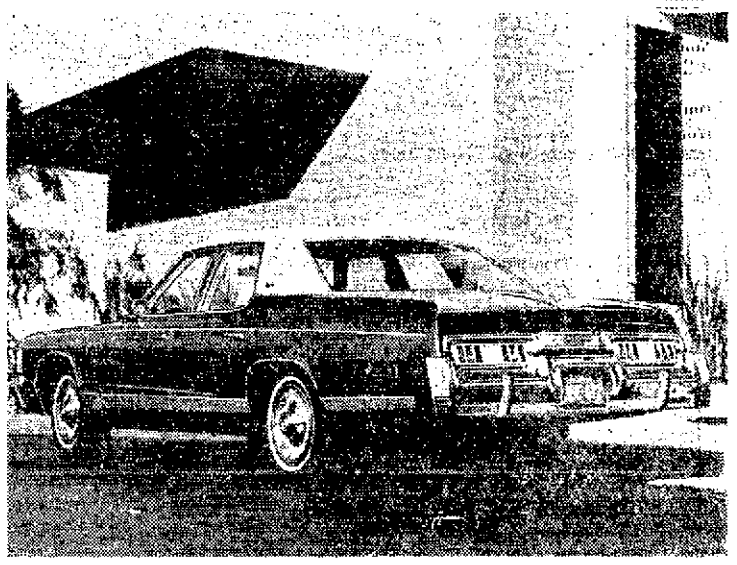

Basic values in terms of comfortable ride, usable room and performance are strong competitive features of the Matador line. The Matador wagon cargo capacity of 95.2 cubic feet, including 8.0 cubic feet in a hidden compartment, is the largest of any intermediate-size wagon.

Standard engine for the Matador coupe and sedan is AMC's 258 CID six. The 304 CID V-8 is standard on the wagon and optional on the coupe and sedan. A high performance 360 CID V-8 is optional for all 1977 Matadors.

GMC offers wide variety of trucks

To meet the growing demand for customized vans, GMC is introducing the Gypsy Traveler, a Vandura van with the interior upfitted by the Motortown Corp. of Dearborn, Mich.

Two other specialized applications for the Vandura are available — the Gypsy option, which represents a personal-use vehicle designed for owners who want to customize their own vans, and the Gaucho model, a travel and recreational vehicle capable of transporting five passengers up front and hauling a variety of cargo in the rear section.

Royal Monaco for 1977 provides big car comfort and convenience

Government standards a factor

Government-mandated safety standards continue to have a major effect on the design, weight, and cost of Chrysler Corporation passenger cars for the 1977 model year.

Sydney L. Terry, Vice President-Public Responsibility and Consumer Affairs, said existing noise and safety requirements have already added 315 pounds and $544 to the company's cars, "and new standards for the 1977 models will increase weight by an additional 18 pounds and consumer cost by another $73 per car."

Terry said design changes this year will assure that 1977 model cars can withstand specified front and rear impacts up to 30 miles-an-hour, side impacts up to 20 miles-an-hour, and simulated rollover with minimal fuel leakage.

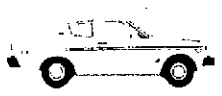

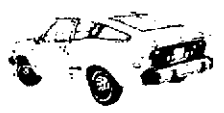

"We have also made changes to assure that the hood hinges with limited rearward movement, by the hood or other exterior parts in a frontal accident, and to assure that full-size car bumpers will withstand corner impacts of three miles-and-hour without damage," Terry added.

Compact and intermediate cars had these bumper improvements on the 1976 models.

The completely new 1977 Cougar XR-7 will feature bold styling and an efficient, comfortable interior.

Lincoln-Mercury will expand Cougar lineup

Nearly 10 years ago, Lincoln-Mercury Division introduced the Cougar — the most successful new offering in the division's 30-year history. This fall, Lincoln-Mercury expects to repeat that success with a complete lineup of all-new intermediates bearing the famous Cougar name.

Led by the sporty XR-7, the Cougar car line will be expanded to include two-door, four-door and station wagon models.

"The Cougars will provide the division with an opportunity to increase its share of the fast-growing intermediate market," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and Lincoln-Mercury Division general manager. "Currently, the intermediates are the biggest segment of the industry, accounting for 27 per cent of total car sales.

"Cougar XR-7 will be aimed at the intermediate specialty two-door buyers who dominate the segment. The Cougar and Cougar Brougham models, which will offer first-class family transportation in a comfortable, six-passenger package, will be aimed at Cutlass and Century buyers.

"In 1977, for the first time, the excitement and styling flair associated with Cougar in the past will be available in a family-sized car a cut above ordinary intermediates."

The Mercury Cougar has given Lincoln-Mercury a decade of success in two different segments of the domestic auto market. Presently the division's leading intermediate, Cougar has been a sales winner for 10 years — first as a small specialty car and then as an entry in the intermediate-specialty market.

Introduced as a 1967 model on September 30, 1966, the car showed early promise during its first and most successful model year. Motor Trend Magazine named Cougar its "Car of the Year" for 1967.

According to the magazine's editors, "the winner must show a combination of engineering, styling and market timing sufficient to set an industry trend."

Cougar had all three characteristics in abundance. With its powerful engine offerings and responsive handling, the first Cougar represented a direct engineering response to the demands of the growing small-specialty-car segment.

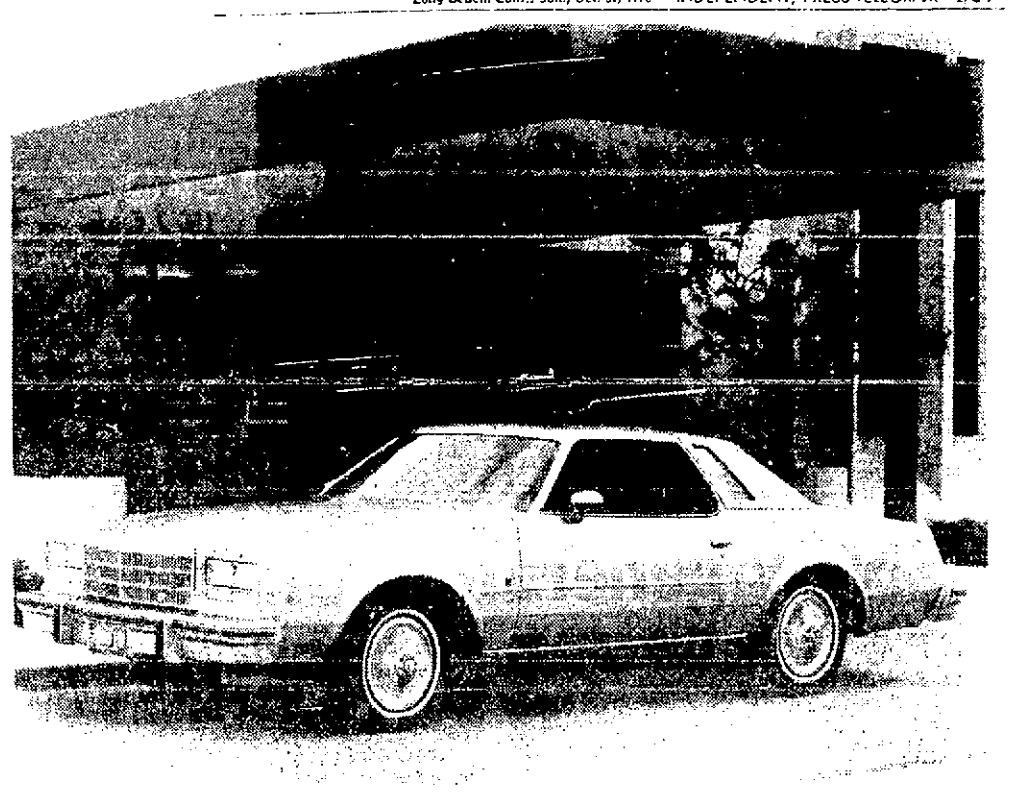

Its crisp, sophisticated design, wide range of optional equipment and luxurious interior appointments added a dimension previously absent from that segment and the timing of its introduction was right on target. In the classic tradition of American business success, Cougar was introduced to meet a demand at the beginning of an uptrend.

In its first year on the market, Cougar captured 13.7 per cent of its segment and outsold its only direct rival by 29 per cent. During that first year, sporty-car enthusiasts snapped up 125,000 Cougars — which still stands as the car's model year sales record.

Although Lincoln-Mercury's "top cat" continued to take a substantial share of its segment over the next seven model years — claiming 14 per cent in 1973, its final year as a small-specialty car — its total sales declined with the shrinking segment, dropping to 52,900 in the 1973 model year.

For 1974, Cougar was redesigned and introduced into the larger intermediate segment. As it had in 1967, the new Cougar offered the sportiness of performance instrumentation and responsive handling, but added a higher level of luxury to its stylishly comfortable interiors. Once again the formula worked. The new car posted 78,700 sales during the 1974 model year.

During the depressed 1975 model year, Cougar's sales sank to 49,200, but in the 1976 model year it has become the division's leading intermediate with sales totaling 76,600 units through August 31.

The styling of Buick's Regal coupe for 1977 is highlighted by a new grille with chrome accent strips and a wide header bar. The two-door Regal, one of the most popular models in Buick's intermediate series, is powered by a V-6 engine with a V-8 as an option.

—CB radio option on '77 Buicks—

A combination AM/FM stereo and citizens' band radio, all packaged inside the instrument panel, will be offered on full-size Buicks in 1977.

A three-way switch on the dial controls the function of the radio. One setting is for AM/FM stereo, one is for the CB and the third controls both automatically.

When set on automatic, the radio plays until a CB broadcast is received. Then the radio shifts to CB reception and the message comes over the stereo speaker system.

This combination radio option is limited to AM/FM stereo radios only.

For those who want their CB radios separate, the below the dash option is offered on all '77 models, except Skylark.

Another new radio option is a digital clock combined with AM/FM stereo. The clock face is combined with the radio dial which shows the time constantly.

However, when you push a button to tune the radio, the digital readout changes to show the station frequency. The frequency is displayed for a few seconds and then the radio dial again becomes the clock face, showing the time. The readout also displays month and day and elapsed driving time on demand.

Buick Redefines the Full-Sized American Automobile.

1977: A Design that's More than New Sheet Metal.

You are looking at three new full-sized Buicks that are fundamentally different from the full-sized Buicks of the past.

Riviera, Electra and LeSabre all exhibit a new lightness of line. A classical restraint in their design. An efficient use of space inside and out. Better gas mileage than last year's counterparts. They are full-sized cars that are actually fun to drive.

New Agility in Traffic.

You've noticed all the changes we've wrought in these full-sized Buicks as soon as you've got behind the wheel. To be more responsive to the wheel. To be more nimble in the corners. To be easier to turn. And to park.

They all feature features of coil spring suspension. Forward-mounted steering gear linkage. Unequal-length front control arms. And four-link rear suspension.

In short, we've developed state-of-the-art systems that bring a new measure of ride control to the full-sized Buicks.

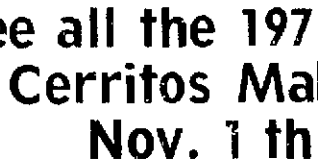

The '77 LeSabre Sport Coupe features unique front and rear stabilizer bars. Special springs and shock absorbers valved. And responsive, fast-ratio power steering. A suit for sports-car enthusiasts and also found on the '77 Riviera.

Here's the point. These subtle kinds of advanced engineering contribute to a ride and handling combination found in no other full-sized cars that are currently built in America.

Room For All Six of You... and Your Luggage.

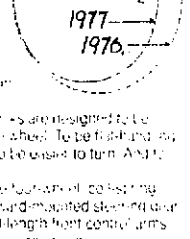

There's something very special about the efficiency and agility. Some of that we provide it without asking you to give up one of the basic things you buy a full-sized car for. Room.

As the chart indicates, these cars are roomy. In many of the more meaningful areas they're roomier than last year's counterparts.

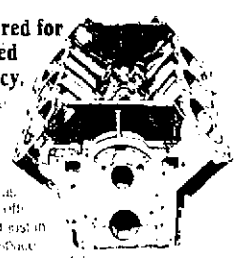

In fact, the new Riviera and LeSabre Coupe offer more than two and a half inches of additional front leg room over comparable 1976 models. That's a lot. And trunk capacity has increased on most full-sized Buicks as well.

	Riviera	Electra 225 Sedan	LeSabre Coupe
	1977	1977	1977
	38.1 in.	39.1 in.	38.4 in.
	39.0 in.	38.0 in.	38.2 in.
	42.2 in.	42.2 in.	42.2 in.
	38.7 in.	40.9 in.	38.7 in.
	19.8 cu ft	20.4 cu ft	21.2 cu ft.

Engineered for Improved Efficiency.

Of course we've reduced the size of our standard V-8's this year. Even the refinement Buick V-6, already a frugal source of power, has been modified to weigh less than last year.

And there are a number of special features that help promote efficient operation. High-Energy Ignition, for example, eliminates the need for ignition condensor and points—and therefore eliminates the need to replace them. Spark plugs last longer compared to just a few years ago. And there are longer intervals between scheduled maintenance.

Also new this year is the availability of the V-6 LeSabre in California. This is the first time California drivers have been offered the advantages of a V-6 engine in a full-sized Buick.

In any case, the bottom line in any discussion of operating efficiency is gas mileage. And if you'll consult the following chart of EPA mileage estimates, you'll notice some figures that are really quite surprising for full-sized automobiles.

1977 EPA Mileage Estimates*	Hwy.	City
LeSabre:	21	16
Electra:	20	14
Riviera:	20	14

*These interim ratings. Your mileage may vary according to driving habits, the condition of your car and its equipment.

Not available on LeSabre Sport Coupe.

Luxury is Always Standard Equipment.

The standard equipment on a Buick has always been impressive. That's something we haven't changed.

Every full-sized Buick comes with automatic transmission, power steering and power front disc brakes. All standard.

Every full-sized Buick has thick, comfortable seating. Plush expanses of cut-pile carpeting. And intelligently arranged, convenient instrumentation.

Every full-sized Buick is amply endowed with such niceties as Full-Flo ventilation, an inside hood release, Armrests, All standard.

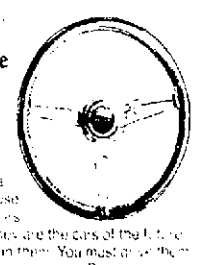

In fact, as you reach top-of-the-line models, the standard equipment becomes even more impressive.

Rivieras and Electra 225s, for instance, come equipped with power windows.

Riviera and LeSabre Sport Coupe are equipped with a standard Rallye steering wheel.

It's pretty obvious that efficiency doesn't have to mean a loss of comfort or convenience.

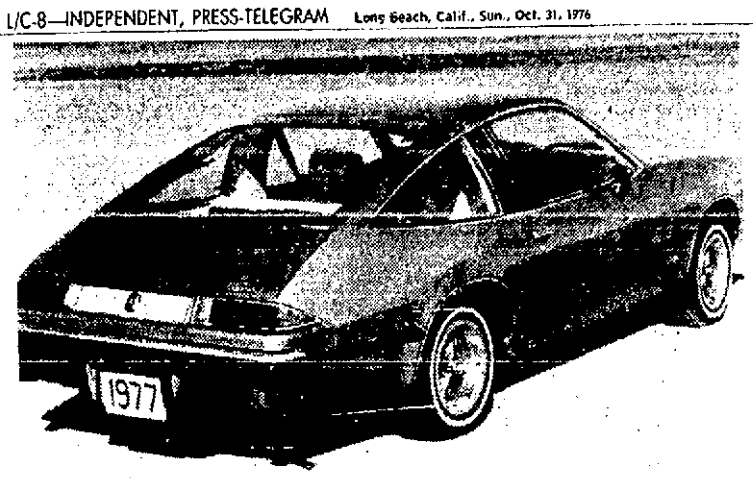

They're Meant to be Driven.

Take the Riviera and LeSabre. They are very special cars not because they're expensive. But because they are the cars of the future. You must drive them. You can do that at your Buick dealer.

1977 Olds Starfire SX Sport Coupe

New generation of Olds

A new generation of more fuel-efficient family cars and a long list of engineering improvements highlight Oldsmobile's 1977 lineup.

The division is covering the market in six distinct car lines . . . Starfire, Omega, Cutlass, Eighty-Eight, Ninety-Eight and Toronado . . . with 28 models, six less than last year.

New for 1977 are the Cutlass Supreme Brougham colonnade hardtop sedan, Delta 88 pillar coupe, Delta 88 Royale pillar coupe and Toronado XSR.

Discontinued are the Cutlass Supreme Cruiser, Cutlass Salon sedan, Delta 88 hardtop coupe and hardtop sedan, Delta 88 Royale hardtop coupe and hardtop sedan and Toronado Custom coupe. In addition, three Custom Cruisers have been discontinued as separate models, but are available as 1977 options.

The 1977 Starfire and Starfire SX feature a distinctive front end that includes a new grille with vertical ports. Also new are a larger emblem between the grille sections and block lettering identification that replaces the Oldsmobile script.

Dual rectangular headlamps are again mounted in a soft plastic front end panel that flexes with the energy-absorbing front bumper in minor impacts and returns to its original shape.

In the rear is a hatchback door that lifts up revealing the carpeted load floor which may be extended by folding the rear seat forward. A space saver spare tire and inflator bottle are stored in the right rear quarter well, hidden from view by a soft trim tire cover.

Standard for both models is the 140-cubic-inch (2.3 litre) four-cylinder engine with the 231 (3.8 litre) V-6 optional. A floor-mounted, four-speed synchromesh transmission is standard.

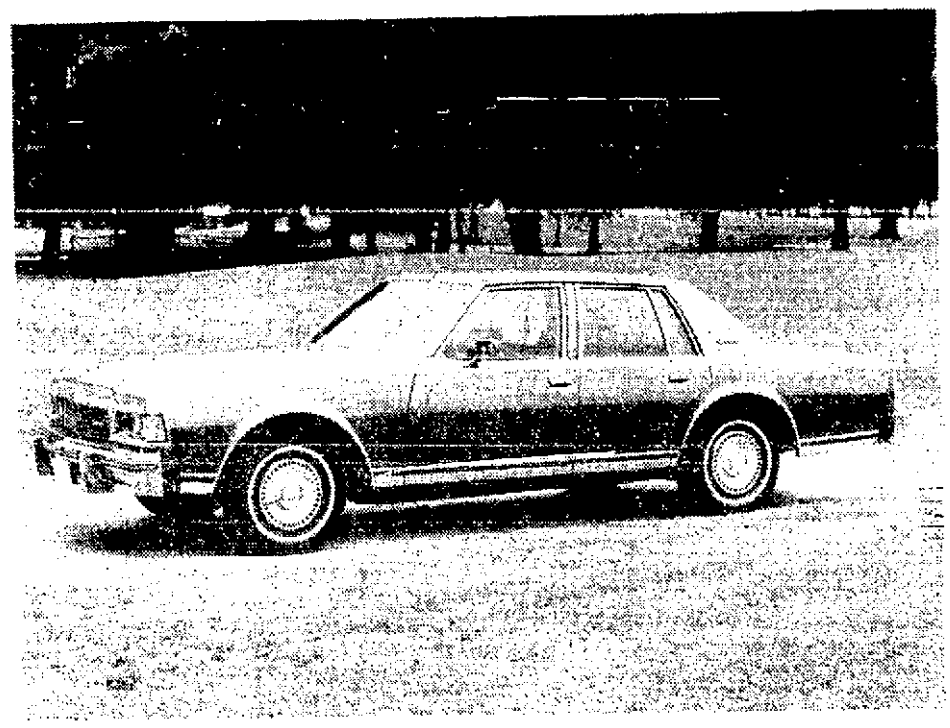

The Starfire and SX are offered in one body style, a four-passenger sport coupe with high-back bucket seats in the front. The base model has vinyl trim and a new interior door design with carpeting and woodgrained moldings replacing map pockets.

The Starfire SX has a higher level of trim in a choice of cloth or vinyl. Also included are steel-belted radial ply tires, wheel opening moldings and a custom sport steering wheel. On the base Starfire, bias-belted tires are standard and radials are optional.

The Starfire GT option continues to be available on both models. The GT package includes the 231 (3.8 litre) V-6 engine, special hood and side stripes in black, white or gold to complement the car's body color, Starfire Rallye wheels, raised white letter tires and an instrument panel that includes tachometer, clock and gauges.

Highlighting the 1977 Toronado are a number of design changes, the new Electronic Spark Timing, a special XSR model and the cubic-inch (6.6 litre) V-8 engine.

This front-drive personal luxury car is available in two coupe models . . . the Brougham and XSR. They feature a new hood, front end panel and a distinctive grille with a rectangular pattern.

High Styled 1977 Chevrolet Caprice

Chevrolet: all-new full-size car

The 1977 Chevrolet debuts as an all-new, full-size car for America, more closely tuned to changing consumer life-styles and matched with the nation's goals of conserving fuel and natural resources.

The completely redesigned Caprice and Impala models offer crisp new styling with a long list of design and engineering improvements. The new Chevrolets boast more fuel efficiency and safety effectiveness while being 11 inches shorter and almost 700 pounds lighter than their predecessors.

The new models have more room inside despite the smaller exterior size. This includes more rear legroom and more front and rear headroom along with added usable storage space in the trunk.

Matching the trim new dimensions, additional operating efficiency and fuel economy is made possible by the addition of a 4.1 litre (250-cubic inch), six-cylinder engine and a smaller displacement 5 litre (305-cubic inch) base V8. The six-cylinder engine is the standard power plant for sedans and coupes while the 5.7 litre (350-cubic inch) V8 becomes the top optional engine. All are used in conjunction with the automatic Turbo Hydra-matic transmission.

Ride and handling characteristics parallel the dramatic advances in weight reduction and interior accommodations.

The 1977 Chevrolet is being offered in two series — the top-of-the-line Caprice and the ever-popular Impala. Two-door coupes, four-door sedans and four-door two- and three-seat station wagons are available in each series. The former Impala S and Landau options are discontinued.

The 1977 Chevrolet has a 116-inch wheelbase, a reduction of 5.5 inches from the 1976 Chevrolet. Its overall length is 211.9 inches (10.8 inches under the 1976 Chevrolet). However, its height of 57.4 inches is 2.3 inches greater than the former model, an important factor in the car's interior roominess. Its width is 75.4 inches, a reduction of approximately four inches.

The new Chevrolets mark the first time a number of advance design tools have been used for an all-new vehicle program. Among these applications were use of ⅜-scale plastic models and an electronic analyzer to check and study early body structure, computerized mathematical models of car components, and wind tunnel aerodynamic studies of scale and full-size models. These techniques enabled Chevrolet to make early changes in the new vehicles' designs to insure the most efficient use of materials.

Other Chevrolet highlights for 1977 are:

- A new acoustical package tailored to assure greater ride quietness at all levels.
- A new cowl high ventilation system combined with the new modular heater and air conditioner controls centrally located for driver and passenger operation.
- New lighter weight front and rear steel bumper face bars backed with high strength aluminum reinforcements that save more than 100 pounds in weight.
- Inertia seat back locks on coupes for ease of entry and exit to and from rear seat.
- A new chassis with short and long arm coil spring suspension in front and four-link coil spring rear suspension.
- New perimeter frame that contributes importantly to overall improvement of vehicle's structural efficiency.
- Lighter weight 15-inch wheels and smaller radial ply tires as a feature of the weight reduction program. (Heavier capacity tires and wheels for wagons and a wide range of optional tires.)

'77 Cadillac Eldorado offers refined design

'77 CADILLAC FLEETWOOD ELDORADO COUPE

New bumpers, large cornering lamps and the extensive use of chrome trim blend the front and side of the '77 Cadillac into an integral unit. The new bumpers feature unique dual rubber strip inserts adding to bumper protection.

"Rear styling of these cars is highlighted by a new vertical integrated taillight and side marker lamp positioned above the rear bumper outer," Edward Kennard, Cadillac official, stated.

"The rear deck is sharply sculptured to contribute to the more formal appearance, and to optimize trunk space."

The design of the 1977 Eldorado has been refined to enhance the elegance associated with this fine front-wheel-drive automobile.

"The grille and headlamps have been unified into a horizontal design that is capped with a bright brushed chrome molding. The bumper end caps have a vertical chrome crest on a rich black background," Mr. Kennard said. "Individual Eldorado lettering is used on the hood face above the grille."

New Eldorado vertical tail lamps are located in the bumper ends. Side marker lamps, which include the Eldorado name on the red lens, are set in the rear quarter panel.

The international-size Cadillac Seville for 1977 continues its unmistakable design concept, with rectangular lamps, standup wreath and crest hood ornamentation and a newly styled vertical grille signifying its distinctive heritage: New amber park and turn signal lamps provide a functional, well-defined appearance.

"Seville's timeless styling concept is obvious in the simplicity of the rear design, featuring large wraparound taillights and full rear wheel openings," Mr. Kennard explained.

The Cadillac general manager reported that all 1977 models are offered in 15 standard and 6 optional firemist paint colors, 18 of which are new this year.

All standard and optional vinyl roofs, except the Eldorado, utilize a new padded "Tuxedo" grain material. The Eldorado features a padded elk-grain roof covering. The 1977 Seville is now offered with either a padded vinyl roof or the newly created smooth painted metal top. Sixteen vinyl roof choices are available, with three of these being exclusive to the Seville.

"The interiors for our new De Ville, Brougham and Limousine models are completely redesigned, including a new seat design and totally different instrument panel," according to Mr. Kennard.

The new instrument panel is highlighted by a "center control area," allowing easy driver and passenger access to the radio, Climate Controls, air conditioner outlets, and accessory switches. Driver-only items such as headlamp, cruise and wiper controls are located on a separate control panel to the left of the steering column.

The upper portion of the instrument panel includes an information band which contains the driver telltale and warning lights, hidden behind an opaque surface when not illuminated.

All 1977 models use a newly designed two-spoke steering wheel, featuring high gloss simulated Rosewood trim, which is used extensively on the instrument panel and throughout the interiors of all models, except the Eldorado which uses low sheen Rosewood grain trim.

New trim selections for all 1977 Cadillacs include sporty plaids, plush velours, knits and distinctive leather/vinyl combinations. The Eldorado offers four special two-tone leather/vinyl interior trims, while the Seville features new "Dover" knit cloth as standard equipment with optional leather/vinyl trim available.

An exclusive Cadillac feature for 1977 is a new seat belt system for all models except Eldorado. The seat belt retractors are concealed in the side pillar. Unique components in the retractor and buckle allow further belt movement flexibility.

Mr. Kennard described the engineering of the 1977 models as "representative of the most advanced automotive techniques in the industry, including many which were developed in conjunction with our Seville project."

All 1977 models as "representative of the most advanced automotive techniques in the industry, including many which were developed in conjunction with our Seville project."

All 1977 Cadillacs, except the Seville, are powered by a new 15 percent smaller, lighter weight 425 cubic inch (7.0 Litre) V-8 engine. The Cadillac Electronic Fuel Injected engine in this displacement is optional for the De Ville, Brougham and Eldorado models. The Seville is equipped with its proven efficient 350 CID (5.7 Litre) V-8 Electronic Fuel Injected engine.

These engines are combined with a standard Turbo Hydra-matic transmission and low ratio axles for optimum performance.

"Cadillac Electronic Fuel Injected engines precisely meter and control fuel delivery using a laser beam trimmed computer 'brain' to operate the system," Mr. Kennard said. "These engines are designed to offer quick response, fast starting, consistent performance, smooth engine idle and fewer scheduled maintenance operations."

The Cadillac general manager reported the expanded use of four wheel disc brakes in 1977, with the Seville and Brougham now joining the Eldorado with complete four wheel disc brake systems as standard equipment.

The De Ville and Limousine models continue to use the front disc and large rear drum brake arrangement.

Extensive anti-corrosion features incorporated into all 1977 Cadillacs include the use of zinc rich primers, deadeners, plastisol, hot melt sealers and wax coatings in strategic locations. Other corrosion protection advances involve the use of galvanized steel, zinc-iron alloy, zinc-rometal (steel coated with zinc paint on one side before forming), and bi-metal moldings (stainless steel laminated to aluminum).

"Cadillac's use of contemporary techniques and materials make our 1977 cars the most corrosion free automobiles we've ever manufactured," according to Mr. Kennard.

Additional customer value benefits of the 1977 Cadillacs were designed and engineered with the convenience and security of the owner in mind.

A new optional AM/FM push button stereo radio with 23-channel citizens band controls and integral AM/FM-CB power antenna is available for the first time in 1977. A unique security feature of this Cadillac AM/FM-CB radio is the antenna which retracts into the front fender of the car when the radio isn't in operation.

Datsun success is linked to parts availability

"For want of a shoe...." goes the old saying. A modernized version of that adage could apply to the parts end of the automobile business: "For want of a part, the repair job was lost. For want of a repair job, the customer was lost — for good."

Nearly a generation ago, that was the case for many importers who were just getting a toehold in this country. The pipelines that stretched across the oceans often produced a flood of cars but only a trickle of parts. And that's no way to run a railroad.

The importers quickly realized that if they wanted to succeed in the lucrative U.S. market, they had better have a parts network that was equal to or even better than their domestic rivals. The fact that overseas nameplates captured nearly 20 per cent of the market last year is evidence that they've found such a system.

Take, for instance, Datsun, which sold more cars and trucks in 1975 than any other importer. The company stocks more than a six months' supply of parts and has a 75-day supply always on order from Japan. By air or by land, it sends parts out to its 969 dealers, including Coast Datsun in Long Beach, Long Beach Datsun, Moon Datsun in Lakewood, Dot Datsun in Huntington Beach, and Dick Barbour Datsun in Cypress.

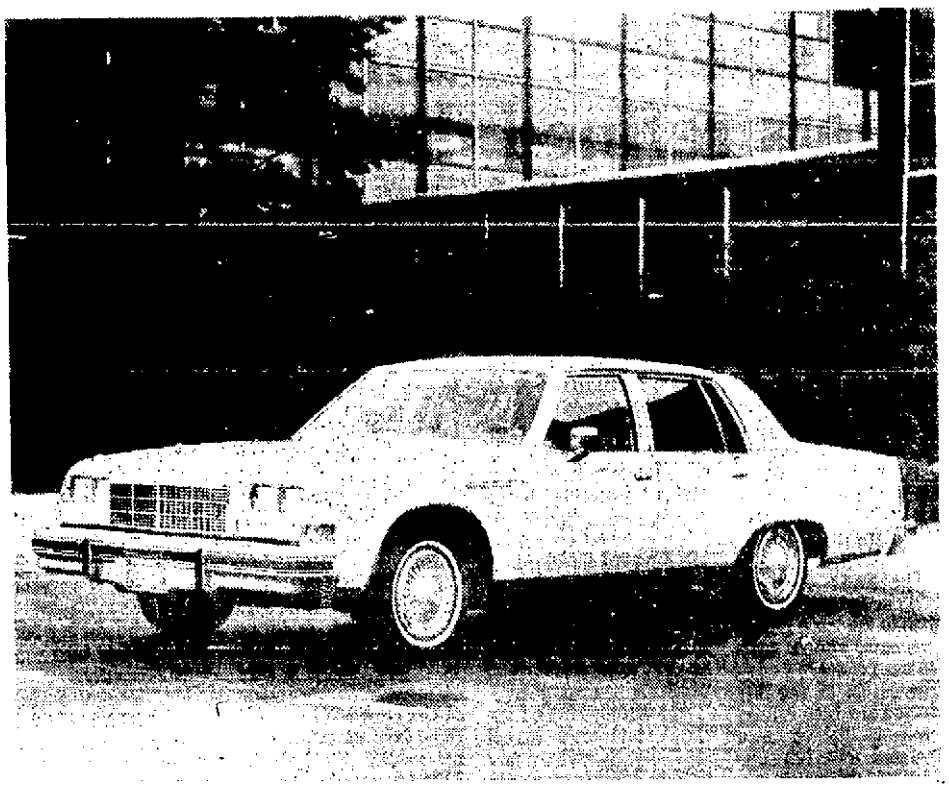

The dealerships are supplied from 10 regional depots in Costa Mesa, Calif.; San Francisco; Portland, Ore.; Denver; Chicago; Boston; Norfolk, Va.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Piscataway, N.J.; and Dallas, plus the master depot in Compton, Calif. Combined, the depots have nearly 1.3 million square feet of storage space and house an inventory in excess of $120 million.

Datsun's main depot, with more than 376,000 square feet, is the largest of any automobile importer. It stocks more than 57,000 parts numbers, more than twice as many as the other depots.

Datsun parts arrive in the U.S. by ship and by air. Parts brought in by ship, the primary method of transportation, equal 15 million pounds each year.

If a part is not readily available, it is flown here from Japan by emergency air order. Last year, Datsun received the equivalent of two fully loaded 747 jumbo jet freighters, or about 400,000 pounds of parts.

In addition, emergency orders from the main depot in Compton can be air freighted to any point in the United States within 24 hours.

Buick's new Electra for 1977

Buick unveils 1977 models

Buick Motor Division has taken the wraps off its 1977 models, described by General Manager David C. Collier as "a new generation of more efficient family-size cars."

The exterior dimensions of the Electra, LeSabre and Riviera all have been resized, Collier said, but they still contain ample interior room for six passengers and have more trunk capacity.

For example, the 1977 LeSabre sedan is 10 inches shorter, 2.7 inches narrower and about 665 pounds lighter, yet it has more headroom and more rear legroom than its 1976 counterpart, and the trunk capacity has been increased from 19.7 to 21.2 cubic feet.

Collier pointed out that the lighter weight made it possible to maintain the same level of performance with smaller engines, thus improving fuel economy.

The Riviera, Buick's entry in the personalized luxury car market, also is completely new for 1977, with a specific suspension that gives it a unique combination of smooth ride and precise handling.

All models in the Electra, LeSabre and Riviera series have pillared roofs and doors with full frames around the glass.

"This design has enabled our engineers to obtain a greater degree of quietness and structural isolation in these cars than they have been able to achieve previously," Collier said.

The front end design of both the Electra and LeSabre is made even more distinctive by the canted headlight bezels which slope rearward away from the upright grille.

Ventiports, Buick's hallmark, add a further touch of distinction.

The styling of LeSabre has been made more colorful by the red and amber taillights that wrap around the rear fenders, serving the dual purpose of side marker lights. The amber lights serve as directional signals.

New grilles and new header moldings highlight the styling changes in Buick's popular intermediate Century and Regal models.

Styling changes in the Skyhawk and Skylark also were limited to grille changes.

Wraparound window featured on Chevrolet

The trim new styling of the 1977 Chevrolet features a forward thrust with a strong fender-high horizontal line the full length of the car and a gently sloping aerodynamic hood. An exclusive coupe profile features a wraparound rear window. Caprice and Impala models have distinctive grille, ornamentation and trim features inside and out.

The Caprice radiator grille texture continues beneath the bumper and a new stand-up Caprice hood ornament on flip-flop pedestal is highlighted. The Impala front end features a Chevrolet bow tie trademark in the center of the grille. Both Caprice and Impala have dual horizontal headlamps.

If you can see your reflection, look for $

When you setp out to the family car next, gaze into the finish and see if you can see the whites of your eyes. If you can, there may be dollar signs, there too.

"It is a truism that a car with a well-cared-for paint job is going to sell as a trade-in for a higher price than a comparable vehicle whose paint has been allowed to deteriorate badly," says Leslie Wood, Johnson Wax consumer information specialist.

The same is true for the vehicle's interior, she adds, offering these suggestions:

Wash your car's exterior with warm water and mild detergent whenever road dirt and grime begin to show. Many owners do this once a week. Don't let the detergent dry and spot the finish.

Apply a good coat of wax several times a year to help keep the showroom shine. If the finish is in good condition you can use a no-buffing liquid. If not, the best way to restore the shine is to use a product like J/Wax Kit, which comes in both liquid and paste form. The trick, of course, is to keep the finish shiny by keeping at the waxing. It is far easier to give a quick touch up than to have to attack badly oxidized paint.

Lincoln Continental is refined in appearance

Refined in appearance and in the level of its handsome appointments, Lincoln Continental for 1977 continues to offer the full-sized convenience and riding comfort traditional in luxury cars.

Two-door coupe and four-door sedan body styles as well as the highly distinctive Town Car and Town Coupe are available.

"The elegant touches we've added to the exterior, the luxurious leathers and velour interior fabrics and the quiet comfort of the ride, more than ever make Lincoln Continental a standard by which other luxury cars will be judged," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and Lincoln-Mercury Division general manager.

"We have continued to expand the number of color and trim combinations available and have added new comfort and convenience items to our list of options so that owners can better individualize their Continentals."

For instance, buyers in 1977 can select from 16 exterior body colors, 14 vinyl-roof colors, 11 paint stripes and 14 bodyside moldings. Five of the exterior colors with matching vinyl roofs are new.

The 1977 Lincoln Continentals are readily identifiable by a new, radiator-style vertical grille. A new Valino-grain vinyl roof is standard on the Town Car and Town Coupe and optional on other models.

Interior refinements include new chamois and cordovan trim colors. A two-tone cordovan and white leather and vinyl interior is available in the Town Coupe. A new high-gloss walnut woodgrain applique is used throughout the interior.

Options available to augment the distinctive styling of the 1977 Lincoln Continental include cast-aluminum Turbine-Styled Wheels and a wide fixed-glass panel Moonroof with interior sun screen.

An Illuminated Entry System — which turns on the interior lights and a ring of light around the door key lock cylinder whenever the door handle button is pushed on either front door — is optional. Other new options include an electrically heated left-hand remote-control outside mirror (part of the Defroster Group), and a CB (citizen's-band) radio with remote power antenna. Two-door models feature new anti-theft interior door-lock buttons.

'77 Rabbit is 10% more powerful

Volkswagen's 1977 Rabbit hatchback, available in two- and four-door versions, has an engine that is about ten percent more powerful than last year's thanks to a fuel injection system that takes the place of a carburetor.

Also new are adjustable front seat headrests, improved interiors and headlight flashers for daytime signaling.

Like all 1977 VWs, the front wheel drive Rabbit carries a 12-month, 20,000 mile limited warranty

Cadillac brings Long Beach the next generation of the luxury car.

1977 Fleetwood Brougham

1977 Coupe deVille

Introducing Cadillac 1977. The brilliant new Fleetwood Brougham with four-wheel disc brakes. The sleek new Coupe deVille. And the stunning new Sedan deVille.

Isn't "next generation" overstating it? Not at all. This is a totally new Cadillac. Engineered from the ground up for more efficient use of space. New body. New chassis. New suspension system. New frame. New engine.

Building on success. How do you improve a car that consistently has had the highest repeat ownership and the highest resale value of any U.S. luxury car make? Basically, by retaining what you like about Cadillac—the comfort, luxury, security and roominess—and adding to it.

More efficient use of space. There's more rear legroom and headroom in the DeVilles. Fleetwood Brougham retains the legroom and headroom of its spacious 1976 counterpart. And all have that roomy, Cadillac-size trunk.

Greater fuel economy. In 1977 EPA mileage tests, Cadillac was estimated at 12 miles per gallon city and 16 mpg highway. Your mileage could vary depending upon the type of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition and available equipment.

It's a lively generation. Here, in Cadillac 1977, is an agile luxury car. Quick to respond. With pickup—all-around performance—that could surprise you. There's more maneuverability for easier parking and a more confident feel in city traffic.

Even more comfort and convenience. There's a new instrument panel that organizes things for you. New easy-entry/easy-exit door design. Match-mounting of tires and wheels for a superb ride. And a new seat/shoulder belt combination you can conveniently draw across your lap any way you like.

To protect your investment. The 1977 Cadillacs are designed to battle rattles and rust. Extensive rust-fighting measures include anti-corrosion inner front fender panels. And widespread use of Zincrometal® and bimetal (stainless steel on aluminum).

A ride you won't believe until you take a test drive. Your Cadillac dealer would be happy to arrange it.

And for a different kind of luxury . . . you might consider the international-size Seville by Cadillac . . . or the 1977 Eldorado with front-wheel drive.

Dodge Charger for 1977 presents a look for formal luxury in its Special Edition version.

Charger: luxurious or sporty

Sportier options, mechanical improvements, and a redesigned Daytona decor package are among a host of new features offered in the 1977 Dodge Charger Special Edition.

Charger SE has a new, distinctive chrome-plated grille for 1977, with a horizontal texture and a five-piece tape stripe application. The tape stripe is the same as the chosen body color.

SE also features a new hood tape treatment. The stripes are color coordinated with the vinyl roof and consists of a double stripe on the hood and grille panel. For 1977, Charger SE also features distinctive deck and side stripes.

Charger's fixed quarter window has been re-styled and squared to present a more formal appearance. These quarter windows are available with or without louvers.

Rear bumpers have been redesigned to accomodate new tail lamps which are set into injection molded nylon quarter end caps.

Charger SE offers, as optional equipment, a removable hatch roof. This new roof features tinted, see-through glass panels over the driver and right side passenger areas. They are easy to remove and can be stored in the trunk.

Charger continues to offer two vinyl roof designs in 1977. The halo and landau style roofs both are available as extra cost options. A new, blue color is being offered for the Charger landau vinyl roof design this year in addition to seven previously available shades.

The Charger Daytona decor package has been redesigned for 1977. A bold, two-tone paint treatment featured applied on the rear quarter panels and the front fenders extending to the doors. The wide pontoon-shaped paint applications are available in three new color combinations: light blue/dark blue; pale yellow/medium gold; and medium silver metallic/black. In addition to the new paint treatment, the Daytona also has stripes on the deck lid, cowl and roof line accent stripes. Racing mirrors, grille accents and Daytona decals also are included in the package.

A new corduroy cloth and vinyl seat material is being offered on the bucket seat for 1977. This new, soft to the touch material is available in three combinations: tan, red, and black. The latter two color offerings have silver accents on the seat inserts.

The "60/40" velour front seat provides a high level of driver and passenger comfort. The driver's portion of the seat is approximately 60 percent of a divided bench and includes a fold-down center armrest. Adjustable reeliners work independently for the driver's backrest and the passenger's. They provide seating positions from 3 degrees more upright than normal to 71.5 degrees horizontal, and a total of 14 different stops.

Courtesy lights in the doors and quarter trim panels, and a recessed armrest integrated into a soft moulding add to the elegance of the interiors.

Standard interior colors are black, blue, green, gold, red, tan or white mixed. Shag carpeting and vinyl bucket seats are standard.

Charger offers a selection of V-8 engines, ranging from the 318 cubic inch two-barrel powerplant to the 400 cubic inch with electronic lean burn.

Befitting its specialty car status, the 1977 Charger Special Edition has bars as standard equipment.

Cadillac radio options include scan feature

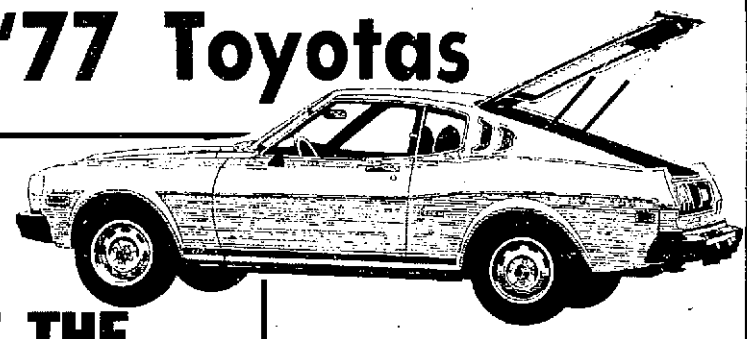

Other Cadillac radio options include a new AM/FM push button stereo radio with digital display of time, date, elapsed trip time and station.

A new exclusive Cadillac option, the "scan" feature, is built into the signal-seeking radio bar above the station selector buttons. When the "scan" button is used the signal-seeking device scans the radio dial, sampling each station signal it encounters for about 10 seconds. When a desired station is heard, another push of the "scan" button locks in the station.

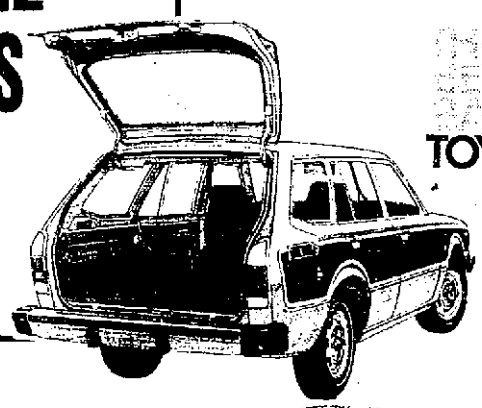

All 1977 Cadillac stereo radios have new circuitry to minimize unwanted FM signals.

All models offer a new CAdillac Electronic Cruise Control option in 1977. This sophisticated unit utilizes micro-circuitry, and includes new "resume" and "advance" features allowing the driver increased flexibility for speed control.

"WHERE SERVICE MATTERS"

Expanded Volare production

Plymouth's Volare — instant success compact — features increased rear seat leg room in coupes for 1977 and an optional 225-2 barrel "Super Six" engine.

Volare, Plymouth's new family of small cars, became Chrysler Corporation's top selling nameplate in its introductory year and ranks among the top ten in industry sales, according to Richard D. McLaughlin, vice president of Chrysler's Automotive Sales Division.

"Volare has exceeded our expectations in terms of the early and strong public acceptance it has received; the number of conquest sales it has recorded and the very strong demand for the wagon version," McLaughlin said.

"Close to 40 percent of Volare sales have been station wagons and we expect that trend to continue in the 1977 model year, eventually leveling off to 38 percent.

"We have increased our production schedules to accommodate buyer demands for Volare. For 1977, we will have three assembly plants building the compact."

The 1977 Volare line-up will continue to offer three body styles on two wheelbases and in three price classes.

The coupe and sedan will be offered in standard, Custom and Premier models, while the station wagon will be available in standard and the Premier, which includes simulated exterior wood grain treatment.

Changes for the 1977 Volare line include new paints, new interior colors, and new options including a "T-Bar" hatch roof with two removable panels. The use of two-tone paint has been expanded from three to nine combinations, and eight new exterior colors will be offered.

Volare Premier wagons will feature as optional equipment, a new tan plaid cloth seating package. This "Hillcrest" design fabric on the 60/40 split bench will be highlighted by plaid accents on door trim panels, shag carpeting on the floor and will be available in combination with five exterior paint colors.

Rear leg and knee room in Volare two-door models has been increased nearly an inch by redesigning the rear seat.

Volare will continue to have the broadest range of options ever offered in a Plymouth compact, including virtually every feature available in full-size cars.

Volare's 1977 engine line-up has been expanded. Standard powerplant is the reliable 225 cubic inch, six-cylinder engine. An optional 225 "Super Six" engine with two-barrel carburetor will also be available specifically for economy-minded buyers who want a peppier, more responsive version. The power rating has been increased about 10 horsepower over the standard 225.

Gremlin appearance change

The AMC Gremlin, the first domestic subcompact car, receives its first major appearance changes for 1977 while retaining the unique Gremlin identity which contributed to its success.

The 1977 Gremlin, four inches shorter than previous models, has a lower, contemporary-style hood and more rear glass area. Front sheet metal, grille and bumper are also redesigned. Rear changes include a larger lift window, larger tail lights and bumper revisions.

Rear glass area is increased 23 per cent for improved visibility. The net result of the styling and design changes is a lighter, more open and airy look that enhances the Gremlin's trim dimensions.

Function and utility are also emphasized in the new Gremlin. The new rear design results in reduced liftover height for more convenient loading and unloading of luggage and packages. Usable passenger space remains the same, even though the 1977 Gremlin at 166 inches overall length is shorter than previous models. Cargo space, with rear seat folded, is a substantial 26.9 cubic feet.

The new Gremlin comes equipped with a higher level of standard equipment than last year's custom model. Standard equipment for 1977 includes custom vinyl bench seats, custom door trim panels, carpeted floor and cargo areas, custom steering wheel, spare tire cover, bright drip moldings, rocker panel moldings, wheellip moldings, two-speed wipers and electric washers, glove box light and cigarette lighter, and front disc brakes.

The "X" package option offers such sporty features as slot-styled wheels, engine-turned instrument panel overlay, bucket seats, sports steering wheel, D70 x 14 tires, special "X" stripe and lower back panel decal.

Standard Gremlin engine is the 232 CID six, with the 258 CID six available as an option. Both offer good fuel economy along with power and performance unique among subcompact cars.

A four-speed manual transmission is now available with both engines. qith the 258 2V six as a performance option. the 304 V-8 is no longer offered on the Gremlin.

Buick engines are equipped with EGR

All Buick engines will be equipped with exhaust gas recirculation (EGR) in combination with the catalytic converter in order to meet the more stringent emission standards for 1977.

Engines certified for California usage will add air injection and specific carburetor and distributor calibrations.

Buick offers five engines in 1977 — the 231 cubic inch V-6, and four V-8's — a 301 CID, a 350 CID V-8 with both two and four-barrel carburetion, and a 403 CID.

The V-6 is standard on LeSabre, Skylark and Skyhawk, and all Century models except the Regal sedan and Century station wagon.

The Regal sedan is powered by the 350-2 V-8, except those registered in California or high altitude areas, where the 350-4 is required.

The 350-4 V-8 is standard on the Century station wagon with the exception of those used in high altitudes. The 403 V-8 is required in those areas.

The 301 V-8 is offered as an option on the LeSabre and Skylark.

The 350-4 is standard on Electra, Riviera and Estate Wagon models and optional on LeSabre, and the 403 CID V-8 is available on all full-size cars in the '77 line — Electra, Riviera, LeSabre and Estate Wagon.

Lean burn expanded

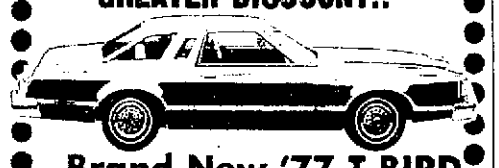

Chrysler Corporation will install its revolutionary electronic lean burn engine system on four V-8 engine families in 1977 models.

Lean burn will be an optional feature on federally-certified 360, 400 and 440 four-barrel V-8's. The 318 two-barrel federally-certified V-8 will be available with lean burn later in the model run.

For the first time, an electronic lean burn engine — the 440 four-barrel — will be available in California in the 1977 model year. This engine will meet the most stringent emission requirements in the nation.

Chrysler introduced the electronic lean burn system in its 400 four-barrel engine during the 1976 model year.

FUN FACTS from WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

A SLOTH CAN TURN HIS HEAD THROUGH A 270-DEGREE ANGLE DUE TO AN UNUSUAL ARRANGEMENT OF NECK VERTABRAE.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT (356 B.C.-323 B.C.) CONQUERED MUCH OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, FROM GREECE TO INDIA, EVEN THOUGH HE DIED BEFORE HIS 33 RD BIRTHDAY.

THE KING COBRA CAN KILL AN ELEPHANT WITHIN 3 HOURS BY STRIKING EITHER THE TIP OF THE TRUNK OR WHERE THE ELEPHANT'S TOENAIL JOINS THE FOOT.

MONTREAL'S $500 MILLION MIRABEL AIRPORT IS THE WORLD'S LARGEST. DEDICATED OCT 4, 1975, IT COVERS 138 SQUARE MILES. (OVER 4 TIMES THE AREA OF MANHATTAN.)

METRIC SYSTEM • PART FIVE

HOW MUCH DOES IT HOLD?

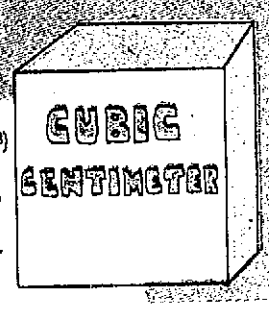

THAT'S A FAIR QUESTION. WE LIKE TO KNOW CAPACITY—OR VOLUME—SO WE KNOW HOW MUCH OF SOMETHING WE'RE BUYING—OR PUTTING IN THE PUDDING.

SO, THIS FIFTH PART OF THE SIX-PART SERIES IS ABOUT VOLUME. CLIP AND SAVE EACH ONE.

CM3

A SIMPLE WAY TO MEASURE VOLUME IS IN CUBIC CENTIMETERS (CM3) ALL YOU DO IS MULTIPLY THE WIDTH TIMES LENGTH TIMES HEIGHT—THAT'S IF THE SIDES ARE ALL NICE, STRAIGHT CENTIMETERS. YOUR ANSWER IS CUBIC CENTIMETERS—SO IF YOU CALL THEM THAT INSTEAD OF A BUNCH OF OTHER NAMES, YOU'LL SIMPLIFY YOUR LIFE. THAT'S WHAT METRIC CAN DO FOR YOU.

NEXT: YOU'RE ALMOST CONVERTED

MAZE OF NAMES

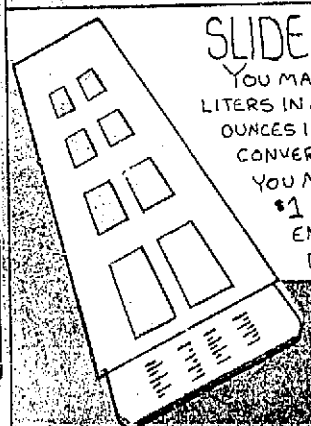

IN OUR CUSTOMARY SYSTEM, WE HAVE PECKS OF NAMES FOR VOLUME, LIKE:

MINIM (ABOUT A DROP—WHICH YOU PROBABLY DIDN'T KNOW)
OUNCE (1/16 POUND; 1/32 QUART; A LITTLE MORE THAN A JIGGER—OR THE AMOUNT OF BRAINS THE OPPOSITION'S CANDIDATE DOESN'T HAVE)
POUND (16 TIMES A LITTLE MORE THAN HALF A JIGGER)
DRAM (ASK YOUR DRUGGIST)
TEASPOON (1/3 TABLESPOON; A RECIPE MEASURE)
TABLESPOON (3 TEASPOONS; A RECIPE MEASURE)
CUP (SEVERAL JIGGERS; A COUPLE OF SWIGS)

THERE ARE MORE—LIKE GALLON, PECK, BUSHEL, BARREL—MEASURING EVERYTHING FROM ANTIFREEZE TO POTATOES. IT'S HARD TO KNOW HOW MUCH YOU'RE GETTING—ISN'T IT?

SLIDE CONVERTER

YOU MAY WANT TO KNOW HOW MANY LITERS IN A U.S. GALLON, OR HOW MANY FLUID OUNCES IN A LITER. THIS HANDY SLIDE CONVERTER WILL BE A VALUABLE TOOL. YOU MAY OBTAIN ONE BY SENDING $1 AND A SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE WITH YOUR REQUEST FOR IT TO:

FORGET QUARTS

PEOPLE LIKE TO GIVE THINGS NAMES. LITER IS ONE OF THOSE NAMES. IT'S NOT REAL OFFICIAL METRIC BUT IT'S USED TO MEAN 1,000 CUBIC CENTIMETERS (CM3)—THAT'S A CUBE, 10×10×10 CENTIMETERS.

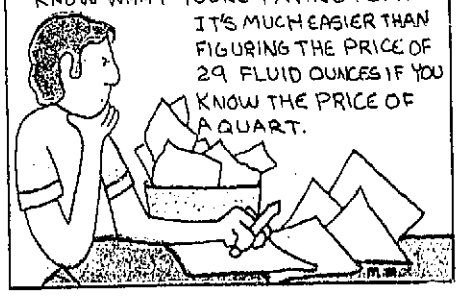

EASY? WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO WITHOUT QUARTS? FORGET THEM—THEY'RE NOT QUITE AS BIG AS A LITER ANYWAY.

EASY FIGURING

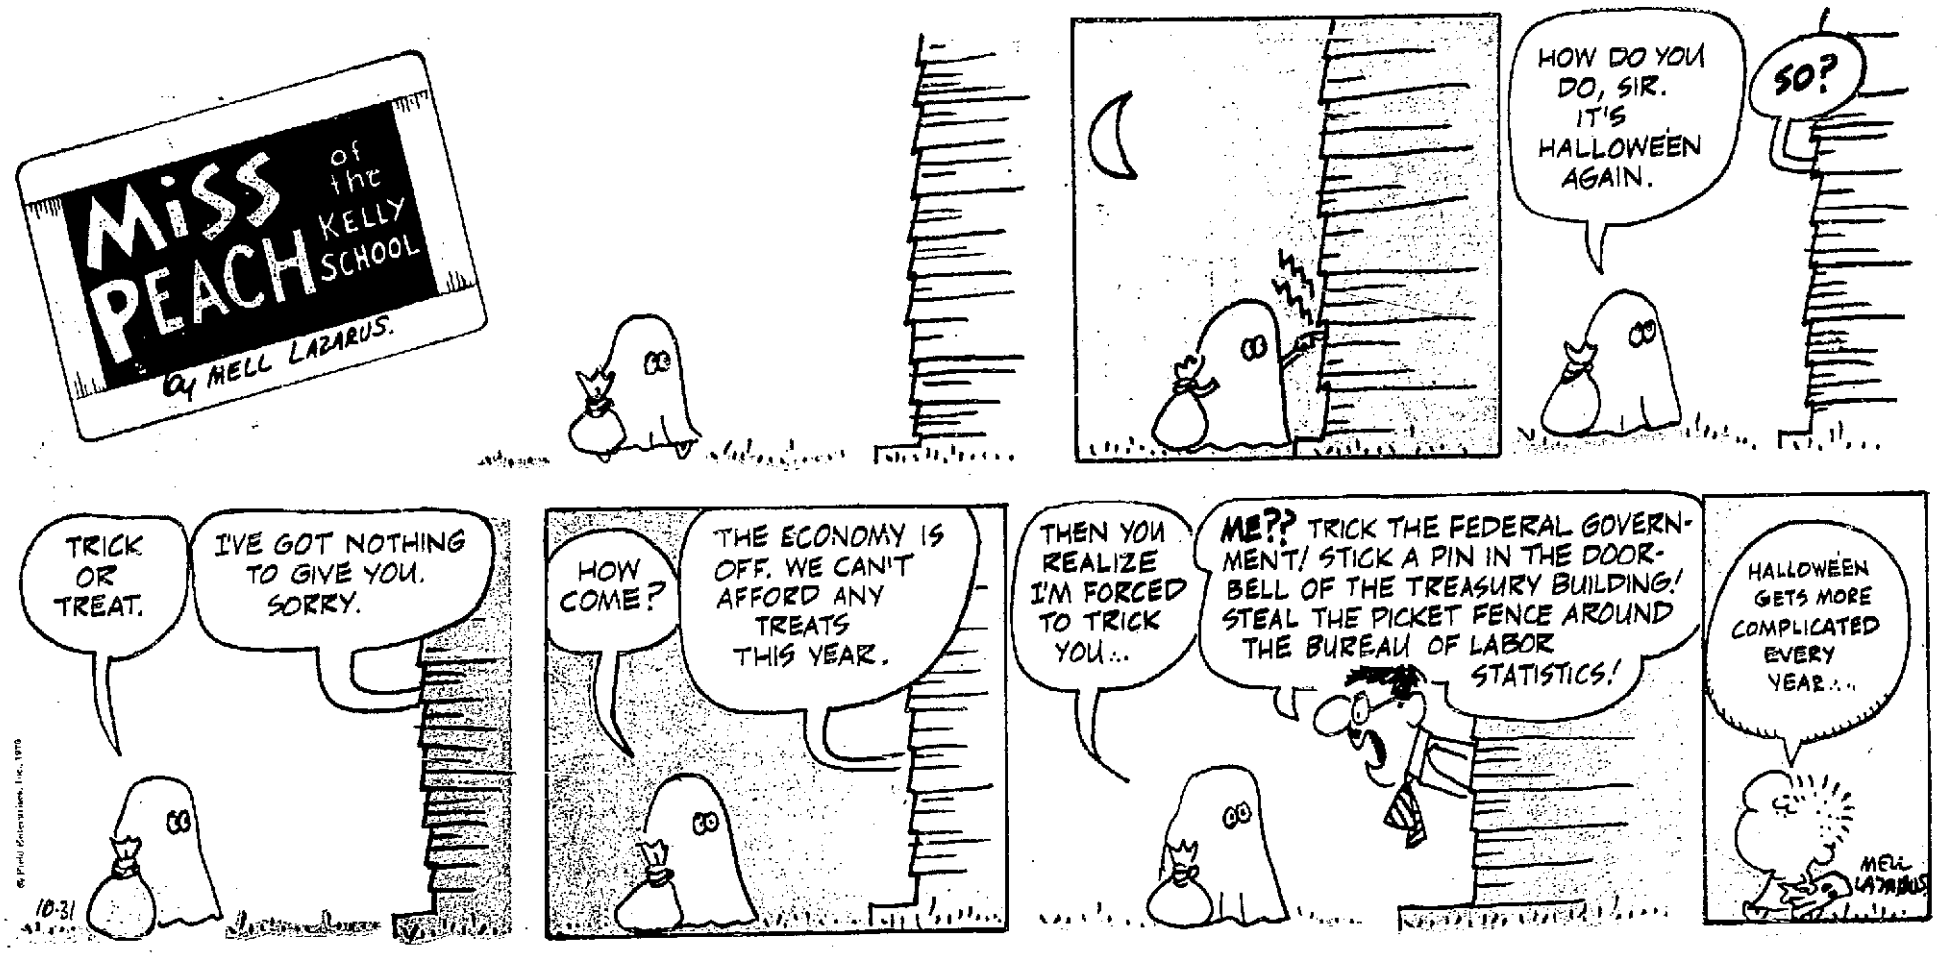

SUPPOSE THE PRICE IS $1 PER LITER—BUT THE CUBE BEING OFFERED YOU IS 10×10×9 CENTIMETERS. THAT'S 900 CM3. SINCE A LITER IS 1,000 OF THEM, 900 IS 90% OF A LITER. IF THE PRICE IS $1 PER LITER, YOU'RE BEING OFFERED 90¢ WORTH. OH BOY—YOU FINALLY KNOW WHAT YOU'RE PAYING FOR.

IT'S MUCH EASIER THAN FIGURING THE PRICE OF 29 FLUID OUNCES IF YOU KNOW THE PRICE OF A QUART.

OFF THE RECORD

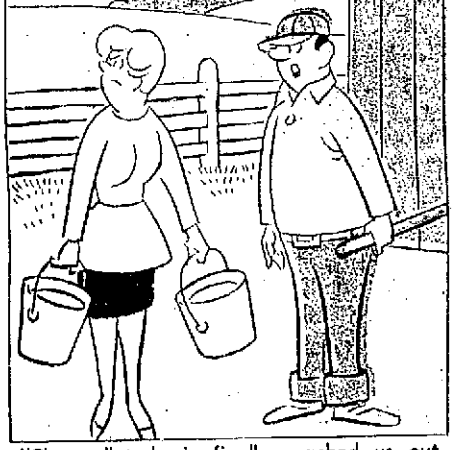

by ED REED

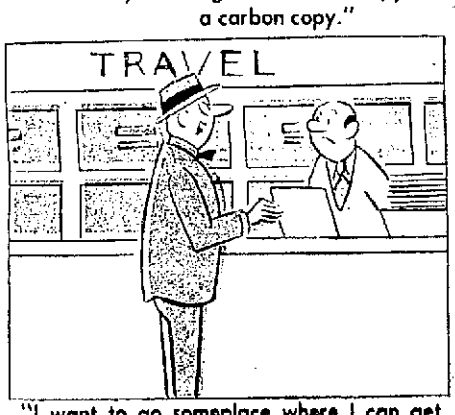

"It's hard to feel important when all you ever get is a carbon copy of a carbon copy."

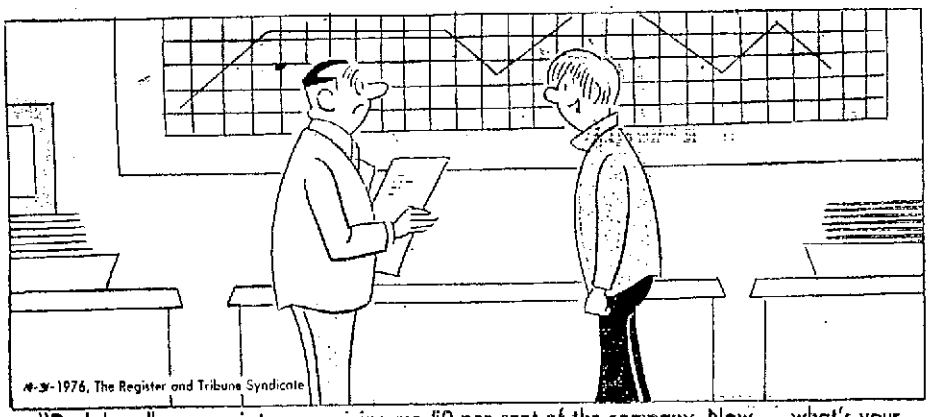

"My fiance feels he isn't worthy of me — and I agree."

"The polluted air finally reached us out here. The pigs aren't grunting anymore — they're coughing."

"I want to go someplace where I can get away from these vacation bills."

"Dad, I really appreciate your giving me 50 per cent of the company. Now — what's your best offer to buy me out?"

Debralee Scott big on 'Hartman' (say it again)

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

DEBRALEE SCOTT . . . sexy sister on 'Mary Hartman'

In the soap opera world of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," the middle name of all the characters seems to be trouble, trouble.

"Infidelity, insanity, alcoholism, perversion, assorted diversions — and an exciting new floor wax — are all yours on the continuing saga of the typical American housewife and her 'All American' family," proclaimed a blurb from Channel 11 heralding the start of the show's second season a few weeks ago.

Norman Lear's nationally syndicated, five-nights-a-week series was one of the most talked about television programs of the 1975-76 season, after being turned down by the networks. It airs on scores of stations across the nation, and is seen in the Los Angeles-Long Beach area weeknights from 11 to 11:30 on KTTV.

As the second season got under way, Mary Hartman (Louise Lasser) was still confined to the psychiatric ward at Fernwood Receiving Hospital. Her husband Tom (Greg Mullavey), plagued by the problem of impotence, was still seeing life through rose-colored bottles. Her mother, Martha Shumway (Dody Goodman), was without a mate, since Mary's father had mysteriously disappeared.

And Mary's younger sister, Cathy Shumway (Debralee Scott), was pregnant and couldn't name the father if her next romance depended on it.

Troubles? They've all got 'em on MH2. But perhaps none of the characters is worse off than poor Charlie Haggers (Graham Jarvis), husband of country singer Loretta (Mary Kay Place) and friend and neighbor of the Hartman clan. Charlie has lost his manhood to a bullet which struck him down low in a dark motel room. Only an animal transplant operation can restore Charlie's pride, and that would mean raising big dough.

OH, WELL, at least Charlie is one man who appears to be safe from Cathy. The sexy young sister of Mary is attracted to just about anyone wearing pants, and the word no isn't in her vocabulary.

Debralee Scott, who portrays Cathy, took time during a rehearsal lunch break the other day to tell me a bit about her role and herself. The interview was conducted in her dressing room on the soundstage at KTTV in Hollywood where Lear produces the series.

The young actress was dressed in form-fitting garb and appeared, you might say, extremely healthy. She's 23, or roughly the age Cathy is supposed to be. Cathy, you understand, is a lot younger than Mary.

Or, as Debralee explains it: "Cathy was a mistake."

Among Cathy's romantic playmates in the first season of the show — any one of whom might be the father of her unborn child — were, Debralee recalled, "an Armenian bartender; a deaf mute who dumped me for a Hollywood ingenue; Police Sgt. Dennis Foley, who also was making out with Mary and another girl at the same time, and Clete Meisenheimer, a news broadcaster who got me a job briefly as a TV weatherperson."

Asked if Cathy were meant to be considered a nymphomaniac, the auburn-haired actress replied: "No — she's choosy. She's looking for someone to love. She's a mixed-up kid right now. She's in a hurry, and she wants total happiness.

"Cathy is trying to get out of Fernwood (Ohio). She is much more well read than anyone else in Fernwood — or thinks she is. She's searching for something. Sometimes it's a tossup between her own independence and getting a man. I hope she stays independent."

After several romances had failed, Cathy went to a local church and tried to convince the priest she wanted to become a nun. Before long, Father DeMarco fell for her himself, and as the first season drew to a close Cathy and the priest ran off together.

"Nothing happened, though — or at least if it did, it was left to the viewers' imagination," Debralee explained.

MISS SCOTT doesn't buy the opinion that MH2 is a spoof of daytime soap operas. "It's not a takeoff on anything," she said, "it's an original. Audiences can do what they want with it — it's on two levels. They can laugh, or they can take it seriously, as many people do. Many viewers take the characters very seriously and worry about them.

"It's very close to life. It's intelligent — that's why the networks turned it down. I think American audiences are ready for it. My parents love it. They think it's funny, and they see nothing dirty in it. And my father is a very straight man — he likes John Wayne and Lee Marvin."

Debralee was born in Elizabeth, N.J., where she lived until she was 15, at which time her family moved to Stroudsburg, Pa. She spent her last year of high school in San Francisco, where an older sister lived, and also studied at the American Conservatory Theater there and went to San Francisco State University for two years.

"I've always wanted to be an actress — except for three days when I thought maybe I'd like to be a housewife and mother. And, golly, here I am! It shows what a little determination will do!" the exuberant young actress said.

"Of course, I've really been lucky. My timing has been good."

Although she considers her role in "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," her biggest break, Debralee was well on her way to success before landing the part.

After playing a corpse in "Dirty Harry" and getting bit parts in "The Candidate," "Superdad" and "American Graffiti" while living in San Francisco, she moved to Hollywood in 1973 and, "on my first interview," got one of the starring roles in the Hallmark Hall of Fame television drama "Lisa, Bright and Dark," with Kay Lenz, "my best friend," and Annie Lockhart, "whom I lived with for a couple of years."

She later was one of the eight stars in the CBS drama series "Sons and Daughters," about high school seniors in the mid-'50s, which aired in the fall of 1974. She played Evie, the easy target of all the boys. Her credits include a few other theatrical movies and TV dramas, and she had the recurring role of Hotsie-Totsie on the ABC comedy series "Welcome Back, Kotter," before shifting to MH2.

Debralee said she has been a "very outgoing" person all her life — "I was a cheerleader and all that" — and she feels she has plenty to cheer about right now.

"You are looking at one very happy girl," said Debbie, whose boyfriend is actor Rudy Ramos.

Now, if Cathy and the others on MH2 can just work out THEIR problems, maybe TV fans can get a good night's sleep.

PATTY DUKE ASTIN, as Bernadette, wants her marriage to Joseph Armagh (Richard Jordan) to be more than a business arrangement, on "NBC's Best Seller: Captains and the Kings," which will air a roundup of the first four chapters at 9 p.m. Thursday on Ch. 4 and a new chapter at 10.

Tube offers 3-hour look at movies over the years

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

This Sunday, NBC is airing a three-hour night of flicks called "Life Goes to the Movies," offering clips of about 200 films made over a 36-year span for viewer inspection.

It represents more than a year's work, consideration of some 800 films, and long, arduous haggling with owners of the chosen films for rights to air excerpts of the movies, says co-producer Mel Stuart.

And the theme of the opus is not simply that these films were what folks watched way back when, he adds, but rather "how they were a reflection of the manners, the mores and the political thrust of the American people when they were made."

ADDED STUART: "The easiest way to explain it is that there's a helluva long way from Andy Hardy to 'The Graduate.' 'The Graduate' wouldn't have been possible in the 1930s. There would have been riots in the streets."

The show is based on and has the same title as the 1975 book about Life magazine's often starry-eyed coverage of moviedom from 1936, when the magazine began, to 1972, when it ceased weekly publication.

The book — and the show's script — were written by Richard Schickel, a former Life movie critic who several seasons ago produced the much-praised public TV series "The Men Who Made the Movies."

Stuart, who co-produced "Life Goes to the Movies" with Schickel and directed it, said the show covers four basic eras of film — the late 1930s, World War II and the postwar years, the 1950s through 1963 and from 1964 through 1972.

LIZA MINNELLI, Henry Fonda and Shirley MacLaine host a three-hour "Big Event" special on Ch. 4 at 8 tonight titled "Life Goes to the Movies." It provides a nostalgic look at the great stars and great films from the mid-'30s to the 1970s.

HE SAID he'll try to show through those eras changing on-screen attitudes towards such things as romance and war, plus looks at the rash of Biblical epics in the 1950s and what caused them, and a phenomena of that decade — movies made specifically for the teen-aged market.

Stuart, a thin, wiry veteran of movies and television who won an Emmy in 1969 for his "Making of the President" TV documentary about the 1968 elections, doesn't think three hours of Sunday night movie-watching will prove too much for the television viewer.

"Number One, I'm breaking it up in a thousand ways," he said, referring to various visual and aural tricks of the trade he's put in the show to keep — he hopes — the viewers' attention.

"AND secondly, I'm giving them (viewers) films like 'Easy Rider,' 'Patton' and 'Philadelphia Story,' and what else can they possibly see like this on another channel at one time."

The show, to be hosted by Henry Fonda, Shirley MacLaine and Liza Minnelli, isn't coming cheaply. Stuart says it's "probably the most expensive documentary ever made."

He declined to say how much it cost to put together, but grinned when asked if one could assume the tab runs way up the six-figure category.

"How about seven?" he suggested.

HOWARD KEEL guest stars as a cattle trail boss who gets involved in a frontier town showdown when his young drover (Mitch Vogel, left), accidentally shoots the marshal's wife, on "The Quest," at 10 p.m. Wednesday on Ch. 4.

GOT A TV QUESTION?

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight News Service

Q. I watched the first show of "Happy Days" and thought Pinky was really super. But my mom says she read that Pinky will only be in four shows. Why is this? She and the Fonz should stay together. — M. P.

A. Roz Kelly, the gal who filled Pinky Tuscadero's costumes — almost — was signed for a limited number of shows. ABC's brass wanted to find out what the viewers thought before making a long commitment. Judging by the reaction and the big rating pulled by "Days," Pinky's a hit and you can figure she'll be around, though not every week.

Q. Is Roz Kelly the girl who won the "Don Adams Screen Test"? That girl was to appear on the new season of "Happy Days." — J. E.

A. "Screen Test" winners got bit parts. And the "new" season mentioned by Adams was the 1975-76 season. "Screen Test" was all done in early spring 1975, never made any more shows and is now off TV. Roz Kelly is no newcomer to movies and TV. Her first break was to play Barbra Streisand's roommate in "The Owl and the Pussycat" in 1970.

Q. I thought John Amos of "Good Times" was going to be working on the Alaskan pipeline. But, now, they've killed him off on the show. What happened? — L. S.

A. First, it was Amos' character in "Good Times," James Evans, whose fate was decided. Actor Amos felt that he was being pushed aside in the show as Jimmy Walker got more and more important. Amos walked out.

Scripters planned to have Evans take an out-of-town job when it seemed as if Amos might be talked into returning to the show. He didn't, so the decision was made to finish off Evans. Many black groups were unhappy with the change in "Good Times" because it was felt the Evans family, with the father in the home, was a good image of black families.

Q. I was in New York not so long ago and one channel there had an entire week of British programs. When will the rest of America get to see these shows? — J. L.

A. What you saw was a week-long, all-day commercial for the British TV producing company Thames TV. It hoped networks and ad agencies

Spanish network to cover election

LOS ANGELES (AP) — True, Guillermo Restrepo lacks the fame of a Walter Cronkite. But on Nov. 2, he'll be Cronkite's equivalent for hundreds of thousands of viewers who want their news in Spanish.

He'll be in New York, anchoring Election Night coverage of the Spanish International Network (SIN), begun here in 1961 to provide programs for Spanish-speaking viewers in the United States.

Restrepo's broadcast — called "Destino '76" — will be fed by satellite, SIN says, from the company's New York outlet to seven stations in four states and possibly to Mexico's Televisa network.

All six SIN-owned stations in New York, Miami, San Antonio, Tex., and Los Angeles, Fresno and San Francisco, will air the show, as will two stations in Modesto, Calif., and Chicago.

ALL SERVE areas with high concentrations of Hispanic residents.

Restrepo, 33, says SIN's election night program, which the company says will cost $100,000 to put on, will of course report on the outcome of the night's main event — the presidential election.

But unlike the major networks, which will take the broad approach to election night coverage throughout the nation, SIN will be far more specialized in its coverage and analyses, he adds.

DANIEL VILLANUEVA, general manager of KMEX-TV (Ch. 34), in Los Angeles, forms a part of the "Destino '76" news team that will provide live, coast-to-coast coverage of the U.S. elections on Tuesday evening on the Spanish International Network.

For starters, Jacobo Zabludovsky, news director of Mexico's Televisa network, will be working with him, commenting on possible effects of the election on Latin America, he said.

And SIN won't emphasize state-by-state returns, said Restrepo, who says he began in news at age 12 as a police reporter on the newspaper of his hometown of Pereira in eastern Colombia.

HE SAID the network instead will concentrate on election-night results of House, Senate and gubernatorial races in 14 key states with large concentrations of Spanish-speaking persons.

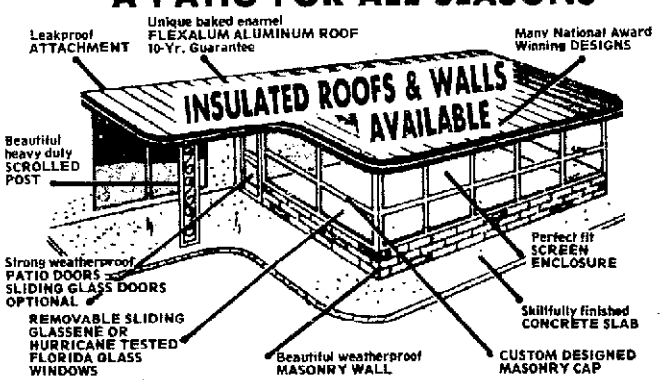

Restrepo, speaking by phone from SIN's New York offices, said close attention also will be given election-night winners — regardless of state — who now serve or want to serve on congressional committees whose work directly affects Hispanic-descent Americans or Latin America.

RESTREPO, who joined SIN more than seven years ago at its station here, KMEX, (Channel 34), said he doubts the major networks will report as extensively as SIN on the backgrounds of those who'll return to these committees or say they want to join them.

"To them (the networks) all the areas are important," he said.

"But some are more important to SIN's Spanish-speaking audience than others because their work is more related to decisions affecting Latin America or the Spanish-speaking people of this country."

which are headquartered in New York, would like its shows well enough to buy them. It's unlikely the stunt will be repeated, although Los Angeles and Chicago have been mentioned as other sites for the sales pitch. Americans already have seen some Thames TV shows. The Lee Remick series, "Jennie: Lady Randolph Churchill," and "World at War" are Thames TV products.

Q. I just glanced at "Sesame Street" and couldn't believe my eyes. Tyrone, the pimp, on the soaper "All My Children," is also on "Sesame Street" romping with the kiddies. Can it be true. — S. B.

A. Why not? Roscoe Orman, who plays Tyrone and "Sesame Street's" Gordon, is an actor doing two separate parts. Surely you aren't one of the many misguided who think the serials are so "true to life" that the characthers are real people and not actors playing roles.

Q. Tell me about the guy who played Alex in "Dawn: Portrait of a Teen-age Runaway." He's just dreamy. Where can I write to him? — S.D.

A. Leigh J. McCloskey is a native of Southern California, got his first big part last year when he played Billy Jordache in the final episodes of the original "Rich Man, Poor Man." He was considered too young to do the part in the series. Write him in care of ICPR, 9255 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

Q. Where can I write the producers of "Rhoda" to let them know how many viewers they will lose if they don't get Rhoda and Joe back together. — C. M.

A. Producers James L. Brooks and Allan Burns broke up the Gerard marriage because they were losing viewers with them together. Rhoda was funnier when she was chasing a man than after she had landed him. But, you can tell your side to Brooks and Burns at MTM Enterprises Inc., 4024 Radford Ave., North Hollywood, Calif., 91604.

Doctor, my mother treated me like an animal.

Dogs: we overfeed them. Overdress them. Sometimes we even send them to the shrink.

Be watching tonight on Channel 7 as Eyewitness News Reporter Fred Anderson begins a three-part series on our favorite four-legged friends.

You'll see how man's best friend often gets the best of us. Plus, you'll find out why dogs seem to like us so much... and why we go crazy over them.

Don't miss "Pampered Pooches" tonight at six. Because the world may just be going to the dogs.

INTRODUCING LIFE-SIZE COLOR TELEVISION

Advent's VideoBeam™ 750 Brings Football (And Everything Else) To Life in Your Living Room.

Advent's VideoBeam ™ 750 is a totally new kind of color TV set. Its 6-foot diagonal measure picture is more than 15 times the size of the picture most people watch at home.

It brings you TV as you've never seen it. Alive. Involving. In the room instead of in the box.

The Videobeam 750 is a unique two-piece TV set. Its console unit (about the size of an end table) projects the picture onto a separate screen.

It's as easy to operate as a standard color set. And its big picture is bright and clear. You can watch in ordinary light in an ordinary room.

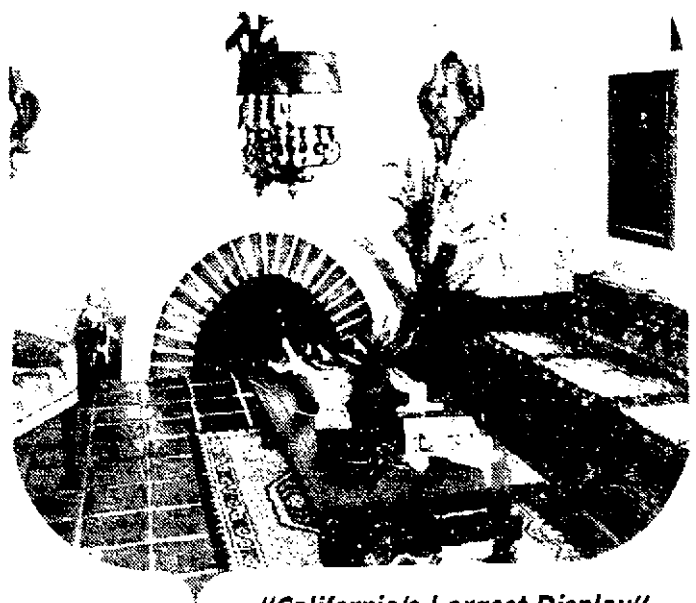

Until you see Advent color television, you really haven't seen television.

SPECIAL

SNOOPY COME HOME (2), 8:00 p.m. — Charlie Brown's "best friend," his bumbling beagle Snoopy, leaves Peanutland to return to his first owner, a lonely, ailing little girl named Lila, and a heartbroken Charlie and the rest of the Peanuts realize how much the little canine means to them.

MOVIE (7), 9:00 p.m. — "Nightmare in Badham County." Deborah Raffin stars in the story of two innocent college girls sentenced to the horrors of a primitive women's prison farm with no way to tell their parents and friends where they are. Also stars Lynne Moody. (Due to mature subject matter, parental discretion is advised.)

MOVIE (2), 9:30 p.m. — "Play It Again, Sam." Woody Allen's comedy about a poor schnook who invokes the spirit of Humphrey Bogart to win the ladies. (Due to mature theme, viewer discretion is advised.)

SENATOR TOWER

ANNA CHENNAULT

Q. John Goodwin Tower, the Republican U.S. Senator from Texas, is splitting from his wife, the former Lou Bullington of Wichita Falls, Tex., after 24 years of marriage and three daughters. Isn't this because the mighty mite plans to marry the Chinese dynamo Anna Chennault, widow of Gen. Claire Chennault, who used to fly for the late Chiang Kai-shek?—G.T., Wichita Falls, Tex.

A. Senator Tower may in fact marry again. His second wife will not be Anna Chennault. At this point Mrs. Chennault is pretty much taken up by Tommy Corcoran, one of the last survivors of Franklin D. Roosevelt's brain trust.

Q. Is it true that sleeping pill manufacturers plan to package the Ford-Carter debates and sell them as sleep-inducing cassettes?—H.L., Washington, D.C.

A. Neither man is an orator. Both lack fire, zeal, crackle, pop, inspiration, the vital quality of arousing rapport with their audiences. They are stiff, automaton-like, and so obviously programmed as to eliminate all spontaneity.

Q. Is Armand Hammer, chairman of the Occidental Petroleum Corp., a crook? I have heard so much about this character and his relationship with the Soviet Union.—P.R., Los Angeles.

A. This past March, Dr. Hammer was sentenced to one year's probation and fined $3000 for making illegal political gifts of $54,000 to President Nixon's 1972 reelection campaign. Marvin Watson, one of Lyndon Johnson's top White House aides, helped Hammer cover up illegal campaign contributions. Watson used to work for Occidental. Hammer is a colorful and controversial character who reportedly helped the Communists under Lenin in the early 1920's and, because of that, supposedly has an "in" with the Soviets. He has been instrumental in fostering U.S.-U.S.S.R. cultural exchanges.

Q. I have been told that the one great American pharmaceutical development was cortisone. Who was responsible for this invention?—Louis Miller, Brooklyn, N.Y.

A. Edward Kendall, Ph.D., and Philip Hench, M.D., both of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., made the first major breakthrough in developing cortisone, along with Swiss chemist Tadeusz Reichstein. Dr. Hench believed that pregnant women secreted a cortical hormone that relieved the symptoms of arthritis. Dr. Kendall isolated six hormones or steroids secreted by the adrenal glands, labeling them A through F. Both researchers believed that the fifth steroid, compound E, was the most effective.

On Sept. 21, 1948, Dr. Hench administered a dose of compound E (later called cortisone) to a 29-year-old woman incapacitated by arthritis. Four days later she was active again. Cortisone was then administered to 13 other arthritics with similar dramatic results. In 1950 Tadeusz Reichstein, who isolated the first pure adrenal steroid, Philip Hench and Edward Kendall were all awarded the Nobel Prize for their research on treating rheumatoid arthritis. Their discovery and initial testing gave rise to the development of steroid drugs.

Q. How old is Rodney Allen Rippy, the darling little black boy featured in the Jack-in-the-Box TV commercials, and what is he doing now?—Lon Knox, Compton, Cal.

A. Rodney Allen Rippy is 8, recently completed a series of TV soft drink commercials for Nehi.

Q. Did Sinclair Lewis, one of America's greatest writers—he won the Nobel Prize—turn alcoholic when he learned that his wife, Dorothy Thompson, was a lesbian?—Leonard Richardson, Cambridge, Mass.

A. Sinclair Lewis started drinking heavily long before Dorothy Thompson engaged in her lesbian affair with Christa Winsloe, author of "Maedchen in Uniform."

Q. Actress Goldie Hawn was more than six months pregnant when she married Bill Hudson of the Hudson Brothers. Did she ever give birth to a baby?—Mary Chester, Towson, Md.

A. Goldie delivered via Caesarian section a 10½-pound boy named Oliver in September, 1976.

SEPARATED: BURT BACHARACH AND ANGIE DICKINSON

Q. Who or what is responsible for breaking up the marriage of Angie Dickinson and Burt Bacharach? She is the star of the TV series "Police Woman" and he is the former pianist for Marlene Dietrich and the composer of "Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head." —Theresa Kline, Atlantic City, N.J.

A. After 11 years of marriage, the Bacharachs have decided on a trial separation. They will share custody of their daughter Nikki, 10. Career differences is the reason they have given for the split.

Q. Is it a fact that Ryan O'Neal and Jack Nicholson no longer speak to one another because O'Neal stole Nicholson's girlfriend, Anjelica Huston, 24, daughter of director John Huston?—Florence Curran, Montclair, N.J.

A. Romeo O'Neal didn't steal her. The affairs of these Hollywood characters change daily. Anjelica is now back in Nicholson's arms. Tomorrow, who knows?

On Tuesday the United States will elect as its President either Republican Gerald R. Ford or Democrat Jimmy Carter. PARADE sought out both candidates for an expression of their hopes for themselves and the nation.

Robert Walters and Charles Peterson interviewed Ford at the White House and Carter at his home in Plains, Ga. To gain further insights into the two men, they also consulted politicians, academic experts and journalists.

The following articles seek to provide those insights.

"...I'm a careful planner. I have an engineering background...I'm a quiet person and determined..."

PLAINS, GA.

As a result of Vietnam and Watergate, trust, in Jimmy Carter's opinion, has become the overriding election issue.

According to Patrick Caddell, Carter's pollster and campaign adviser, "The problem both candidates face is the embedded cynicism in the country. The people have been burned so many times they have trouble believing anyone."

In Plains, Ga., recently, PARADE caught Carter in an unusually reflective mood. Dressed in a faded blue work shirt, blue jeans and heavy-soled work shoes, he draped his 5-foot 10-inch, 155-pound frame around a comfortable chair and talked freely, first about his weaknesses:

"I'm impatient with inattention to duty or lack of a deep commitment to a cause. I'm very demanding, I think, on my fellow political workers and maybe I'm not as inclined as I ought to be to compliment or congratulate people who do a good job.

Admits mistakes

"I believe that I am stubborn, which may be a weakness or a defect. Tenacious is another word. Once I set my mind to do something, I find it very hard to deter from it. I make a lot of mistakes. Sometimes I've elected to admit them, sometimes maybe I admit them freely because I know they are going to be revealed anyhow."

Asked to describe himself, Carter hesitates briefly, then chooses these words: "I'm careful. I'm a careful planner. I have an engineering and scientific background. I'm an administrator. I'm a quiet person and determined.

"I have no rigidly defined political philosophy that can be described in one word. I'm quite conservative when it comes to government management, balanced budgets, careful spending, the elimination of unwarranted bureaucracy, paperwork, red tape.

His conservative side

"I believe in the strengthening of local governments, I believe in the free enterprise system, and I'm a strong and committed advocate of personal privacy. So those things would be considered conservative.

"On the other hand, I've a strong commitment to civil rights, to human rights, to environmental quality. I guess they would be considered liberal in some ways."

On the campaign trail: Carter shakes hands with fans at the Evansville, Ind., airport before speaking at a fund-raising rally.

Carter was perceived during the Presidential primaries as a brilliant political tactician. But one Carter characteristic that disturbs many skeptical observers is that he seems to be a loner.

Carter flatly denies that suggestion: "It's not true. I have a lot of close friends that I've had from my infancy all the way up through college and my naval career and, of course, now.

"If I hadn't had them, I could not have won [the Democratic nomination] because when I began my campaign I didn't hold public office, I didn't have a campaign organization, I didn't have much money. Nobody thought I would win. I was not accepted as a major political figure.

"But because of the tight-knit friendships that I've had, large groups of Georgia people who knew me well, who have been very close to me, went at their own expense to campaign for me in those [primary election] states.

"So far as I know, no other candidate in the history of the country has had that kind of home-base support.

"I have a desire sometimes to be alone, walk in my fields and woods and swamps where I grew up, but I've had a good demonstrated commitment of friends toward me, both personally and politically."

Strong desire to lead

Carter is an ambitious, aggressive, seasoned politician with a strong desire to provide moral and spiritual leadership to a country which recently has endured its worst political crisis since the Civil War. It is here that Carter believes President Ford has failed:

"There's only one person in this country who can speak with a clear voice to the American people, or call on them to make a sacrifice and explain why, or put forth programs to correct problems. And that's the President.

"In the absence of that leadership, the country drifts. When President Ford never puts forward a proposal to put our people back to work, you've got 535 members of Congress in a confused state, with no consistent voice and no consistent purpose.

"In sometimes a fumbling way, sometimes a mistaken way, they come forward with proposals on education or energy or agriculture or environmental quality or transportation or employment or housing.

"And when the President sits there—timid, dormant, without any leadership at all—and simply turns down everything that Congress proposes without putting forward any alternatives, this aggravates an already bad situation because it creates not only deficits and high unemployment, but it also saps

"...I probably don't come down hard enough on people...I'm very tolerant of human error..."

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Gerald Rudolph Ford, who became President when Nixon resigned in August, 1974, is determined to prove that he has earned his right to the job for four more years.

When Ford succeeded to the Presidency, he had no intention of making this year's race. "I would say I began thinking about it some time in the early fall of 1974," he told PARADE during a candid discussion of his personal and political beliefs.

One month after moving into the White House, "I saw that we had serious problems overseas with the war in Vietnam" as well as "serious economic problems developing" at home, says Ford, explaining why he decided to seek a full four-year term of his own:

"I became more and more convinced as we got later into 1974 and early into 1975 that it was essential that the person who was President during this difficult time at home and abroad had to be in a position to say that if he did a good job he ought to continue those policies for the next four years.

The firm decision

"It was sort of a developmental process in my mind, so it probably took a month or two, maybe a little longer, before I really made up my mind. It became more and more evident that it was necessary, certainly by early 1975."

Ford also recalls that his vivacious wife Betty told him, "If you think that's what you want to do, if you think that's the right thing to do, I'll support you."

"Since becoming President, I think the biggest problem we have . . . is that we have not sold the things we've done as effectively as we should," says Ford, who served as a Michigan Congressman for a quarter century.

Part of the difficulty in selling Jerry Ford to the country has been Ford himself—a President who acknowledges his inability to be tough on subordinates. (A case in point was the resignation this month of Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz.)

"I probably don't come down hard enough on people. I don't reprimand. I don't fire people. I'm very tolerant of human errors. I try to stimulate people to do things, but I don't slam the door in their face if they don't come up to my expectations."

Ford admits that "a little too much human reaction" may be involved, then adds, "That's probably one of my admitted errors. I can't be a toughy when it comes to friends."

A welcoming crowd watches as President Ford, in a happy mood, waves intertwined Italian and American flags during his visit to the Italian Market in Philadelphia.

That lenient approach placed an extra burden on Betty Ford in disciplining their children during their formative years, the President says. "She had to be the baddy," he recalls with a laugh, "and I was the goody."

Ford still is widely viewed by the country's voters as a "good guy"—a decent, honest and trustworthy man—and some who have worked for him in the White House believe he isn't given enough credit for his leadership.

One former aide contrasts Ford's style with that of his immediate predecessors, Richard Nixon, a Republican, and Lyndon Johnson, a Democrat:

"When Johnson brought a group of people together to discuss a problem, he usually had his mind made up in advance and simply wanted to form a consensus around his predetermined position.

'Ford solicits advice'

"Nixon would call people together for advice on a problem, but he was so secretive and played everything so close to the vest that you never knew where he stood until he went off to Camp David to mull over the situation.

"Ford has an open mind, he solicits advice, he really listens, he considers all views, then makes his decision on the basis of available information, not prejudice or predisposition."

Says another onetime Ford assistant: "The same plodding, methodical Jerry Ford known to the public also is a guy who takes advice well, is tough and remembers well." He believes Ford is "a damned fine leader," although he acknowledges that "it doesn't always come across well, and that's a shame."

That analysis is shared by a reporter who has covered Ford throughout his White House tenure. "He's a better President than a candidate," he says. "Ford's not always decisive, but he's not the bumbler he's often made out to be."

Along with other observers of the President, that newsman suggests that Ford has not made evident to the voters any long-range strategy for leading the nation. "He's playing it day-to-day. If he has any vision, it's a seat-of-the-pants vision."

'Little' to praise

Rep. Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, the Massachusetts Democrat who is House Majority Leader, says that "while Ford can be commended for his integrity, there is little else praiseworthy to be said of his brief tenure."

O'Neill knows the President better than most politicians because the two men worked together for 20 years and frequently played golf during Ford's days in the House. But politics has always transcended that friendship, and O'Neill has little good to say about the Ford candidacy.

Another view comes from Thomas E. Cronin, visiting professor of politics at Brandeis University: "Ford promised great communication, conciliation and compromise with Congress. Instead, he away the strength and the purpose and the confidence of our people in the future.

"I don't think President Ford is a leader. He has shown no inclination to exert his leadership. We've got hundreds of problems that need to be addressed, and he's been extremely timid and fearful about facing them.

"There's an almost total breakdown between the White House and the Congress. There's been no attempt on the part of the Administration to deal with unemployment, the unfair tax system, energy problems, the correlation between defense mechanisms and the effectuation of foreign policy.

"There has been no study of what could be done about the welfare mess or adequate health care. There has been no attention given to the efficiency of the government organization structure to break up the sweetheart arrangements that exist between the government and powerful and sometimes selfish special interest groups.

Says Ford dodges problems

"All these questions address themselves to the President, and whenever something's going wrong in Washington, whenever these questions have not been answered, President Ford acts as though it's not his responsibility at all."

But can Carter—who served a single term as Governor of Georgia—provide leadership?

Carter's eyes flashed when asked about criticism that his leadership is untested, especially in foreign affairs:

"There is no one who can demonstrate executive leadership in the foreign policy sphere except an ex-President and an ex-secretary of state. No one else.

"The only thing you can do is to assume that, with proper knowledge and intelligence and executive ability demonstrated in other areas of life, you could understand the complicated mechanisms of foreign policy and exert the same kind of leadership."

Both at home and when campaigning, the toothy smile, the soft-spoken words and the slate-blue eyes continue to be Carter trademarks. "When he gets mad, those eyes can be very intimidating," says Boston Globe political reporter Curtis Wilkie.

"He's very much aware of his eyes, and he uses them very well," adds Wilkie, who has followed Carter almost constantly since the New Hampshire primary. "They're incredible; they're like laser beams."

Like a number of other reporters who have watched Carter's meteoric political rise, Wilkie believes the Democratic nominee is "the smartest guy I've ever covered"—but he also describes Carter as "very cunning, very calculating."

One manifestation of those traits has been the charge, which has haunted Carter throughout the campaign, that he is purposely vague on the issues.

'Listeners confused'

Says Jim Merriner, political editor of the Atlanta Constitution, a paper which has long been at odds with Carter:

"The charge that Carter flip-flops on the issues is actually more complex and subtle than that. Listeners are sometimes confused or misled about Carter's stands because he has a kind of contortionist's ability to spread-eagle himself over all corners of an issue.

"Also, Carter can provoke wariness in his listeners by apparent exaggeration and inconsistencies in his statements. Political rhetoric is not held to scientific standards of truth, and Carter's stretching of the facts ordinarily would not rate a second glance.

"However, by pitching his campaign on promises never to lie to the voters or deliberately mislead them, Carter invites an extra sharp eye on his statements. Those statements often embody lawyer-like distinctions that seem to imply something other than what is stated."

Carter characterizes such suggestions as little more than nit-picking. He notes that today's complicated issues often demand complex answers. And he emphasizes that in this electronic age he can't afford to offer contradictory positions on issues because every public statement he makes is recorded and likely to be broadcast to the nation.

Seeks workers' support

Most of those statements are delivered not to elite audiences but rather to working-class supporters of the populist candidate.

"I won the Democratic nomination with the support of the workers," says Carter. "I didn't depend on Senators or members of Congress, or Governors, or newspaper editors, or labor leaders, or businesses to put me in office.

"I depend on the farmers, on factory-shift workers, on housewives and others going into shopping centers," he adds. "My whole political concept has been to go directly to the people."

Ford

has gone out of his way to antagonize and paralyze Congress."

Similar criticism has come from Jimmy Carter, who has sought throughout the campaign to portray the President as a weak, ineffectual leader lacking vision and foresight.

"I think he's categorically in error," says Ford, claiming a record of high-caliber leadership in both domestic affairs and foreign policy.

"To take one example in the international field, this is the first Administration in the history of this country that's had a comprehensive African policy, and we're undertaking it under very difficult circumstances. It's an example of real leadership.

Cites economics

"If you turn to domestic problems, it certainly is an indication of leadership when a President has thrust on him—something he inherited—the worst economic recession in 40 years, and he has the courage and the judgment and the wisdom to do the right things to get us out of it."

Ford also rejects Carter's charge that he has appointed incompetent political cronies from his days in the House of Representatives to high-salaried policy-making positions.

"We've turned down some," Ford reveals. "We don't advertise that, but there are former colleagues of mine who did want appointments, but we made decisions to the contrary." The President then explains his approach to filling such jobs:

"The individuals I've appointed who came from Congress—both the Senate and the House—have been extremely capable and very well fitted for the job, both by experience and by judgment."

Ford is firm in his belief that Carter is not qualified to be President "because of the political philosophy that he holds." Explains the President:

"He is a liberal, whether it's in spending more money or in social legislation he seems to approve. He is a liberal in the typical Democratic category, and I don't think a person with that philosophical view ought to be President."

Has Ford made any mistakes during his nearly 30 years in politics? "I have never felt you ought to look back. You should not forget what happened in the past, but you ought not to dwell on it," he says. "I'm always looking down the road as to what to do in the future."

Asked about his support of the Vietnam war, he replies: "I think we made the right decision to go in as we did. Once we got as involved as we did in 1965-66 and that period, we either should have made a much greater military effort —which I think if we had at that time, we could have been successful—or we should have begun to phase out or not gotten committed.

Vietnam lesson

"That's the lesson I think we've learned in Vietnam. If you're going in, you have to go in full speed. If you don't, you shouldn't go in in the first place or you ought to back off in the process. That's a lesson I hope future Presidents have learned from Vietnam."

What would Ford be doing today if he hadn't entered public life? Would he have continued practicing law in his home town of Grand Rapids, Mich.?

"I like the law, but I think after a period of time I would have been interested in the judiciary . . . but that point never came because I got into politics about three years after I got back from military service."

Ford says he has not even considered what he might do if he loses the election because "I've always had a positive attitude toward winning a ball game or an election, so we have made no special plans whatsoever."

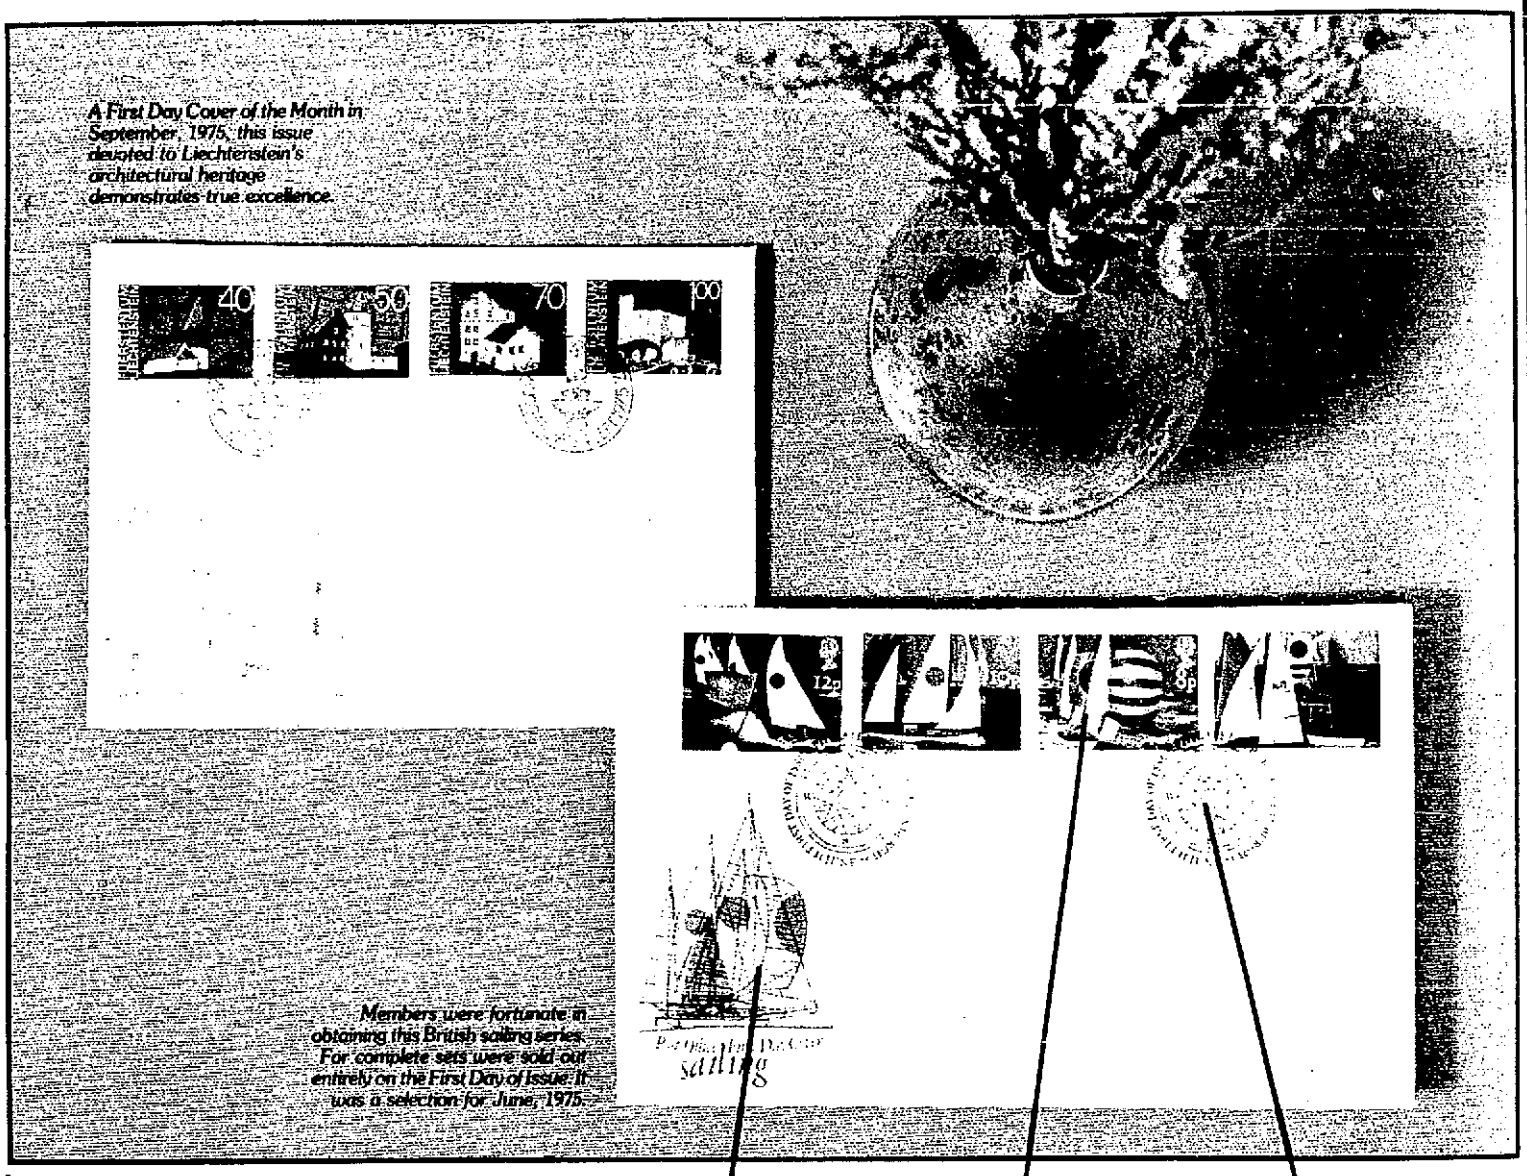

The President says that when he traveled to his alma mater, the University of Michigan, for a mid-September campaign appearance, "I was kidding one of the deans. . . . I said sometime I may come back and ask you for a job as a political science instructor."

Ford is convinced that he can and will win the race, but he is disturbed about the political alienation which may keep millions of eligible Americans from voting:

The duty to vote

"Everybody says, 'My one vote doesn't make any difference, so I'm not going to walk down to the corner to register and I'm not going to walk that same distance to vote.' If there are 60 million to 70 million people who do vote, the other 65 million that don't vote give to each of those other people two votes—or more.

"I think it's really unforgivable—totally indefensible," says the President. "If you aren't going to get excited about the candidates, get excited about America. That's what you ought to get excited about."

For a limited time
You are invited to become a Member of the

First Day Cover-of-the-Month Society®

and thereby to personally acquire
First Day Covers of the world's most important stamps
as they are issued, from wherever they are issued.

Each month the Society will obtain three of the world's most important First Day Covers exclusively for Members.

Each will be authentic in every respect: in design, format, subject and, most importantly, the Official First Day of Issue postmark.

Memberships are now open for a limited time only. All applications must be postmarked by December 31, 1976.

In no small part because of their beauty, International First Day Covers are widely regarded as the most significant and important collectibles of our time. And for good reason. They are the first editions of the world's postage stamps. Forever limited to the precise number officially postmarked by each issuing nation on the precise First Day of Issue.

Truly, few things in the world inspire more favorable comment than the world's fascinating stamps. They are a nation's monuments in miniature. Masterpieces of the designer's and the printer's arts. Mirrors of the world's culture and history; wildlife and geography; art and architecture; men and women; hopes and aspirations.

Yet, relatively few ever reach collectors in the United States. Of them a small percentage are First Day Covers.

An old tradition.

The tradition of collecting International First Day Covers is a rather old one, dating back to the late 1800's. Over the years, wealthy collectors, diplomats, and members of royalty have built excellent collections.

They have prized them as the most desirable specimens of a Nation's stamps; for, unlike the entire printing of a new stamp, the First Day Covers are issued for one day only . . . and so certified by postal authorities of the issuing nation with the official "First Day of Issue" postmark.

A rare collecting opportunity.

The First Day Cover of the Month Society has been instrumental in overcoming the barriers of time, distance, language, and geography to make it possible for the collector of modest means to enjoy this same privilege of building an outstanding private collection of First Day Covers of the world's most significant stamps. And, of receiving them automatically through a convenient monthly acquisition plan, as they are issued, from wherever they are issued.

A Collection of world-wide importance.

Each month the Society obtains First Day Covers of three — and only three — of the world's most important First Day Covers. Exclusively chosen for the Membership, they are the handful which achieve a unique combination of artistic, historical, and technical perfection. The issues which, the Society believes, are the most likely to stand the test of time.

Selections of great merit.

Significantly, a number of First Day Covers selected by the Society have later become highly rated and eagerly sought after by collectors. An outstanding British Sailing issue of June, 1975, for instance, (illustrated at left), took the philatelic world by storm and complete sets sold-out on the very First Day of Issue. Certainly, there can be no guarantee that any particular First Day Cover will increase in value or merit with the passage of time. But this example points to the quality of the Society's selections.

All Society selections are carefully chosen according to the same rigorous criteria. And chosen before their merits are widely discussed; when they can be obtained by Members of the Society at the original issue price.

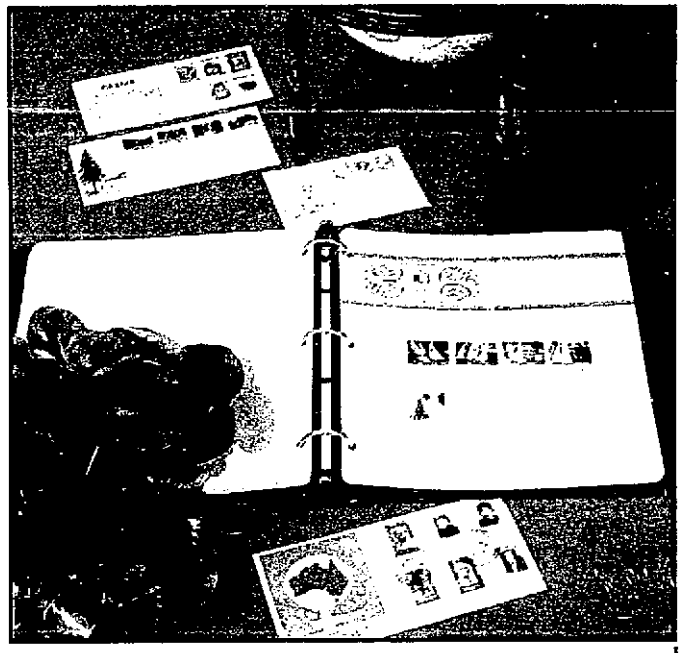

Authentic issues.

Each First Day Cover you receive will be authentic in every respect. Every one will be designed, printed, officially postmarked and issued according to each nation's established philatelic traditions. No two will be alike.

Knowledgeable collectors recognize that this rich diversity is the hallmark of authentic International First Day Covers. Those who enroll as members of the Society will experience first-hand these same qualities which have fascinated collectors of International First Day Covers for nearly a century.

The Benefits of Membership.

As a Member, you will receive each month three First Day Covers of the world's most important new stamps. The total price of $2.75 per cover ($8.25 per month) will be firmly guaranteed to you for a full eighteen months — a most unusual and significant guarantee. In addition, you may cancel your membership at any time upon thirty days' notice. However, those who do will forfeit the opportunity of building a complete collection from the beginning of 1977.

A handsomely-designed album to protect and display the collection will also be provided at no additional cost. And to enhance the educational value of the collection, an authoritative commentary will accompany each issue.

Memberships close December 31, 1976.

Never before has it been possible for the average person to so selectively acquire a collection of such breadth. As a Member you will be able to build an excellent, private collection of International First Day Covers. An authentic collection which you, your children, and their children will appreciate for generations to come.

Your application must be postmarked no later than December 31, 1976. After that date, applications will be accepted only once each year, only for a short period of time, and only at the prices then prevailing. To apply for membership, mail your application directly to Fleetwood, 1 Unicover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008, America's oldest purveyor of First Day Covers, under whose auspices the Society was established.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

SEX, NOT MONEY Sex, not money, has taken over as the major marital problem for couples seeking marriage guidance. That at least is the situation in Britain, according to a spokesman for the National Marriage Guidance Council.

Nicholas Tyndall of the organization says: "Couples are told all the time that they ought to be having a good, full and active sex life.

"They believe that, and if it doesn't happen to them, they want to know what to do about it. They say that they are not achieving a successful sexual performance and it is affecting the stability of their marriages."

Many times, Tyndall points out, more than half the couples who seek marital guidance complain about the personal defects of their partners, highlighting selfishness, anger, temper, irritability, jealousy and other such traits. But frequently the root cause is sexual incompatibility.

TRAINING SABOTEURS Intelligence sources report that the Soviet Union and other European Communist countries are training young Africans in military tactics and sabotage.

Having achieved success in Angola through the use of Cuban troops, the Soviets are apparently determined to achieve major influence throughout Africa via secret supporters and saboteurs.

Lajos Lederer, writing in London's Sunday Observer, estimates that Communist bloc countries, with the exception of Romania, are training more than 7000 Africans for espionage and sabotage.

'GONE WITH THE WIND' AUTHOR MARGARET MITCHELL (L) IN 1937; OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND TODAY AND AS MELANIE IN 1939 FILM.

FORTY YEARS LATER Forty summers ago, Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" burst upon the publishing world, transforming its small, shy, Southern author into an overnight celebrity.

This year Macmillan, the original publisher, is bringing out "Margaret Mitchell's 'Gone With the Wind' Letters 1936-1949," which reveals what success did to Peggy Marsh (as she was called in Atlanta).

To commemorate the 40th anniversary of "Wind" and the 76th birthday of the author, who died in 1949, Macmillan is also publishing a new edition of the novel with an introduction by author James Michener.

To date there have been 85 editions of "Gone With the Wind," the book never having gone out of print and averaging 25,000 hardcover and 250,000 paperback copies per year. "Gone With the Wind" was "discovered" by Harold Latham of Macmillan on a Southern scouting trip in 1935.

Margaret Mitchell's brother Stephens inherited the literary rights after the death of Miss Mitchell's husband, John Marsh. For years Mitchell, following his sister's instructions, declined to publish her letters. She was a stickler for privacy and, in fact, destroyed many of her letters and much of the "Gone With the Wind" manuscript.

Richard Harwell, a librarian at the University of Georgia and a good friend of the Marsh family, finally prevailed upon Stephens Mitchell to grant permission to publish the letters.

First editions of "Gone With the Wind"--those dated May, 1936--are now worth $2500. From that May day in 1936 until she was hit by a car in Atlanta and killed in 1949, Peggy Marsh was never again to enjoy a full week of quiet.

Of the leading film stars who acted in the 1939 film version of "Gone With the Wind," only Olivia De Havilland survives. Like the novel's author, Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, and Leslie Howard have all passed on.

PREGNANCY AID Pregnant women who are unable to find seats in the second-class compartments of West German trains are now permitted to ride first class at no extra charge.

READ AND WRITE If you've ever been "bumped" by any airline--refused a seat on a plane after you've paid for a confirmed ticket--you will want to read "Air Travelers' Fly-Rights."

It's a free booklet available from the Consumer Information Center, Dept.52, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet, put out by the Civil Aeronautics Board, explains payments for bumping as well as other travel concerns, such as lost baggage, flight delays, baggage damage, and cancellations.

In many cases of bumping, you're entitled to payment, the exact amount determined by how much your ticket cost. The airlines are required to tell you about this at the time you're denied boarding. So, if the passenger agent or ticket-seller doesn't mention it, you do.

ORIENT EXPRESS Good news for railroad buffs! The famed Orient Express, which used to run from Paris to Istanbul (the trip took eight days, and the sleeping cars were famed for luxury and fabled in fiction), was abandoned some time ago. But now it's started up again--only not from Paris. The train will be made up in Zurich by Swiss state railways and will run from Zurich to Istanbul in five days. The return trip will be by jet. Cost of the trip--one way by rail, return by jet--is approximately $700.

MAO'S WIDOW CHIANG CHING WITH CHINESE PROPAGANDA CHIEF CHANG CHUN-CHIAO

MAO'S WIDOW One of the most fascinating women in China today is Chairman Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, 63, who used to play in "B" films in Shanghai under the name of "Blue Apple" in the early 1930's.

Chiang has a strong, beguiling personality and is heartily disliked by a large number of Chinese politicians. She first learned about Communism when she fell in love with a Communist student at Tsingtao University. In 1939 she showed up in Yenan, where Mao became attracted to her and invited her to become his personal secretary. His desire to marry her irritated his colleagues, who felt that he was deserting his third wife, Ho Tzu-chen, one of the few original women on the Long March, who was abandoned while she was in the Soviet Union for medical treatment.

Mao promised his associates that Chiang Ching would play no role in party politics, but in 1963, after having borne Mao two daughters, Chiang moved to Shanghai and there, aided by propaganda chief Chang Chun-chiao (one of the powers in Red China), she became politically active, radicalizing the theater groups.

She and Lin Piao's wife played active roles in the cultural revolution, with Chiang maneuvering herself into a position of power, helping to plan propaganda campaigns against the late Chou En-lai and the now-disgraced Teng Hsiao-ping.

A small woman who wears spectacles, a typical Mao cap and pantsuit, Chiang represents the hard line of the Red Radical left. Her source of power, of course, was her husband. Now that Mao Tse-tung is gone, will his widow's wings be clipped? The foreign colony in Peking waits and watches.

WARNING DOWN UNDER Australia will become a nation of 16 million addicts by the year 2000. So warns Dr. George Milner, director of the Victoria Health Department.

Dr. Milner claims that Australians are drinking more than 100 gallons of beer, or its equivalent in other drinks, per adult per year.

"This figure is rising by 5% per adult each year," he says, "in an uncontrolled deluge that threatens to swamp the nation."

If alcohol doesn't get the Australians, Dr. Milner offers, other drugs like marijuana and Valium will. "Prescription drugs," he explains, "are increasingly used, with modern panaceas like Valium being used excessively and often casually by doctors for demanding patients.

"If current trends continue," he says, "every man, woman, and child will be permanently on this drug by the end of the century." Happy Australia!

BABY TRADE Selling babies is a flourishing business in Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon). A report in Honey, a local paper, points out that local baby-traders are now buying babies from impoverished mothers at $8 each and reselling them to dealers in Scandinavia and elsewhere for $350.

The article says that foreign dealers usually buy six babies at a time, negotiating through hotel porters, maternity clinics and so-called "adoption agencies."

Apparently there are no laws in Sri Lanka which are applicable to the black market trade in babies.

JAPANESE STAR Hidemi Aoki is the star of "Seven Nights in Japan," in which she plays opposite English actor Michael York.

The plot of the picture deals with the romance between a royal prince who is serving as a British naval officer and a cute little Japanese bus guide whom he meets when his ship visits Yokohama.

The film has been well received in England and Paramount plans to release it in the United States. Hidemi hopes to try her luck in Hollywood.

A whole new car, a whole new ball game.

It was clear that cars had to become more efficient. Not just small cars. All cars.

It was equally clear that plenty of people still preferred cars of size and substance, and were not about to settle for less.

So we gave them more.

More economy and common sense on the one hand, more head room and rear leg room and trunk room on the other.

All in a crisp, clean, beautiful new package we call The New Chevrolet: A whole new kind of 6-passenger car that's more manageable in size, more responsible in its use of fuel and materials, yet retains "big car" room, ride, comfort and pride.

Her name? We don't know. We found her wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will become of this little girl? No one knows. In her country, she's just one of thousands doomed to poverty.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care, like the family who sponsors Froilan.

It costs them $15 a month, and it gives Froilan so very much. Now he eats regularly. He gets medical care. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They share something very special.

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love.

For the love of a hungry child.

HAPPINESS IS— SLOW COOKING

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

We like electric slow-cookers, especially those with an inner container that can be carried to the table. For dishes that require long, slow cooking they do away with pot-watching and free the homemaker for other pursuits.

Slow-cookers have many uses, but for a starter, try this delicious main dish. If you set the cooker for low heat, you don't need to think about it for six or seven hours. On high heat, it will free you for four hours.

Allow just enough time to cook the shell macaroni, then toss a green salad. Dinner is ready. A simple dessert prepared in the morning, or just fresh fruit and cheese, will end the meal as happily as it began.

SWEET-SOUR BEEF AND VEGETABLES FOR SLOW-COOKER

2 lbs. round or chuck steak, cut in 1-inch cubes
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
2 teaspoons chili powder
2 teaspoons paprika
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup vinegar
½ cup light molasses
2 cups carrots, sliced ¼-inch thick
2 cups small white onions, peeled
1 large green pepper, cut in 1-inch squares

Brown meat in hot oil in skillet; transfer to cooker. Add all remaining ingredients; mix well. Cook six to seven hours on low setting or four hours on high setting. Serve with shell macaroni sprinkled with fresh or freeze-dried chives. Makes six servings.

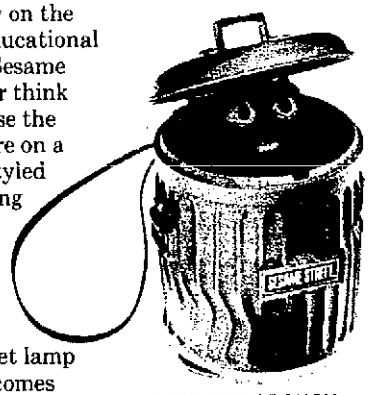

Note: This recipe may be prepared in a heavy utensil such as a Dutch oven and cooked over very low heat for several hours, but it will require constant watching and frequent stirring to prevent scorching, and may require additional liquid.

The Newtown Creek sewage plant in Brooklyn, N.Y., treats 310 million gallons of waste daily, dumps its sludge off Jersey coast.

The Sludge Nightmare

by Daniel Rapoport

The nation's newest environmental headache is sludge. Veritable mountains of the thick and gummy sewage residue are rising from one end of the country to the other while local officials desperately search for ways and places to dispose of it.

The federal government has ordered New York City and Philadelphia to begin phasing out their dumping of sludge into the Atlantic Ocean. The two cities have no idea where they're going to put it when the final deadline arrives in 1981. Alternatives, says New York Environmental Protection Administrator Robert Low, are either impractical or too costly, particularly for a financially beleaguered metropolis like New York.

'An economic nightmare'

"It's going to become an economic nightmare for New York," a sympathetic federal official agrees.

Chicago and its Cook County suburbs are spending more than $30 million a year barging their sludge as far as 200 miles away, where it is being tested as a fertilizer for corn and as a landfill to erase scars left by strip mining. But over the past year the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago has been battling suggestions from federal agencies that the fertilizing technique may carry potential health hazards.

One frustrated Chicago official throws up his hands and warns what will happen if the current method is rejected: "Some day the people of Chicago are going to flush their toilets and nothing is going to happen."

Los Angeles city and county have been pumping much of their sludge into the Pacific Ocean. While California beaches haven't experienced the same problems as those on the Atlantic, the state government is worried about the possible hazards to marine life and has decided that the practice must come to an end. The city of Los Angeles has been fighting that decision.

The most resounding proof of sludge's coming-of-age may be the debut this year of a Washington-based newsletter devoted exclusively to sludge management. Fittingly, it is called "Sludge."

SLUDGE CONTINUED

The target of all this concern is an unsightly and odorous glob composed of the solids that settle out of sewage during the treatment process. Because it is made up largely of human waste, sludge contains bacteria and viruses that can be harmful to people and animals. Sometimes it also includes such industrial discharges as heavy metals that have been linked to cancer. For these reasons, health and environmental authorities want to make sure that when sludge is deposited somewhere, it does not seep into drinking water supplies—or, if used as a fertilizer, that it does not contaminate crops.

Ironically, the country is facing a sludge crisis because it is on its way toward overcoming another crisis—the pollution of its waters. In 1972 Congress passed landmark legislation requiring municipalities to upgrade their sewage treatment facilities. With the aid of billions of dollars in federal funds, communities are responding. The result: cleaner lakes, rivers and streams. That is the good news. The bad news is that the better a city does in straining its sewage, the more sludge it is left with. One sanitation expert figures that elevating a sewage-handling operation from primary to secondary treatment can mean a 50 to 1000 percent increase in a facility's sludge output.

300 million tons a year

Dr. Edward Bryan of the National Science Foundation, which is supporting research into new methods of sludge disposal, calculates that the United States is currently generating about 300 million tons of wet sludge a year. The federal Environmental Protection Agency estimates that national sludge-disposal costs may be running more than $1 billion annually.

And the worst is yet to come.

Robert Bastian, an official with EPA, notes that many communities are not yet subjecting all their sewage to secondary treatment, a step they are mandated to achieve by 1977. When they do, sludge production will zoom even higher. "In essence," says Bastian, "we're talking about a future problem."

To New York City's Robert Low, the crisis became a reality last June, when a mixture of sludge and garbage washed ashore on Long Island, temporarily shutting down beaches normally enjoyed by millions of area residents. The sludge is believed to have come from the New York Bight, an ocean dumping site located about 12 miles off the New Jersey and Long Island coasts. New York and other communities have been dumping their sludge at the Bight for nearly 45 years. Now they must find somewhere else, and Low is not happy.

The federal government, he claims, encouraged the city to unload its sludge in the ocean. It even supplied New York with money to buy the vessels to haul it there. "Now they tell us to stop," he complains.

Government divers monitor quality of coastal waters. Sludge deposited in the ocean can pose problems for beaches.

A consultant hired by the city suggested two alternatives: burning the sludge through a process known as pyrolysis or turning it into compost. The first proposal, which is the technique used to produce charcoal, is costly and—for sludge—technologically unproven. The second proposal, he claims, requires relatively sizable tracts of land on which to dry and turn the sludge into compost. It also requires sufficient numbers of gardeners and farmers to use up the compost.

Excess land is not easy to find in New York, and "we don't have too many farmers in the city," adds Low drily.

Federal officials say they understand the problems faced by cities such as New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles. But they point out that they are charged by law with protecting the public against the health and environmental dangers that sludge poses through improper disposal. They also realize the alternatives are costly.

"Sewage treatment is not cheap," says EPA's Bastian. "If you're going to treat water, it's going to cost money."

One of the reasons sludge disposal costs so much is that options are constantly being closed off and what is left is expensive. There are only three places where sludge can be put: in the air (through burning), in the sea, or on the land. Experts generally agree that the ocean has been effectively ruled out because of the threat to beaches and the possible danger to marine life. The air is also on its way out.

Somerville, N.J., farmer with sludge stockpile. Dried and treated to prevent crop contamination, now it's compost.

"Earlier, everybody thought you could incinerate sludge and that would be the end of it. Then along came the 1973 oil embargo and burning became terribly expensive. There was also the problem of air pollution. In other words, everybody's avenue of escape has been cut off," says Daniel Houck, a sanitation engineer with Public Technology Inc., a nonprofit group in Washington that helps cities solve urban problems.

Seek sludge benefits

There is no shortage of ideas for new ways to dispose of sludge. The federal government is spending about $3 million this year on researching some of them. In many instances the approaches not only seek a disposal method but try to utilize the beneficial properties of sludge.

For example, EPA is pursuing pyrolysis, one of whose attractions is the possibility that gas generated by the process could be used as a fuel. The Agriculture Department is working on composting, mixing the sludge with wood chips and then turning it over in much the same way a gardener produces compost from yard matter. The National Science Foundation is supporting development of a soil injection technique that would permit a site to absorb much more sludge than if it is simply spread on the land. In a companion project, the foundation is financing a facility that renders the sludge safer for soil injection by first irradiating it, killing viruses.

Unfortunately, all of the new techniques contain environmental or economic drawbacks that must be overcome before they can be deemed feasible for many cities.

Federal effort weak

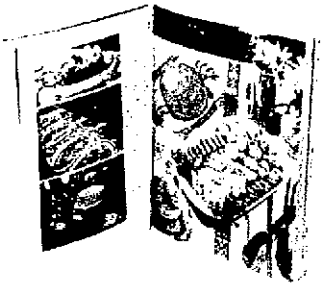

Some members of Congress are beginning to feel that the federal effort to combat sludge is not as aggressive as it ought to be. Rep. Robert F. Drinan (D., Mass.) has introduced legislation that would combine a tough regulatory program for disposal with all-out research to develop techniques that are safe and economically sensible.

Until then, sanitation engineers must contend with existing obstacles, including the complaints of citizens who do not want sludge dumped near them.

"It's like some big, unwanted relative who moves into your house," says a Maryland home owner leading a fight against picking a sludge disposal site in his neighborhood. "He's big and he's there. Did you want him? No. Is he going to go away? Can you get rid of him? Well, maybe."

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Parade Youth Poll

Last month, in a torrential downpour, President Gerald Ford, Class of '35, kicked off his Presidential campaign at his alma mater, the University of Michigan. He did so for sentimental reasons and because he thinks the youth vote is up for grabs.

Ford received a mixed reception at the packed Crisler Arena. It was decidedly more friendly than the one he got in May, 1974, when he attended the commencement exercises in Ann Arbor. That year, as Nixon's Vice President, he was almost heckled off the stage.

BOOS AND APPLAUSE

This time, while some students lustily booed many parts of Ford's speech, others roundly applauded. The major disturbance occurred when someone exploded a firecracker in the stands.

Ford, as always, was pleasant, affable, and cooperative. He met privately with 20 university students, answered questions on why he pardoned Nixon, the war in Indochina, and the rights of homosexuals.

In 1972, when Ford was still a Congressman, America's 18-year-olds were given their first opportunity to vote. They proved the political forecasters wrong. Instead of voting overwhelmingly liberal, as had been predicted, 48 percent voted for Richard Nixon, a President who was so fearful of collegiate youth that he would venture upon only the most conservative, right-wing campuses.

20-CAMPUS TALLY

How will the college vote go this year?

A PARADE poll of 1000 college students on 20 campuses across the country—taken prior to the first debate between Carter and Ford on Sept. 23—yielded the following results:

Jimmy Carter	40%
Gerald Ford	30%
Eugene McCarthy	9%
Undecided	11%
Non-voting	8%
Others	2%

Those students who support Gerald Ford for the Presidency tend to come from the nation's more affluent families. Of the students who reported annual parental incomes of $25,000 or higher, 59% voted for Ford and 33% for Jimmy Carter.

Ford's campus supporters differ from Carter's in other ways. They view inflation as the nation's No. 1 problem, followed by crime, the welfare mess, unemployment, and general poverty.

Carter's advocates regard unemployment as No. 1, followed by inflation, welfare, poverty, and corruption in government.

Asked to select a non-politician they would like as U.S. President, few students had answers, although many regarded the qualifications of the current candidates as generally inadequate.

Non-political public figures who received votes included Ralph Nader, Margaret Mead, William F. Buckley Jr., Kingman Brewster Jr. (president of Yale), Bob Woodward, Chevy Chase, Robert Redford and Cesar Chavez. A large number of students nominated themselves.

A majority of students polled said they most probably would vote as their parents did.

This year's college seniors entered school in the fall of 1973 at the height of the Watergate scandal. If they bear any of the scars of that period, they reflect relatively few. They are generally docile, industrious, job-minded, and non-activist.

Explained one Yale senior: "You have to understand that we're not any of us the students of the 1960's. I'm interested in getting the highest-paying job I can get. Jerry Ford is the candidate who I feel will make the lifestyle I want easier to obtain. I know Jerry Ford is no intellectual heavyweight, but our country needs a rest after Watergate and Vietnam—a breather."

A Duke University junior, supporting Jimmy Carter, explains her stand this way: "Carter has a genuine concern for the outcast, the little man. If we don't get our act together and make this country a better symbol for justice and equal opportunity, we're not going to be around as we are very long. I don't understand Carter's religious trip, but I do think he offers the nation an opportunity for leadership."

To see him exhorting his team from the sidelines, you'd never know that football coach Bo Schembechler survived two bouts with heart trouble. He's back in action, as vigorous as ever. The secret? "Most of the battle is mental."

A Pep Talk From Coach Bo Schembechler

by Joe Falls

ANN ARBOR, MICH.

"You had a heart attack on New Year's Eve, 1969, and now, 6½ years later, the doctors say you must undergo open-heart surgery. What do you do?

If you are Bo Schembechler, coach of the powerful University of Michigan football team, you devise a game plan for yourself.

"You'd better have a plan," says the 47-year-old coach. His worked so well that right now, only five months after the operation, he's just as active as he ever was in midseason—raging along the sidelines, storming at the officials, screaming at his players. As he aims for the No. 1 ranking in the country, few are betting against him.

What was Bo Schembechler's game plan?

This is the way he explains it: "The first thing you've got to do is put yourself in a positive frame of mind. I believe that's half the battle—psyching yourself up that everything is going to be OK. Most of the battle is mental."

Then, he says, he consulted five of the leading heart-disease clinics in the country, asking from each a complete briefing on what the operation entailed.

"I told them, 'Listen, we go over our game films to get ready to play, and I want you to do the same for me.' I could read the X-rays better than they could," he says. "I could see every occlusion, every vein that was blocked. Once I knew what had to be done, I said, 'OK, now do it!' "

Schembechler's operation at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor last May 13 lasted 6½ hours. But he came through it in excellent condition and has remained that way—thanks to a continuation of the game plan he had devised for himself.

How to relax

The big factor that enabled him to resume his career where he left off, he says, is that he has learned to relax. While out on the field, he's the same old tiger. But day in and day out, he's learned to pace himself differently.

No longer does he remain on the job all hours of the night—sometimes until 1 or 2 a.m.—looking at game films, diagramming plays, fretting about might-have-beens.

Instead, 10 o'clock, and that's it. No matter what's going on, he gets up from the meeting with his coaches and goes home. Tomorrow is another day.

"He's been just beautiful about disciplining himself," says Schembechler's wife Millie.

She points out that under his plan he not only goes to bed early, but watches what he eats— and he doesn't get mad more than three times a day at practice. He also runs. In fact, he's devised his own exercise program that includes running and walking in almost equal parts. He started slowly by walking around the block, gradually built up his distance, and began jogging. Now he works out at the university's outdoor track, running on the straightaways as hard as he can and walking on the curves. He does 4½ miles a day. He also rests as much as possible, coming home at midday for about two hours, which he spends either napping or chatting with his wife.

On a typical day, his diet consists of a breakfast of dry cereal and skim milk with an occasional cup of black coffee, a sandwich or soup for lunch, and a dinner of salad and lean meat, chicken, or fish. Very occasionally, he sneaks in a chocolate sundae. As a result, his weight is a steady 190, about 30 pounds less than when he suffered his first heart attack nearly seven years ago, on the eve of the Rose Bowl game, the climax of his first season as Michigan coach.

His wife Millie wheels Schembechler in Pasadena hospital after his first attack.

2 a.m. chili

He blames bad eating habits for that first brush with death. "I'd come back from a trip or a banquet and I'd find some old, greasy restaurant in a gas station and there I'd be, eating a bowl of chili at 2 a.m., just wolfing it down. There was no sense to it," he says. The result was the classic symptoms of a myocardial infarction—a heart attack: a stab of pain in the chest, a burning sensation down the left arm, a gasping for air. Schembechler wound up spending nearly three weeks in the intensive care unit at St. Luke's Hospital in Pasadena, Cal.

After that he began a determined effort to lose weight and get back into shape. In a matter of months he got his weight down to 180.

But, unfortunately, he let himself slip. The pounds slowly came back. He felt a tightening in his chest again. Then the blocked arteries were discovered and the open-heart surgery prescribed. It meant that the doctors would stop his heart and his lungs and place them on machines while they performed four bypasses around his heart. Bo knew the risks, but after checking out his case with heart clinics in Ann Arbor, Houston, Cleveland, New York and Cincinnati, he was ready to go ahead.

With the open-heart surgery behind him, Bo is confident he can keep his weight down permanently this time and that his game plan is going to work. He's determined to show that even football coaches can lead sensible lives, and he's planning on embellishing his record—the best in the land over the last eight years. Entering this season, his Wolverines had won 66 games, lost nine, and tied three.

Raising a storm

"I really feel great," he says with a grin. "You should see me in our classroom sessions. I bang on that blackboard and I yell at them and I raise all kinds of a storm. I'm really enjoying myself."

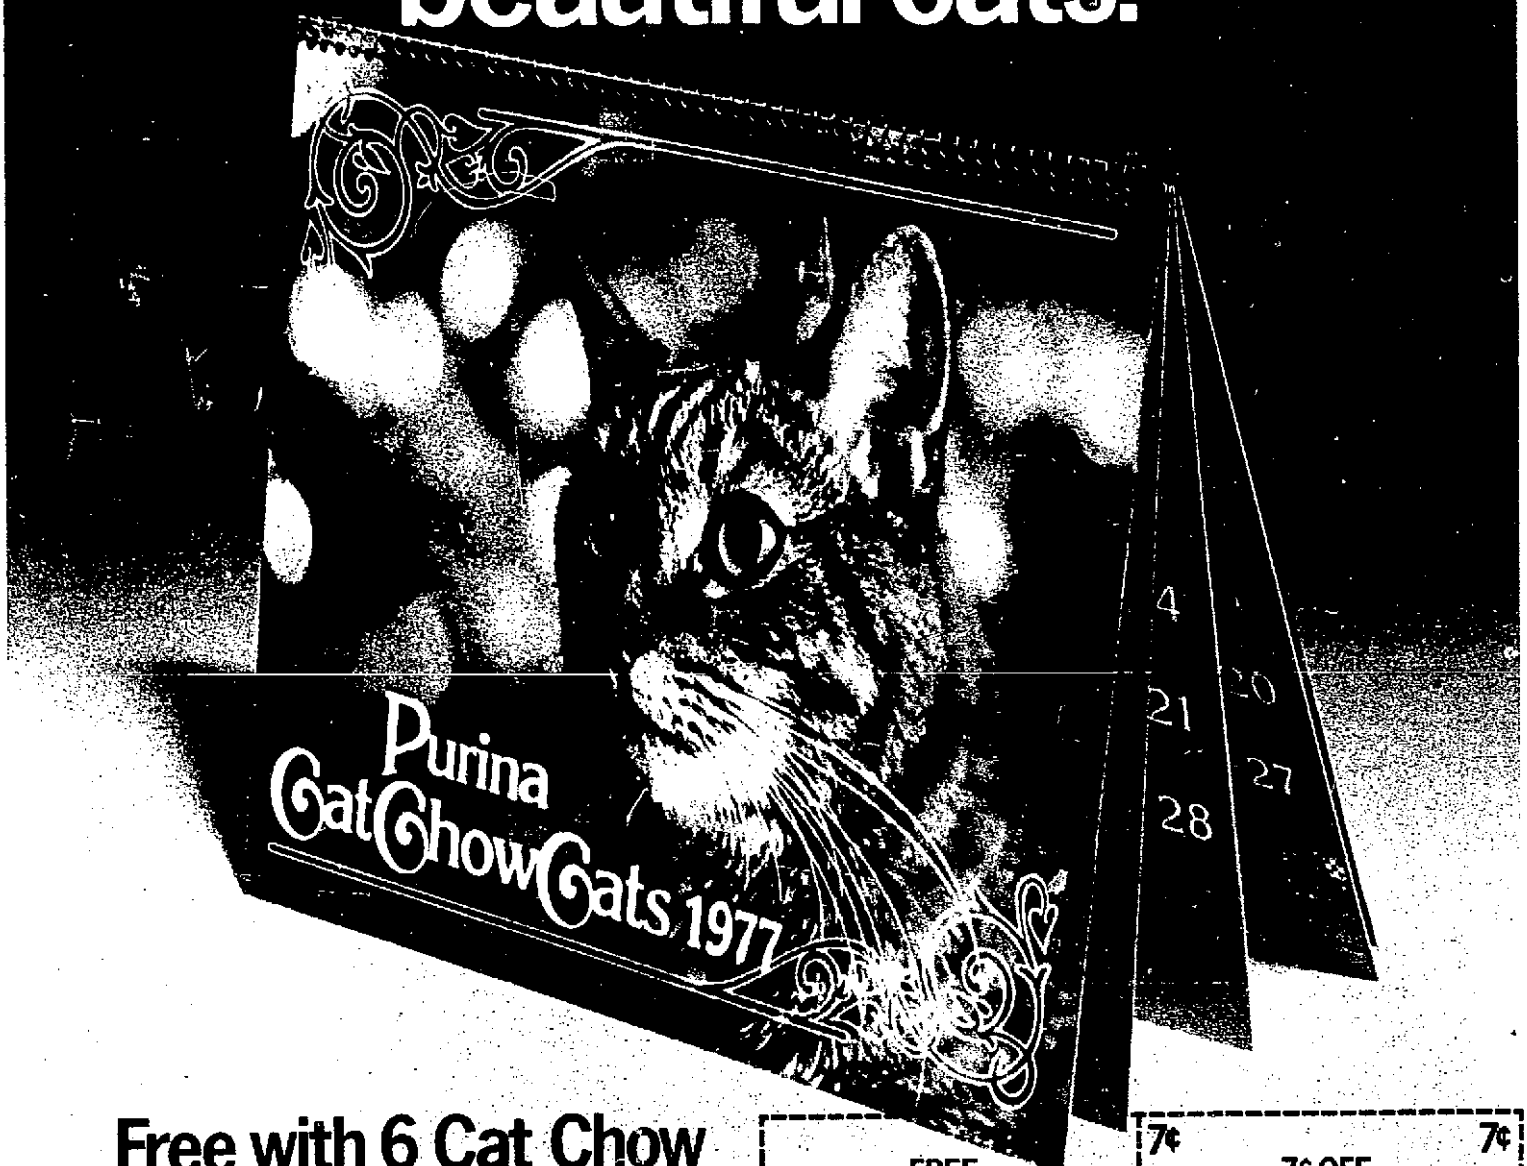

Schembechler now gets countless calls and cards and letters from people all over the United States who are facing similar surgery.

He answers them all—and this in itself is surprising.

Previously, he had little time for anything but football. Now he will patiently write back to worried patients or call them on the phone.

"I give it to them straight," he says. "I tell them it's not going to be easy. I tell them it's going to hurt—and it's going to hurt a lot. But I tell them they can beat it if they make up their minds to do it."

The Charles Dickens

CHRISTMAS CAROL SPOON COLLECTION

Five of the twelve spoons in the collection are shown here actual size.

©1976 FM

The Franklin Mint presents
Dickens' beloved story of Scrooge and Tiny Tim in an original work of art that will be treasured for generations to come.

There will be just one edition of this collection.
Your subscription must be postmarked by November 15, 1976.

Early in the reign of England's Queen Victoria, Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" almost singlehandedly changed the world's attitude toward Christmas, portraying it not only as a solemn holiday but as a truly appropriate time for expressing good will toward all.

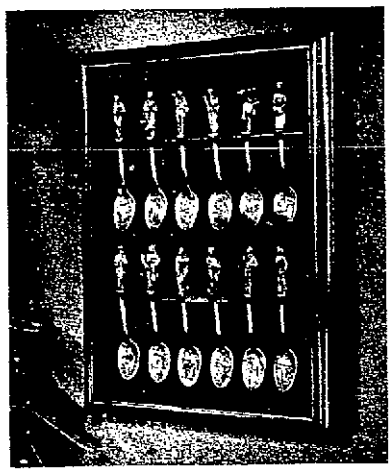

In that spirit, The Franklin Mint now presents a unique and imperishable work of art inspired by this great masterpiece: The Charles Dickens Christmas Carol Spoon Collection. The world's first collection of fine pewter Christmas spoons.

The collection will include twelve separate spoons, each bearing two finely sculptured works of art created in England, not far from where Dickens himself lived and worked, by the distinguished British sculptor Philip Nathan.

The handles will bear sculptures of the twelve most memorable characters from "A Christmas Carol": Scrooge . . . Bob Cratchit . . . Old Fezziwig . . . Tiny Tim. The bowls will portray the most important scenes, in remarkably vivid detail. And, together, they will recall this immortal tale, from beginning to end—as it has never been told before.

The Charles Dickens Christmas Carol Spoon Collection will be issued in a single, strictly limited edition, with a world-wide subscription deadline of November 15, 1976. There is a limit of one set per subscriber, and the twelve superb pewter spoons will be sent to you at the rate of one each month until the collection is completed.

For every person to whom the name of Charles Dickens is synonymous with Christmas . . . for every family that has derived warmth and pleasure from "A Christmas Carol" . . . for every collector who enjoys great beauty in any form . . . this collection will be a treasured possession from its day of issue. You may enter your subscription on the application below.

A handsome spoon rack, with a removable decorator panel, will be provided to each subscriber as part of the collection.

Read and Save Money

As a car owner, you know how much auto repairs cost these days. Jobs that seem simple have a way of adding up to a small fortune when you drive into your service station or garage.

Is there a way to beat the high cost of getting your car fixed? Yes, there is. It's a simple, sensible,easy-to-follow book called Basic Auto Repairs. Written by automotive expert Byron G. Wels and available to PARADE readers for only $1.50 plus 25¢ for postage and handling, it tells how you can save big money making your own car repairs.

Of course, you can't fix everything yourself, and this book is quick to tell you so. Some major repairs have to be left to trained experts.

But you'll be astounded at the number of things you can do yourself, once you've developed a little know-how, patience and confidence. Basic Auto Repairs will tell you how to find trouble spots, how to diagnose malfunctions, how to go about replacing parts. It is specific in telling you what not to do yourself—advising, for instance, against doing your own tire repairs. It also tells you where and how to shop for automotive equipment and tools you'll need to work with speed and safety.

Beyond its instructions for making repairs, Basic Auto Repairs provides a clear and comprehensive guide to your car and its operation. You'll learn what the various systems—electrical, cooling, engine—do, and how they work together. Through diagrams, charts, pictures and text, the book will give you an understanding of your car that you've probably never had before. Even when a major job has to be done by a mechanic, you'll be able to talk to him knowledgeably and confidently. And the tips you'll find on preventive maintenance alone will repay you the cost of the book many times.

Basic Auto Repairs belongs in every car's glove compartment. It will make you a better, safer, and more confident driver—and can save you a bundle at the same time.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "Basic Auto Repairs" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. S, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery. [GENERAL OFFICES: 1346 39TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11218.]

my favorite jokes

by TOMMY MOORE

EDITOR'S NOTE: "I get most of my comedy out of my own confusion—and I get confused a lot," says Philadelphia-born Tommy Moore. Philadelphia's also where he started his career, on the "New Faces TV Review." He has recently written and recorded two comedy albums—"Did I Say That?" and "I'm Telling You What They Told Me!" He says: "I hope these two albums sell better than the first one I ever made. It wasn't that the album was bad, it's just that the company that made the record forgot to put a hole in the middle. If there's ever a market for black Frisbees, I'm gonna make a fortune!"

Tommy performs at nightclubs, hotels and banquets.

Here are some of the things that confuse him:

Why is it a woman is willing to share her whole life with her husband—but not her closet space?

How come people who snore always fall asleep first?

Why is it, whenever you go fishing, people will always ask, "Did you catch those fish?" What do they think—they jumped in the boat and surrendered?

Why is it a businessman will go from his air-conditioned house to his air-conditioned office in his air-conditioned car, then go to a health club and pay $50 an hour to sweat?

•

Why is it they can fix a major malfunction in a Telstar satellite while it's a half-million miles in space—but if a tube burns out in your TV set, they gotta take it to the shop?

•

Why do humanitarians tell us that people from all nations should learn to get along like one big family? If they ever saw how my family gets along, they would never say that!

Why is it every time you start to make ends meet—somebody comes along and moves the ends?

•

Why is it every time they find a cure for a new disease, scientists take all the credit and white mice do all the work?

Why do people who believe in reincarnation always want to know who they were in a past life? What good can that do? I want to know who I'm going to be in my next life. This way, when I die, in my will I can leave everything to myself!

Why is it that a tourist will travel thousands of miles to get away from people—just so he can send cards saying, "Wish you were here"?

•

If the early bird catches the worm—why is the worm so dumb that it keeps getting up early?

•

Did you ever get the feeling that the principle behind the timing of a traffic light is to trick the pedestrian into the middle of the street?

•

Maybe people who are always on time aren't doing it to be courteous and polite. Maybe they're just mean, vicious people whose ambition is to make the rest of us feel guilty for being late.

If four out of five accidents happen at home—why do people live there?

"These are my peakspending years."

Welfare cheat says $2,400 a month 'easy to get'

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

She started cheating on welfare at the age of 17, and for seven years she kept it up—most of the time getting two checks at the same time.

She has no children, yet she was paid for having anywhere from two to four.

She was getting paid for being single—yet she wasn't.

The fraud was so easy that when she was cut off—after someone had informed on her—it took her only a day to get back on the welfare rolls.

"If you quit your job today," she says, "In two days I could get you more money from welfare than you're making now. You could be pulling in $2,400 a month at least."

And she knows how. She's done it.

"One of my friends—in fact she's a relative—is collecting welfare for herself and three kids she doesn't have . . . she's working as a secretary and her husband works on the docks. They are collecting about $2,600 a month.

"They could be making more, if they'd apply for more than one welfare check.

"But they don't need the money right now."

Speaking is an articulate 26-year-old woman who comes from an upper-middle-class Long Beach family and is currently being prosecuted in Los Angeles for welfare fraud. Her identity could jeopardize her chances for paying only retribution, something she feels she will be required to do to forstall going to prison. Now married, she voluntarily left the welfare rolls two years ago, yet because of an angry former friend, her arrest came only last month.

"I can show you three people right now, who live within a block of here, who are collecting welfare illegally. But it's so easy to do, I'm surprised there aren't more people on welfare."

She first applied for welfare in San Francisco, she says, on the advice of a friend.

"I borrowed a little girl and walked into the welfare office. I told them I had moved from a different state and she gave me a check that day—but it was easier then; now you have to wait a day."

She collected her checks for 2½ months until she was asked to produce a birth certificate for her "child."

"I didn't know how to make a birth certificate then, so I took off."

She moved to Los Angeles and subsequently learned to use white tape and a xerox machine and in one case used a birth certificate out of the back of an issue of Baby Talk Magazine to document her nonexistent children.

She found work as a secretary, but continued to receive welfare checks amounting to $1,200 a month.

At one point a friend turned enemy and reported her to welfare officials and one of her checks was cut off.

Carter, Ford down to wire

By R.W. APPLE Jr.
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — President Ford has drawn almost even with Jimmy Carter in one of the closest presidential races of this century, leaving the Georgia Democrat with only a precarious advantage as the campaign entered its climactic 48 hours.

In a half-dozen crucial states, the candidates' own polls showed them only a percentage point or two apart. The chief tacticians in both camps agreed that the election was poised on a knife-edge, and analysts across the country were unwilling to hazard predictions.

The final national survey by the New York Times and CBS News gave Carter a slight lead, but for the first time in the campaign the contest was too close to be certain who was really ahead. A poll by Louis Harris of ABC News showed Carter clinging to an even narrower lead of 1 percentage point.

"THERE IS NOW a real possibility that Ford could win," conceded Robert S. Strauss, the Democratic national chairman. "But it's hard to make a three-horse parlay, and that's what the President needs — all the close ones. I'd still bet on Carter, although I wouldn't bet the family farm."

The Times-CBS News poll, which was completed Wednesday, indicated that Ford's comeback, one of the most striking in modern American political history, had been built on his ability to swing vacillating independents behind him.

With both camps increasingly nervous, rival strategists were pondering four factors that hold the key: Momentum, turnout, the distribution of the undecided voters and electoral vote.

Momentum: Although Ford has unquestionably gained ground in the past few days, his gains have not been uniform (Michigan, for example, has been moving away from him). To win, he needs to make his advances more general and to keep gaining right up until the polls open on Tuesday.

Turnout: Because theirs is the majority party, the Democrats usually benefit from large turnouts. Despite numerous signs of apathy earlier in the campaign, late registration figures and growing crowds suggest that the campaign is catching on at last. Organized labor and black leaders will try to turn out the voters that Carter needs most.

Undecided voters: The Times-CBS News poll indicates that the undecided group exceeds 10 per cent, an extraordinarily high figure for this stage. As many as half of these may not vote, according to the survey. The more who do, probably the better for Carter, since they tend to be relatively poor (63 per cent earn less than $12,000 a year), relatively ill-educated (47 per cent did not finish high school) and relatively Democratic in habit.

Campaign torrid in big states

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press

Running neck and neck with just days to go, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter campaigned hard Saturday in states with the fat electoral bounties that make presidents. Ford said he'll win; Carter's people said they saw promise in their own vote projections.

"I had not been confirmed by your ballots, but since have been supported by your prayers," said Ford, who preceded Carter into Texas by hours. "I ask you on Tuesday, Nov. 2, not only to support me with your prayers, but to support me with your ballots."

He saw encouragement in the crowd of 6,000 that heard him in Houston. "With a rally like this in Texas," Ford said, "I feel we're going to win and win overwhelmingly on Tuesday."

Carter, cognizant of the delicately balanced polls, made no such claim. But his press secretary, Jody Powell, said Carter's own vote projections are "certainly encouraging."

Powell said if Carter wins the southern and border states, as well as the traditional Democratic states, he would need to carry only three of nine states that are rated tossups. Among those are New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio—all late targets of both campaigns.

Stopping over in New Orleans on his way to Texas, Carter was greeted by 12,000 to 15,000 people who jammed the narrow streets of the French Quarter. He rode in an open-top convertible for five blocks, then walked another two to the accompaniment of Dejan's Olympic Brass Band.

"I think it's time we had a southerner back in the White House again," he said.

If you forgot, it's not as late as you think

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — In case you forgot again, daylight savings time ended this morning at 2 a.m. when it was time for clocks to "fall back" an hour. You won't have to worry about it again for six months — unless Congress changes things.

Time ran out this year on congressional efforts to stretch daylight saving, or advanced time, to seven months, but it was a near miss. Several proposals to expand — and some to contract — daylight saving are expected to be introduced when Congress reconvenes in January.

Near the end of this congressional session, a bill reached the House floor that would have placed the nation on daylight saving from the third Sunday in March through the third Sunday of October. Earlier in the year, the Senate had approved legislation that would have turned clocks ahead one hour on the second Sunday of March and back on the second Sunday of October.

But the House measure — which its backers said the Senate would accept — was brought up under a short-cut procedure that requires approval by two-thirds, instead of a simple majority. When the bill mustered only a one-vote margin in a preliminary test, it was withdrawn rather risk its defeat.

Many stress deaths laid to joblessness

By NANCY HICKS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A congressional study released Saturday suggests that a substantial number of the suicides, murders and other deaths from 1970 to 1975 were traceable to an increase of 1.4 percentage points in unemployment in 1970.

The Joint Economic Committee released the study, which said that at least 26,000 deaths from the stress-related diseases of stroke and kidney and heart ailments, at least 1,500 of the suicides and 1,700 of the homicides during that five-year period were related to unemployment.

The stress-related deaths were 2.7 per cent of the total deaths from those diseases, the suicides 5.7 per cent of the total and the homicides 8 per cent.

THE COMMITTEE findings are based on the work of Prof. M. Harvey Brenner of Johns Hopkins University, who has been studying the relationship between unemployment and certain health indicators for almost 15 years. His work has been expanded in this study for the committee to give it a way to estimate the cost in human suffering of people being out of work.

"Overall, it is evident that significant relationships exist between economic policy and measures of national well-being," said Brenner of his study, which included an analysis of 40 years of statistics for the United States, studies of the patterns of health and unemployment in three states and the relationships between such factors in other developed countries.

"The study indicates that actions which influence national economic activity — especially unemployment rates — have substantial bearing on physical health, mental health and criminal aggression," his summary says.

Commissioned for the committee by the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress, the study uses techniques drawn from the public-health sector in finding "risk factors" for total mortality; deaths caused by stroke and heart and kidney diseases; homicides; suicides; deaths from liver cirrhosis, an alcohol-related illness; admission to mental hospitals, and increases in state-prison populations.

Although it tries to filter out causes unrelated to economic factors for such increases, the study shows a statistical correlation but not a direct cause-and-effect relation, its author and sponsor warn.

The committee's announcement says, however, that the study shows "a direct link between

Alaska gas pipeline worth fighting for

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

If freshmen and senior members of the new 95th Congress can anticipate anything next year, it will be what bureaucrats and energy company executives are billing as a winner-take-all battle of the lobbyists over an energy delivery system little understood by the American public.

The first volley has already been fired at the White House.

President Ford signed a bill Oct. 22 greasing the ways for choosing a route for delivery of natural gas from Alaska to the "lower 48."

The Alaska Natural Gas Transportation Act was passed Oct. 1 in the waning hours of the 94th Congress, supported by all three corporations thirsting after the delivery license.

With one eye fixed on Tuesday's election results, Ford has likened the Gas Transportation Act to another 10 yards in his downfield drive toward the nation's energy-independent goal line.

Opposed until a late hour by Frank G. Zarb, the federal energy administrator, the bill prefaces an ambitious project — bigger, costlier and far more necessary than the much-touted Alaskan oil pipeline.

Alaska's popularized resources were once gold and now oil. These riches pale next to the vast amounts of natural gas known to exist beneath the frozen tundra.

Geologists are certain there are 26 trillion cubic feet of gas in proven reserves beneath Alaska. Threshold reserves could be 30 trillion cubic feet, and the educated guess is that there is even more offshore under the polar cap and in the Canadian Arctic Islands.

Zarb and some Interior Department officials said they disapproved of the Gas Transportation Act because it reserves to Congress the final decision on a route and it mandates deliveries of Alaskan natural gas both east and west of the Rocky Mountains.

It also strengthens the power of the Council on Environmental Quality to influence the decision, another thorn in Zarb's side.

The Federal Power Commission (FPC) has until May 1, 1977, to send its recommendation on which of three delivery plans it favors. The President then has up to 180 days to pass on the FPC

Smiling HHH quits hospital

Combined News Services

NEW YORK — Smiling and shaking hands down the line, Sen. Hubert Humphrey left Memorial Sloan Kettering Hospital "feeling wonderful" and anxious to get back on the job.

The Minnesota Democrat told reporters crowded into the lobby of the hospital Saturday afternoon, "The doctors say I'm in good shape, and they say that I'm in better shape than I ought to be."

Humphrey flew to Washington, where he said said he would rest for a few days. He said he anticipated "campaigning, walking, swimming," adding with a chuckle, "and God only knows I'll be out talking."

He plans to use his time "preparing for the Senate — that is, if the votes are right on Tuesday."

Humphrey, who is favored to win his bid for re-election although he hasn't been able to campaign because of his hospitalization, said he is sure he can serve another six-year term.

He also said he still plans to seek the post of Senate majority leader.

The former vice president underwent a six hour operation on Oct. 7 for removal of a cancerous bladder, regional lymph nodes and much of the uretha.

A hospital spokesman said that Humphrey will continue chemotherapy treatment at a local hospital in Washington.

Liz returns to U.S.

Actress Elizabeth Taylor was warmly greeted in Washington by her fiance, former government official John Warner, and his daughter Mary Saturday when she returned to the U.S. after working on a film in Vienna, Austria.

There has been speculation that Miss Taylor and Warner would soon wed. But the couple refused to disclose their plans and Miss Warner also said that the wedding plans had not been completed. Warner will be Miss Taylor's sixth husband.

Both Miss Taylor and Warner seemed reluctant to talk with reporters. As she emerged from an airplane whose arrival at Dulles International Airport had been delayed 50 minutes, Miss Taylor said: "I'm just happy to be on the ground again."

Warner's comment was: "I just want to get back to the farm with my bride."

Warner is a former head of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration and a former secretary of the Navy.

Pope meets Lutherans

The Vatican said Saturday that Pope Paul VI had accepted from a delegation of Lutherans a facsimile edition of the Bible translated by Martin Luther, the German Protestant leader excommunicated by Roman Catholicism in 1521.

The Pope's acceptance of the copy of the 1545 Luther Bible and the three-day visit by a delegation from the Lutheran World Federation were seen as steps toward improving relations between the two religious groups.

It was not believed that the eight-member Lutheran delegation raised the issue of the excommunication of the Reformation figure.

Recently some elements within the Catholic Church have suggested reviewing the excommunication. They hold the idea of it being possibly lifted one day in a grand gesture of ecumenism, along the lines of the Orthodox and Catholic reconciliation after the Vatican Ecumenical Council in 1965.

Korean denies bribes

South Korean businessman Park Tong-sun Saturday denied allegations that he had bribed U.S. congressmen and government officials and had misused Food for Peace aid funds.

"Absolutely not," Park replied when asked if it was true he had offered gifts in an effort to favorably influence American policy and actions toward South Korea.

Park was interviewed while he waited for a flight to London after arriving in Paris on a flight from Tokyo, via Moscow.

Asked about the alleged misuse of Food for Peace funds, Park replied: "Those questions will be eventually answered when I return to the States." He said he would be going back "as soon as my business is over," but did not specify a date.

Park and other South Koreans in the United States are said to be the focus of a wide-ranging U.S. Justice Department investigation into South Korean lobbying activities.

According to some accounts, South Korean agents have dispensed $500,000 to $1 million yearly since 1970 in cash and gifts to congressmen and U.S. officials. As many as 90 present and former members of Congress are reportedly under investigation.

Colorado kids can't forget

Killer flood a lingering nightmare

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Eleven-year-old Rory Adams weeps at night for his dad. Schoolmate Kevin Bray still thinks about his dead girlfriend. Doug Nolde can't forget carrying out the bodies.

For the children of the Big Thompson Elementary School, the flood that crushed many of their homes last July 31 is a nightmare.

At least 139 persons died when rain swelled the normally placid Big Thompson River and forced a wall of water as high as 19 feet through the canyon. Millions of dollars in property was destroyed.

Heavy rains still spook the children of this Rocky Mountain community, said the elementary school principal, Dr. Dave Mathias. "When it clouds up, I have several little kids come running in here," he said.

The school — called Big T — lost seven children to the water, Mathias said. The other 360 remember their dead classmates, but they don't say a lot about them.

"I heard one kid say, 'Ricky used to sit there,' but that's about it," Mathias said. Ricky Mares and his family drowned.

Mathias is emotional when he remembers his first meeting with young Adams, who lost his father in the flood:

"He came in to register himself. He came up to me, stuck out his hand and said, 'I'm Rory Adams. I lost my dad.' He put his arms around me and said: 'Would you be my dad?'"

Even with Mathias' help, it has been a tough adjustment for Rory. "Me, my mom and brother, we cry a lot for him at night," the blond fifth-grader said, clutching a battered saxophone case. "We sometimes think we aren't going to make it without him."

The chunky youngster lived in the flatlands just outside the mouth of the Big Thompson Canyon.

"We had just got back from seeing (the movie) 'Noah's Ark'," he recalled. "We heard the police cars warning everybody to get out. He was trying to herd our cow and cattle back. I didn't know it would be the last time I'd see him.

"It's been pretty bad. My mom's just had an operation. We're Christians. I guess it was what God wanted."

Kevin Bray lost his girlfriend, Theresa Graham, to the floodwaters.

"She was my girlfriend all last year," the thin fourth-grader said. "I think about her when it rains. I found a new girlfriend, but I still think about her."

Doug Nolde's tale is different.

"Me and my dad helped carry out bodies," the 9-year-old Cub Scout recounted. "I had to be a brace underneath one. It was a nightmare.

"I think about it. One time it rained here, I thought it would flood again. But it doesn't bother me anymore."

The youngster's brave tones were undermined by nervous fidgeting with the silver wolf badge on his blue uniform.

The experience has matured many of the children beyond their years, Mathias said, and their emotional needs have rubbed off on one another. The kids are visibly close, whether romping on the playground or walking through halls. Hands hold hands. Arms drape affectionately around shoulders.

"Our kids need a lot of love," Mathias said.

Quake relief stalled

Combined News Services

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Reports reached here Saturday that a severe earthquake that jolted remote mountain jungles at the center of the island of New Guinea destroyed buildings, caused a major landslide and killed at least 20 persons.

Rough terrain and poor communications hampered relief efforts and limited information from the stricken area.

A report from Jayapura, capital of the Indonesian Province of Irian Baya, said two of six members of a helicopter relief team sent to the area were lost in the jungle.

Friday's quake was reported centered 150 miles south of Jayapura, in mountains ranging up to the 15,420-foot peak of Puncak Mandala. Parts of the area have been barely touched by civilization and natives live in Stone Age conditions.

More than 1,000 persons perished when an earthquake shook the same region last June.

Friday's shock registered 6.5 on the Richter scale, compared with the 7.1 recorded by the June quake.

Fire hits ship

BOSTON — The Italian freighter Pia Costa, her hold ravaged by fire Saturday, will be examined by marine experts to determine if the 550-foot cargo ship is still seaworthy.

Fire Commissioner George H. Paul estimated damage to the ship at $150,000 to $200,000. He said it would take engineers two to three days to determine the amount of structural damage to the 10,000-ton vessel.

The ship was docked at Commonwealth Pier, its 40-member crew on board waiting to leave for New York at 10 a.m., when thick black smoke began pouring out of the lower deck.

Paul said the fire was confined to one of the ship's six holds. The hold was filled with bales of rags picked up the previous day in Norfolk, Va.

However, two forward adjoining holds were loaded with highly flammable tallow — animal fat used to make candles.

Sailor in distress

NEW YORK — A Dutch tugboat received a distress message Saturday from a young sailor who had not been heard from for 17 days when he reported hull damage in the mid-Atlantic, the Coast Guard said.

The sailor, Bob Gainer of Hillsdale, N.J., was trying to solo around the world.

The Mayday message said the 23-year-old Gainer was drifting without sail or power about 500 miles east of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The Coast Guard said the ocean-going tugboat was en route to the sailboat. The Coast Guard dispatched a C130 aircraft from Elizabeth City, N.C., to San Juan to begin an aerial search today.

Blaze guts jail

BUSHNELL, Fla. — Twenty-two prisoners were evacuated Saturday when fire broke out at the Sumter County Jail, officials said. A spokesman said the two-story building was gutted by the blaze.

"It's a miracle that nobody was injured because it went so fast," said police officer Jim Fugate of Wildwood. "The jailers did a remarkable job of getting the prisoners out."

Elections postponed

NEW DELHI, India — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government, insisting that subversive forces remain a dangerous threat to the security of India, announced Saturday that it was postponing national elections for at least one more year.

Law Minister H.R. Gokhale acknowledged to Parliament that the postponement might be "temporarily unpopular," but he denied allegations by Mrs. Gandhi's leftist and rightist opponents that there was widespread uneasiness about the course she has charted for India since proclaiming a national emergency 16 months ago.

Air piracy charged

MUNICH, West Germany — Police said Saturday that they had formally charged 26-year-old Rudolf Becvar with "an attack against air traffic" in the hijacking Thursday of a Czechoslovakian domestic airliner with 110 persons aboard.

After the four-engined turboprop's return to Prague from the 5½-hour forced stopover in West Germany, Czechoslovak authorities said Becvar was wanted at home for the shooting death of his brother Stepan and several other crimes, including an attack on a taxi driver. No one aboard the hijacked plane was hurt.

Skirts an issue

TOKYO — Skirts of Japanese policewomen will henceforth cover the knee, largely because some policemen say its hard to keep from observing the knees of their female colleagues.

A National Police Agency announcement said skirts for Japan's 6,600 policewomen, many of them assigned to checking traffic, will be about two inches below the knees.

Skirts of Tokyo policewomen now average about two inches above the knee. Authorities said male police have confessed to being tempted to look.

'Nazi's' ouster sought

CHICAGO — The executive committee of the National Council of Churches in an emergency meeting Saturday sought to suspend an alleged former Nazi commandant from its governing board.

Archbishop Valerian Trifa, a bishop of the Rumanian Orthodox Episcopate of America, has denied charges that he participated in Nazi war crimes.

Questions surrounding his past surfaced three weeks ago at national council meetings in New York City. Bishop Trifa, who lives in Grass Lake, Mich., is a member of the National Council of Church's governing board.

He is one of six Orthodox delegates to the board of the council, an interfaith association of churches embracing 40 million members.

American Jewish groups have sought Bishop Trifa's removal or suspension, contending that his presence on the board would "seriously compromise the moral credibility of the National Council."

SIDS research

Please give me the names of where I could contribute some money toward the research in the prevention of crib deaths, as a memorial to a dear friend. V.S., Long Beach.

Donations may be made payable to the National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) Foundation, 17141 Bircher St., Granada Hills, Calif. 91344. One out of every 350 babies will die of SIDS, commonly known as "crib death." There are nearly as many theories as there are persons researching the mystery affliction, in which infants die unexpectedly, quietly and for no apparent cause in their sleep. But no one has been able to predict or prevent SIDS. It was recently discovered, for instance, that SIDS runs in families. Brothers and sisters of an infant afflicted with SIDS have five times the normal chance of being struck down. Last March, failure of chemoreceptors, which measure the oxygen content in the blood, thereby regulating the unconscious act of breathing, tentatively were blamed for SIDS. In September, researchers questioned the position of the baby's head and its relationship to SIDS. They wondered whether the airway was obstructed by pressure from the baby's head on the mattress. Another doctor hypothesized that cases of infant botulism, where botulism spores were ingested by the baby through the air— not food—and developed into toxins in the infant's intestines, were a possible cause of SIDS. Last year another doctor suggested that SIDS was caused by heart failure and cardiac rhythm abnormalities. Research continues in an effort to find the cause of the disease, which claims one child every 53 minutes worldwide.

Wit

I am an avid reader of Erma Bombeck's column, "At Wit's End." I understand she has written several books. I was wondering if they are in paperback form, and if you could help me locate copies of them. J.A.B., Long Beach

Three of Erma Bombeck's books, "I Lost Everything in the Post-Natal Depression" ($1.25), "At Wit's End" ($1.50) and "Just Wait Till You Have Children of Your Own" ($1.25), are available in paperback at the Book Barn, 240 Pine Ave., Long Beach. Her newest book, "The Grass Is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank" ($6.95 in hardback), can be found at Pickwick Books, 5037 Hazelbrook Ave., Lakewood. Mrs. Bombeck began writing her three-times-a-week column in late 1967. The column, which she says helps her female readers laugh at themselves, is among the most widely read in the country. She denies being a typical suburban housewife, because she says she hasn't lost her identity, as the women's magazines say she should have. In her own words, "I do my own housework (carp about it hourly), take oil-painting lessons and handle the family budget (which is why we move a lot)." She says her column helps her put her own life in perspective: "It's good that women are able to laugh at themselves. I'd be out of a job if they didn't."

Tours

I work in a children's home in Long Beach, and sometimes it's a problem to find inexpensive places to take our kids for holidays and weekends. Could you give us some information on places we could go that would not only be fun but maybe educational. V.R., Long Beach.

Every Sunday the Independent, Press-Telegram publishes the City Recreation Department's calendar of activities, some of which may be of interest to you. Also the Long Beach Convention and News Bureau publishes a calendar of citywide events monthly. In addition to listing events that charge admission, it notes free activities. You can get on the bureau's monthly mailing list by calling Robin Horn at 436-1236. For educational trips, the Long Beach Unified School District publishes a catalog of educational field trips for elementary grades. It outlines excursions to such places as the harbor, a small animal farm, a post office, dairies, museums and others. It also details how to set up such trips, whom to contact and the maximum number of children per trip. The catalog can be seen in the public-information office at School District headquarters, Seventh Street and Locust Avenue.

Airline's demands irk pilots

Associated Press

Continental Airlines' position that striking pilots must lower their demands before talks can resume was called "disappointing" by a pilots' spokesman Saturday in Los Angeles.

The reply by Continental to an Air Line Pilots Association offer to negotiate had not, however, been officially received by ALPA, said Capt. Richard Engle.

An ALPA telegram Friday informed Continental that the pilots were willing to meet with management in an effort to resolve the strike, which entered its eighth day Saturday.

Late Friday, Continental Chairman Robert Six said in reply, "If the pilot negotiating committee has dramatically revised its demands, they should advise the National Mediation Board, who will evaluate the new position and make the judgment whether it would be reasonable for the two parties to meet."

THE strike, said to be costing the airline more than $1.6 million per day, has grounded all Continental flights, and all service has been canceled through Friday.

Reward in officer-killing case now totals $20,000

It has been 10 months and 17 days since Long Beach Police Officer Franke Neal Lewis was shot down as he approached a car parked in the 6300 block of Cantel Street to investigate a disturbance at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 14, 1975.

With additional funds pledged by the Long Beach Police Officers Association, reward money offered in the case now has reached the highest figure listed by Secret Witness since the program was inaugurated by The Independent, Press-Telegram in June 1972.

A total of $20,000 is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the officer's killer, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness, $10,000 from state funds pledged by Gov. Brown and $8,000—increased from $5,000—pledged by the Long Beach Police Officers Association.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 from 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif., 90844.

2 injured in plane crash

Two Southland men were injured seriously Saturday when their small plane lost power at 2,000 feet and slammed into a Torrance landfill, authorities said.

The pilot, Leon Brodsky, 55, of Los Angeles, was listed in critical condition at Torrance Memorial Hospital, where he was awaiting surgery. His passenger, Michael Lee, 24, of 3654 Linden Ave., Long Beach, was treated for numerous cuts and abrasions.

Brodsky told county firemen his plane, a four-place Piper Aero 200, lost oil pressure at 2,000 feet about 12:30 p.m. He said he told the Torrance control tower he was gliding in without power.

The airplane, which Brodsky had just purchased and was flying on a shakedown flight, crashed into a landfill two minutes later in the 26000 block of South Crenshaw Boulevard, three miles short of the Torrance airport.

The plane lost its right wing and suffered heavy airframe damage, authorities said.

Pedestrian killed by car

A Norwalk pedestrian was fatally injured Friday night when he was struck by a car while crossing Imperial Highway, sheriff's deputies reported Saturday.

Luis Cuedas, 38, 12343 Crewe St., died at 9:43 p.m. at Studebaker Hospital in Norwalk.

He was hit near Roeston Avenue soon after 7 p.m. by an eastbound car driven by Sue Mishimura, 18, of Norwalk.

Veterans' vigil ends Monday

Associated Press

Veterans who have occupied Sen. John V. Tunney's Los Angeles office since Veteran's Day said Saturday they would end their vigil Monday morning because they don't want to prejudice Tuesday's election.

The veterans, mostly from the Vietnam war, began camping in the office Monday, demanding statements from all the presidential candidates listing what each would do about veterans' problems.

A spokeswoman said Saturday that if the veterans haven't heard from all the candidates by Monday morning they'll give up.

"Our purpose was to meet with the candidates, and we figured if they hadn't contacted us by Monday they were not going to contact us at all," said Loretta Smith.

THE veterans have heard from Democrat Jimmy Carter and Peace anf Freedom Party candidate Dr. Benjamin Spock.

The group expected to meet today with independent presidential candidate Eugene McCarthy.

One of the veterans, Ron Blitzer, said the group still had not heard from President Ford, despite repeated attempts to contact him.

Swine-flu clinics set to open in L.A.

Associated Press

Swine-flu inoculation clinics for the general public will open in Los Angeles County Monday, although no decision will be made until Nov. 5 on whether children from 3 to 18 will be given the vaccine.

More than 90,000 elderly and other high-risk persons were vaccinated last week, a lower turnout than health officials had hoped for, but still higher than in other parts of the country.

Hayakawa writes a new book of political 'rules'

By BOB EGELKO

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If Republican S.I. Hayakawa unseats U.S. Sen. John Tunney Tuesday, the political rule book will have to be rewritten. Hayakawa has left it in tatters.

For example, conventional political wisdom says that, in the final stages of a close race like this one, you're not supposed to take any chances.

"I didn't know that was a rule," says the semanticist, who in the past week has lived up to his self-description as a "Republican unpredictable" by:

—Giving a free-wheeling and apparently spontaneous talk on sexual relationships and pornography, including a detailed and articulate description of the reasons people go to bed together.

—Suggesting that the United States consider sending troops to southern Africa, either through the United Nations or on its own, if a bloodbath were imminent.

—Saying the U.S. should encourage uprisings in Eastern Europe, though he conceded they would probably be crushed, and also that in the event of an uprising the U.S. should threaten to send troops.

Other unwritten rules say you shouldn't take positions that allow your opponent to portray you as indecisive or heartless.

It was easy for Tunney to make those characterizations of Hayakawa's habit early in the campaign of saying "I don't know" to questions on the economy, child labor and World War II U.S. internment camps.

Hayakawa says the minimum wage should be reduced for teen-agers — to as low as $1.50 an hour — and some child-labor laws scrapped so employers will hire young people. And he says the internment camps, though wrong and cruel, turned out to benefit Japanese-Americans.

IN THEIR FIRST televised debate, Hayakawa spent much of the time defending those positions instead of attacking, as a nonincumbent is supposed to. He did better in the second debate, until the troops-to-Africa subject came up.

His speeches, too, defy convention.

Delivered in a soft, almost singsong voice, they often include a classroom-style lecture on the differences between the parties, complete with references to "outsider psychology."

New proposals sometimes take the form of "just-suppose" speculation. On those occasions, he can get testy when pressed later for specifics.

But the continued closeness of opinion polls — 45 to 43 in Tunney's favor in the California Poll last week — and the reactions of audiences to the little man in the tam-o'-shanter suggest that Hayakawa may be immune to conventional political taboos.

"Face it— the attraction of this guy is that he's unpredictable," says his campaign manager, Richard Woodward. "If we didn't know he was unpredictable, we'd be in a state of shock."

SAYS HAYAKAWA: "I am what I am, and, if it doesn't fit the political mold, that's too damn bad for the political mold."

Or as Tunney puts it, "If I made some of those statements it would be all over."

Of course, that's a statement that cuts both ways.

Tunney, whose future appeared bright when he trounced Republican Sen. George Murphy six years ago, has had trouble finding a political base in his own party, as evidenced in a bruising Democratic primary campaign against former Chicago Seven defendant Tom Hayden.

Tunney's image problems have been skillfully exploited by Hayakawa's television-advertising campaign, designed by Woodward with Press Secretary Jack McDowell, a former Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter, and retired advertising man Hal Larson.

One ad intersperses shots of an empty chair — symbolic of Tunney's frequent absence from the Senate this year — with footage of the senator skiing in Switzerland or vacationing in Florida, as he did during two Senate votes in the past. At the end of the commercial, Hayakawa sits in the chair.

CAMPAIGNING, HAYAKAWA talks about Tunney's absenteeism and changes of position on some issues, about child labor and the need to cut federal spending and curb "overregulation" of business.

In the San Joaquin Valley, expected to go solidly for Hayakawa, he talks mostly about Proposition 14, the farm-labor initiative that Hayakawa opposes and Tunney supports.

In Stockton last week, Hayakawa's cry that Prop. 14 "must, must, must be defeated" drew whoops and cheers from a crowd of about 250 at a $10 clam-and-wine feed.

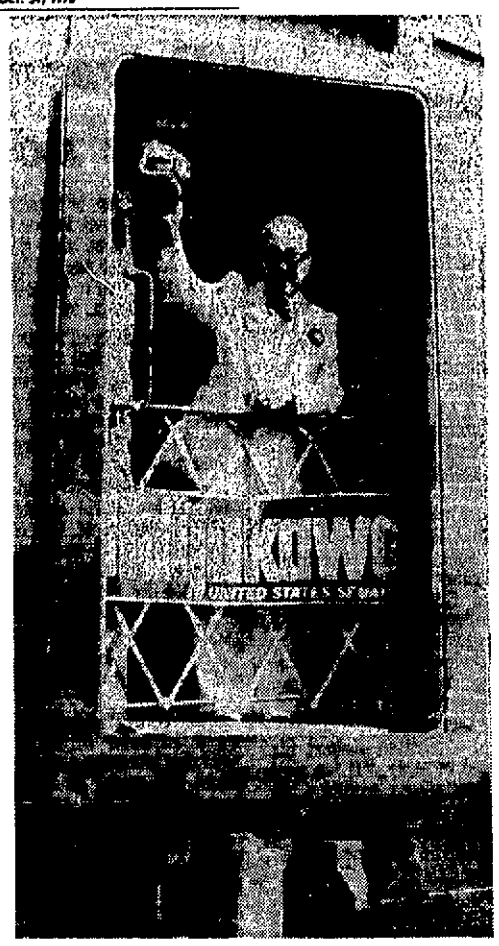

But, more than issues, what the audiences come to hear is the fighter who stood up to student radicals as president of San Francisco State College in 1968.

His greatest moment — when he ripped the wires from a microphone atop a flatbed truck where a student demonstrator was speaking — is mentioned or alluded to in virtually every campaign introduction.

After the speeches, the people who approach Hayakawa for handshakes and autographs usually talk about San Francisco State.

Hayakawa doesn't mention the subject that much on his own. But the symbol of those days, the tam-o'-shanter, is ever-present.

He and his staff wear tiny knit tams as lapel pins. At television interviews, he wears one or has it lying before him. And after each speech, he puts it on, and the applause level rises.

Tunney gains confidence

Says opponent making mistakes

SEN. JOHN TUNNEY "Feels Very Good"

By STEVE LAWRENCE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "It's like going into battle," John Tunney mused about his re-election chances. "You think you're going to win, but you might get hit by a stray shot."

There have been a lot of stray shots zinging at Tunney this year as he campaigns for a second term in the U.S. Senate. He survived a tough primary challenge from former antiwar activist Tom Hayden.

Now he's looked in a tight race with Republican S.I. Hayakawa, the former college president known for his clashes with student protesters and the tam-o'-shanter he wears.

BUT AS the campaign heads into its final hours, the lanky Democrat is at least outwardly confident that he'll still be California's junior senator after voters go to the polls Tuesday.

"I think I'm going to win," he said Friday as he hunched forward on a crowded, early-morning commuter plane. "I feel very good about it.

"I think that Hayakawa is beginning to make one mistake after another."

Tunney held a 45-to-43 per cent lead over Hayakawa in a Field Poll taken Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and released Friday, but he says he has a "gut feeling" that his margin is widening.

The Hayakawa "mistakes" Tunney referred to began Wednesday during the second televised debate between the two candidates, when, Tunney said, Hayakawa "stepped on a landmine."

DURING THE encounter and in questioning afterward, Hayakawa said the U.S. should be ready to send troops to Africa — preferably as part of a United Nations force, but on its own if necessary — to avoid a bloody clash between whites and blacks.

Afterward Hayakawa said the U.S. should encourage anti-Soviet revolts in Eastern Europe even though they would probably be crushed and should threaten to use troops to aid the rebels.

Tunney pounced on the statements, calling them "ludicrous" and "ridiculous," sand he has been hammering away at them in campaign stops since the Wednesday television appearance.

"It seems to me that injecting American troops into a tense African scene is more likely to provoke a bloodbath than to stop one," he said in a Los Angeles speech.

IF THE U.S. threatened to use troops in an Eastern European revolt and then backed down, he added, it would "condemn thousands of brave patriots to needless deaths.

"But if his threats to use troops were carried out they could lead to a third world war."

On paper at least, John Tunney probably should not be having all the problems he has had this re-election year.

The son of a world champion boxer, Tunney won a 600,000-vote victory six years ago over former actor George Murphy. He outpolled even Gov. Ronald Reagan, who was re-elected that year by 500,000 votes.

His first-term record included getting more bills, amendments and resolutions through the Congress than any member of his Senate class, and early polls showed him beating several potential re-election opponents, including Reagan.

BUT POLLS taken shortly before the June 8 primary showed Hayden within a few percentage points of Tunney, although Tunney won by about 60 to 40 per cent.

And Tunney admits that his own polls showed Hayakawa nine points ahead of him soon after the primary.

Tunney blames the closeness of the races on Hayden's and Hayakawa's well-financed, "higly negative" campaigns, Tunney's lack of contact with community-group "opinion molders" and Hayakawa's image.

"I think his popularity comes from a desire that people have to project their own frustrations on a person who came through that 1968 San Francisco State disruption as a hero figure," he said during the plane ride.

"It was almost as good as a TV serial. This impression of him as a tough guy is not accurate. He is just about the reverse of his image."

Poll addresses wrong in snafu

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

A computer error on "close to a million" pieces of Democratic get-out-the-vote mail to Los Angeles County voters has resulted in wrong addresses for the addressees' polling places.

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, said his district-wide mailing, intended to be a service and convenience to voters, has instead turned out to be "a serious problem."

"Please disregard the polling-place address on my postcard and use the address included in your sample ballot envelope," Hannaford said.

George Hodgkins, vice president of Computer Mailings Inc. (CMI) of Los Angeles, acknowledged the error and seconded Hannaford's appeal to go by the sample ballot information.

Hannaford said erroneous polling-place information was printed on 1.2 million mailed voting reminders in his campaign and those of Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, and 63rd Assembly District candidate Bruce Young, Cerritos Democrat. About 700,000 similar mailers for the Carter-Mondale campaign were involved also, Hannaford said, but most of them were caught in time.

Hannaford is seeking re-election in the 34th Congressional District. His Republican opponent is Daniel Lungren.

Postcards hike Cal. registration by over 1 million

But election day effect still a question mark

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO—It is a piece of stiff white paper, a little more than 8 inches wide and some 15 inches long. It could be responsible for helping turn the 1976 general election into a Democratic landslide. It could make no impact at all.

It is the postcard voter registration form. Until the Oct. 4 deadline, Californians could simply sit at home, fill out the affidavit at the top of the form—the bottom 9 inches contain instructions in English and Spanish—tear it off and mail it in. No stamp was needed.

The forms were sent out to everyone turning 18 and to those on mailing lists possessed by the political parties, labor unions, service clubs, often with the suggestion that if the recipient were already registered, the form could be passed on to someone who wasn't.

POSTCARD registration is expected to account for more than a million more Californians being eligible to vote in Tuesday's election than were eligible to vote in the June 8 primary. Secretary of State March Fong Eu says the total should exceed 10 million, the largest in the state's history except for 1972, when the law opened the voting process to 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds.

And of the million new or re-registered voters, perhaps two-thirds figure to be Democratic. The party could well have close to 58 per cent of the state's registered voters at the moment.

However, as California Democrats know from bitter experience, a registered voter is not the same as a voter, and a registered Democrat is not a vote to be counted ahead of time.

BUT IF party workers have any success at all at getting Democrats to the polls Tuesday and persuading them to vote for Democratic candidates, California's two legislative houses could be the most partisan since the sessions of 1883 and 1884.

In those two years, Democrats dominated the Senate 32 to 8 and the Assembly 61 to 19, and newly elected Gov. George Stoneman was also a Democrat.

The target for Democrats in 1976 is more modest. They hope for 27 seats in the Senate—they now have 25—and 54 seats in the Assembly—they now have 53.

If they reach those figures, the party will have the two-thirds majority needed to totally dominate the legislative process in each house. And if Democratic members and Democratic Gov. Brown can get along, party programs should have no trouble being enacted.

The possibility of achieving a dominant majority is considered good in the Senate, fair in the Assembly.

IN THE 40-member Senate, 20 four-year-term seats are up for election this year. Of the 20 not up for election, Democrats occupy 17, meaning they must win 10 of the 20 contested seats to reach the desired 27.

Of the 20 seats being contested, Republicans occupy 12 and Democrats 8. Reapportionment created two new districts as of next Dec. 6, and six senators chose not to seek re-election.

It breaks down this way in the Senate's 20 races. Five seats are considered safe for their Democratic incumbents. They are the seats now held by Albert Rodda of Sacramento, Nicholas Petris of Oakland, Alfred Alquist of San Jose and David Roberti and Bill Greene of Los Angeles.

Four seats are considered safe for Republicans. Three are occupied by John Nejedly of Walnut Creek, Newton Russell of Glendale and H.L. "Bill" Richardson of Arcadia. The fourth, the 35th District seat in Orange County being vacated by retiring Republican James Whetmore, should be won by GOP Assemblyman John V. Briggs.

IF THOSE expectations materialize, Democrats will hold 22 seats and would have to win 5 of the remaining 11 races to reach the 27-seat level when the next session starts Dec. 6.

In the sprawling 1st District in Northern California, incumbent Democrat Randolph Collier is favored to defeat former Republican assemblyman Ray Johnson. But Collier is 74, much of the reapportioned district is new to him and Johnson is a canny veteran.

In San Francisco's 5th District, Republican incumbent Milton Marks has overcome huge registration disadvantages before but never as huge as this year. As many as 70 per cent of the voters could be registered Democratic come election day. County Supervisor Robert Mendelsohn is optimistic but cautious because Marks, as good a Democratic vote as there is in the Senate, has proved to be a persistent and knowledgeable campaigner.

DEMOCRAT John Garamendi abandoned his Assembly seat to go after the mountainous 13th District seat left vacant by the retirement of Republican Clare Berryhill. His opponent is Bob Whitten, a TV newscaster who is making a better fight of it than expected. The district is believed leaning toward Garamendi, but again, no Democratic considers it won yet.

Another district vacated by a retiring Republican, the 15th in the upper San Joaquin Valley, lured GOP Assemblyman Ernest Mobley. He has been elected five times despite a great registration disadvantage and figures to win again since he has maintained a low profile and done nothing to get folks mad at him. But Democrat Rose Ann Vuich is well known in the district, much of which is new to Mobley, and is working hard. Some Democrats think she has an outside shot at capturing the seat now held by Howard Way.

ANOTHER veteran Republican, Donald Grunsky, is retiring from his 17th District seat in the coastal counties of Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Luis Obispo. GOP Assemblyman Robert Nimmo is expected to defeat former Santa Cruz County Supervisor PHil Harry, but Democrats are insisting the votes be counted anyway.

Sen. Lou Cusanovich, R-Woodland Hills, is a good politician. He always runs scared. He's running scared this time, too. His opponent is a woman, Sabrina Schiller, who has mounted a sizzler of a campaign. She is said to be trailing but closing fast.

Two veterans are having at each other in the 27th District seat vacated by retiring Republican Robert Stevens. The district includes El Segundo, Redondo Beach, Manhattan Beach, Torrance, Palos Verdes, Rolling Hills, and the San Pedro-Wilmington area, and Democratic Sen. James Q. Wedworth of Hawthorne is claiming to be the incumbent. Republican Assemblyman Robert Beverly of Manhattan Beach is favored, but it is another race no one is very sure about.

ONE OF the races that has attracted the most attention statewide is the George Deukmejian-Renee Simon race in Long Beach's 31st District. Reapportionment has put Deukmejian, the veteran Republican incumbent, in a district partially new to him, in which Democrats have a large and increasing registration majority. City Councilwoman Simon is using the efficient campaign organization developed by retiring Democratic Sen. Joseph M. Kennick and the city's two Democratic assemblymen, Mike Cullen and Fred Chel, and is considered to have a chance to upset the favored Deukmejian and become the first female senator in California's history.

In the Whittier-Santa Fe Springs area, GOP Assemblyman William Campbell is running ahead of former Santa Fe Springs Mayor Betty Wilson in the battle for the newly created 33rd District seat.

But Campbell's expected gain for the GOP should be balanced by Democratic Assemblyman Paul Carpenter, expected to defeat Republican Loran Norton in Orange County's new 37th District.

One of the most bitter Senate fights is taking place in San Diego's 39th District, where veteran Republican incumbent Jack Schrade, 74, is being challenged by Democratic Assemblyman Bob Wilson, 33. Schrade is a tough campaigner, but Wilson, who is both conservative and ambitious, is taking him down to the wire.

Of the 11 "doubtful" races, then, Democrats feel sure they have winners in Collier, Garamendi and Carpenter and believe they have good chances with Mendelsohn, Simon and Wilson. If all six come through, that would give the party 28 seats. Should one or more falter, party professionals feel, Vuich, Schiller and Wedworth are capable of pulling an upset.

Republicans, however, are confident they can win with Mobley, Nimmo, Cusanovich, Beverly, Deukmejian, Campbell, and Schrade. That would give them 14 seats, and keep the Democrats below 27. And they give Johnson, Marks and Whitten — Marks particularly — good chances of winning, as well.

The Assembly also could go either way as far as the Democrats gaining the two-thirds majority of 54 seats or more. Of the 80 seats being contested, 45 are considered locked in by the Democrats, with perhaps three of those — Floyd Mori of Pleasanton, Larry Chimbole of Palmdale and Bill McVittie of Ontario — subject to long-shot Republican upsets.

Republicans figure 15 of their seats are safe, with two incumbents — Eugene Chappie of Yuba City and Bill Thomas of Bakersfield — perhaps not as solid as the other 13.

That leaves 20 seats in the doubtful column, and Democrats would have to win nine of them to give them 54 Assembly votes. They are optimistic, but some privately say they would be pleasantly surprised if they succeeded.

Republicans feel confident they can win seven of the races in which there is no incumbent— with Stan Statham in the 1st District, Ron Greenslate in the 8th, Carol Hallett in the 29th, Marilyn Ryan in the 51st, Bill Dannemeyer in the 69th, Jim Slemons in the 74th and Jim Ellis in the 77th.

They look for incumbents Ken Maddy in the 30th, Paul Bannai in the 53rd and Robert McLennan in the 63rd to retain their seats despite dismaying Democratic registration majorities.

And they think they can pick off at least two incumbent Democrats—Richard Robinson in Orange County's 74th District by Peter Vogel and Tom Suitt in the desert counties' 75th by Al McCandless.

That would give the GOP 12 of the 20 doubtful seats and deny the Democrats the 9 they need. In addition, Republicans feel they have the candidates to oust at least two other Democratic incumbents, Michael Wornum in Marin County's 9th and Carmen Perino in the Stockton area's 26th.

Ford, Carter blitzing TV

Millions spent on last-minute commercials

By DAVE GOLDBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — For those so inclined, there will be three straight hours of Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford on television Monday night. For those not so inclined, you're out of luck.

The two major parties are flooding the airwaves with commercials this weekend in the last gasp before the voters make their decision and end more than a year of campaigning.

The peak will come Monday night, when Carter and Ford take over from the NBC "Monday Night Movie," "Executive Suite" and "The Captain and Tennille," but not, heaven forbid, from the ABC Monday night football game between the Baltimore Colts and Houston Oilers.

Each candidate has half an hour on each network.

The Ford people estimate that broadcast and newspaper advertising for the last three days of the campaign — Saturday, today and Monday — is costing them $1.2 million to $1.5 million. The Carter people say they can't break down the final three days, but Gerald Rafshoon, Carter's media director, has estimated that the last two weeks may cost about $2.5 million. Each of the Monday night half-hours will cost the candidate around $100,000.

For the final few days, Ford's people are selling a candidate to trust.

"The key word is 'trust'," says media adviser Phil Angell. "That's what it's all about."

Of the election-eve appeal, Angell says, "It's an upbeat, emotional, feel-good kind of spot." There is similar emphasis in the most-often-shown five-minute commercial, which replaces a biographical spot that showed, among other things, Japanese planes plummeting into the Pacific and implied that World War II Navy Lt. Gerald Ford shot them down.

Carter's election-eve show has already been on local stations in several cities — including New York. It involves a combination of man-in-the-street interviews and calls from those said to be ordinary citizens to Carter, "direct from Plains, Ga."

The rest of the Carter message will come via commercials produced by Tony Schwartz, media expert who designed the 1964 commercials for former President Johnson that showed a little girl picking daisy petals with an atomic bomb going off in the background.

Most of them are tightly edited and show Carter looking directly at the audience, reciting what he will do right and what he believes Ford has done wrong.

There is also something of a radio blitz. Both candidates have bought considerable time on all the networks, local stations and those catering to blacks and other ethnic groups.

Overall, both have taken steps to insure that anyone turning on a radio or television set before Tuesday will hear from them.

Hits oil-company campaign

Brown phones-in on Prop. 14

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

Gov. Brown abandoned modern media techniques Saturday and used the "old-fashioned" telephone in a late-hour campaign push for passage of Proposition 14.

He said he had just been to rallies in favor of the initiative in Sacramento, San Diego and Los Angeles and was making a "few phone calls to the news media in cities he could not visit."

He said he might be going out on a limb in supporting the initiative, risking a loss of face if it fails, but he was doing it because he believes strongly in the importance of its passage.

Asked what he was working hardest for — passage of the farm labor initiative or a victory in California for Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter — he responded: "I haven't really spent a lot time working on Prop. 14 until recently. I've spent lots of time campaigning for Carter in nine states, and I'll work with Carter today and tomorrow."

Brown said he fels only passage of Prop. 14 can end a bitter 10-year struggle and prevent the same kind of acrimony and political infighting which he said will continue to distract attention from more important issues.

Brown said during the telephone interview that "feelings are strong on both sides" and that "people have been screaming and yelling in my office all week.

"What we need is a two-year breathing period."

He said passage of the initiative would place existing farm labor laws in a secure framework by taking them out of the hands of the Legislature and putting them into the hands of the voters.

"If, after two years, changes in the laws are required, then the voters can make changes through the initiative process during the next general election. If the final decision remains the responsibility of the legislators, he said, attempts will be made continuously to sway the Legislature one way or the other."

Simon-Deuk interest high

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

With the precision and timing of a moon landing, a veteran Sacramento newsman targeted on remote Pavo Street in Long Beach and settled into the debate dust in Carver School auditorium.

The pinpoint timing spared him the crossfire of political argument on a congressional and an Assembly race and allowed him to catch the main act, the set-to between State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, and Long Beach Councilwoman Renee Simon, Democrat, vying for the Long Beach area's new 31st State Senate District.

THE debate over, he lifted off into the Los Altos night and was gone — just another alien kibitzer saucering into Long Beach's business.

The fact is, however, that the Deukmejian-Simon story and three other man-woman Senate races in California have been statewide stories since primary-election season.

Two of the others are also Los Angeles County races: Sabrina Schiller challenging State Sen. Lou Cusanovich, R-Woodland Hills, in the 19th District, and Betty Wilson challenging Assemblyman William Campbell, R-Whittier, in the 33rd District. The fourth race, in the upper San Joaquin Valley, is between Rose Ann Vuich and Assemblyman Ernest Mobley, R-Fresno.

A couple of nights after the Pavo Street debate, a crew bearing electronic shoulder widgets descended on another unlikely thoroughfare, Lakewood's Pixie Avenue, for a Channel 4 videotaping of Gov. Brown endorsing Mrs. Simon at a union hall.

CHANNEL 4 did another piece featuring several female candidates. Channel 7 did a news clip on the race. Channel 28 recorded Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., endorsing Mrs. Simon in Long Beach last week.

Northern California reporters for the Associated Press and for San Francisco and Sacramento newspapers have made queries to this newspaper about the 31st District campaign.

Mrs. Simon felt the first rumble last summer. Sacramento Mayor Phillip Isenberg and Vice Mayor Anne Rudin spoke in her behalf at a fund-raising party in that city.

Rita Gordon, wife of San Francisco's deputy mayor, gave Mrs. Simon a cocktail reception in her home. A San Francisco Chronicle reporter interviewed her. San Francisco Mayor George Moscone was principal speaker at a dinner for her that evening.

EARLIER on the same day, San Jose Mayor Janet Gray Hayes hosted a fund-raising luncheon in her home.

Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally spent a day campaigning for Mrs. Simon in Long Beach.

Women's groups across the state zeroed in on the Long Beach district as the "best chance for a breakthrough" in the all-male domination of the State Senate. It has never had a female member.

Deukmejian points out whenever they debate that it's not the Senate's fault; it's the voters of the district who make that decision. And he implies that the parade of big-name Democrats for Mrs. Simon through this district amounts to partisan overkill.

What does it all boil down to?

The prestigious California Journal sees the 15th District Mobley-Vuich seat as "safe Republican," with a longshot chance for Ms. Vuich, but "the other three women are better bets to win."

THE Journal puts the 19th District Cusanovich-Schiller race and the 33rd District Campbell-Wilson contest under "leans Republican."

It calls the Long Beach 31st District race "doubtful," noting the special watch California women are keeping on this race as "the best opportunity for the first female to be elected to the State Senate."

Deukmejian, the analysis says, was weakened by reapportionment, and Mrs. Simon "is running an aggressive campaign against both Deukmejian and the Independent, Press-Telegram, which is supporting the incumbent.

"Simon has a tremendous registration advantage, but Deukmejian's popularity extends beyond the GOP."

Before the reapportionment referred to in the analysis, Deukmejian ran and won twice in the old 37th Senate District. He overcame party registration deficits in both those races. It was a 6.1 percentage-point spread in favor of Democrats in 1968, but Democrats didn't even field a candidate.

IN 1972 the point spread doubled to 12.2 favoring Democrats, but Deukmejian buried Democratic challenger G.C. DeBaun 68.2 to 31.8 per cent.

Registration for this election in the new 31st District is: Democrats, 143,495, and Republicans, 79,450. That is a 64,045-voter advantage for Democrats, and the point spread has jumped to 26.8.

Despite Mrs. Simon's apparent advantage from registration figures, the only published survey showed Deukmejian winning 50.6 to 21.8 per cent, with 27.6 undecided.

That poll, taken Oct. 15, 16 and 17, was drafted by the I,P-T and conducted by Western Viewpoint Research, Inc.

Gas pipeline is worth fighting for

and his own recommendation to Congress.

Construction could begin in 1979.

Zarb and the Interior Department had a change of heart at the 11th hour and said the bill should be signed, if only because procedures esablished by the act for choosing the route, rather than normal procedures, could lead to earlier deliveries of gas from Prudhoe Bay.

Nevertheless, it appears that 1981 would be the earliest start for a flow expected to exceed two billion cubic feet per day.

Another reason Ford signed the bill was that it was unanimously supported, from the Great Lakes to the Pacific, by all regions and their congressmen.

A veto would have irritated some and satisfied none.

Senate Democratic sources said the White House was influenced to accept the bill by telephone calls on Oct. 1 to White House Chief of Staff Richard Cheney from Republicans in California, a state Ford needs to carry in Tuesday's election.

Sources said one caller was David Packard, the self-made electronics industrialist and former deputy secretary of defense.

The California calls were said to have been inspired by the El Paso Natural Gas Co., Houston, one of the three applicants whose plan would deliver the North Slope gas through an 809-mile pipeline to Point Gravina, 40 miles from the oil terminal at Valdez.

El Paso's 42-inch gas line would parallel the Alyeska Co.'s 48-inch oil line now near completion. All the El Paso gas would then be liquefied and sent by tanker to Point Conception, Calif.

However, environmental groups, including the Sierra Club, have vowed to fight installation of a gas revaporization plant in the ecologically sensitive area.

According to the El Paso plan, another 42-inch pipeline, this 142 miles long, would be built from the plant to hook into existing gas networks for distribution. And still another pipeline would have to be built to serve the Northwest.

If El Paso's plan is approved, much of the gas would stay on the West Coast. Proponents argue that keeping the gas here would allow supplies now being sent west from Texas to be diverted to other gas-consuming regions in the East and Midwest.

A SECOND competitor is Arctic Gas, a consortium of 15 Canadian and American energy companies who would build 4,490 miles of 48-inch pipeline eastward from Prudhoe Bay through Canada's Mackenzie River Valley. The line would also carry Canadian gas, believed to be about 7 trillion cubic feet, from the Mackenzie Delta to other energy-hungry provinces.

In Alberta, the flow would divide, with the Alaskan gas going to American markets through spurs to the West Coast and Middle West. The Canadian gas would flow to Eastern Canada in Canadian pipelines.

The third applicant is a latecomer who joined the competition just last summer after FPC proceedings had been under way almost a year.

Northwest Pipeline Corp., Salt Lake City, is in partnership with two Canadian pipelines, the Alberta Natural Gas Co., and the West Coast Transmission Co.

NORTHWEST Pipeline's proposed 5,000-mile line would parallel the Alyeska Co. oil pipeline as far as Fairbanks, then turn east along the Alcan Highway into the Yukon, then into British Columbia and Alberta. There, the Canadian carriers would pick up the gas in their lines.

Of the three plans, the Northwest proposal is the least definite and is backed only by preliminary studies.

Costs will certainly be a factor in the FPC and presidential recommendations and congressional decision.

El Paso's proposal would cost about $7.9 billion, but this figure fails to include expenditures for new pipelines in the contiguous United States.

The Arctic Gas plan would cost $8.3 billion, although $1.5 billion would be paid by Canadian interests, reducing the American cost to $6.8 billion.

The Northwest proposal is estimated at about $4.6 billion, half of which would be borne by Canadian partners. As with El Paso, this does not include additional U.S. pipeline to move natural gas to the Midwest and East.

AS FOR delivery dates, of crucial importance in California where residential customers may face cutbacks in 1980, El Paso feels it could start shipping gas in 1984.

Indians win land, end armed siege at center

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A group of Puyallup Indians ended their week-long occupation of a juvenile dentention center Saturday after reaching an agreement with the state to resolve ownership of the facility.

Under the agreement, the state will hand over six acres to the tribe, regardless of the ultimate decision on ownership of the entire 20-acre complex, Gov. Dan Evans said.

"We don't have the title yet, but our elders are really proud of us. They're proud because we can stand up," said Ramona Bennett, tribal chairwoman. "We don't have to hang our heads any more."

Federal, state and Indian officials reached agreement in principle on the plan late Friday. The Indians left the Cascadia Juvenile Detention Center on Saturday, meeting the deadline set in a federal court eviction notice. An estimated 100 to 150 Indians participated in the occupation.

"I am thankful we have avoided the potential violence which could have occurred if the tribe had insisted on remaining illegally" in the center, Evans said.

"While it is clearly illegal for the Puyallups to occupy the facility at gunpoint, there is a question over whether the federal government properly deeded the land to the state," he said.

The Indians took over the center last Saturday after holding an open house on the fifth floor of the building. That night, the only persons reported armed were official tribal policemen, who participated in the takeover.

Included in the seven-point agreement is the federal government's acknowledgment that the juvenile center may have been improperly deeded to the state in 1961.

The facility was an Indian medical clinic between 1941 and 1959.

Brown gets on phone to push for Prop. 14

that partisan and profit motives are behind opposition to the initiative. Growers can take advantage of farmworkers if the workers are not protected by law, and politicians can "come out of the shadows into the limelight by keeping the Legislature in a turmoil over this issue."

Farm labor laws enacted in August 1975 already give farm workers the right to decide by secret ballot which union they prefer, if any, to represent them. But Brown said there have been no elections on farms since February because funds to administer the laws were not provided by the Legislature.

He said opposition forces have admitted that large oil companies are "an underlying reality" in the campaign against the proposition, and as an example of oil company interest in the issue, he named Standard Oil, which owns 11,000 acres of farmland near Fresno.

Brown denounced the advertising tactics of the opposition as "harassment." Full-page ads against the initiative appeared last week encouraging voters to call the Agricultural Relations Board in Sacramento for information on the intiative, which caused the phone lines of that office to be jammed.

More ads urging voters to call the attorney general's office will appear in newspapers today, Brown said, creating more harassment.

He said the presidential election in California is "pretty close, but Carter can win." He said California would be one of several swing states.

"Politics is in part a reasoned evaluation of ideas and words, and also an intuitive grasp of personalities," he said, conceding that President Ford may have an advantage in California as far as personality goes.

The independent candidacy of former Sen. Eugene McCarthy "requires no comment because it isn't significant," he said. He added that he would play no role in a Carter administration because "I have a lot of work to do here."

The governor declined to comment on the opposition by the state's top smog official, Tom Quinn, to the Long Beach terminal for Alaskan oil. Quinn has said the terminal would upset air pollution standards, but Brown said he is not familiar enough with the matter to discuss it.

Devaluations in peso create chaos along border

EDITOR'S NOTE — It used to be that Mexicans flocked across the Rio Grande to buy American, but with the devaluation of their peso they have stopped, and Americans are going the other way to buy Mexican. The repercussions are felt on both sides of the border.

By ISAAC A. LEVI

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP)—Two peso devaluations in the midst of Mexico's worst monetary crisis in decades have brought deep hardship to an estimated 10 million Americans and Mexicans who live and trade on both sides of the border.

Official figures show that retail sales from Brownsville and Matamoros to Chula Vista and Tijuana have dropped 5 to 26 per cent, depending on the area. Merchants in dozens of border communities in Mexico and the United States either went broke or are about to fold.

Enrique Moreno Alvarz, general manager of the Ciudad Juarez Chamber of Commerce, predicts that unemployment here will rise another 25 to 30 per cent if remedies are not found. Presently one of every five of this city's 100,000-member labor force is out of work.

Since Aug. 31, President Luis Echeverria's administration has been forced to devalue the peso 100 per cent from 12.50 to 25 to $1 in an attempt to halt the flight of capital.

About the only thing the devaluations did was to break a huge smuggling industry from the U.S. to Mexico, estimated by Mexican banking sources at $1 billion to $3 billion annually.

The negative effects all along the 1,966-mile border are so acute that President Ford last week promised federal assistance to 36 counties on the U.S. side. Ford told reporters on the campaign trail in San Diego last Monday that he was moving to designate the counties in California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas as the "Southwest Border Economic Region" — a move that merchants catering to the Mexican trade have been demanding for weeks.

For many years, Mexicans shopped American because the goods were cheaper and better.

The devaluations suddenly reversed that, making American goods twice as expensive for the peso-earning Mexican and many Mexican goods twice as cheap for American visitors with dollars to spend.

This killed smuggling but also the daily shopping that hundreds of thousands of Mexicans did legally in the U.S. Now hundreds of thousands of Americans cross the border daily to take advantage of the lower prices in Mexico.

They go to get a haircut, to the beauty parlor, to get their dental work done, to buy eyeglasses, beef, cooking oil, sugar, some types of canned goods, rum and tequila.

But Mexican community leaders claim the influx of American shoppers is not enough to offset the depression brought by the devaluations Aug. 31 and last Wednesday.

They say that many Mexican merchants with dollar debts and Mexican currency income are going broke and point out that since goods are cheap in terms of dollars they do not bring in enough dollars to compensate.

A typical example of how the devaluation hit people is El Paso, a city of nearly half a million with an economy closely tied to Ciudad Juarez. About a million Mexicans used to do a fifth of their shopping in El Paso, mostly for furniture, home appliances, TV and radio sets, automobiles, clothing, toys, milk and groceries. Much of it was done through dollar installment plans.

"Now we don't go anymore," said Rosalia Hernandez, a Ciudad Juarez divorcee. "It's twice as expensive, even though Mexican goods have also gone up in price but not as much. My teen-age son and I used to go on weekends and have dinner and see a movie, too."

The El Paso Chamber of Commerce reported a 5 per cent drop in retail sales after the first devaluation, a loss to merchants of $5 million a month out of $100 million average. But firms catering to the Mexican trade lost 60 to 90 per cent, it said. The chamber doesn't have figures on how much sales dropped since the second devaluation.

"But no doubt about it, it has dropped," says the chamber's general manager, Mark T. Miles.

El Paso's Plaza Hotel reported bookings down by more than a third. An Italian restaurant across the street said its business dropped more than 40 per cent. Herbert Schartz of The Popular, a three-outlet department store, said sales were down 18 to 25 per cent. Working hours were reduced, and overtime was cut after the first devaluation.

The number of persons crossing the Rio Grande from Ciudad Juarez to El Paso dropped 50 per cent to a million in September, while crossings the other way increased 30 to 40 per cent, according to the local Mexican tourism director, Jose Quevedo Treviso.

But Moreno Alvarez says the money that tourists and American shoppers are spending is not half enough to cover losses suffered by Ciudad Juarez merchants.

Stores are reporting sales are up 40 to 50 per cent, but many still have dollar debts to pay for their American merchandise. In addition, they have new salary increases and higher costs to meet.

"The first devaluation—although it shook us like nothing before—was probably beneficial," said one of the score or so of merchants who went out of business here. "The second just sent us under."

"For a whole year, Juarez banks fearing devaluation refused people credits in pesos," Moreno Alvarez said. "They made only dollar loans.

"When the devaluation hit, a lot of merchants who had sold only in pesos and many on installment got caught with terrible debts in dollars. Others sold in dollars, but customers now just cannot meet their monthly payments."

The average monthly wage in Ciudad Juarez is 4,000 pesos, which was the equivalent of $320 before the first devaluation and $245 after it. With last Wednesday's devaluation, it dwindled to $160.

"It's the same all along the border, more or less," Moreno Alvarez said.

Tourist dollar buys bargains in Ensenada

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

ENSENADA — At first glance, this tourist-oriented Baja California city of 100,000 shows fews signs of damage from Mexico's current financial crisis.

The value of the peso, fixed for 23 years by the government, now changes daily.

Crowds thronged the city's several banks along Avenida Ruiz, a major commercial street. They wanted to trade pesos for dollars, but they were out of luck.

As in the U.S. last week, when banks temporarily suspended trading in pesos, the big Mexican financial institutions all but stopped dealing in dollars.

ONLY the "casas de cambios," independent money brokers, remained to trade dollars or pesos, one for the other, whichever the buyer needed.

And it was a good deal for the dollar sellers, who could buy pesos — from at least one firm — for just below the official rate.

Last week the American with cheap pesos in his wallet held something of a whip in Ensenada — if he wasn't planning to take the cash out of the country. It was vital to watch every transaction with an eagle eye — and a pocket calculator.

When the peso floats, every entrepreneur — with one eye on the law — sets his own exchange rate.

If enough pennies can be shaved this way, there is extra and entirely legal profit to be earned. The old Roman tag advising the buyer to beware was seldom more true.

ALREADY relatively inexpensive national liquor labels, Oso Negro vodka or gin and the coffee liqueur Kahlua, were undercut in price for the lucky buyer.

'A can of worms' in Arizona

A team of investigative reporters currently in Arizona to complete the work of slain newsman Don Bolles may find evidence of mob power and political corruption in the state, three news veterans said Saturday.

The probe by 18 members of the IRE (Investigative Reporters and Editors) will, in effect, "provide life insurance for every investigative reporter in the country," said Theo Wilson, West Coast Bureau chief of the New York Daily News.

"The investigative reporters are now in Arizona to see what Bolles was after," Ms. Wilson said in a news-writing workshop.

SHE was featured with Linda Deutsch, Associated Press' Los Angeles bureau; Mary Neiswender of the Independent, Press-Telegram; and moderator John Edwards, Glendale Print-Equip News.

Bolles, 47, an Arizona Republic investigative reporter, died 11 days after dynamite exploded under his car June 2 in the parking lot of a Phoenix hotel. He was apparently lured there to check out a story on land fraud involving politicians.

The Bolles' discussion took place during a day-long seminar sponsored by the Pacific Coast Press Club designed for professional newsmen and women and journalism students. In other workshops, participants discussed feature writing, public relations, photo journalism and page makeup.

PCPC'S members are drawn from Long Beach and throughout the Southland, said club President Ralph Hinman Jr., I,P-T staff writer. The journalism conference was held at the University Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles.

The significance of Bolles' murder was that reporters and policemen have traditionally been considered "off-limits for murder" by the underworld, Ms. Neiswender told the audience, most of them college students majoring in journalism.

"Killing a cop is no longer a big deal these days," Ms. Neiswender said. The IRE's effort in Arizona will be an attempt to make it clear to the underworld that "it's too much trouble — more than it's worth — to kill a reporter," she added.

The reporters said that, excluding reporters killed in war zones, it has been nearly 50 years since a newsman or newswoman has died "gangland-style" in the line of duty.

"IT'S really gotten reporters nervous," said Ms. Wilson. "In two or three months you'll see some good stories coming out of there (Phoenix)."

I,P-T staffer is first woman head of guild

For the first time in its nearly-40-year history, the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild has elected a woman as its president.

Linda Zink, a Life/Style writer for the Independent, Press-Telegram, was elected without opposition in the Guild's annual election meeting last week.

Ms. Zink, 29, is a 1965 graduate of Long Beach Poly High School who previously was secretary and treasurer of the union, which is Local 69 of the AFL-CIO Newspaper Guild.

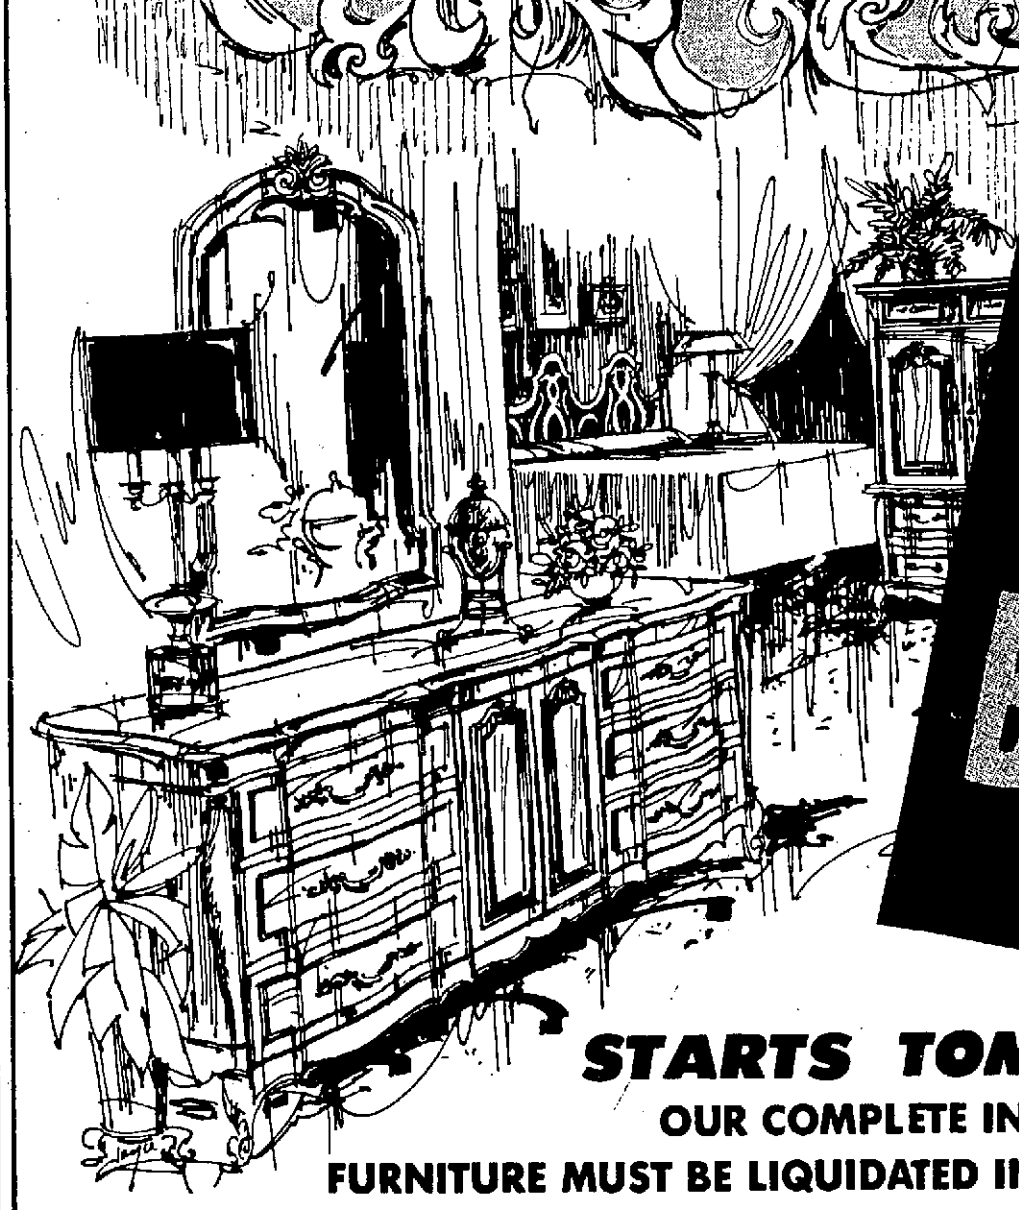

Other members of the local's 1977 executive board include Ron Shroyer, first vice president; George Laine, secretary; Allen Black, treasurer, and Ed Gallardo, sergeant-at-arms. All but Black are employed at the I,P-T. Black is an employe of Triangle Publications Inc.

Don Chorpenning and Bob Dey were elected unit vice presidents representing the I,P-T and Triangle Publications, respectively.

Family escapes blazing home

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

The parents of a 2-year-old boy dropped him from a burning second-story apartment into the hands of a neighbor Saturday in North Long Beach, and the mother jumped before firemen arrived to rescue the father.

Lawrence Terflinger, 26, of 6639 Delta Ave., said he was awakened at 10:15 a.m. by the screams of his son, Dylen, who apparently had been playing with matches in a bedroom adjacent to his parents' room. The family could not reach a stairway because of smoke and flames in the hallway.

Batallion Chief Paul Finley said a neighbor, Willie McKinzie, who lives in the apartment below the Terflinger residence, was returning from work and saw smoke all around the building.

McKinzie heard screaming in the back of the building, where the Terflingers were waiting by a bedroom window. Terflinger's 22-year-old wife, Kathy, dropped the boy into McKinzie's arms. Then she jumped, suffering cuts and bruises.

"I was just about to jump, when suddenly a ladder was brought up by firemen," Terflinger said.

A five-truck engine company extinquished the blaze in about 20 minutes, Finley said. He estimated damage at $10,000.

Stress deaths linked to unemployment rate

fluctuations in unemployment, illness and criminal behavior."

Brenner studied the effects of unemployment, inflation and real per-capita income on all these factors but could not find the same correlations for inflation and real per-capita income that he could for unemployment.

"The federal government has become relatively adept since World War II at assessing the impact of income, prices and employment of monetary and fiscal policy," said Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., the committee chairman, in his letter transmitting the report to committee members.

"But government policy planners have had essentially no success in shedding light on the next level — on the ensuing effects which changes in income, prices and employment have on individuals and on society.

"Yet it is precisely the eventual impact of economic policy on individuals which should be the focus of Washington officials, rather than the impact of this policy on the intervening economic variables."

The release of the study two days before the presidential election would tend to favor the Democrats, who support full-employment legislation.

The Republican members of the committee, however, have not followed their usual practice of filing dissenting opinions with the report, and staff members at the White House and in the Office of the Council of Economic Advisers said they have not seen it.

Management of the nation's ailing economy has been a major point of contention between the two presidential candidates and may become a more pointed campaign issue after Friday's report by the Commerce Department of figures warning of possible further economic decline.

Brenner's findings are based on the effect of 1 per cent unemployment, sustained over five years. The five-year period is used because certain diseases, like heart ailments, would take longer to show up than, say, homicides, he found.

The committee extrapolated Brenner's findings to the 1.4 per cent level to reflect the actual unemployment increase in 1970.

It said the cumulative effect of that increase cost American society some $21 billion in lost income, mortality and institutionalization, in addition to the following:

— About 5.7 per cent of the 26,960 suicides, or 1,540 of the total.

— About 4.7 per cent of the 117,480 mental-hospital admissions, or 5,520.

— About 5.6 per cent of 136,875 state-prison admissions, or 7,660 of the total.

— About 8 per cent of 21,730 homicides, or 1,740 of the total.

— About 2.7 per cent of 32,080 deaths from liver cirrhosis, or 870 of the total.

— About 2.7 per cent of the 979,180 deaths from cardiovascular and kidney disease, or 26,440 of the total.

If you forgot, it's not as late as you think

During the brief debate, Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-Pa., said the seven months of daylight saving would cut the number of days with late sunrise. He also argued that public-opinion polls commissioned by the Department of Transportation, which administers the Uniform Time Act, indicate a majority of Americans favor extended periods of daylight saving time.

Congress has been tinkering with clocks periodically for almost 60 years, usually in the name of energy conservation.

THE MOST recent changes adopted grew out of the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74. In an attempt to reduce fuel consumption, Congress in January 1974 imposed year-round daylight saving time that was supposed to last for two years.

But complaints from persons in northern states and near the western boundaries of each time zone, who said the winter sun wasn't rising until nearly 9:00 a.m., cut the experiment short. Congress put clocks back on standard time from November 1974 to February 1975.

Daylight saving time on a nationwide basis was first used during World War I. After the war, some states and municipalities continued the practice, which led to a great deal of confusion for travelers. (Even today, Arizona, Hawaii and parts of Indiana do not observe daylight saving time.)

Carter, Ford down to wire in one of century's close races

Electoral vote distribution: If Ford can concentrate his popular vote in the states with big electoral votes, his chances of bringing off an upset will be vastly improved. In fact, it appears quite conceivable that one candidate could lose the popular vote contest and win in the Electoral College. That has happened three times — in 1824, in 1876 and most recently in 1888, when Benjamin Harrison beat Grover Cleveland.

With final polls still to be completed in a number of the closely fought states, an interim New York Times tabulation of electoral votes gave Carter 253 and Ford 188, with 97 still too close to call. To win, a candidate needs 270 electoral votes.

A document obtained by the Times from sources close to the President Ford Committee was somewhat more favorable to Ford, giving Carter the lead in states with 230 electoral votes and Ford the lead in states with 196, leaving states with 112 still in a category headed "pivotal."

The major surprise in the document, which bore no official committee identification, was its concession that Carter would probably carry New York and Texas, coupled with the assertion that Florida could still be won by the President.

It appears probable that the election will turn on the results in five states that lie in the nation's industrial heartland along Route 30 from the Atlantic to the Mississippi: New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

In all five the race is close, with the Democrats most confident about Ohio and Pennsylvania and the Republicans most confident about Indiana, New Jersey and Illinois, in that order.

A bad omen for Carter appeared in Illinois, where the final Chicago Sun-Times straw poll, which has an excellent record of accuracy, showed a virtual tie, with Ford pulling to within one-tenth of one percentage point of his rival, 49.4 to 49.3.

Of the other big states, Massachusetts and Florida are considered more or less safe for Carter; he leads in New York by three percentage points, according to a Newsday-Gannet Newspapers' poll completed on Thursday, and in Texas, where he campaigned heavily Saturday afternoon.

Although he has slipped there recently, Ford leads in Michigan, his home state, and in California.

Given Carter's still-strong electoral bases in the South and the border states, Ford probably needs three or four of the Route 30 states to win, a sizable requirement, but one that no longer seems beyond his reach.

According to the Times-CBS News poll, the President's best targets are young people, suburbanites and residents of small towns, among all of whom he has scored solid gains already, and perhaps blacks, an unusually large number of whom describe themselves as undecided.

Two comments on the last weekend before Election Day from veteran politicians in Maryland captured the special qualities of the campaign: its near-invisibility, created in large measure by the shortage of funds under the new federal election law, and the strange swoon of Carter, who has now lost a national lead of more than 25 percentage points in most polls.

"If you went by bumper stickers," said Edmond F. Rovner, a former secretary of economic development, " 'Save the Whales' would win, 5 to 3."

Asked why Carter had fared so badly since Labor Day, State Sen. Harry J. McGuirk, who represents a blue-collar neighborhood of South Baltimore, said, "People here don't feel that they know Jimmy Carter."

The campaign in its last stages is beginning to assume striking similarities to those of 1960 and 1968.

In 1960, it was a fight all the way, but the patterns of support for Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy closely matched those evident this year, including Nixon's greater strength the further west he went. The election turned on Illinois, with Kennedy winning the state by 9,000 votes.

In 1968, Nixon held a huge margin over Hubert H. Humphrey, but it dwindled with the passage of each day.

Ford, Carter stumping for big electoral vote

While the President was making a last-ditch pitch for Texas' 26 electoral votes, his running mate, Sen. Robert Dole, was in California with its prized 45 votes.

"We're winning, we're winning," Dole said in one speech. "Carter's a little uptight because he's about to blow the biggest lead in history," he said in another.

Carter, who was seen a 30-point favorite in the flush of his convention victory in July, acknowledged the race is tight.

"The polls show it is so close that the outcome could be decided by whether it rains or not," the Democratic candidate said. Political wisdom has it that Democrats benefit from big voter turnouts, aided by good weather.

In Illinois, which bestows 26 votes, Democratic vice-presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale stressed the get-out-the-vote theme. "We have the next three days to turn it around," he said.

Campaigning in Sacramento, Dole referred to a statewide survey, the Mervin Field poll, and said he is more optimistic than ever about the outcome.

"Frankly, Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale scare nearly everybody who looks closely at their records and their proposals and who is concerned about peace in the world and jobs here at home," Dole told a businessman's breakfast.

The Field poll showed Ford with a 6-point lead in California.

Dole also referred to the Ford camp's own surveys that project 293 electoral votes for the Republican ticket. He gave no specifics about the surveys.

"The polls are going our way and things are looking up," he said.

Mondale went from Illinois to Ohio, worth 25 votes.

In Aurora, Ill., he called the Republican ticket among the most conservative in history, declared Ford has consistently opposed any improvement in federal health care programs and said that "even Richard Nixon would occasionally rise above (Republican) principle."

Mondale also continued to hammer at Ford's record on Watergate, a theme designed to puncture the President's appeal as the candidate most worthy of public trust and confidence.

"If he had his way," Mondale said in suburban Chicago, "Richard M. Nixon would still be president." He referred to Ford's role as House Republican leader in blocking an early committee inquiry into part of the Watergate scandal. Ford has said he did not act at Nixon's behest.

Welfare cheat says, 'It's so easy'

"I just went down and applied again under another name and had the check and Medi-Cal and food stamps by the next day."

The process, she says is easy.

"You go down to the welfare office the first day and fill out a 19-page form. You can say anything you want just as long as you end up alone and with kids."

Not knowing who or where the father of the children is, she says, is vital.

"One time I said I was hitchhiking and it was the truck driver that picked me up—I never saw him before or since."

After a three-hour wait in the welfare office waiting room, she says, there is a five-minute interview with an eligibility worker who reads over the answers to the questions. Another two-page form to fill out, another long wait and another five-minute interview with a child support worker ends the task.

"They tell you the next day at a certain hour they will come to the house to check on you and look at the kids—and they do."

But it's no surprise visit.

"I usually got everyone out of the house I was using and got all the evidence out that a man might be living there just in time for the visit. I'd borrow a couple of kids from someone—make sure they called me 'Mommy'—and that would be it. One time I just pointed to a couple of kids playing in a lot and said they were mine.

"The next day I picked up my Medi-Cal, food stamps and about $200. I also told her how broke I was, so she gave me $100 worth of food stamps right then for $1."

After six months, she says, she would have to fill out another form—which came by mail—to continue the fraud.

"There's another form now that comes every month that has to be filled out, but it's no big deal."

The social workers are so lax, she says, that for a long time she was getting two checks from the same welfare office and same social worker. The only things that changed, she says, were her name and address.

Although she admits receiving the checks under false pretenses, she says with the money she has helped other children—including close relatives who are on welfare but allowing their children to go hungry.

"There are kids starving on welfare and no one does anything about it . . . we turned in a relative whose children are like this. They're really starving—the boy lost his hearing because he had an ear infection and no one did anything about it.

"There are cockroaches in that house that fight you for your dinner—even with the lights on—and yet we've told the welfare people about it a lot of times and they've done nothing. They're still getting $240 twice a month, along with food stamps, but the kids are still starving.

"There are two junkies we know on welfare whose kids are in the same shape—no one's taking care of them.

"A cousin of mine has one child, is working, receiving welfare and unemployment benefits—all under different names.

"Two girlfriends are receiving welfare, saying they have kids. In fact," she says, "one recently got married and the checks never stopped. The other is just living with someone."

Welfare abuse, she says, would stop if the social workers weren't so lax, making it easy for anyone to get money.

"I don't think they've ever seen a real birth certificate," she says frankly, "and they've never asked me for a certified copy of anything . . . all they have to do is check state or county records—that would take five minutes and stop a lot of abuse.

"And it would take just five minutes to call a school to check on the school-age children that most people claim but never produce.

"Actually everything on that application should be checked—but nothing is. If you ask the social workers about this, they'll tell you they've overworked and the case loads are so heavy they don't have time.

"But how much time does it take to check the name on a mailbox . . . that would have caught me every time."

Korea 'bribes' probe was sought year ago

Alleged political payoffs put 'hot potato' in State Department's lap

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The State Department secretly requested a Justice Department investigation of the activities of South Korean businessman Park Tong Sun shortly after a Senate subcommittee delved into the matter last year, diplomatic and Capitol Hill sources said Saturday.

The State Department declined to comment, but diplomatic sources said Philip C. Habib, then assistant secretary for Asian affairs, had asked the Justice Departent to investigate Park's activities in connection with South Korean-American trade.

Jack Blum, who in 1975 was an investigator for a Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations, said in an interview that he believed the State Department made the request after his committee had sought departmental records on Park, who is known here as Tongsun Park. Jerome Levinson the subcommittee's counsel confirmed that it had been pursuing testimony that Gulf Oil Corp. paid $4 million in covert political contributions to South Korean officials between 1966 and 1970.

PARK'S family operates a Gulf Oil refinery in South Korea and, according to one of his associates, Park contends he receives $1 million a month from his Gulf activities. Park, who is out of the country, was not available for comment.

Sources familiar with the investigation said the Justice Department issued subpoenas last week to several of Park's business associates and began questioning his social acquaintances. Blum and Levinson said in interviews that in the summer of 1975, their committee was following up on testimony by Bob R. Dorsey, then Gulf chairman, that the company had paid the contributions to the Democratic Republican Party, the ruling party in South Korea.

The Senate aides arranged a meeting with Habib, who had been U.S. ambassador to South Korea between 1971 and 1974. Habib, they said, declined to testify on certain matters involving the Gulf payments because he had no direct knowledge. But, they said, he seemed willing to supply the committee with State Department records on Park.

Sources in the diplomatic community have said that Habib had been suspicious of Park for several years and had ordered embassy personnel not to become embroiled in any of Park's business dealings.

Despite Habib's indication that the State Department would cooperate, Blum said, when he actually sought to obtain the records in August 1975, he was told by a State Department lawyer that the matter had been turned over to the Justice Department and was "very sensitive."

BLUM said he came away with the impression that Park's activities in the United States on behalf of business endeavors in South Korea was a political "hot potato." It was not until February 1976, six months later, that there was any public indication that the Justice Department was investigaing South Korean efforts to influence American officials.

At that time two Democratic representatives, Joseph P. Addabbo of New York and Robert L. Leggett of California, acknowledged publicly that they were under investigation on a charge of accepting bribes from the South Korean government.

A responsible law-enforcement source rejected the implication that there was any unnecessary delay between the State Department's move in 1975 and the current investigation of Park. He said the State Department's concern was only one of several areas of suspicion that had come to surround Park.

The Justice Department got in touch with Park this year, and he has been cooperating, according to his associates. He has told the investigators, the associates said, that he made payments to several present and former members of Congress, some in the form of political contributions and others in connection with business deals. He has denied, the associates said, that the money came from the South Korean government.

George J. Koelzer, a Newark lawyer, said the Justice Department was seeking to question a client, Cornelius Gallagher, who is a former Democratic representative from New Jersey, in connection with the investigation. Koelzer said a Justice Department lawyer had told him that Gallagher was urged to supply records and be interviewed on any business relationships he had with Park.

Koelzer declined to comment on Gallagher's relation with Park and said no decision had been made on the Justice Department request.

BLUM said his Senate subcommittee first inquired into South Korean-American business relationships as a result of an investigation of the Overseas Private Investment Corp., a government organization that guarantees American investments in several nations. During a fact-finding trip to South Korea, Blum said, a senior South Korean official offered him the company of a woman and took him to a party at which South Korean women seemed available for sexual pleasure.

"I may be prudish," he said, "but I found this shocking." He said his State Department escort officer did not seem surprised at the events. "I came to believe this was standard treatment for American congressional delegations," he said.

Other former congressional and executive branch officials told the New York Times that gifts, offers of sexual companionship and other amenities were not uncommon during official trips to South Korea.

A State Department spokesman said Saturday that John C. Nidecker, a former aide to President Nixon, was given an envelope containing $10,000 while on a 1974 visit to Seoul. Nidecker turned the money over to Habib, who in turn gave it to the CIA's representative in Seoul. It was subsequently returned to the South Korean government, senior diplomatic and intelligence sources said.

Park left Tokyo Saturday by air for Paris after a 36-hour visit to Japan. He arrived in Tokyo Thursday from Seoul.

When they fly, there's thunder in the clouds

And their lightning-fast reactions must be quicker than their craft

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures

They milled around the lobby of a Beverly Hills hotel, waiting for the Gray Line bus just like any other conventioneers.

They wore leisure suits and sports jackets, shook hands with old friends and were introduced to new ones. Tall and short, some balding, some with glasses, they could have been insurance salesmen, bank tellers or Fuller Brush men.

But among this group was the first man who ever lifted the Boeing 747 into the sky, some of the men who will fly America's space shuttle for the first time and a man who survived when his 2,000-mile-per-hour reconnaissance plane broke apart at 78,000 feet.

THAT'S not to mention the first man to fly faster than the speed of sound, the first man to take the B1, the controversial supersonic bomber, into the air, and the German test pilot whose job it was during World War II to take every captured allied plane into the air to see what it would do. The German, Hans-Werner Lerche, no longer a test pilot, worked on pure instinct, of course, with no manuals.

These ordinary looking men — the world' top test pilots (past and present) — gathered recently for the 20th annual meeting of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots (SETP), an international club with 1,400 members.

Meet, for instance, Bill Weaver, a good-looking 47-year-old blond who is discussing how to sell one home and buy another. Weaver, a test pilot for Lockheed, is also one of the luckiest men God ever created— and then decided to let live.

HE WAS testing the SR71, America's super reconnaissance plane, nicknamed "The Blackbird," about 10 years ago, when it suddenly flipped onto its back — at 2,000 miles an hour, flying at 78,000 feet.

Weaver was thrown from the plane as it broke apart.

"I blacked out. I thought it was a bad dream," he recalled. "This couldn't possibly be happening. If it had really happened, I couldn't survive.

"Then I thought I was dead. I was slightly euphoric. I remember thinking that I didn't know why everyone worried about death. It was sort of nice.

"Finally, I realized I was falling. I was alive. I didn't even know what state I was over. I was making a turn when it came apart." (The Blackbird can easily gobble up five states as it turns, can go from California to Florida in 45 minutes and shuttle from London to New York in 1½ hours.)

THE mask on his pressurized astronaut's suit had iced over. He could see nothing. Finally, his parachute popped at 15,000 feet and Weaver floated down — many miles from any sign of civilization.

"I was convinced I wouldn't be discovered for a long time," said Weaver.

But he was thrilled when he saw another parachute floating down — that of his systems controls analyst, the man who operates the sophisticated spy equipment.

Weaver mentally reviewed his survival training and frightened an antelope as he came down in what turned out to be a remote corner of New Mexico.

As he was fighting with his parachute, a voice said: "Can I help you?"

"There was this guy in this cowboy hat, straight out of a Marlboro ad," recounts Weaver. "If I had told Edwards Air Force Base I was going to crash at such and such a place at such and such a time, they couldn't have gotten there faster."

THE rancher had been branding colts when he heard a tremendous explosion too high to see. But he kept watching the sky and when the parachutes popped open, he jumped in his helicopter and went to greet them.

Weaver had a cut on his nose. The other man, however, had broken his neck on the way out of the Blackbird and had drifted lifelessly to the ground.

The rancher insisted upon taking Weaver to a hospital. He flew fast.

"I don't know anything about helicopters," said Weaver, "but I could see the red line, the safe mark, was 85 miles an hour and we were going well above that."

Now, wouldn't that be ironic . . .?

A TEST pilot thinks long and hard about a man who is killed when he is at the controls.

"Afterwards, I kept thinking of what I could have done differently that would have saved him. But I knew there was nothing. I didn't have time to warn him."

And the difference between test pilots and you and I is that Bill Weaver was back in the cockpit one week later, thundering another Blackbird into the atmosphere.

Times have changed, but test pilots are still a special breed. In one breath they deny it. They boast that they are pretty dull, that they spend most of their time on the ground laboriously working with the flight engineer on design and construction. They say it's not all that dangerous anymore, although the insurance companies don't buy that story.

THE test pilots all know a close friend or a colleague who has "bought it" while flying. And when one of this elite group goes down, the word flashes through this international community before it ever comes out in the newspapers.

In the next breath, they admit that they are the cream of the aviator crop. It's a highly competitive field and no matter how good you are, if you are out for a few years, chances are you will never get back in. This kind of flying, these reflexes, these nerves to react, must never be allowed to dull.

They are far removed from the days when the men in goggles and white scarves — the fastest and bravest men on the race circuit — were paid top dollar to try out new planes.

Now, almost all test pilots have engineering backgrounds, many with advanced degrees in aeronautical engineering. They have almost all come up through the military, and they know everything there is to know about a plane before they ever take it up.

THEY have even adopted their own aphorism:

"To be a test pilot is to spend hours and hours of sheer boredom, followed by one moment of sheer panic."

And their own gag definition of the ideal test pilot: "He should have 5,000 hours in the air, a master's degree in aeronautical engineering and be 21 years old." (Most are in their late 20s before they have the experience and training to quality. Many continue as test pilots into their 50s.)

And their own philosophy of life is something called the "guts to brains ratio," but then you would have to be a test pilot to understand it.

Test pilots earn $25,000 to $70,000 a year with good fringe benefits. The first men to take the big planes off the ground — thereby proving that the engineers were right — also get nice bonuses.

Jack Waddell, the first man to pilot the massive 747 down the runway and up and away, was rumored to have received $100,000. He says it wasn't that much.

"JUST say it was substantial. That would be accurate," says Waddell.

That bonus is not just for the first flight — it's for the rest of the testing, too; things like seeing how the plane recovers after a stall, how much faster it will go than the engineers say it should, and how many engines can be shut down in mid-flight without losing altitude.

Most of them could make more money by becoming commercial airline pilots, but that's not what they want to do. "The commercial airplane pilots are bus drivers compared with us," says Hank Hoffman, an Air Force major.

Test pilots in private industry say they pay 50 per cent more for insurance than the man who lives next door. Often, however, the companies pick up the difference or insure them heavily during their take-off to landing moments.

Frank Tallman, Hollywood's top stunt pilot, in attendance at the convention here, beat the system by insuring himself well before the insurance companies were quite so careful.

"THEY sit by their windows now and ponder their mistake," he says.

Tallman, who is 57 and has a wooden leg, was seriously injured while doing the stunt flying for "The Great Waldo Pepper." But he lost his leg from an accident with his son's go-cart, not in a plane crash.

Tallman, who divides his plane crashes into how many he got paid for and how many just happened, is currently flying in two TV series, "Baa Baa Black Sheep" and "Spencer's Pilots" and will soon be working on "Airport '77."

As the four-day meeting and convention goes on, the men attend technical sessions during the day and gather at various parties at night to exchange sea stories of the air, as it were. They also trade practical tips, and hobnob with Alan Shepherd or the real Jimmy Doolittle, now almost 80.

The oldsters of aviation are present and they entertain the younger men with films of the good old days when there was little engineering and all guts.

THERE is Herb Fisher, of Curtiss-Wright fame. He was the first test pilot to reverse all four propellers of a C54 in flight, giving him a sink rate of 15,000 feet per minute.

During World War II, Fisher was the civilian test pilot who first flew the treacherous Hump over the Himalayas. He is a man who, at 67 years young, as he puts it, doesn't give up. Just a few months ago, he was up playing with a P40, completing his 2,500th flight in that World War II-vintage Curtiss fighter plane.

One who couldn't make it to the convention this year is the legendary Tex Johnson, Boeing's chief test pilot in the 1950s, when Boeing was introducing the then jumbo 707.

Johnson became legend when he rolled the 707 above the heads of 100,000 people back in 1956 — including the head of the president of Boeing.

A CROWD had gathered for a boat race and the president was entertaining on his yacht, as the story goes, when the announcer called the public's attention to the new Boeing aircraft flying above.

And then Johnson rolled it, a stunt usually reserved for air shows in which one wing goes down and the plane rolls 360 degrees.

The next morning, Johnson was on the carpet.

"You and I know we've got a good airplane," Johnson told the Boeing president. "I just wanted to show the public how good it was."

Waddell, the 6-foot-3 test pilot who took the 747 up, said such stunts are frowned upon now.

But, did he roll the 747?

"The regulatory climate is such now that we don't do that sort of thing anymore," said Waddell. And then he smiled. "At least not for publication."

HE DID, however, fly it like you and I don't ever want to ride it. He put it into stalls, shut down various engines and then one day over Portland he put all four engines into idle and glided the Jumbo Jet to a perfect landing in Seattle. The 747, by the way, will go 16 miles forward for every mile down on a glide.

"That wasn't an official test. It was just fun to do," said Waddell, now director of flight training at Boeing.

What makes a man become a test pilot?

"I don't know," says Lt. Col. Tom Pugh, an Air Force test pilot. "Why do guys go out and race cars? You can't put your finger on it. You like to be on the top of the heap. No. one is the American way. We were born with it. We're the No. 1 country."

SAYS Maj. Hoffman: "I guess test pilots are overachievers and super competitive. If it's a dart tournament or a ping pong tournament, blood will be spilled before it's over. My ex-wife said I had a death wish."

Waddell, who watches his racehorses when he's not flying the 747, describes it as a sport. "It's like going out to play a good basketball game. I've never considered myself a courageous type of guy."

And Fitzhugh Fulton, the NASA test pilot who will fly the 747 that will carry the new space shuttle into the air, adds: "It's fun to go to work. You get to fly and they pay you for it."

The pilots downplay fear, preferring the word apprehension. Charles Bock, the first man to take the B1 up, put it this way: "I was apprehensive, of course, but not afraid."

AN exception is ex-NASA test pilot Milt Thompson, now 50. He was frankly scared when he tested the X15, a 4,000-mph number that is more a rocket than a plane.

He qualified his fear, saying he had not been in on the early testing and design and he felt he didn't know enough. "At that speed, it's a 15-minute flight," said Thompson. "I just told myself it's all going to be over one way or another in 15 minutes."

Thompson, who was a crop-duster early in his career, was one of the few men who didn't set out to become a test pilot. He wanted to build bridges and just drifted into test flying.

Nearly all of the others started flying as soon as they could. Most then flew for the military and many went to the four recognized test-flight schools, one run by the Air Force, one by the Navy and one each in France and England.

"I JUST knew I wanted to fly," said Robert Stephens, a retired Air Force colonel who is nicknamed "The Silver Fox" and signs his name with a little fox. "It was later that I realized that the kind of flying I wanted to do was test flying."

Everyone here has a good story, but one of the best belongs to Fox Stephens, whose name is synonymous with testing the Blackbird. The Fox, now a consultant in Washington for a German engine company, was flying one day down to Mexico in a single-engine four-seater . . . without enough fuel . . . and a Standard Oil road map as his chief navigational aid.

This, to be reminded, is the man the Air Force chose to test its most sophisticated reconnaissance craft, a tough, reliable, stable man, a man who plans ahead. Usually.

ON THIS flight, he was heading for an unknown airport and presumed there was a city nearby. Wrong. He also figured that it would stay light a little longer. Wrong.

The night was moonless and starless and The Fox couldn't find the gravel runway. "Not to sweat." The Fox told his companions. He said it was always possible to put the plane down on the beach, where there is more light.

The Fox, alone, knew just how low on fuel they were running.

"Not to sweat," he kept repeating, fooling no one, since his shirt was soaking wet. A buddy on the ground turned on the landing lights on his plane and then he talked the Fox down, with five minutes of fuel left.

FOX maintained they still could have made it to the beach. They went to see the beach the next day. Sheer granite cliffs rise straight up from the sea.

The Gray Line bus arrives in Palmdale and the conventioneers get a look at the space shuttle, the Blackbird, the U2, as well as some other classics. And then there is an air show, and if you think you have seen an exciting air show, imagine one that would be put on for the Society of Experimental Test Pilots.

Veteran test pilot Bob Hoover tricks around with the usual things — the difference being he's got all the engines shut down. A little jet called the Pinto, races into the air, the pilot stands her straight up and she disappears. Next seen, she's spinning straight down for the runway, but then rolls out of that, flies upside down and zooms over the runway — 20 feet above it.

The spectacle over, the pilot taxies his super Pinto down the runway. The plane, built for 900 pounds of thrust, is souped up to nearly 3,000 pounds. The pilot pulls 7Gs as he performs.

Most of the pilots known him well. He's Dick Hunt, chief engineering test pilot for American Jet Industries in Van Nuys. But those who don't know him, run to congratulate him, expecting some dashing movie-star type to get out of the cockpit.

But Robert Redford he isn't. He's 51, balding, short, and — I cannot draw the veil — he was wearing white bucks.

Law keeps 'tax favors' secret

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Internal Revenue Service chief Donald C. Alexander sought special legislation last summer that would have kept secret the tax favors granted by the IRS to elements of the billion-dollar empire of the late Howard Hughes, the Philadelphia Inquirer reports in a copyrighted story.

While failing to gain special treatment for Hughes' interests, the account said, Alexander was successful in obtaining from Congress a tax-law clause designed to keep secret the identities of persons who receive preferential tax rulings from the IRS.

ALEXANDER'S intense lobbying efforts resulted in the secrecy clause contained in the tax-reform bill signed Oct. 4 by President Ford, the article said.

The House Ways and Means Committee, Senate Finance Committee and Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation all acquiesced to Alexander's demands, the story said.

The IRS has granted Hughes' businesses several favorable tax rulings over the years, the account said, including a decision to exempt the Howard Medical Institute from federal income tax laws.

The institute is the lone stockholder in the Hughes Aircraft Co., one of the nation's largest defense contractors.

Alexander's alleged legislative efforts may have been intensified by the Inquirer's repeated attempts to secure IRS information on Hughes corporations under the Freedom of Information Act, the newspaper said.

That intensified effort began, the story said, when Alexander noticed a loophole in pending tax-reform legislation. The loophole, the story said, would have resulted in opening files of IRS favorable rulings made prior to Jan. 1, 1976.

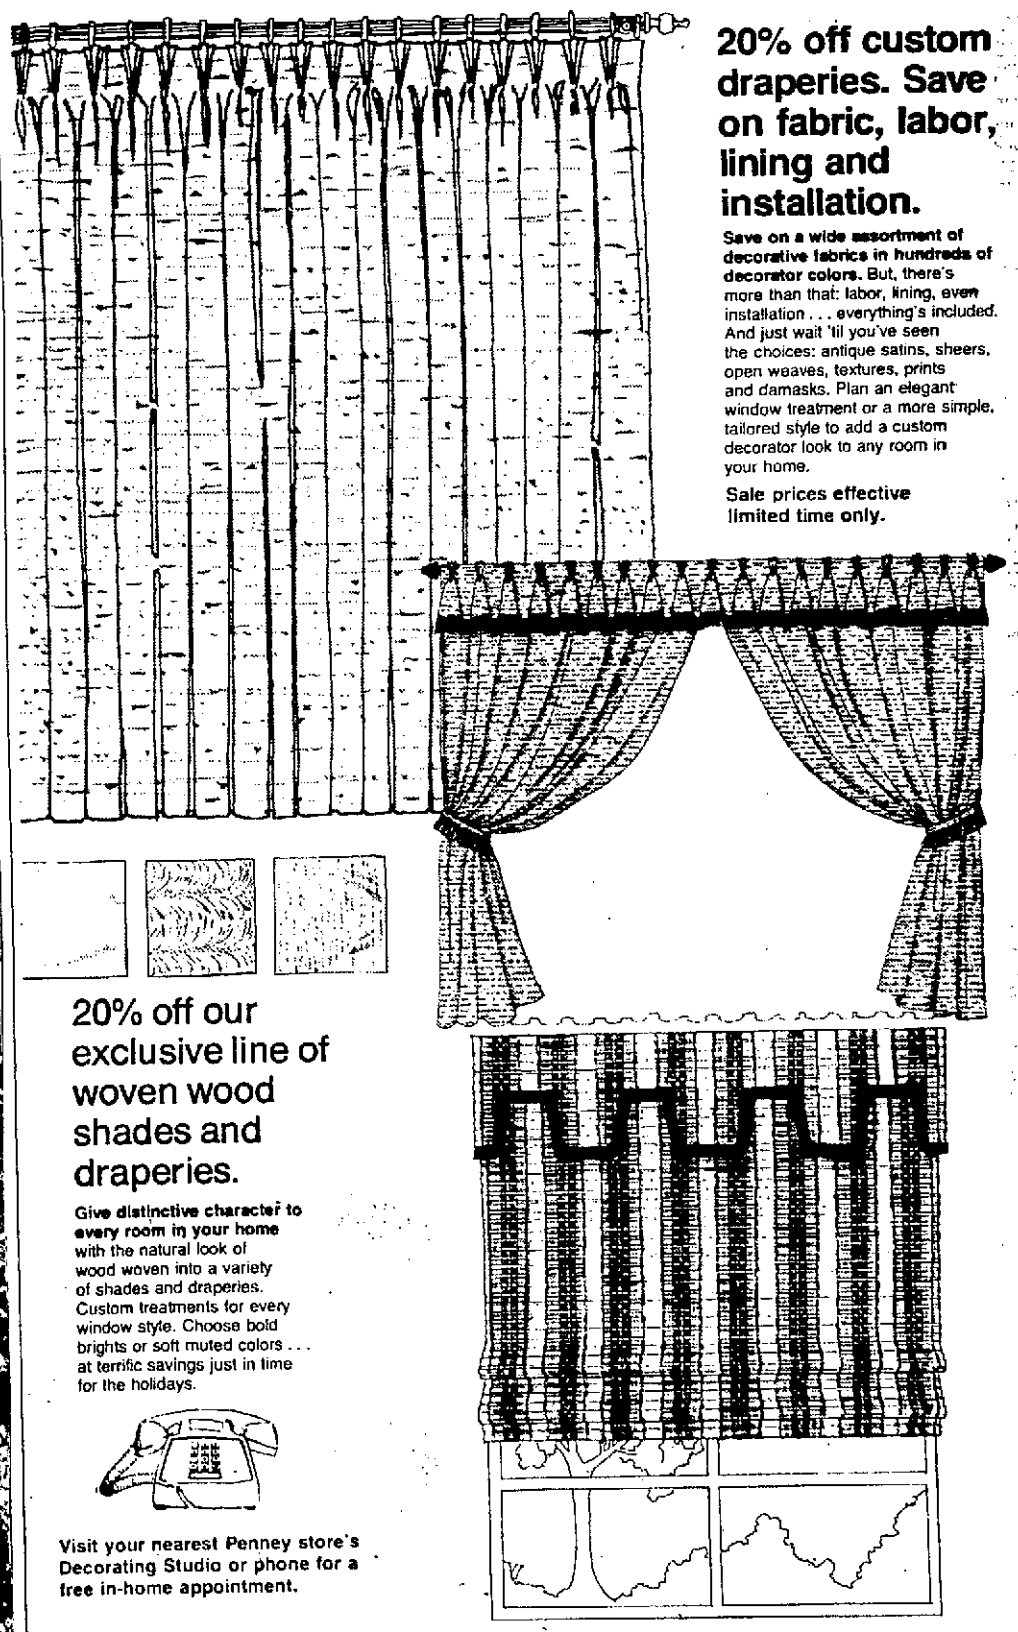

Also during that time, the Inquirer had filed several requests and had an administrative appeal pending seeking Hughes-related information of the IRS under terms of the Freedom of Information Act.

Alexander then suggested that language be added to the law specifically prohibiting the release of IRS rulings in which the taxpayer affected was named.

Cigarettes get 'added flavor'

By WAYNE KING
New York Times Service

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.—Each weekday morning, before he begins his job in the flavor application section of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 41-year-old John Shore puts in a stint as a member of the company's expert-smokers panel.

Usually he compares two to six cigarettes, in pairs, holding them in one hand. He puffs each alternately and deems them "rosey," "fruity," "winey," "buttery," "sulfury," "scratchy," "smooth," or any of a number of other designations of taste and character.

The work of Shore and nine fellow panelists, unpaid volunteers from company ranks trained to recognize and consistently describe cigarette characteristics, is becoming increasingly important. New brands and variations are coming on the market at the fastest pace in the history of the industry, signaling the most dramatic change in cigarettes since the switch to filters in the 1950s and 1960s.

THE NEW BULL MARKET is in "low tar." Although the low-tar cigarette category now commands only 15 per cent of the market, it has picked up 5 per cent of that (worth $375 million) in the past year, and the cigarette companies are estimated to be spending nearly half of their total advertising budget of $350 million to $400 million on low-tar brands this year.

"We are experiencing a dramatic change in the market," said Thomas Sandefur, vice president for advertising and brand management for Reynolds, the sales leader in the tobacco industry in the United States. "If you call the filter market of the '50s a revolution, then you call this a revolution."

A recent study of mortality tables sponsored by the American Cancer Society found that smokers of low-tar cigarettes suffered less from those diseases that have been linked to cigarette smoking than those who smoked cigarettes with a higher tar content. Such studies have signaled a less harsh attitude toward smoking.

IN THE MID-1950s, there were only 16 brands produced by the nation's six cigarette companies. Now there are some 150, not counting the variations within brands—the kings, superkings, menthols, softpacks, boxes, lights, longs, long lights and other mutations.

Of the brands available, 43 are in the "low-tar" field—that is, one cigarette yields 15 milligrams of tar or less, the standard accepted by the Federal Trade Commission.

Moreover, tar and nicotine have been reduced substantially across the board in the past two decades. The National Cancer Institute noted this year that in 1955 the average tar yield was 43 milligrams. Now it is 18 milligrams and dropping with each new low-tar introduction. Nicotine has been more than cut in half, from 2.8 milligrams to 1.2 milligrams in the same period.

Dr. Gio B. Gori of the institute's division of cancer cause and research said a rapid shift to less hazardous cigarettes could "reduce the current epidemic proportions of smoking-related diseases to minimal levels in a few decades."

Companies are bringing out lower and lower-tar brands, several in the past year. In that time, Reynolds's Vantage, the industry leader in low-tars, has been challenged by such newcomers as Merit, Kent Golden Lites, low-tar Pall Mall, Fact and several others, including even further reductions in existing low-tar brands like True and Cariton.

WITH THE ADDITION of Merit, the entry from Philip Morris, the second largest company and maker of the top-selling Marlboro line, the battle took on a new front.

For the first time, a cigarette company built its advertising campaign around the fact that the taste of its cigarette was "added on," not blended in through the use of real tobaccos. Philip Morris calls it "enriched flavor" and advertises it as a "scientific breakthrough."

What Philip Morris has done with Merit is to use an old, established technique to overcome what has been one glaring fault with low-tar cigarettes—they have very little taste.

Cigarette tar is reduced not by treating the tobacco, but by tightening the filter and using porous paper and tiny airholes in the filter to mix in air. Some reductions are also made by greater use of "reconstituted leaf," which is, according to Reynolds, "stems, scraps and dust," swept up and reprocessed into a sheet.

To make up for the missing tar, flavoring is added to almost every cigarette manufactured, a practice going back at least to 1913, when licorice, chocolate and sugar were added to Reynolds's extraordinarily successful Camel.

But the low-tars use more flavorings, and they have become considerably more complex. Dr. Alan Rodgman, director of research for Reynolds, said that a given cigarette might have "from a dozen to about 75" flavorants, the blends of which are closely held secrets.

Airline rivalry becoming a reel battle

So what if flight's over before the movie; you can stay on and watch

By RALPH BLUMENTHAL
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — They dueled in the skies in the great booze war, the piano-lounge war and the no-frills war. They fought with bagels, overhead-rack-space and legroom. Now the airlines are engaged in a whole new struggle the great movie war.

Yes, the folks who brought you those previous dogfights in their efforts to win a slight competitive advantage over rival airlines are at it again — this time with movies on short domestic flights. Sometimes, in fact, the flights are shorter than the movies, and landed planes have to wait until a film finishes before unloading passengers.

Like previous confrontations between airlines, this one is privately deplored by some of the participants themselves. They ridicule it as another costly and futile venture in one-upmanship. Nobody wins an airline war, they say.

On the other hand, they note, once such a struggle breaks out in the hotly contested travel market, it would be illegal collusion for airline officials to get together to wage peace.

Movies aboard planes are not new. Trans World Airlines introduced them on transcontinental and overseas flights 15 years ago. Other airlines quickly followed suit, all agreeing on a charge (now $2.50) for use of the headphones that convey the sound track. In the past year or two, several domestic airlines have also begun showing free sports films and other short subjects on some flights.

But the domestic movie war broke out in earnest with the decision of National Airlines to introduce free first-run movies and film classics Oct. 1 on its flights of wide-bodied planes between New York and Miami.

National expanded the showings on Oct. 15 to other Florida cities and a week later to all its cities served by DC10 flights of two hours or more. By Dec. 15, the airline said, this will mean a total of 1,000 movie flights a month.

The films being shown include "Silent Movie," "Murder by Death," "Casablanca," "It Happened One Night" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

National Airlines also announced it was throwing in free popcorn.

"If you're really a movie freak," a National spokesman said, "you could catch a double feature by taking one flight from Miami to Houston and another on to Los Angeles."

This was too much for Eastern Air Lines, one of National's key rivals. Eastern announced it would show films on most of its wide-bodied flights starting Nov. 1. By the beginning of 1977, a spokesman for the airline said, Eastern plans to have 71 daily movie flights. "And all strictly first-run stuff," he added.

Eastern's offerings include "Silent Movie," "Future World," "Sky Riders" and "The Four Musketeers."

But Eastern feels it has been caught in a crossfire. On Sept. 13 American Airlines began showing cartoons, Jacques Cousteau movies and Spanish music films on its flights between New York and Puerto Rico, a market that Eastern also serves.

"We were fighting on two fronts," said the Eastern spokesman. "We had to respond to American." So movies were added to Eastern's San Juan runs.

Now that Eastern is going to show full-length films, an American Airlines spokesman said, American is "considering" escalating from shorts to regular movies.

Other carriers are trying to stay out of the fray. Delta Air Lines said it had no plans to join the combatants. United Airlines said it would limit itself to showing excerpts from the television show "60 Minutes" and the Olympics on some intercity flights. TWA has been showing short sports films on domestic flights for some time.

Airline officials seem appalled by the spreading struggle. "There's no way in the world one carrier can get ahead of another with giveaways," said one, anonymously. "All it does is cost everybody an immense amount of money."

It costs about $10,000 to equip one DC10 with the three required movie projectors, screens and sound systems, according to John Landstrom, vice president of Trans Com of Costa Mesa, one of the leading equipment suppliers. He said his company had recently equipped five National planes and 30 Eastern planes for films. Movie distributors charge the airlines $75 per film showing, he said.

In one key battleground, the airlines are fighting for about 8,000 passengers a day flying between New York and Miami-Fort Lauderdale.

Difficulty with the movies' running time has emerged. On Oct. 23 National's Flight 42 from Houston to Miami, helped by strong tail winds, arrived ahead of schedule. The passengers were kept on board three extra minutes to allow time for the film, "The Sunshine Boys," to finish. On Oct. 27 the same thing happened with the same film on National's Flight 34 from Los Angeles to New Orleans. This time debarkation was delayed six minutes.

The movie war reminds the airlines of earlier clashes above the clouds — the so-called booze war that erupted after Delta began serving free champagne in 1974, the wild competition involving live entertainment and piano bars and the price-slashing no-frills campaign.

In the movie war, it is Eastern that may have the ultimate weapon.

"We have a spacial wrinkle," a spokesman for the airline divulged. "In our B cabin will be a quiet zone — no movies here."

Natural-gas price '42% too high'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of a House subcommittee charged Saturday that the Federal Power Commission has ignored industry documents that show its new ceiling price for natural gas is at least 42 per cent too high.

The study said reports by hundreds of gas producers, submitted to the FPC under oath, indicate that the industry has been finding far more natural gas per foot of successful drilling than indicated by published industrywide estimates relied on by the FPC in setting its price limits.

That would mean the actual cost of finding gas was not as high as the FPC calculated, and the price it set would be higher than justified by those lower costs.

LAST July 27, the FPC raised the nationwide maximum price for gas sold by producers to interstate pipelines to $1.42 per thousand cubic feet, almost three times the previous limit of 52 cents.

The staff of the House subcommittee on oversight and investigations said, however, that forms filed by the producers under oath appear to support a ceiling price of about $1 and maybe not that much if the FPC were to adopt other recommended changes in its calculation.

The FPC has estimated that its new pricing policy would cost the public an additional $1.5 billion a year, but this included natural gas already limited to $1 per thousand cubic feet and gas at considerably lower prices under existing contracts.

Therefore, it was not immediately known how much money could be saved by adopting the subcommittee staff analysis, which has not been endorsed by the congressmen of the subcommittee itself.

In setting the new ceiling prices, the FPC said it relied on statistics published by the American Gas Association, an industry group that collects them indirectly and without any legal sanctions for misrepresentation.

Long criticized for accepting such statistics in rate-setting, the FPC ordered direct producer reporting of gas discoveries and drilling footage, under oath and subject to audit, but the new forms were stalled by challenges in court. Nevertheless, hundreds of producers submitted them.

The subcommittee said it examined those forms and found enough of them in good shape for analysis to reach the conclusion that the industry was finding far more natural gas per foot drilled than showed up in the AGA estimates.

The difference, it said, is enough to drop the ceiling price from $1.42 to $1 per thousand cubic feet, even including the FPC's allowance of a 48 per cent federal income tax as a cost of doing business.

The FPC, now considering a rehearing on its prices at the request of gas consumers, has been told the companies actually pay much less income tax than the supposed 48 per cent.

THE subcommittee staff said the FPC should not include federal income tax at all in setting gas rates.

If it excluded the federal tax, the staff said, the FPC could lower its price ceiling to 84 cents per thousand cubic feet.

TAXES

Did you know that the new government spending programs proposed by this Congress would add more than $1,000 in yearly income taxes to the average family of four?

Did you know that, right now, we pay more than $100 million interest—a day!— on our national debt of $350 billion; and we are adding $50 billion a year to that debt with programs already on the books?

The standard answer in Congress is that they will reform the tax code and soak the rich to pay for the new programs.

Did you know that successive Democratic Congresses have been reforming the code on that same promise, for the past 22 years? And your taxes have gone up, up, up!

It isn't that they don't mean what they promise, it's simply that they can't do it. The reason they can't do it is that they quickly run out of rich people to soak. In fact, only 10% of all American families make $25,000 or more—and a large percentage of those are families with two or more working members.

So, it is middle-income America that always winds up footing the bill.

If you elect me to the Congress I will vote against any bill that would increase your taxes.

I will vote for every measure that will ease your tax burden.

That's not a promise, it's a commitment.

Decriminalize gambling, U.S. panel recommends

Notes indifference of public to violations

By JON VAN
Knight News Service

Criminal prosecution for illegal gambling doesn't work and should be stopped, a federal commission studying betting has concluded.

Moreover, a report of the study suggests that states consider dropping most laws against social gambling and that the federal government make bettors' winnings tax-exempt.

The report recognizes several problems with expanded legalization of gambling. For one thing, legal forms seem to encourage illegal ones. But the commission believes most of its suggestions will be implemented eventually.

Most will be adopted, according to Stephen B. Bull, a member of the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling, "not because of anything the government does, but because of citizen attitudes. The trend to gambling is growing."

The commission, composed mostly of members of Congress along with some state and local officials, found that 61 per cent of the nation's adults gamble, and 48 per cent patronize commercial gambling, whether legal or illegal. Commercial gambling is legal or illegal wagering conducted for profit. In social gambling, legal or illegal, all money is returned to the bettors.

Almost 80 per cent of the adults questioned nationwide in the study indicated they favored legalization of some form of gambling.

The three-year commission study found that in the past 15 years the number of arrests for illegal gambling has declined steadily. This reflects a public indifference to gambling law violations, the panel concluded.

"The feeling is," Bull says, "that with people being mugged, raped and murdered on the streets, there isn't a heck of a lot of support to chase the local numbers runner."

In a national poll, a majority indicated that even among nonviolent crimes, gambling isn't very important. They rated other offenses—selling heroin, drunk driving, burglary, car theft, buying stolen property, selling marijuana, public drunkenness, prostitution, and pornography—as being more serious than gambling.

Most gambling arrests are for minor offenses, and few involve big gamblers or those connected with organized crime, the commission found. Many arrests appeared to have been motivated by a need to meet local police department quotas, and a disproportionately high number involved blacks, the panel concluded.

"Although blacks account for only about 11 per cent of the population of the United States," the report says, "they account for 72.8 per cent of the gambling arrests in 1974."

But, it adds, "Although a disproportionate number of blacks are arrested for gambling, gambling laws or their enforcement cannot be said to be discriminatory in the usual sense.

"Visibility, rather than race, is the basis for these arrests. Black participation in public social gambling, such as dice or card games, and numbers writing is high compared to the participation of whites.

"Because these offenses are highly visible to police . . . they account for a substantial majority of gambling arrests."

Those convicted of gambling offenses seldom draw heavy fines or prison sentences, the study found, again indicating public complacency toward gambling as a crime.

The report recommends that gambling be decriminalized. A more effective way to control big-time gambling racketeers is through civil court orders, it says.

While such orders aren't punitive—they won't put a gambling boss in jail—they can put a gambler out of business, the report says.

Under the federal government's Racketeer-Influenced and Corrupt Organization (RICO) statutes, prosecutors needn't prove a defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt to get a conviction, as is the case under criminal statutes.

Instead, the prosecutor need only show a preponderance of evidence of gambling violations to get a court order against future violations. Such orders can even prevent a suspected gambler from doing things that would normally be legal.

"For example," the study notes, "an individual who is restrained from accepting horse wagers can be prohibited from visiting a racetrack in a state where parimutuel gambling is legal. Also, a defendant can be forced to divest himself of property that he utilizes to carry out his illegal gambling business—for example, a legitimate business used as a cover for the illegal operation."

Bull says the commission suggestion that civil court orders supplant criminal prosecutions to control organized gambling "is already the trend."

Another strategy is for legal gambling to compete effectively with illegal gambling to eliminate the illegal profits that organized crime channels into other illicit operations. Competition will never be effective, however, as long as the government taxes winnings from legal gambling, the report says.

Illegal winnings are never taxed, goes the reasoning; thus the bettor is more likely to patronize a bookie who won't report his winnings to the government than a legal off-track-betting office that will.

The commission realizes that its chances of obtaining tax exemption for gambling winnings now "are slim to none," Bull says. In the long run, however, commission members hope Congress will see the wisdom of such a move.

The tax-exemption ploy has worked well in Canada, the report notes.

Cold sufferers told to 'enjoy'

By JANE FLOERCHINGER
Knight News Service

Consumers spent about $735 million for cough and cold remedies in 1975.

In many, if not most, cases, saltwater nose drops and a cough syrup of honey and lemon juice concocted at home would have been as effective and cheaper, contends a University of Kansas physician.

"There really is very little we can do about colds," says Dr. Burton A. Dudding, chairman of the Pediatrics Department at the School of Medicine.

"I don't want you to say we've been had by Madison Avenue, but those who advocate remedies do so on fairly shaky scientific data."

DUDDING recently published an article entitled "On the Cause of Colds, Their Treatment and Prevention," which he said is intended to alert consumers to some facts about colds.

The gist of his message: Colds can't be prevented, nor, once started, can their course be shortened. Further, "If you treat a cold, you'll get over it in about a week; if you don't treat it, it will take seven days."

So Dudding concludes, doctors should spend their time and effort teaching people to accept colds as a way of life, emphasizing their benefits.

Among other things, the physician wrote, colds "give us an acceptable excuse to take an occasional day off when we need a little respite from work or school.

"THEY give us an opportunity to be sick (but not too sick) once in a while with the attendant benefits of being nurtured and waited upon for a day or two by our parents, spouses or children. So why not relax and enjoy the next cold?"

Responds Louis Thompson, director of public affairs for the association representing the across-the-counter drug industry, "That's kind of a romantic vestige."

Many people, he said, cannot afford the luxury of taking off work: "It's whatever a person wants to do. If he wants to take a whole week off and feel miserable, that's his right. But if he's going to go to work, he's entitled to have something that will relieve his symptoms."

Thompson said none of the products is labeled as a cure for colds or their symptoms, but merely as providing temporary relief for the symptoms.

HOME remedies may have certain benefits, but there are limits, he said: "Chicken soup doesn't get rid of a headache." As for cost, he continued, the American public spent just $3.43 per person for cough-cold medicines last year.

The argument doesn't stop with Dudding and Thompson or physicians and the drug industry. A couple of months ago the federal Food and Drug Administration opened up 10 cold-remedy ingredients for across-the-counter sales, prompting a Ralph Nader organization to charge that not one of them does any good.

A cold is a disease associated with an infection of the upper respiratory tract caused by any one of more than 200 viruses and bacteria.

"The majority (about 95 per cent) are due to viruses," Dudding said. "These are not critters that are treatable by antibiotics."

THERE is no defense, he said, for the continued practice of giving antibiotics for colds aith the exception of children 5 to 15 years of age with a streptococcal infeotion that can lead to rheumatic fever.

To have a cold a person must be exposed and must be susceptible. He must also show the symptoms. There is considerable evidence that people frequently have upper-respiratory infections without knowing it because they experience no symptoms. No one knows why they don't, he said.

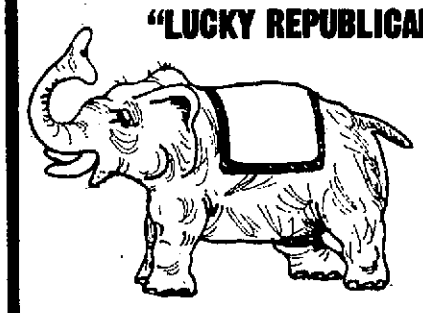

DUDDING begins his section on treatment with a quotation from Sir Alexander Fleming, the discoverer of penicillin: "A good gulp of whisky at bedtime — it's not very scientific, but it helps."

That's about where the state of the art stands today, the pediatrician said.

Summary of 10 Secret Witness cases and rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 68 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $46,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial.

Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information directly through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness first — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P-T Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade of Long Beach while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and assault-robbery conviction of the man and woman holdup team who shot and wounded Joseph H. O'Connor, 35-year-old Torrance area market owner, during the attempted holdup next door of the National Environmental Corp. food stamp headquarters, 22848 S. Western Ave., at 1:15 p.m. on April 1, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Alexander Burdelas, 53, of Norwalk at San Antonio Drive and Firestone Boulevard in Norwalk at 1 p.m. Sept. 27, 1975. The hit-run car was described as a 1964 light-colored Pontiac with chrome rims.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment-house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a female manager in another. Mack is black, 5 feet 9, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. If he is convicted on armed-robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of James Hamilton Macgenn, 50-year-old employe of King's Imperial Restaurant in Lynwood at 1004 Atlantic Ave, stabbed to death in the restaurant parking lot as he was leaving work at 3:30 a.m. on June 1, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home on S. Pacific Avenue in San Pedro at 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds and speaks French as a second language.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 42-year-old Donna Rae Goodell, found beaten to death in her home at 12230 Briarwood St. in Stanton on April 21, 1975.

— Rewards totaling $2,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by Knights of Columbus Council 3449 — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Steven Robert Snedeker, an 18-year-old clerk shot to death during a robbery at the H & O Liquor Store, 6069 Cherry Ave., on the night of Jan. 27, 1975.

Werewolves, vampires just plain folks in Transylvania

CLAREMONT (AP) — The residents of Transylvania believe that werewolves and vampires prowl the earth, but the creatures of their legends aren't the same as the Hollywood version.

Transylvanians don't regard the stories of human wolves with particular horror, either, but just a fact of life, says Dr. Harry A. Senn, French teacher at Pitzer College, who sampled folklore in Romania recently on a Fulbright fellowship.

"They're very matter-of-fact. It's just that these things can happen and you've got to be careful," says Senn.

He says Romanians — Transylvania is now part of that Eastern European country — consider werewolves and vampires as a part of nature and a product of the struggle between God and the devil in creating the earth.

But they don't set much store in the Hollywood depiction of those creatures as murderous ghouls or bloodsucking, sexual marauders.

"I think the Romanians would consider that rather immature," says Senn.

Werewolves are occasionally seen as agents of God sent to punish cattle farmers by eating their herds.

Senn says he talked to four older persons who told him people they knew had been compelled by the call of wolves to run into the forest, strip and turn into wolves before the very eyes of their loved ones.

Unlike the American portrayal of the man who turns hairy and demonic under a full moon, the werewolf in Romanian legend doesn't change under lunar influence, Senn says. Rather it is an accident of birth that makes one a werewolf.

Becoming a vampire, on the other hand, has to do with an accident of death.

Some of the Romanians Senn talked to believe in vampires, which they call strigoi — dead human beings whose spirits aren't at rest because of improper burial rites.

Some Romanians believe the spirit is apt to seep out of the underworld to bedevil old enemies, terrorize farm animals and render fields infertile.

Senn says he was told in Romania that strigoi drink blood but don't necessarily bite human necks to get it.

Tradition has it that a stake is needed to banish the strigoi for good, but believers hold that the stake must be plunged into the heart through the back, rather than the chest.

How to become a secret witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

THE WATERFRONT

New tasks for cruise official

In-PORT-ant people

Charles "Chuck" Slocombe, director of public relations for Long Beach/Catalina Cruises since the cross-channel line began operating five years ago, has been given new responsibilities, including handling public relations for all of Crowley Maritime Corp.'s Southern California operations.

Those operations include Catalina Island Cruises/San Pedro, Crowley Environmental Service, San Diego Transportation, Crowley Salvage Co. and Crowley Derrick and Barges (formerly Smith-Rice).

Before joining Long Beach/Catalina Cruises, Slocombe spent 35 years with the Long Beach-based Pacific Towboat and Salvage Co. In the late '20s he worked on water taxis hauling sailors to and from ships anchored in the Long Beach outer harbor and hauling adventure-seeking landlubbers looking for a chance to get even aboard the flashing lights of the offshore gambling boats.

Since joining Crowley, he has lectured to more than 200,000 Southern California school children about the relationships of gray whales migrating down the Southern Califiornia coastline toward their mating grounds. He is a member of the Los Angeles-Long Beach Propeller Club and the Binnacle Club and a delegate to the Radio Technical Commission for Maritime Services.

No racing

The International and National Brotherhood of Street Racers Inc., rebuffed for a second time by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners in its attempt to use an abandoned runway on Reeves Field for races, believes the decision is strictly for the birds.

The Harbor Department staff has twice recommended that the racing association's request to use the former naval air station on Terminal Island be denied, and twice the commission followed its staff's thinking.

One of the reasons for denying the Street Racers' request was that the racing activities would interfere with the nesting seasons of the rare and endangered least tern.

There were other reasons for the commission's refusal to respond to the pleas of Andrew "Big Willie" Robinson, the racing group's leading exponent, to use the abandoned airstrip.

The commission noted that it needed the runway area for the storage of imported automobiles and that, under the state's tidelands grant, it had to reserve tideland acreage for navigation and commerce. The commission was given legal advice that tideland areas could be used only for other purposes if declared surplus.

The staff pointed out that not only was the airstrip not surplus but it is needed for the "commerce" of storing inbound foreign cars and trucks.

"Big Willie" (he placed sixth in the recent Mr. America contest) pleaded for at least just one weekend to conduct races such as those among drag cars, bicyles, foot runners, skateboarders and any other type of racing competition except dry-land surfboarding. A staff recommendation was that, if the commission grants the street racers' request, all vehicles must be equipped with mufflers.

Despite pleas of "Big Willie," the commission said it would be "unfair" to allow his group to set up barricades and portable rest rooms, arrange for security guards and handle the many other details concerned with conducting a race, then one week later be "kicked out." The racers lost by a vote of 3 to 0.

They filed from the room quietly, obviously disappointed.

But the street racers, who conduct their various kinds of races on deserted streets until the cops are called and run them off, indicated they were not going to give up the fight to get "our people off the streets."

"Anybody got a dime? I want to call Mayor Bradley," said "Big Willie" as the group headed for a phone booth.

Fore!

Long Beach harbor commisioners are a dedicated group, especially on the golf course, and will go to any lengths to promote the port overseas.

That is evidenced by what happened a couple of weeks ago at the Hague Golf and Country Club in Wassenaar, the Netherlands.

Rik Wijsenbeek, a grain merchant associated with the operators of Long Beach's Koppel Inc. grain terminal, was visiting his homeland and played golf with some business associates and friends. He teed off on the sixth hole and sliced his tee shot into the rough. He followed the path of the ball into the rough and found not only his ball but another in the grass about five inches away.

He picked up the other ball, which obviously had been in the rough for some time, and examined it for "smiles." It was not the ball that had a "smile," but the grain merchant from Long Beach.

Imprinted on the found ball were the words "Port of Long Beach."

The ball had been hit (and lost) by Commissioner Dick Wilson while playing the Hague course the year before.

E. Europe growing as narcotics route

20 nations to tighten intelligence network

ROME (AP) — The Turkish-French connection appears to be dormant and heroin traffic out of Mexico declining, but enforcement officials say international drug rings are now resorting to new connections, including transit through Eastern Europe.

Increasingly, narcotics traffickers are using unsuspecting youths or elderly persons as "mules" to smuggle drugs across borders.

Those were among key conclusions reached by narcotics agents from 20 nations gathered in Rome for a closed five-day meeting that ended Friday night. The conference agreed on steps to develop a tighter worldwide intelligence network, particularly to help combat the rising flow of heroin from Southeast Asia's "Golden Triangle."

"THEY are better organized and move fast through places one can hardly imagine," one participant at the meeting said about the current narcotics situation. "Our best chance is to spot them locally and relay the intelligence information to national agents ahead of time."

The conference also found, according to sources, that Western Europe's heroin addiction is reaching danger points in almost every major city. Heroin seizures in Western Europe so far this year have amounted to about 700 pounds, more than triple the entire haul last year, and are likely to total some 1,200 pounds by the end of the year.

By contrast, in 1971 only 14 pounds of heroin was seized in Europe, which had served as the main processing and transit point for Turkish heroin en route to the United States.

Drug shipments destined for Western Europe — where a kilogram (2.2 pounds) of heroin goes for about $25,000 — are beginning to pass through Eastern Europe to circumvent agents who have concentrated their attention primarily on the western part of the continent.

HOWEVER, drug-enforcement officials say Eastern European authorities are beginning to cooperate in seizing narcotics couriers. In recent years, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and U.S. Customs Service have offered narcotics-training courses for policemen and customs inspectors in several Eastern European countries.

Officials say they hope the Soviet Union also will cooperate and stiffen controls after the recent conviction in Moscow of three young Americans who were carrying about 60 pounds of heroin in their suitcases on a flight from Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to Paris.

"So far we see Eastern Europe only as a transit area," one narcotics agent commented. "But even there the youth is changing and drugs are a part of the so-called 'hooliganism.'" No Eastern European country was represented at the Rome parley.

U.S. narcotics officials said their concern is that heroin on the European market, focused in Amsterdam, is about to make its way to the United States, where there are an estimated 300,000 heroin addicts and some 5,000 heroin deaths a year.

According to narcotics agents, the major new connection has its source in the remote, mountainous "Golden Triangle" of Burma, Laos and Thailand, where opium poppies are grown in areas mostly controlled by antigovernment insurgents and processed by laboratories in Burma.

The triangle's annual opium output is estimated at 700 tons, while another 400 tons comes from along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border.

Agents say the Southeast Asian heroin makes its way to Thailand or Malaysia, then is funneled through points including Hong Kong and Vancouver, Canada, before entering the United States, mostly on the West Coast.

According to U.S. drug-enforcement sources, Turkey's clampdown on illicit poppy cultivation has been effective and has made heroin laboratories in the Marseille area — the noted French connection — obsolete for the time being.

Mexican "brown sugar," which grew to fill the resulting gap to the point of supplying 90 per cent of America's $17 billion annual heroin trade, is now down to about 80 per cent and expected to decline further, mainly because of a crackdown by the Mexican government.

Dever known as wizard with budgets

L.B. city manager-to-be gets results quietly

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

SUNNYVALE — Whatever it was that propelled John Dever to the top of his profession as a city manager — and he's regarded in municipal government circles as one of the best in the business — it was not braggadocio or back-slapping.

The man who will take over Long Beach's top administrative post Jan. 1 is, by temperament and style, a private man — an ascetic who thrives on challenge, shuns the limelight, feels uneasy in the presence of roisterous chumminess and is as spare in his conversation about himself as he is in his physique.

At 5 feet 10, Dever is a trim 160 pounds. Given his soft voice, low-key style and preference for conservative business suits, he impresses people as a model of managerial austerity.

After nine years as city manager of Sunnyvale, the impression hasn't changed. To hear Sunnyvale citizens and politicians talk, there isn't a dollar in this city's $35-million budget that Dever can't account for, and for which he isn't getting every penny's worth of value.

"HE RUNS a tighter ship than anyone in Santa Clara County," says Sunnyvale Councilman Lawrence Stone, an investment counselor in private life.

"He's the taxpayer's best friend," adds Mayor Donald Logan.

Some of Dever's subordinates discuss him in almost reverential tones. Phyllis Brant, Sunnyvale's personnel chief and a woman who is not inclined to exaggerated judgments, says unabashedly that Dever is "a brilliant manager."

Gregory Morris, who might be called "the man in the middle" on Sunnyvale's council — he's a maverick liberal who has tried to act as peacemaker between the council's warring factions — finds Dever a fascinating study.

"The first thing that comes to mind about Dever," says Morris, an attorney, "is that he's a consummate public servant — a workaholic who didn't take a vacation until he'd been here five years."

MORRIS says Dever, an ex-Marine lieutenant, seems to be obsessed with physical fitness, somehow finding time to run three or four miles every day.

"Dever," he adds, "is also a real nut on retreats — for himself and his staff. This year he spent three or four days at the Menninger Institute (in Topeka).

"One fault with John is that he has a hard time admitting he's wrong. But fortunately he's right most of the times. He also has strong opinions."

The keystone of Dever's reputation, both in Sunnyvale and among the fraternity of city managers throughout the country, has been his fiscal wizardry.

Dever is said to be a magician with a budget and as tight a fiscal manager as can be found anywhere in the United States.

Yet Morris believes that, as well-deserved as that reputation is, it obscures an equally important side of Dever's public personality — a side Morris describes with the phrase "humane pragmatism."

Dever has been accused by some of his critics — and he has a few in Sunnyvale; his reputation notwithstanding — of not being sympathetic to the city's less fortunate citizens.

BUT MORRIS doesn't agree. Dever, he says, is concerned with social problems. But he combines that concern with a sense of what's practical and possible.

Dever himself says it's a matter of priorities. One thing he is careful not to do, he explains, is plunge into a social program merely because federal funds are available.

"It's best to have your needs and goals carefully defined," he says, "and then see if there are federal funds available to help you relieve the taxpayers of the burden.

"Just because federal money is there doesn't mean a city should take advantage of it," Dever declares. The government may pull out of a program at a later date, "and you may get stuck with it."

The fact that Dever approaches social programs with a measure of caution is not to say that he eschews them completely. Nor does he feel that all programs have to pay off in tangible dividends, he says.

For that reason perhaps, he has taken advantage of federal neighborhood-improvement funds, pushed a solid-waste program in Santa Clara County, encouraged the acquisition of open space for parks and recreation and supported the city's $4-million community center — not to mention a neighborhood center on the north side of town, where Sunnyvale's small minority population is centered.

Morris also feels that some of Dever's human qualities have been hidden by his private nature: his inability or unwillingness to trumpet his own good deeds.

"HE DOESN'T show his work," says the councilman. "Recently, for example, he helped a woman whose child was burned. In another instance, he assisted a woman who was suing the city by helping her fill out the legal papers. He'll do these things and not say anything."

To Morris, Dever is the real leader of Sunnyvale — its commander, as he puts it.

But if Dever is Sunnyvale's commander, his command is neither flamboyant nor highly visible. It's that lack of visibility, in fact, that has given him a reputation among some as being insulated from the city and its citizens. It's a reputation Dever has had a hard time shaking.

To some observers, Dever appears to have opened up a lot in recent months — which may be as much a reflection of his political astuteness as his own changing style. For Sunnyvale's seven-member council has three members whose election was largely the work of the city's powerful citizen lobby, known as Orchards.

Appraisal of new city hall depends on point of view

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

Long Beach City Hall — landmark or liability?

Backers of the 14-story, $26-million building contend it will serve as a symbol for the city and, further, that it is being built at an absolute minimum cost.

CRITICS of the project — due to open in December, one year late — say the building is a liability, plagued with a series of structural, legal and financial problems.

The structure is part of a civic-center project that includes a new library and was financed by a $36-million bond issue. The bonds, which have earned $5 million in interest, were issued in 1973 by the Civic Center Authority.

City officials, led by former City Manager John R. Mansell, were frustrated in their efforts to gain a new city hall and library when voters rejected bond issues three times during the 1950s for such an undertaking.

OFFICIALS pointed out that the old city hall was built to serve a city of 56,000 in 1921; the library to serve 17,800 citizens in 1909.

The Civic Center Authority, meanwhile, was formed as a joint-powers agreement between the city and the county with the right to issue bonds.

(Joint-powers agreements between two governmental units were authorized by the State Legislature as a method of issuing bonds without voter approval.)

Allied Architects, composed of four locally prominent architectural firms, was selected by Mansell and approved by the City Council in 1969 to do the design.

THE FOUR firms were Hugh Gibbs and Donalds Gibbs, Frank Homolka and Associates, Killingsworth, Brady and Associates and Kenneth Wing Sr. and Kenneth Wing Jr. They received total fees of $1,650,000, according to the city engineer's office.

"A city like Long Beach needs a mark," said Donald Gibbs. "We need a visual image we can associate with. We're pushing an old ocean liner and that hasn't been too successful.

"We live here," Gibbs said of his fellow architects. "We're dedicated to the place. We wanted a recognizable symbol, a civic center that wouldn't be copied by surrounding office buildings."

BUT according to a construction official who asked to remain anonymous because of his fear of reprisals, the building has several major problems:

—Triangular landings on the outside of the building, between the glass superstructure and the concrete support towers.

Intended to make the building architecturally attractive, the landings are called "pigeon roosts" by construction workers because of their attractiveness for birds.

Gibbs defends the landings as necessary to make the building distinctive.

"I QUESTIONED them," City Engineer Thomas Marchese said of the landings, but added, "the architect may say, 'If you want a barn or a box, hire someone else.'"

The 108 landings forced the city to design and order $70,000 worth of special window-washing equipment and probably added $2 million to the cost of the project, the construction official estimated.

Gibbs called the source's figure "unsound." He said construction of the landings was relatively simple.

— A heating and cooling system that Gibbs concedes will be unusually costly to operate. The architect pointed out that the building was designed and construction began just prior to the 1974 energy crisis.

"AT THE time, it seemed like the right system to use. We certainly weren't very far-sighted," Gibbs said.

According to estimates from the budget department, costs for heating and cooling the building will run about $625,000 annually, against $60,000 for the old city hall.

Gibbs disputed the city's figures, saying it was about $400,000 too high.

The source said that since the building is sealed, it will heat up to 100 degrees within 30 minutes if the air-conditioning breaks down on a hot day.

GIBBS pointed out that most official buildings still do not have open windows. He said he was going to recommend to the City Council that the building temperature be allowed to fluctuate from 68 to 78 degrees to conserve energy.

— Approximately 50 underground parking spaces built at a cost of $5,000 each, according to a letter from Mansell to the City Council in 1969. The spaces, for the council and executives, could have been built above ground for $2,000 each, Mansell wrote, but would have been further from the building.

'Take kids to park for safe Halloween'

Long Beach Police Chief Ralph Kortz and Fire Chief Virgil Jones recommended Saturday that children — for safety's sake — be taken to city or county Recreation Department Halloween programs at numerous Southland parks tonight instead of going door-to-door.

The Long Beach Recreation Department will host costume parades, game booths and the "Burning of the Giant Pumpkin" at 13 city parks.

The Halloween carnivals start at 6:30 p.m., with the pumpkin finale at 8:30 p.m.

Participating parks include Admiral Kidd, Bay Shore, Bixby, Cherry Avenue, Drake, El Dorado, Houghton, King, MacArthur, Ramona, Silverado, Veterans and Wardlow.

The spook houses will be open at Silverado and Houghton parks.

The Southeast Parks and Recreation District, which includes the cities of Norwalk and La Mirada, will hold its annual Halloween carnival at city parks from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Activities for Artesia youngsters will be found at Artesia and Padelford parks from 6 to 9:30. The spook house at Artesia Park will be open from 7 to 9:30.

Spook houses, games and parades are also scheduled from 6 to 8 p.m. at Sigler, Bolsa Chica and Park West parks in Westminster.

Omar Bradley guest at ceremony

The Navy commissioned the 658-foot replenishment oiler USS Roanoke Saturday in an impressive Long Beach Naval Shipyard ceremony.

Retired Gen. of the Armies Omar N. Bradley was a special guest and inspected the honor guard.

U.S. Rep. M. Caldwell Butler, R-Va., a World War II naval officer whose son is in the Navy, was the speaker. A native of Roanoke, Butler told the crew, "Consider me your congressman."

He said the Roanoke will enable the Pacific Fleet to help maintain its combat readiness in the face of a growing Soviet challenge.

"WITHOUT ships of this type, the fleet would be unable to handle its commitments in the 95 million square miles of the Pacific and Indian oceans," he said.

Rear Adm. W. Haley Rogers, commandant of the 11th Naval District from San Diego, placed the ship in commission at 11:35 a.m. and Capt. Paul A. Asmus became the first commanding officer.

The ship was the 25th built for the Navy by National Steel & Shipbuilding in San Diego and will be based there.

Roanoke, the fourth ship to bear the city's name, is under command of Vice Adm. W.R. St. George, Pacific Fleet Surface commander.

Roanoke Mayor Noel C. Taylor presented an electric popcorn machine to the crew and a silver service to the wardroom on behalf of the city.

The mayor gave keys to the city to Capt. Asmus; Adm. Maurice F. Weisner, commander-in-chief, Pacific, whose wife was the ship's sponsor; and Gen. Bradley.

The general, 83, last of the nation's five-star officers, was besieged by autograph seekers afterward.

He left his wheelchair to inspect the honor guard and stood and saluted as the "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played.

Opposition to rerouting of traffic strong

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

When it comes to sounding off about the city's traffic problems, Southeast Long Beach has more squeaky wheels than any other part of town.

Fiercely protective of their neighborhoods, its residents oppose any proposals to improve cross-town traffic flow that would route more cars through their residential communities.

PEOPLE TALK

F.C. ANDERSON

IT WAS A Sunday morning painted in the soft pastels of vacation postcards. Quartermaster Willard E. Murphy, 24, stood forward of the gangway on the four-stack light cruiser USS Raleigh. Just off bridge watch, Bill Murphy awaited the 8 o'clock boat that would take him to the mainland for flying lessons.

There would be no flying lessons for Quartermaster Murphy that day. There would be no tomorrow for 2,117 officers and men of the U.S. Navy, the soon-to-be-dead of a Sunday that lives in infamy — Dec. 7, 1941.

As Bill Murphy stood forward of the gang a few ticks before 8, an aerial torpedo knifed between No. 1 and No. 2 firerooms opposite the Raleigh's second funnel, penetrating four decks. Sea water roiled up through the ruptured plates, washing Bill Murphy down past the midship hatch.

"Next thing I knew I was back on duty on the bridge. How I got there is a blank. First thing I remember was looking up to see Capt. R. Bentham Simons, the skipper, bawling out orders. He was wearing his World War I steel helmet and blue-striped pajamas. Nobody laughed. I snapped out of shock when the captain sent me foretop to check on casualties, damage and the state of our firepower."

The Raleigh was holding up well but was in danger of sinking hulldown in the muck. Capt. Simons kept his ship afloat by jettisoning everything movable, by wangling extra pumps, by stuffing life belts into leaks, by borrowing four pontoons, by help from a nearby lighter.

As the Raleigh battled for life, the battleship Utah, set out to pasture as a target-towing vessel, capsized; the battleships Arizona and Oklahoma sank — the Arizona bottoms up, entombing 1,102 officers and men for eternity.

Bill Murphy will be 59 next month, and the hell of that December day at Pearl Harbor has given way to the serenity of a house in Los Altos, four children, and a marriage that will be 35 years old next anniversary. He wears his years and his memories well, and he shares them with quiet pride with the man from "People Talk." The scenes of war and peace are summoned up on the instant replay camera of his well-ordered mind and voiced in the soft, folksy drawl of his native Paducah, Ky.

The echoes of long-ago guns still as he tells about attending the Paducah church where Alben Barkley (The Veep) worshiped. Bill Murphy was a townsman of Irvin S. Cobb, and he has the Cobb flair for telling a story. If Bill Murphy's mustache was white and his dark hair grayed, he could play Judge Priest.

True, Bill Murphy might have to struggle to fit into his WWII issue 13-button pants, but the salty speech of his chief quartermaster rank is still as snug as his rolling gait. He'd be as much at home on a canted deck as he is in his den with the picture-lined walls and mounds of books.

He digresses from war to tell about his children, Carol, 31, a nurse; Sandy, 30, a dedicated and intense teacher in the Lynwood school system; Denny, 26, a Long Beach State graduate who is with the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation; and Danny, 12, a chip off the old block and the reason for last summer's 7,000-mile camper trip through the United States.

"We stay young through Danny, and, in a sense, grow up together, seeing all the things we might have missed before, sharing discoveries."

Bill Murphy wants to go to Pearl Harbor for the 35th reunion of Pearl Harbor Survivors Association. Every five years since the 25th anniversary, the survivors have convened aboard the memorial erected over the USS Arizona. Bill Murphy will go, and take Danny, if he can sell his wife on the idea. He probably will, for he's a super salesman, in business and private life.

Bill Murphy remembers Pearl Harbor, and he wants 12-year-old Danny Murphy to remember, too. "Another five years, and it will be too late. Kids develop other interest at 17, jobs and baseball and the like. I figure this year will be my last chance at a Pearl Harbor reunion."

If the Murphys go, Danny will see where the Raleigh joined World War II, riding easy and unsuspecting on the northwest side of Ford Island. And Danny will hear about the reserve ensign and gunner's mate who — under fire — assembled one of the ship's brand new 1.1-inch guns and knocked down four Japanese planes.

And Danny may hear his father talk about fear and the self-doubts that assail a man when he recognizes it in himself after the battle. Danny will learn that the scared warrior and the battle hero are one and the same man. That's the way the adrenalin flows, the way wars are fought.

Landmark or a liability?

OTHER employes will continue to park in the old lots at the rear of 200 W. Broadway and at a new lot to be built across from the new city hall on Ocean Boulevard, according to the engineer's office.

— Ceiling tiles used throughout the building are 13½ inches square, a custom-made size expensive to replace, the construction source said.

Gibbs said that the city has 4,000 replacement tiles. He pointed out that office walls in the building are movable on tracks located in the floors and ceilings.

Telephone lines and power outlets are beneath the tracks. This made the special ceiling tiles necessary so that the ceiling tracks are spaced equally with the floor wall tracks. The special tiles also serve to space lights so that no light would ever be blocked by a wall, Gibbs said.

ALTHOUGH the ceiling tiles are custom-made, the city will save money by creating a building that allows floor arrangements to be changed literally overnight, Gibbs said.

— Lights in hallways and on the City Council and city manager floors are mercury vapor lamps. While they are extremely energy efficient, the lamps take eight to ten minutes to come on again if they are turned off, Marchese acknowledged.

If there should be a power failure, employes would be walking in the dark for several minutes after the building shifted to its $118,000 emergency generator, the source said. He pointed out that this could be particularly disastrous in the event of an earthquake.

The public service department is already preparing to rewire some floors, Marchese admitted, because of another problem. Some conference rooms have light switches that affect most others on that floor — so if someone wants to see slides or movies, for example, in one room, much of that floor would have to go dark.

— The first rain of the season brought trouble for the building's six elevators. They all quit running for four days because water leaked into the shafts, the source said.

Marchese verified the problem, but said it had been corrected and the elevators have now been certified as safe by state inspectors.

— Some fire alarms have been installed in the actual ceiling, which is located above the false ceiling. They will have to be dropped down into the false ceiling, the source said.

Disgruntled construction supervisors also complained of alleged extravagances, including 36 carloads of half-bricks used to surface the plaza around the civic center. They were all hand laid and grouted.

ANOTHER complaint concerned the visual display system for the council chambers. The screen is a single piece of optical glass that measures 10 by 25 feet and took 21 men to carry into place, according to the source. The complex system, which includes multiple projectors, cost $45,000.

"I'm glad we built it (the new city hall) when we did," Marchese said. "Right now, it would cost another $10 million to duplicate the building."

Asked why the engineer's office couldn't have watched over the architects more closely and have urged them to cut costs, he replied, "We hired a consultant with expertise in a particular field. I wish we had the time, money and men to review every project in greater detail. It's a quality building and it's not overdone."

ORIGINALLY priced at $14.4 million, the project soon grew in size and cost. It has 275,000 gross square feet, compared to approximately 100,000 for the old city hall.

Ground was broken in 1973.

Councilman Wes Carroll warned that unless the new city hall is completely inhabited and open for business by Dec. 31, when under the agreement the city must take possession, the city will default on its bonds and the project would have to be refinanced at a higher rate of interest.

If this occurs, Long Beach's bond rating, now one of the best, will drop, making it harder for the city to sell other bonds, Carroll continued, which will hurt redevelopment efforts.

"IT WOULD be a real catastrophe," Carroll said, "but no one is listening."

Marchese said the move would be completed by the end of December and Carroll noted that "it appears that will happen."

Another looming legal snarl is the August request from the City Council that the city attorney consider filing suit against Allied Architects to recover part of the $1 million-plus in cost overruns on the city hall.

Dep. City Atty. Einar Peterson had no comment on the suit possibility, but said that the matter had been discussed with the city engineer.

Marchese said that overruns add up to 4.3 per cent of the total construction's costs. The industry average for a $26 million building would be somewhere around 8 per cent, he said.

THE $36 million city hall bond issuance was sold to investors at 5.9 per cent interest and must be paid off by 2006.

City Finance Director Warren Heistand said that the total cost for the bonds and interest will be $84.4 million by the pay-off date.

Annual payments will be in the $2.5 million range, he said. The first payment will be paid by property taxes, accounting for 22 cents of the $2.19 tax rate, according to the budget office.

Beginning in 1978-79, the city will use revenues from the leases it owns on the Uplands oil wells.

Heistand said this method of financing is uncertain. He pointed out that the city is counting on revenues from the oil fields to make the city hall payments through 1995 and that the estimates of that remaining income may not be right.

PROPERTY taxes, used to make the first year's payment, will probably be used from 1996 to 2006, when the payments will be completed, according to Budget Director James Phelps.

Phelps apparently has no worries that the oil revenues will dwindle faster than expected. He claims that there is enough oil to last easily until 1995.

However, Phelps does believe that the Uplands oil revenues could be better used for projects that would produce more money, such as a marina, golf course or the purchase of an electric company.

He pointed out that the city has already raised the property tax rate nearly 11 cents to pay for the city hall bonds.

THE amount of total city debt is not alarming, Phelps believes. By 1978, the city will owe only $6 million to investors who hold other bonds. Even with the additional $36 million in bonds for the new city hall, "Long Beach's bonded indebtedness is miniscule compared to most cities our size," he said.

Marchese said the occupants of the 14 floors would be: Mayor and City Council, 14th floor; city manager, 13th; city attorney, 12th; engineering, 11th and 10th; engineering and franchises, 9th; civil service and personnel, 8th; city auditor and finance, 7th; gas and commercial administration, 6th; administration, 5th; planning, 4th; community development, 3rd; building and safety, 2nd; and city clerk, licenses and other frequently used services, such as payment of utility bills, 1st.

PUBLIC Services Director Robert Kennedy said the move schedule has been set up and should take about four days per floor when it begins in mid-November. Most of the furniture in the old city hall has been refurbished and will be used in the new building, he noted.

L.B. trucker shot, robbed

David Fay Reid, 31, of 1645 E. Market St., was shot in the abdomen and robbed of about $20 early Saturday by two women and a man who gave him a ride, Long Beach police said.

Investigators said Reid, a truck driver, was hitchhiking when he was driven to Shearer Park, robbed and shot.

He stumbled to a nearby home where residents called police. No arrests have been made.

Traffic rerouting opposed

That was the overriding conclusion after a series of eight citywide community workshops to allow maximum citizen input in deciding Long Beach's future transportation policies.

Attendance at the two Eastside workshops, totaling some 215 participants, was more than three times that for all other areas of the city put together.

King Cushman, director of traffic management, expressed disappointment that residents in other areas of the city seem "relatively unconcerned about the broad transportation issues."

CUSHMAN estimated that the first draft of the new transportation element for the city's General Plan would be ready for public airing early next year.

He summarized citizens' input at the workshops as follows:

—Most participants agreed with the city's position favoring increased bus service rather than a rapid-transit rail system.

—Most favored extension of the Terminal Island Freeway to the San Diego Freeway and opposed the development of DeForest Avenue, on the eastern banks of the Los Angeles River, as a major north-south traffic corridor.

—Transportation should support downtown redevelopment and changes which would allow for people-oriented shopping areas with malls and sidewalk cafes.

—Downtown would be a more desirable place to go if free or low-cost parking were made available. The new Long Beach Library was singled out as a downtown location for which free parking would be desirable.

—ALTHOUGH no consensus emerged from proposed alternatives for dealing with east-west crosstown traffic, discussions revealed strong opposition to the widening of Ocean Boulevard and Livingston Drive.

—Many East Long Beach residents strongly resisted a proposal to connect Atherton Street to the San Diego and 605 freeways as a new route to Long Beach State University and downtown Long Beach, arguing it would impact residential neighborhoods and create traffic hazards for students at Tichenor Elementary School.

—A proposed extension of Loynes Drive to Nieto Avenue met with similar opposition. In addition to dumping traffic into residential areas, Eastsiders argued, it would create serious safety problems for students attending Rogers Junior High and Lowell Elementary schools.

City manager Dever

In a city of nearly 110,000, most of whose breadwinners are well-paid professionals in Santa Clara Valley's electronics and aerospace industry, Orchards is an unusually articulate upper-middle-class movement of professional people with a keen sense of urban beauty and environmental quality.

TO MANY members of Orchards, Sunnyvale is a city without character, a bland bedroom community that lacks both charm and identity. And part of the blame for its having developed in that fashion, they feel, belongs to John Dever, who ran the city as if it were a business, they say.

Dever, in the opinion of John Cowan, a Sunnyvale computer programmer, helped create "a sterile climate of sameness, monotony and rectitude" in Sunnyvale — in fact, a carbon copy of a Southern California plasticity, he says. And for that reason, says Cowan, he isn't sorry to see Dever leaving Sunnyvale.

It's been said that Dever decided to accept the Long Beach post because the political scene in Sunnyvale had become discordant and quarrelsome in recent months.

But a number of Dever-watchers are convinced that the reason for his leaving was his need to be put to new tests, to take on new challenges.

The fact is, they say, Dever did all he had set out to do in Sunnyvale, picking up the pieces of a divided city management when he arrived here in 1967 and welding it into an efficient municipal organization.

HE CAME to a city whose budget was a shambles and, in a few short years, turned it into a model for other cities. Today there are several million dollars in Sunnyvale's unappropriated reserve, giving the city what amounts to a sizable budget surplus.

On the eve of his departure, moreover, Sunnyvale's deteriorating downtown commercial district is on the threshold of a redevelopment revival, thanks largely to Dever.

The town is also thriving with light industry (electronics, computers and aerospace) — again thanks to Dever. Having once been entirely dependent on Lockheed for its health, Sunnyvale in the past few years has diversified its industrial base to the point where, when Lockheed gets sick, Sunnyvale no longer coughs and wheezes.

As he prepares to manage a city whose $2.18-cent property-tax rate is close to its legal ceiling, Dever will leave a city whose tax rate in the last three years has gone down from $1.31 to $1.14, according to Sunnyvale Mayor Don Logan.

In his nine years in Sunnyvale, Dever has fashioned what friends and critics alike agree is one of the most efficient bureaucracies in the country, with an annual productivity-improvement rate far better than industry's average, and double the average of American cities.

HIS SECRET? A combination of training and motivation for the city's 1,000-odd municipal workers, long-range fiscal planning and an extraordinary use of computer hardware.

The city doesn't own the hardware; it leases it — and apparently to good advantage. For Dever and the city fathers are convinced that Sunnyvale's management-information system has enabled the city to operate not only with fewer employes, but at much lower costs. In addition to giving city officials unusually easy access to program information, the system has enabled the City Council "to determine priorities eight years in advance."

Having heard about Long Beach's fiscal problems and its difficulties with the Queen Mary, Sunnyvale citizens are convinced that Long Beach picked the right man.

'When I read that he was going to Long Beach," says Marcella Saxe, an Orchards member, I thought: 'Good grief, he's going from the frying pan into the fire.'"

But "he's really sharp, a good businessman," she adds, and he should help Long Beach.

The Truth Test.
Part II

(916) 445-9555

Governor Jerry Brown is not being honest with the people of California.

His statements about Proposition 14 are false. And YOU can prove it.

Affecting Private Property Rights

In a recent series of political television commercials paid for by the "Yes on 14 Committee," Governor Jerry Brown said, "The California Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court have made clear that Proposition 14 in no way affects property rights."

HOGWASH. The Access Rule is real. Whether Proposition 14 passes or not, over 50,000 small farm families will still be faced with the outrage of labor organizers who can enter their private property in order to organize farm workers—without their knowledge or permission—three times a day, seven days a week, week in and week out.

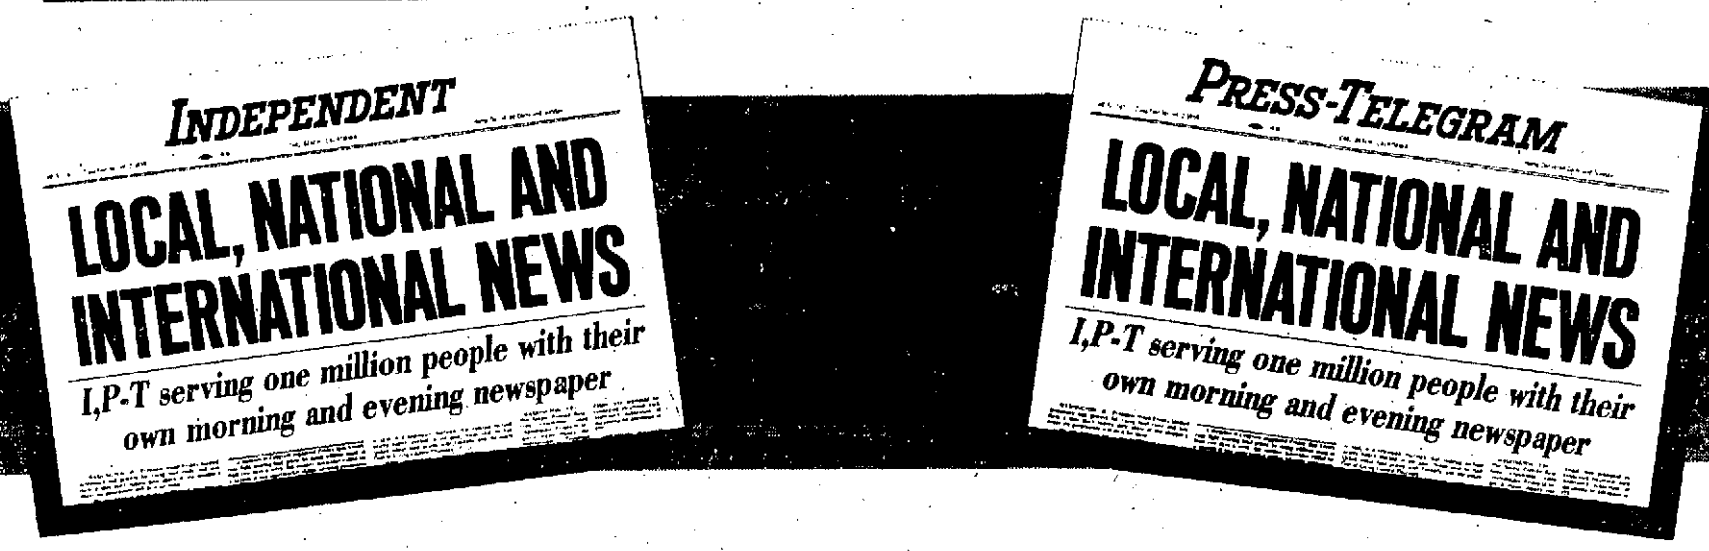

The difference is that if Proposition 14 passes, access will be even greater. The section of the current rule that suspends access once a union election has been certified, (Section F), has been dropped from Proposition 14. Without Section F, access could continue indefinitely—even by labor organizers for competing unions.

TRUE or FALSE? That's easy. Call the Attorney General of the State of California and ask him. (916) 445-9555.

SKETCH at left of initial phase of Irvine Center shows how five department stores, mall, hotel and Tivoli Court will be located, in the triangular area bounded north and south by the Santa Ana and San Diego freeways. Artist's rendering, right, depicts Tivoli Court, which is to be the hub of center activity. The tri-level recreation-entertainment structure, climate-controlled, will include theaters, concert areas, gourmet dining and other restaurants, an ice-skating rink, children's play area, meeting rooms and facilities for cultural attractions. It is projected as a center for nightlife after the shops close for the night.

$300 million retail and business complex

'Largest U.S. shopping center' for Southland

By a Staff Writer

Plans to construct a $300 million retail and business center on a 470-acre triangular tract at the San Diego-Santa Ana Freeway intersection in Orange County were announced the past week by the Newport Beach-based Irvine Co.

Groundbreaking for the $80 million first phase of the project is expected late next year with completion projected for autumn 1979, Albert J. Auer, head of the development firm's commercial division, said at a Los Angeles press conference. He noted also the shopping center will be the largest in the United States.

Four major department stores — Buffums', Bullock's, The May Co. and Robinson's — have signed letters of intent to locate within the center's first segment, Auer said. Another large department store is to be signed for the initial phase, he added.

Appearing with him were John Hunt, Buffums' senior vice president; Howard Goldfeder, chairman of Bullock's; George Foos, May Co. president; and James Slayden, president of Robinson's.

Auer said the initial phase will cover about 1.6 million square feet and is to include, in addition to the five big stores, 100 mall shops, a major 350-room hotel and a tri-level recreation-entertainment center called Tivoli Court.

In addition there are to be civic and cultural institutional centers, a central greenbelt with walkways, bikeways and possible equestrian trails, all laid out in a lakeside park environment.

Designing the center is the internationally known architectural firm of Gruen Associates. An area masterplan was prepared by Skidmore, Owings and Merrill.

The center adjoins a proposed high-speed rapid transit line serving the Los Angeles-San Diego corridor. A major transit stop is masterplanned to serve the eight-million-square-foot center, and, in addition, it is being designed to provide for a personal rapid transit system to convey people around the development.

Tivoli Court, at the heart of the center, is expected to become a major attraction for many Orange County residents seeking after-sundown entertainment. Available will be an array of fine restaurants, theaters, concerts areas, recreational attractions — and an ice skating rink.

Meeting rooms, cultural attractions and lounge areas designed to meet a variety of needs are to be offered.

The rink will occupy a central floor area at ground level and is to be open to view from two floors above. Around and on levels above the rink are to be restaurants, theaters, gourmet food, concert and exhibit areas, specialty shops, a children's play zone and interior garden.

"The center," said Auer "represents a commitment of the Irvine Co. to a concept of serving the multiple needs of people in a single location, meeting environmental concerns and serving an expanding areas's vigorous population growth."

Population of the center's primary market area is expected to be nearly 300,000 when the facility opens in late 1979, increasing to nearly 430,000 in 1985. By 1990, this sector of Orange County is expected to have a population of about 550,000.

Auer said school districts and other taxing authorities could realize some $20 million over the first 10 years following completion of the initial phase. "At its ultimate development, surrounding communities could realize a revenue surplus of more than $7 million annually, based on current projections."

He also noted that at its finished stage the center could generate more than 18,000 jobs.

This will be the second major regional center to be developed, owned and managed by the Irvine Co., Auer recalled. The firm's Newport Center, a 420-acre business, financial and shopping complex overlooking the ocean in Newport Beach, now is about two-thirds complete.

Sundance Shores cites desert and water-recreation living

A "water wonderland" of recreational facilities is available to residents of Sundance Shores, a new private community of desert resort townhomes on Nevada's Colorado River shore across from Bullhead City, Ariz.

Water skiing, boating and swimming are among the river sports activities enjoyed the year round in this desert playground and Sundance Shores is truly a fisherman's haven, according to Mike Straight, project manager.

A world record bass was caught recently in the river just below Sundance Shores, he said, and information on the 52-pound, 8-ounce fish is being forwarded to the National Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame for world record classification.

Just north of the resort development is David Dam and huge Lake Mojave, another fisherman's favorite. There are acres of wide, open spaces to roam and ride and rock hounds and nature lovers will find their perfect world — here, too.

History buffs can enjoy hours of recreation exploring the ruins of nearby Fort Mojave, Straight noted, or examining ancient petroglyphs — remnants of a previous civilization.

The Bullhead City community across the river offers a golf course and entertainment on Nevada's shore is close to home with several casinos, including the luxurious Riverside Casino, offering dining, dancing and gaming.

The development is in a peaceful setting with views of the river and mountains — 32 riverview villas, all fully completed and ready for immediate occupancy.

Prices of the three and four-bedroom townhomes range from $39,500 to $44,000. Four floor plans are available, all with two baths and luxury features.

Some models have family rooms and all have master suites with private baths, private patios, balconies and landscaped entry courts with covered front porches.

There are cathedral ceilings, wood-burning fireplaces, wall-to-wall carpeting, laundry closets and glass tub/shower enclosures among the quality appointments and all of the homes have smoke detector systems, shake roofs and covered parking areas with exterior storage.

Deluxe Sundance Shores kitchens are complete with built-in Hotpoint range and oven, dishwasher, disposal and refrigerator and feature generous dining areas.

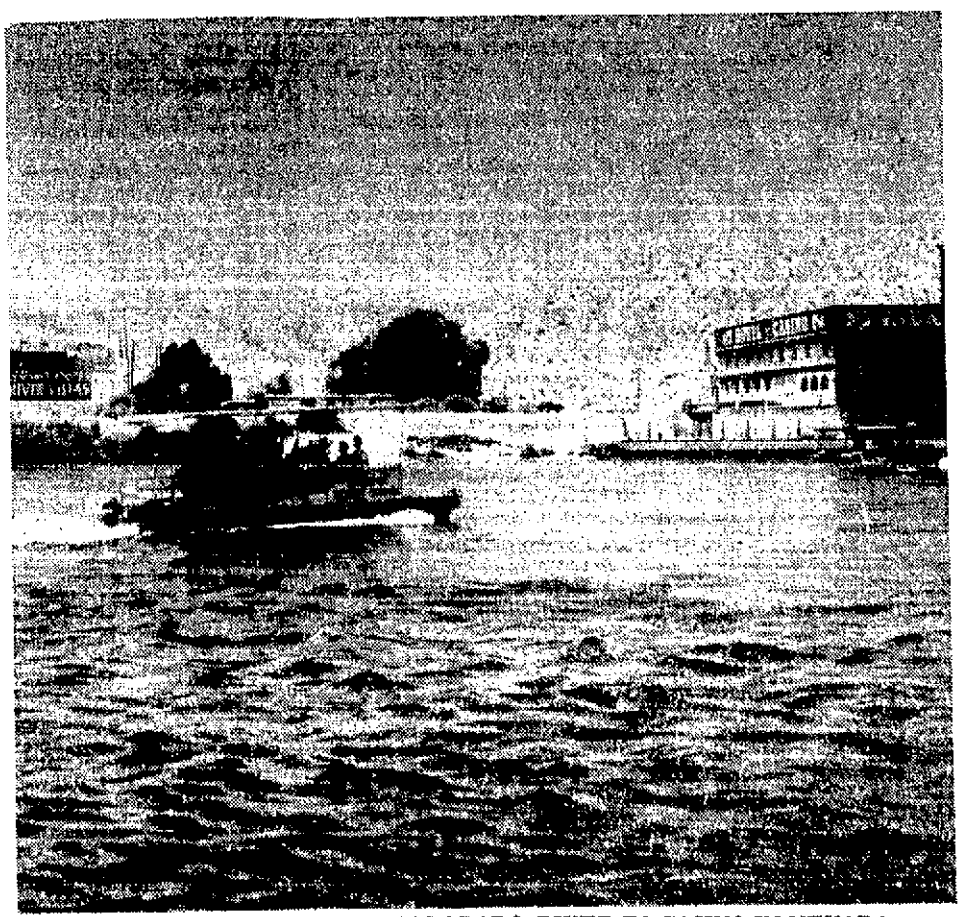

Sundance Shores offers professional maintenance of the community grounds and exteriors of the homes through the homeowners association.

Another benefit of vacation-home ownership in the new community is the fact that Nevada has neither state income nor inheritance taxes, the project manager noted.

"Very little desirable river property is still available in this popular area," Straight said.

Color photos of the project and full information are available to Los Angeles and Orange County residents at the Walker & Lee Shoppers Information Center in Anaheim. Located off the Santa Ana Freeway, south of Harbor Boulevard, the center is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Information may also be obtained by writing Walker & Lee, 1477 Manchester, Anaheim, 92803.

Parkview Terrace sales up

Sales at Parkview Terrace, C. Robert Langslet & Son's condominium community in Long Beach, have passed the $3.5 million mark, reports Michael Engle, vice president of marketing.

"The sales pace has far exceeded our expectations, and less than half of the homes are remaining in our mid-rise building," Engle said.

Many of the two-bedroom, two-bath units face the Recreation Park golf course.

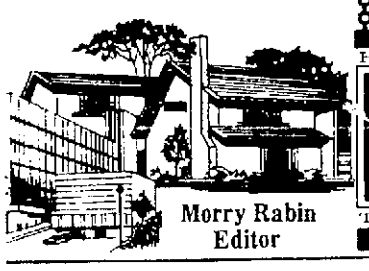

Parkview Terrace offers practicality in its two-bedroom, two-bath homes, Engle noted. Interior designer Don Brown of Environments is the decorator for the two model homes, the Monterey and the Navarra.

BOTH MODELS have high ceilings, gas lighted fireplaces, private balcony with storage area and a large master bedroom suite with an adjoining bath featuring a tiled Roman tub. Third floor homes have loft areas and skylights.

The three-story, 60-home unit is surrounded by exotic foliage, including jacaranda trees and king palms. The focal point of the interior court is a Mexican fountain.

Take the San Diego Freeway to the Lakewood Boulevard exit, proceed south to Los Alamitos Circle and continue south on the Pacific Coast Highway to Anaheim Street and turn right. The community is at 4835 E. Anaheim St.

Solar energy concept has a long way to go

MENLO PARK — Solar energy is not a cure-all for our energy problems but it is one part of a larger strategy that involves energy conservation, good design, and maybe a modest sacrifice of convenience, according to Sunset Magazine.

"The sun's potential is often oversold," Sunset says in a 12-page report on solar energy in its November issue. "Experts disagree widely about which systems work best and are most cost-effective," the editors say. "Many installations are frankly experimental, and a full-scale solar system typically involves considerable cost and technical ability."

Nevertheless, Sunset notes that a new drive to couple the sun to the home is well under way, backed by increasing amounts of private and government funds, and inspired by personal daring.

THE EXTENSIVE Sunset article deals with solar installations in such widely separated parts of the West as Salem and Bend, Ore., Santa Fe, N.Y., Flagstaff, Ariz. and Northern and Southern California.

Active solar systems consist of collectors to absorb the sun's heat, ducts or pipes to transport it, and a heat storage area. The active components are fans, pumps, valves and thermostats.

"You cannot today buy an 'off-the-shelf' solar heating or cooling system," Sunset says. "All of our examples are custom-fitted from readily available manufactured components. Mass-produced package systems for hot-water heating may be close at hand; it likely will be longer before you can buy a standardized space-heating system."

An air system for circulating heat is simple, but has the disadvantages of requiring large ducts and several tons of rock for heat storage. Water systems require some complex plumbing and hardware, but water requires less than half the storage volume of an equivalent air system, and its thin pipes make retrofits easier, Sunset says.

Depending on total heat need, the installed cost (including all labor) of an active space-heating system could range from $4,000 to more than $10,000, the magazine reports. "Energy experts agree that the time has come to look at the 'life-cycle' costs of a home as critically as we look at the 'front-end' or initial cost," Sunset says. "We may have to pay dearly for fuel to heat a house whose first cost is deceptively low."

"Passive" solar architecture meets the same challenge as active mechanical systems: Collecting solar heat and storing it for use at night and during cloudy weather—but without hardware driven by mechanical energy, Sunset reports. "The building becomes the system; heat storage is usually the structure itself."

HUD booklet answers solar queries

The most commonly asked questions about solar heating and cooling — and their answers — have been assembled in a 19-page booklet by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"Solar Energy and Your Home" was produced by the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia for HUD's residential solar energy demonstration program as part of a nearby half million dollar contract to organize a one-stop solar information center.

The inside front cover of the brochure lists the address of the National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center, which supplies copies of this and other solar literature to industry and the general public.

Mailed inquires should be directed to P.O. Box 1607, Rockville, Md. 20850. The toll free telephone number is 800-523-2929.

Sample questions from the brochure:

- Why should I consider a solar heating system for my home?
- What kinds of solar heating systems are there?
- How much will a solar energy system cost?
- Will a solar energy system raise the resale value of my home?

In addition to answering those and other questions briefly, the booklet serves as a guide to other information sources, such as finding a contractor who can install solar equipment, and locating solar homes by area.

A black cover with a striking orange sun advertises an interior dotted with simple, clear sketches showing how different solar systems work.

HUD's solar program is linked to the larger National Program for Solar Heating and Cooling of Buildings operated by the Energy Research and Demonstration Administration. The national effort also includes research on non-residential buildings, federal buildings and defense installations.

SUNSET HILL HOME KITCHEN FEATURES BUILT-INS

Popularity of Sunset Hill increasing, sellers report

The popularity of Sunset Hill, a single-family home community in Dana Point, is growing daily, reported Landon M. Exley, vice president and general manager of Pacesetter Homes, builder of the development.

"Buyers at Sunset Hill are fully aware of the potential appreciation of the quality-built homes, because of the choice area location. Since the project was begun several months ago, there has been a 20 per cent increase in home values in the area," Exley noted.

In addition to the aesthetics of the coastal location, the area is enhanced by vast recreational opportunity, Exley continued.

Dana Point Yacht Harbor, one of the largest on the West Coast, offers a wide variety of natural and man-made recreational facilities, while well known parks and beaches are available for additional outdoor activity.

The homes are available in four floor-plans and range from 1,225 to 1,887 square feet of living area, with prices from $69,950 to $79,950.

There are a variety of architecturally coordinated exteriors with rustic cedar shake roofs, extensive use of wood siding and stained, rough-cut beams.

Diverse three- and four-bedroom models feature two or 2½ baths, family room or large kitchen/family room area, dining area or optional bedroom or formal dining room. All have enclosed attached two-car garages.

Features which reportedly add to the value of the homes are wood-burning fireplaces with gas outlets, cathedral ceilings, custom carpeting and tempered-glass sliding walls.

Deluxe kitchens include built-in range and oven, dishwasher and disposal, formica counter tops, custom hand-finished ash cabinets and large pantries in some plans.

Huge closets are one feature of the master bedroom suites, which also have baths with large vanity mirrors and synthetic marble pullmans.

From Pacific Coast Highway, take Selva Road east to Golden Lantern, and turn north on Alcapulco. Furnished models are open daily from 11 a.m. to dusk.

4½-day seminar

"Vital real estate principles of investment analysis, exchange and taxation," will be discussed by three realtors at a 4½-day seminar Nov. 15-19 at the Airport Marina Hotel, Los Angeles. Courses are open to the public as well as realtors and realtor-associates.

Sponsored by the Investment Division of the California Association of Realtors, the seminar will be in session, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with evening homework sessions beginning at 7, and will conclude with one-half day of examination.

Instructors will be Reed L. Smith of Santa Rosa, George Warwick of Chula Vista and William Gorman of Fullerton.

Shopping complex opening

Rossmoor Leisure World's third major shopping center, Moulton Plaza, is beginning to open for business.

The 127,000-square foot center at Moulton Parkway and Santa Maria Avenue in Laguna Hills eventually will have 30 stores and two financial institutions. Now open is Hacienda de las Boleras with 40 bowling lanes, and a Colony Kitchen restaurant.

Additional stores and offices of Leisureworld Savings and Loan and the Security Pacific National Bank are to open in coming weeks. A super market is to open next Spring.

The center features Spanish-inspired architecture and is built around two patios with benches and wide overhangs.

Other shopping facilities at Leisure World include another center with a supermarket and stores and the giant Laguna Hills Mall, which has four major department stores and some 70 specialty shops. A fourth center is planned for construction in the future.

Leisure World is now in its 12 year and has a population of approximately 19,000. It is an adult community for people 52 and older and it features security and recreation. The community is surrounded by wall and fence and has a force of 255 security officers.

Realty certificate course scheduled

Twenty-four units of college-level courses are being offered by the Lumbleau Real Estate schools in Los Angeles with California Department of Real Estate approval, according to Vincent Lumbleau, president of the schools.

The 24 units are required by the California State Department of Real Estate in order to qualify for the Real Estate Certificate, which Lumbleau said, many realtors consider a sign of solid professional achievement among licensees.

Top seller

Kristine Peterson, 27, who has been selling real estate only 14 months, was presented this deep-sea diving helmet by Coast Equities for selling more than $2.5 million in condominium homes of Marina Pacifica in Long Beach, making her the top saleswoman at the water-oriented project this year. She is a native of Long Beach and a resident of Naples.

U.S. rental assistance program tops its goal

Business Wire

WASHINGTON — The Department of Housing & Urban Development has exceeded its goal in the Section 8 rental assistance program for low-income families, Secretary Carla A. Hills reports.

Preliminary reports indicate that contract authority for approximately 490,000 units had been allocated by Sept. 30, some 90,000 in excess of the 400,000 goal set by President Ford in January.

Rates for occupancy and starts for new and rehabilitated housing under the program are also up substantially, Hills said.

Indications are that occupancy rates had reached almost 90,000 by Sept. 30. Of these, approximately 60,000 were for new, substantially rehabilitated and existing housing, with the remaining 30,000 under loan management. Starts for new and rehabilitated Section 8 housing reached a cumulative total of more than 40,000 units.

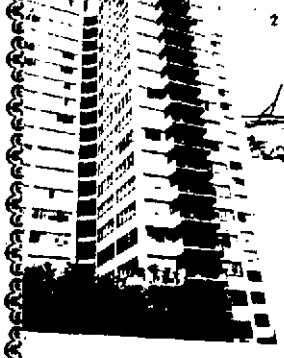

"There are two major reasons for this very good record," Hills said. "The program has been widely accepted by the low-income families who are in desperate need of good housing. Secondly, the staff of HUD field offices has done a tremendous job in administering the program."

RENDERING OF A PONDEROSA HOME IN TIMBER WOOD

14 Timber Wood homes available for purchase

Now open for sales are the 14 single-family homes of Timber Wood being built by Ponderosa Homes of Irvine at Harbor Boulevard and McFadden in Santa Ana.

Priced from $56,990 to $62,990, the one and two-story homes are distinguished by six exterior stylings characteristic of residential neighborhoods established by the Irvine-based homebuilding firm.

Three and four-bedrooms with two or three baths are complete with wall-to-wall nylon carpeting throughout, a wood-burning fireplace in the living room or separate family room, vaulted ceilings and a formal entry.

Kitchens at Timber Wood include gas range, oven with black glass door, dishwasher and double sink with disposal. Refrigerator areas are plumbed for automatic ice makers and two plans have breakfast bar. Family rooms are adjacent to the kitchens and have sliding glass doors opening to the rear garden areas.

Secluded master bedrooms each have a private bath and dressing room.

Each Timber Wood home has an attached double garage with direct inside access. Concrete driveways are standard. Construction features include full insulation of exterior walls and ceilings, forced air heating systems with ducting sized for air conditioning, and copper water systems.

CR Design of Irvine is credited with the three floorplans and six exterior styles available with the limited collection of handsome homes. Construction is now under way and completion of construction is due for December.

What's Your Problem?

Middle-aged couple can enjoy a new, more expensive home

By DON CAMPBELL

Times change, our standard of living changes and our tastes change. What we considered perfectly acceptable as a standard of living when we were first married is viewed as wholly inadequate 20 years later.

It is the most natural of all evolutions.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We are working couple, ages 49 and 52, presently earning $30,000 a year. Our two children are grown. We would like to sell our family-type home of 25 years and move into a two-bedroom custom-built home in a luxury neighborhood where we feel we will enjoy spending the remainder of our working years and just might stay on after retirement.

The problem is that the new house will cost about $50,000 to build while our older home will bring about $35,000, conservatively. The new house will cost more to heat and cool and taxes will be about double our present ones.

The favorable arguments are that the new home will be in a proven high-investment-type area which will only increase in value. We plan on a low maintenance type yard and will enjoy a more tranquil and leisurely surrounding during our after-work hours.

If we carry a long-term (30-year) mortgage at 8½ per cent, plus points, our monthly payment will be around $500. We plan to invest the money received from our old home in certificates or bonds at a minimum of 7 per cent. We then would have the option at retirement of paying off (if it's down far enough) the new house mortgage or, if inflation should continue, the $500 payment may not be so large then.

Is this a financially sound move for the reasons we have listed, or is it a frivolous scheme for folks our age? Our retirement program is a state retirement plan for teachers, plus Social Security. We also have a very small, so far, tex-sheltered annuity plan — Mrs. D.L.G., Tucson, Ariz.

ANSWER: I don't see anything wild-eyed about your plan and for heaven's sake, 49 and 52 is hardly over-the-hill as far as this type of idea is concerned!

You can certainly afford this new home on your present income although you are very wise in looking ahead to retirement when — as is invariably the case — your income undoubtedly will drop. You may very well, at that time, find it more comfortable to refinance the home, throw more cash into the kitty, and adjust the monthly mortgage payments downward.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We recently moved out of an apartment we had been renting because we couldn't get along with the landlord. A couple of weeks after we were in our new place we got a bill from the old landlord for an extra month's rent because he said we didn't give him enough notice.

It's true that we didn't tell him in advance we were moving, but we moved out a week before the month was out without asking for any refund. Can he bill us like this? — T.F.V., Allentown, Pa.

ANSWER: State laws vary considerably on this and you'll have to check locally. In some states, no notice at all is required by the tenant (although it is for the landlord), but it is more common to require 15 days, or a month's notice.

I suspect — since he billed you — that the landlord knows something that you don't about your state's requirements here. I suggest that you get together and work out a compromise of some sort.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

I am a single career-woman and I recently attempted to buy a home but the mortgage company turned down my application.

Didn't I read, recently, that lenders can no longer turn down an applicant because of sex or because of the fact that he/she is single? How do I protest this? — Ms. W. G. B., Long Beach.

ANSWER: Yes, you're quite right because the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 added the word "sex" to the long-standing prohibitions of "race, color, religion or national origin."

The trick, unfortunately, comes in proving that the turn-down was based on your sex and marital status. Lending is still a cold-blooded business in which all sorts of risk, quite apart from the borrower's sex, have to be taken into account.

I would go back to the lender and demand to know, specifically, why you were turned down (he also has to tell you this under the terms of a completely unrelated law). If this doesn't satisfy you, contact the local office of your Civil Rights Commission.

(Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only representative questions of general interest. Write him in care of the I,P-T.)

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1976

Billion dollar hospital 'ripoff'

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Hospital charges are often $25 a day higher than need be because government bureaucrats are underpaying on services given to Medi-Cal and Medicare patients, it was learned Saturday.

Financial losses to local hospitals, and other hospitals as well, are running into the millions. One hospital official in Long Beach called the underpayment practice a "multi-billion dollar ripoff of patients."

Patients not under Medi-Cal or Medicare coverage are absorbing the loss.

The health committee of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce reports that the city's four major non-profit hospitals experienced losses in excess of $10 million in the past year.

The loss is expected to be $18,900,000 by 1978, says Jack W. Weiblen, health committee chairman and vice president of Memorial Hospital Medical Center.

"These multi-million dollar underpayments by government are being added to the bills of the non-government patient," Weiblen says. "Our local not-for-profit institutions have no other source of income.

"At present, the 'surtax' exceeds $25 a day per patient. It will be larger and larger each succeeding year unless something is done about it."

Weiblen notes that an average patient stay is about seven days, bringing the total figure to about $192 per patient.

"What is really happening is that government is placing a double tax on the non-government patient," Weiblen says. "This patient pays a tax to support Medicare and Medi-Cal and then pays a second tax to pay for the underpayments by government."

For every dollar billed for services to medical patients at one local hospital in recent years, the state reimbursed the hospital about 87 cents. This past year the state reduced the amount of reimbursement to 71 cents on every dollar.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS say that if present regulations issued by the state are ruled legal, reimbursement will dwindle to as little as 50 cents for each dollar's worth of care for Medi-Cal patients.

"In many instances," says Weiblen, "it is the employer who is being forced to pick up the tab." This is the case when the employer provides all the health insurance for workers and families.

Anthony J. Abbate, vice president of St. Mary Medical Center, said the extra charge is being absorbed in the daily room rate.

"The cost can't come out of our (the hospital's) pocket," he says.

Abbate explained that the hospital must pay its staff and its suppliers.

He says that the problem continues to get progressively worse.

If governmental payments were adequate, daily hospital charges could actually be reduced, Abbate says.

C. Joseph Heinz, administrator of Pacific Hospital of Long Beach, says that Pacific Hospital has no such thing as a surcharge.

"We don't do that," he says.

But he admits that the deficit created by government patients must be borne by the rest of the patient population.

There was the time that both government programs paid costs, Heinz says, enabling hospitals to break even but allowing nothing extra to purchase new equipment. Now not even costs are paid, Heinz says.

Arnold V. Loveridge, associate executive director of Long Beach Community Hospital, cites a case of a typical patient with a hospital bill of $1,000 after a five-day stay.

If the patient has private insurance or pays cash, the hospital generally collects the full payment.

If the patient is covered by Medicare, the hospital's reimbursement is $865.60, a deficit of $134.40. Forty-four per cent of Community's patients are Medicare cases.

If the patient is covered by Medi-Cal, only $652.74 is paid by the state, a deficit of $347.26. Six per cent of Community's patients are Medi-Cal cases.

SAYS LOVERIDGE:

"Because Medicare and Medi-Cal refuse to pay the full costs of running a hospital, then private insurance and self-pay patients in non-profit hospitals must make up the difference.

"Government-insured patients are getting their medical care wholesale while the rest of us must pay retail prices.

"I know of no other instance in which the government pays only the operating costs for goods or services."

Loveridge adds:

"Even proprietary hospitals that are run for a profit to their owners are allowed by Medicare to have a factor for return on investment, but in the case of the nonprofit hospital, no such allowance is made."

Health officials and chamber leaders plan to take the lead in soliciting the assistance of legislators at state and federal levels to correct the inequity.

Plan war on litter, vandalism in L.B.

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

There's a good chance that before the day is out copies of this newspaper will be found in several of the city's 40 parks and along the 543 acres of beach.

Newspapers will be left on benches, in the grass or on the sand to become part of the mountain of refuse picked up and hauled away by the Public Service Department each month.

The cans, bottles, pull tabs, bottle tops, candy and fast food wrappers are trash when they are deposited in cans. When they are tossed to the ground, dropped on the sand or washed up on the beach, these things become litter which is unsightly, costly to remove and, according to at least one city official, dangerous.

And litter begets litter. A dirty park or beach tempts a person to just drop paper and cans anywhere. If the beach or park is clean, he might be more inclined to use a trash container. Litter also invites vandalism, park officials claim.

The result in the worst cases is recreational areas in which residents no longer take pride and which have lost all of their aesthetic appeal.

LONG BEACH PARK Commissioner Gordon Getz says he visited such places in eastern cities recently. He was appalled by the condition of New York's Central Park and recreational areas in Harlem and the Battery.

"Our parks are cream puffs compared to those," he says. Dogged by the memory of littered and vandalized recreation areas elsewhere, Getz is proposing a five-year plan of attack on the problem.

Getz wants to make people aware of how much it costs them to repair vandalism and pick up litter in parks and on the beaches. An educational program for schools and professional and civic organizations might include slides, films, and brochures.

He also wants to explore the possibility of stronger enforcement of laws against those who litter and destroy public property. He likes the idea of sentencing offenders to pick up litter or to repair the damage they have caused.

A key part of his plan is a volunteer park ranger corps. Badges and uniforms would be issued to volunteers who would patrol recreational areas, sometimes reporting disturbances or vandalism. Their major role, however, would be to discourage such acts by their presence.

The idea, according to Getz, is to develop pride in the city and its recreational opportunities.

Park Department staff members are already at work with Recreation Department employes on an educational program for the schools.

William T. Bell, assistant director of the Park Department, is concerned about the cost of picking up litter and disposing of trash in parks. He says it ranges from $200,000 to $300,000 a year in Long Beach.

That cost could be reduced, Bell says, if ideal conditions prevailed. Large trash containers would be placed at park entrances and users would deposit refuse as they left the area. That would eliminate the need for the smaller trash receptacles inside the park. Bell says they represent a kind of park litter in themselves and are frequently stolen because they are the right size for home use.

But ideal conditions exist only in the dreams of park officials and in reality litter is tossed all over

DIRTY AND DANGEROUS litter injures 300,000 persons each year. Broken glass and pull tabs from cans do the damage and treatment of such injuries costs $3 million.

RAKING SAND is part of the regular beach cleanup which costs Long Beach about $300,000 a year. Worst litter is caused when it rains and refuse from the rivers and drainage ditches is washed out to sea and then back up on to the beaches.

Glad you asked that!

OLYMPIC decathalon champion Bruce Jenner — too young to portray Superman.

ACTOR James Cagney — meeting with George M. Cohan came on the job.

THE LATE actress Betty Grable — lied about age to start her career.

Q: Isn't Bruce Jenner, the Olympic decathlon gold medal winner, going to be the new movie "Superman"? — Mrs. J. Johnson, Baltimore.

A: No. Though Hollywood thinks he's really super, he's not the man for the job. "Jenner is a natural actor who has an enormous career on the screen in the future," said producer Ilya Salking. And director Guy Hamilton declared: "He looks like a polished actor." But when he screen-tested for Superman, Bruce, only 26, came across too young.

Q: Known as an X-rated comedian for years, does Redd Foxx ever forget himself when he's taping his TV shows and let something off-color slip out? — Mrs. A. Girard, Omaha, Neb.

A: No. Nothing blue from Redd. "I've never been bleeped," he insists. "I never say anything a censor would have to cut out. The minute those cameras start rolling, any kidding I do on the set immediately stops."

Q: My husband has warned me not to lick any stamps. Say's he heard about a contraceptive stamp invention. What's he talking about? — Mrs. Angela R., Omaha, Neb.

A: He's talking about a stamp that cannot be posted. It allegedly has the same function as the Pill. Now used in China, the stamp will be tested in England for at least a year before it can be marketed. Made from a special edible paper, each tiny square is impregnated with hormones.

Q: Is it true that showman Mike Todd once received a new birth certificate to make him seem younger? — R.A.M., Madison, Wis.

A: Yes. From the mayor of his home town of Minneapolis. He went along with Mike's whacky whimsy and issued such a certificate "documenting" the showman's age as 29 (although he was close to 50). Todd wanted to prove to Elizabeth Taylor, who was 24 at the time, that he wasn't too old to marry her.

Q: When did President Franklin D. Roosevelt first create the phrase "arsenal of democracy" to describe the U.S. role in World War II? — Mrs. Dorian Angela, Brooklyn.

A: FDR didn't create the slogan. Justice Felix Frankfurter heard Jean Monnet of France use it conversationally and requested permission for the President to employ it.

Q: Did any race horse ever "earn" a million dollars for its owner? — A. Nardin, Westchester, N.Y.

A: Yes, 17 have made that magic mark. Kelso has made the most with a total take of $1,977,896. Dr. Fager made $1,002,642. The 15 others in between are Round Table, Buckpasser, Secretariat, Nashua, Carry Back, Dahlia, Damascus, Cougar II, Allex France, Riva Ridge, Fort Marcy, Citation, Susan's Girl, Forego and Native Diver.

Q: When he played in the major leagues, was Joe Garagiola really only a mediocre baseball player? — L. Lacey, Cincinnati.

A: No. Though Joe likes to kid himself, he did have a respectable nine-year big league batting average of .257. His career skidded after an accidental collision with Jackie Robinson in 1950 — leaving him with a weakened arm. Joe considered his native St. Louis lucky for him. He established a lifelong friendship with Yogi Berra, playing sandlot baseball there. And he met his wife at the St. Louis ballpark — playing the organ.

Q: My husband claims that Betty Grable once worked in blackface. I know. Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor did — but Betty Grable? Is this true? — Mrs. Gordie Brynner, Denver.

A: Yes. Betty made her musical movie debut in a chorus line when she was only 13 by lying about her age. All the other girls also worked in blackface.

Q: I'm curious. Did James Cagney ever meet George M. Cohan, whom he once played on the screen? — Amy Seward, Minneapolis.

A: Yes. They met for the first time at the Friars' where Cohan was the club's most distinguished member — and Cagney its busiest bellboy.

Q: Please ask Dame Sybil Leek, author of the "Diary of a Witch," what was the craziest question she was ever asked? — Ms. Jerri Louder, Cincinnati.

A: "I was being interviewed by a well-known member of the New York press. In what appeared to be seriousness, he asked, "Is it true that witches eat babies?' I think," says Sybil, "he must have mistaken my silence as a period of solemn consideration. Actually I had gone into shock at the absurdity of the question. But since he was solemn-faced, I replied with equal seriousness: "Only when there is no marmalade.' The interview ended very rapidly!"

Q: I'm curious. What's the real reason country singer Mel Tillis shaved off his new mustache? — Mrs. Randy Hanson, Indianapolis.

A: Explains the stuttering star: "Somebody told me the mustache would repress my lip and thus prevent me from stuttering. But I found I stuttered through it anyway," he said. "The mustache sorta strained what I was saying. So off it went!"

THE LATE movie producer Mike Todd with Elizabeth Taylor — changed age to win actress' hand in marriage.

COUNTRY singer Mel Tillis — mustache got in his way.

DAME Sybil Leek — witch interview ended with baby question.

TV announcer Joe Garagiola — baseball career better than he indicates.

Escapist thriller will make director a rich man

John Schlesinger beams like a Disney cow. The notices are in on "Marathon Man," the season's big movie blockbuster, and it's going to make him rich. Last year, he directed "The Day of the Locust," and it rained on his parade. How can you win? He made a great film, and some critics said he should have stayed in bed. Now he makes a totally commercial escapist thriller, and some critics are saying it's beneath his dignity.

How does a John Schlesinger keep from going crazy? "Well," he says, rubbing circles on his bald head, "you just laugh. I'm happy 'Marathon Man' is a hit, but that doesn't make me any less proud of 'Locust.' You just have to do what interest you in life and plunge ahead. I went through similar frustrations after 'Far From The Maddening Crowd.' It was a disaster.

"I followed it with 'Midnight Cowboy,' and everyone said, 'Why do you want to do such a depressing film that nobody will ever go and see?' Then that one was an enormous success, and that was the moment I was offered a lot of very big pictures to direct. Instead, I did 'Sunday Bloody Sunday' because it seemed like the right movie to make.

"The answer is that since every director's career is going to be a checkered one, and we can't all have hits all the time, we have to take chances. We no longer live in a golden era in which directors went under contract to a studio that guaranteed a certain amount of work each year. In the 40s, a director never had to worry about where the next film was coming from. You just made films, one after the other, some good, some bad. That's how all the great reputations were made. Now it's a big gamble, and every time you make a film, your whole future is at stake. That's why I'm always anxious to get the next one prepared while the old one is being released."

HE POURS TEA in a most civilized British manner while the phone rings angrily. The newspaper ads are spread on the sofa pronouncing "Marathon Man" the greatest thing since peanut butter. Studio executives are trying to break through with offers that go ignored. Schlesinger is king of the mountain. There's nothing like lines around the block under the marquee to insure self-confidence. Yet he seems nervous.

"I shall never stop being anxious," he sighs. "I'm always on the edge of a precipice, ready for the deep end. I'm a nervous wreck. I'm always scared because one's success and failure these days is so rapidly judged on what the film will gross. There were people going around after 'Day of the Locust' saying 'He must never be allowed near a camera again.' There's nothing you can do except shrug and carry on. The main thing is to cash in at the moment you have a commercial success and use that power to do a film that would not have a chance otherwise.

"Sunday Bloody Sunday' will never show a profit, although it had hugh critical acclaim. You can't make movies for critics, or you will destroy yourself. On the other hand, that film would never have been made if it had not been for the commercial success of 'Midnight Cowboy.' Francis Coppola did the same thing. After 'The Godfather' he used his muscle to make 'The Conversation,' which was not a commercial success, but the right move to make. In this business, one must take risks to remain a creative artist.

"Now with the success of 'Marathon Man,' I am taking advantage of my sudden popularity to make a film in England called 'Yanks!,' a love story about an American G.I. and an English girl just before D-Day. It's a kind of funny, touching, raunchy script by a young writer from the North Country of England, and we're currently going around New York meeting men who were in England during the war. I'm not making any more adventure thrillers or heist movies. I'm going back to my roots."

DIRECTOR John Schlesinger has learned to laugh at critical inconsistencies.

rex reed

"COMING FROM England, where the economy is so unstable that it is impossible to get any kind of movie produced, do you think American actors who get a million dollars per film are overpaid?" I asked.

"Dustin Hoffman certainly got it for 'Marathon Man' and the studio thought he was worth it, but I look at it all with a jaundiced eye. I certainly did not come to America to make a profit. I like America, and I've been coming here since I was a student. I'm hooked on the place. But I came to make 'Midnight Cowboy.' Then I went back home to make 'Sunday' and came back to make 'Locust.' It took me years to get that one off the ground, and I had to work on it in Hollywood, so I bought a house there, and now my tax situation is absolutely chaotic.

"But I've also had projects that never got off the ground at all. I developed Evelyn Waugh's 'Handful of Dust' with my own money, and nobody wanted to make it. Then I was planning to make 'Alive!' but the Stigwood people came out with a total rip-off in that dubbed Mexican atrocity called 'Survive!' which is truly a piece of crap. But it ruined my film because the story has now been told. Now 'Marathon Man' is a great smash and that pleases me, but I wouldn't call it my favorite film."

It was certainly different. He had no experience with the enormity of that kind of film, but he tackled it anyway by "depending a lot on the technical experts around me — the designers, stunt coordinators, special unit director, cameraman, special-effects men, everybody. They all played a great part in it. For me, a film is always a collaboration. I can't take credit for all of it. In the middle of all the car crashes and explosions, I did have to find a way to establish an individual touch of my own. That was the hard part.

"I REMEMBER walking around New York with Bill Goldman, the writer, and it was Yom Kippur. I suddenly got an idea. Since the first car crash involved an old Jew and an old Nazi, why not set it on Yom Kippur? That was the first bit of texture that occurred to me. Then in Paris when we were scouting locations, we were having a script conference in a hotel room at the Plaza Athenee. Suddenly there was a noise outside, and it was a political rally. People came out on their balconies to watch. Another idea was born. What would happen if we had Roy Scheider attacked by the murderous villain while he's watching a street demonstration from his hotel window? It's little things like that that make films different.

"The biggest problem with 'Marathon Man' was how to blend the elements of melodrama — Nazi torturers, villains, explosions, chases — and keep the film on a realistic level. In most thrillers, whole masses of people go in a matter of seconds to all sorts of comic deaths, and nobody takes it seriously because nobody feels anything. 'Marathon Man' is different because it happens to an innocent person, and the audience is identifying like mad.

"I don't know if I want to do another film like this. Up to now, all of my films have been about small people and real relationships, but I wanted a change. I believe in change. I admire Hitchcock, but I don't know how he's been able to make the same movie over and over again without feeling the need for change.

"This was my first thriller, Dustin Hoffman's first thriller, Bill Goldman's first thriller, and for two weeks of rehearsal we were always asking logical questions about the plot. Finally, Goldman just said, 'It's a thriller, for godsake! You just have to believe it!' And that's when I decided it would only work if we treated it just as seriously as Chekhov."

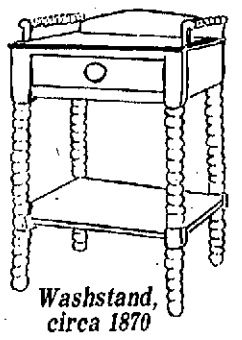

RUMORS PERSISTED during filming that there were problems with Dustin Hoffman. True or false? "Well, there were differences, but they don't show on the screen. Dustin is one of those actors who asks a million questions, and then wants take after take after take, and you just have to say no very firmly and call a halt.

"Laurence Olivier, on the other hand, is very precise, doesn't like to improvise, and just wants to

Open washstands predate plumbing

Washstand, circa 1870

Q. "Can you help us date our spool turned open washstand?" — Mr. and Mrs. F.S., Colorado Springs, Colo.

A. Spool turned furniture threaded its way into every nook and cranny between the 1840s and 1880s. Some of the earliest pieces were made by local cabinetmakers, but eventually spool turned pieces were mass-produced by American furniture factories. Small open washstands, often with spool turned towel bar ends, and legs, usually had a small drawer beneath the top area, and a lower shelf. This piece varied slightly, depending upon the maker, but all were designed to hold a bowl and pitcher, plus other bedroom necessities in the pre-plumbing era. Value guide: Mahogany, spool turned towel bar ends, circa 1870, $170.

Q. "Is it too late for me to think about starting a beer can collection?" — Bill, Monterey, Calif.

A. Positively not! Just start roaming around the local markets and you'll find plenty of collectible beer cans on tap. Look for the cone top types as they always arouse some spirited bidding. Many cans sell for less than $5 each, but there are scarcer examples retailing in excess of $100. With more collectors entering the field daily the beer can collecting hobby should never go flat! Value guide: Hapsburg, red, silver, blue, $10; Keeley, $9; Canadian Ace, 32 oz, $16; Burgermeister, $6; Fox Head, $11.

Q. "We are anxious to complete our set of Buffalo Pottery Christmas plates." — Mr. and Mrs. R.S., Bristol, Pa.

A. The famed Buffalo Pottery, established by the Larkin Company in 1901, is a familiar name to flea market shoppers. Locating their prized Buffalo trademark on a ceramic find indicates that you've corralled a winner. Their Christmas plates issued annually between 1950 and 1962, with the exception of 1961, rate as fortunate finds. For some unexplainable reason the 1962 plate is the rarest bringing a merry $150. All remaining years are listed for between $35 and $50, depending upon what the seller asks, and what the buyer is willing to pay.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Cruising Empress led to Queen Mary

IMAGINE WHAT you can get for a dollar in these inflation ridden days! Two nights aboard the Hyatt Hotel on the Queen Mary. That's what.

Of course, you have to go to a Chamber of Commerce mixer aboard the Long Beach Empress, buy a ticket and win the prize. That's just what my husband George Robeson did.

Last year at a fashion show, he won a purse but it didn't go with any of my clothes — or his either.

More than 300 members and guests of the Chamber enjoyed the sunset cocktail cruise courtesy of Long Beach Catalina Cruises. Chuck Slocombe and general manager Tim Mazer were our genial hosts.

Congratulations were in order for Chuck who started the annual whale watching cruises several years ago. Crowley Maritime Corp., the parent company of the Long Beach firm, just promoted him to director of public relations for the entire Southern California region. As if he wasn't already busy enough giving whale information to schools from San Diego to Sunland.

Party was billed as a costume affair, but only a few followed the theme. Chamber communications director George Economides put on a fierce looking black beard and a hillbilly hat for his duties as emcee but the beard got in the way of his drinking, eating and emceeing so he took it off.

Grand prize winner for the best costume was Lana Haines. The prize was two round trip tickets to the tiny but charming island of Catalina, courtesy of Catalina Airlines.

Lana was costumed as aviatrix Amelia Earhart. Recalling the real outcome of Amelia's last flight over the Pacific, Lana passed her prize to the Pregnant Bride, Debbie Doerr, and her reluctant groom, Helene Fredrickson.

There were some escaped prisoners aboard. Jan Withee and Colleen Sullivan were a pair. But Janet McLaughton was the only authentic escapee. She dragged around a ball and chain all evening. Also the stripes on her prison suit went in the right direction.

Alice Ellis came as a tiger, Karen Henry was stunning in a black turn-of-the-century gown complete with bustle. She said the gown and the ruffled umbrella she carried were genuine antiques. Faith Dudley also came as an old fashioned girl and Marjorie Bowie turned back the clock with her "Rosie the Riveter" costume.

Park litter both an eyesore, dangerous

the park, sometimes it piles up near empty containers.

ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS is not practical, Bell asserts, because violations are rarely witnessed by persons with the power to prosecute.

Park Department workers are also busy repairing damage done by vandals. Bell cites instances of golf greens being torn up, trees being uprooted and bottles broken over sprinkler heads in parks.

There is almost always damage in rest rooms and graffiti, much of it done with spray cans, is everywhere.

The problem is much the same on the beaches, according to John Adams, deputy public service director. It costs about $300,000 to keep them clean. He says 12 to 14 permanent workers are required for the job and the staff swells to 22 during the summer.

They empty up to 300 large trash containers, repair vandalism to comfort stations, clean graffiti off walls and regularly sweep the beaches with specially built rakes which remove refuse from the sand.

Richard Rieboldt of the Public Service Department keeps records on the amount of trash hauled from parks and beaches.

The monthly total of refuse picked up at the beaches rises and falls with weather conditions, he says. It's heaviest after a rain storm which washes trash down the rivers and storm drains to the sea where it is swept back upon the beach to become part of the massive litter problem.

In the parks, trash collections are heaviest after holidays or a special event like a concert or a large picnic.

Last year trash collections at the beach ranged from 153 tons to a high of 795 tons a month. In the parks it ranged from 390 to 795 tons, according to Rieboldt.

No one knows exactly how much of that refuse was deposited in a container and how much had to be picked up off the ground or raked out of the sand.

AND VICTORIES in the war against litter are just as difficult to measure. Ronald Whitely, assistant director of parks and beaches in Newport Beach, thinks they are doing some good in that city.

Their campaign began three years ago when the city council appointed a citizens advisory committee to combat litter.

Under a banner urging residents to "Can Your Trash," the committee launched an educational program in schools and service clubs. A litter awareness week was planned and brochures and a film were distributed.

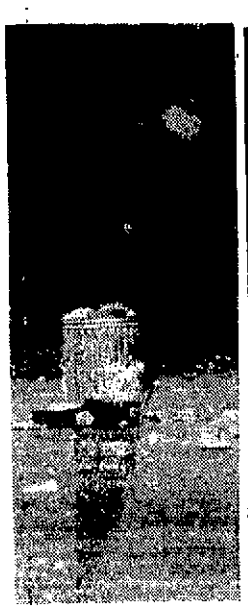

The council budgeted $5,000 for the program and workers 16 to 18 years of age were hired to walk the parks and beaches in the summer. They wear T-shirts with antilitter logos printed on them. Their job is not to pick up trash but to appeal to their peer group and change attitudes among those who use beaches and parks.

Whitely came across a study which reveals that 300,000 Americans are injured annually by litter. Broken glass and pull tabs do the damage in 86 per cent of the cases and the cost of treating those litter-related injuries is $3 million. More than 60 per cent of them occur in public recreation areas.

Getz, Bell, Whitely and others think an attempt to reduce litter and vandalism is a matter of aesthetics, a chance to save money and a question of safety. But most of all they feel it is a way of developing a sense of pride in the city's recreational areas.

Women are asking

'I am job hunting. Can you offer some tips on putting my best foot forward?'

By REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

You want to communicate. You need to explain things easily and quickly. You desire a personality that draws not repels.

If this sounds like a TV commercial for a breath mint, it's not. They are good ways to put your best self forward for a job or getting involved in a people-to-people project.

According to a trio of employer-relations experts, "The two keys to success are 'impress' and 'express.' Whether you have an oustanding job record or are just starting out, sincerity always impresses. Do your homework BEFORE the meeting. Have a list of previous jobs, recommendations, or scholastic record on the tip of your memory."

"Or," as one professional explained, "If you'll type some of your qualifications on a 3x5 card, along with your name, address and phone, it will show you're orderly and thorough. Even if the interviewer returns it, it will still make a visual impact."

Another "help" is expressing yourself. This ranges from answering questions readily and adequately to presenting a clean, attractive appearance.

The trio punctured a few taboos. "It's perfectly correct to ask questions concerning the job. You've a right to know basic facts — just don't turn the interview into 20 questions, or you'll turn off the employer."

Also, as Suzanne Rogers, seen on NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives," illustrates, it's wise to follow through with a phone call. It reminds them of you, gives you some information, and reinstates your interest in the position.

Do try to tell something about yourself that will register in the interviewer's memory. If you give a little personal background, or just ask directly for the job instead of being nonchalant, your chances are increased.

P.S. Would you like to increase your success potential? Send for our 12-page booklet which gives a test on how to rate your popularity, tips to improve your image as well as increase your word power, make first impressions good ones, and the ABC's of success. Enclose 50 cents (in coin) and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "increase your success potential," Independent, Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

VIEW OF Friends and Associates area of "The World of Franklin and Jefferson" exhibition. In the background is a reproduction of Paul Revere's snake, engraved for the masthead of a Massachusetts newspaper at the time of the War for Independence. Exhibit will be at Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Invitation: enter world of Franklin, Jefferson

In Paris, London, Warsaw, New York and Chicago, throngs of curious, fascinated viewers have gone to see "The World of Franklin and Jefferson."

This major exhibition officially launched the American Bicentennial celebration in Europe, mixing words, pictures, historical artifacts and personal mementos to breathe life into the review of 120 crucial years in the formation of the United States.

Now the exhibit will be available to Southern Californians, opening to the public at Los Angeles

arts

County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd., Nov. 9 and continuing through Jan. 2.

The historical exhibit-story begins with the birth of Benjamin Franklin in 1706; it ends with the death of Thomas Jefferson in 1926. Backgrounds of the men, books they wrote, their inventions, their special interests, their vision of the America that beckoned West are there for examination. Artifacts include model "thunder houses" made by Franklin to demonstrate virtues of his lightning rod, two silver tankards made by Paul Revere, pistols used by Alexander Hamilton in his famous 1804 duel with Aaron Burr; Hamilton was killed.

This exhibit, which our country sent abroad to reveal America's roots, was designed by the office of Charles and Ray Eames with cooperation of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. It was financed by a grant from the IBM Corporation. Admission is free.

The exhibition space is divided into four main sections. In the first, "Friends and Acquaintances," you meet not only George Washington, John Adams and Hamilton, but also Mercy Otis Warren, Charles Wilson Peale, Edmund Burke, the Marquis de Lafayette and others — a total of 34.

THE SECOND section is devoted to the lives of Franklin and Jefferson in terms of contrasts and similarities of backgrounds, activities and styles. Here is Franklin, a man of many parts, a printer, scientist, inventor. Jefferson's interests were farming, music, architecture. Both thought of themselves as philosophers, members of an international community, believing that the impartiality of sound knowledge could gradually free men everywhere from arbitrary power.

In the third section are major contributions both men made to three key documents of American history, documents which still are goals of political practice: the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

The final section concentrates on Jefferson's most significant presidential legacy: the plan for the westward expansion of the new nation. It traces events leading to the Louisiana Purchase and follows the Lewis and Clark exploration which Jefferson planned in detail to take the measure of the new land.

THIS IS HALLOWEEN and it will be marked in a special way, the Ethnic Mask Parade. Co-sponsored by the Craft and Folk Art Museum and Los Angeles County Depatment of Parks and Recreation, it has received official endorsement as a UNICEF Day activity. The parade will begin at 1 p.m. at La Jolla and Wilshire Boulevards with Rodney Allen Rippy, 1974 national children's chairman for UNICEF Day, serving as grand marshall. The procession will move east from La Jolla along Wilshire, past the Craft and Folk Art Museum and the La Brea Tar Pits, to Curson, then will disband at Hancock Park.

AT A PUBLIC meeting Oct. 21 in Saratoga, the California Arts Council awarded grants to five statewide organizations. The awards were made under a special emergency category in the Direct Funding Program to support statewide arts conferences. Recipients are: California Association of Dance Companies, $2,000; Bay Area Lawyers for the Arts/Los Angeles Advocates for the Arts, $3,000; California Confederation of the Arts, $5,000; Western Association of the Arts Museum, $1,300; and Alliance of California Arts Councils, $5,000.

Also, CAC is setting up guidelines for Special Projects. These are cultural projects that can't be pigeon-holed into other categories. CAC also is going to approve guidelines for Artists-in-Communities for statewide distribution by Nov. 10. This category includes artists in residence in community centers where they may practice their art and share their experiences with local audiences. Applications will be received for both programs between Nov. 15, Jan. 3.

LBSU can give new degree

The first degree in dance ever authorized for the California State University and Colleges has been approved for the department of dance at Long Beach State University.

Authorization from the chancellor of the 19-campus system for the program recognizes the extensive dance program offered by the department and the professional quality of the training it offers students. Established in 1970 by combining dance faculties from physical education and theater arts, the dance department now employs 17 full and part-time faculty members. This fall there are more than 828 students, more than four times the 1970 enrollment.

In its first showcase this season, the faculty of professional choreographers and dancers will give its fall dance concert Nov. 11 at 8:30 p.m. in the Studio Theater. Works will include modern, ballet, jazz and tap numbers. Additional performances will be given Nov. 12-13 at 8:30 p.m., Nov. 13-14 at 2:30 p.m. and Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m.

OPENING with "Encounters," a pre-classic suite in the modern idiom choreographed by Gloria Newman, the audience will be introduced to the forms and manners of the period of the allemande, courante, bourree, saraband and gigue performed by students from the repertoire class.

A concert premiere, "To Create the Burning Sweat of Ritual Fires" is a solo choreographed and danced by Rebecca Bobele. Ms Bobele was a member of the Bella Lewitzky Dance Company from 1968-72. She has worked in television with Donald McKayle and Jaime Rogers.

In the spectrum of modern dance, Karen Mullin will dance "B.B.' Love, Duke" to a voice-rag-blues sound, choreographed by Larry Clark, member of the Viola Farber Company. Created for and danced only by Ms. Mullin, the dance was premiered at Brooklyn College, New York, in 1974 and later was performed in New Orleans.

Gloria Ann Bowen will dance the "Prelude and Mazurka" from "Les Sylphides," choreographed by the legendary Michel Fokine. This romantic ballet first was performed in 1832.

PAT FINOT has created a new multi-media work for eight student dancers, two musicians and one photographer. It is a contemporary work inspired by the lights of night places. An artistic director and principal choreographer for The Moving Co., Ms. Finot has been a guest artist throughout California and received a National Endowment for the Arts grant for choreography in 1973.

"A Fifth of Beethoven," one of two dances representing the jazz style of Carlton Johnson, will be performed by LBSU students. Johnson is in his fifth season with the Carol Burnett Show and has worked in specials of Carol Channing, Danny Thomas, Sammy Davis Jr., Cher, and Danny Kaye.

Ted Howard, half of the team of "Ted and Larry Howard," will bring to the concert a reminder of the golden age of tap dancing with a line of 10 students and himself.

General admission is $3 for Thursday, Sunday and matinees, $3.50 for Friday and Saturday. Ticket information is available at the fine arts ticket office.

JOSE ITURBI

Iturbi concert date Nov. 16

Jose Iturbi, noted pianist, will open the 1976-77 Piano Series at Ambassador Auditorium, 300 W. Green St. Pasadena.

The performance Tuesday, Nov. 16, at 8:30 p.m., will be the world-renowned pianist and conductor's first public appearance in the Southern California area in nearly a decade. He is including this Ambassador appearance on a concert tour which includes performances in Mexico City, New York City, Spain, France and elsewhere.

Last season, Iturbi celebrated his 80th birthday in New York with a highly successful gala concert in which he performed four piano concertos as soloist and as conductor. The accompanying ensemble at Avery Fisher Hall was the Rochester Philharmonic which he led as permanent conductor and music director from 1935 to 1943.

The New York Times heralded the event as "an occasion that was impressive in so many respects and that honored a man who in his long life has given pleasure to many."

IN ADDITION to many concerts as both conductor and piano soloist, Iturbi played the first piano recital given in the new Lincoln Center concert hall, then known as Philharmonic Hall, in 1962. He will be the first to do so when the newly reconstructed hall, now called Avery Fisher Hall, is reopened this fall.

Iturbi was the first classical artist to break all classical recording sales and reach a total of more than a million copies on two occasions. His first gold one-millionth pressing in 1950 was for his "Polonaise in A-flat" by Chopin. The second was in 1953 for his "Clair de Lune" by Debussy.

Iturbi was heard in Long Beach in 1971; in 1966, he performed at Royce Hall, UCLA.

General admission is $2.50.

On Nov. 7, the Brass Ensemble and Forty-Niner Chorus of LBSU will present a joint program of musical favorites in Covenant Presbyterian Church, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue, at 4 p.m. Gordon Norman and Edgar Thompson will conduct. 'The King and I' sets stage for LBCLO season

BY ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

On the eve of opening its 27th season, Long Beach Civic Light Opera is making progress by looking back.

So said Harvey Waggoner, LBCLO general manager, as he fielded last minute details for "The King and I" which opens Friday to run Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. through Nov. 21 at Jordan Theater, 6500 Atlantic Ave.

Doug Lance plays the dominating role of the King; Kathy Davis is his dauntless equal as Anna. Other leading roles are filled by Kathryn Lowe as Lady Thiang, Kevin Welch as Louis, Roberta Wolf as Tuptim, Steve Lozano as Lun Tha, Tom Hillary as the Kralahome and Tavio Hurtado as Prince Chulalongkorn.

This light opera classic by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II unfolds the tale of the tempestous king of Siam and his attempts to westernize his kingdom with the aid of the beautiful, headstrong English schoolteacher, Anna.

FROM THE OPENING 'I Whistle a Happy Tune," through such numbers as "Hello, Young Lovers," the haunting "We Kiss in a Shadow," the lilting "Shall We Dance?" and the exotic, hilarious "Small House of Uncle Thomas" with its enchanting ballet, the story moves musically and dramatically with humor and sorrow to its emotional climax.

Why "The King and I," that veteran, to open the season?

Why two other productions of the same genre to complete this season: "Fiddler on the Roof" March 4 through 20 and "Oklahoma!" June 3 through 19?

Their selection is not by chance; it is the very heart of the philosophy which guides LBCLO this year.

"We're moving back to old standards," explained Waggoner, "and our season ticket sales already are up from 42,000 to 56,000.

"Five years ago we moved to more contemporary shows to add a young audience to our loyal subscribers."

TO ONE LOOKING for truly contemporary work, the past seasons scarcely seem daring. Example: 1969-70, "Flower Drum Song," "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," and "110 in the Shade." 1970-71 brought "Mame," "Music Man" and "Man of La Mancha."

In 1972-73 the innovation was "Promises, Promises;" in 73-73, "Applause;" in 74-75 there were two newer shows in the season, "Cabaret" and "Company;" and in the season just past, 75-76, "Jesus Christ, Superstar" led off, followed by "Most Happy Fella" and "Sweet Charity."

"I told the selection committee and the board of directors five years ago that I thought they were making a mistake in programming," Waggoner said. "The decrease in our attendance bears me out.

"WE HAVE a great president this year. Bill (William C. Maas, executive with Avery Products, International) will be a tremendous partner for me. He has a board that will be extremely active. Alan Ide, president of Metropolitan Stevedore Company, is heading a major effort to increase the number of businesses and corporations giving their support. Mrs. Harry Hastain, heading the Women's Guild, has stimulated interest in the company and increased ticket sales.

"Next year we move to Pacific Terrace theater — we look with great eagerness toward that and we want to be in a strong position, professionally and financially, when that time arrives.

"We have every expectation of continuing as an active and helpful participant in the Public Corporation for the Arts; CLO is on its professional resources committee."

ONE THING THAT has troubled Waggoner and others in LBCLO is the trend away from the original concept of the organization. First called Singers Workshop, the group was conceived as a musical theater workshop to give local, non-professional performers a chance to hone their talents, to learn and display theater crafts.

Through the years, the company focused more and more on professionalism and, beginning with "Applause," has used only union performers in leading roles.

Although the quality of productions was high, many in the CLO Association regretted the fact that non-Equity people couldn't hope for major parts.

At the end of the just completed 1975-76 season, Waggoner announced that this year, no union personnel would be employed. This was largely a financial necessity, but many members rejoiced at the return to the open-audition, non-union policy.

When the company moves to Pacific Terrace, it again will deal with unions. But there is great determination to retain the workshop aspect.

Dr. Sam and Meredith Meals recently were delegated by the executive committee to report on the Singers Workshop project.

THEY SAY, in part, "LBCLO traces its ancestry to an organization known as The Singers Workshop. These hardy pioneers were active in all phases of musical theater — costuming, design and construction of scenery and, of course, singing, acting and dancing.

"Through the years many changes have taken place in the name of progress, the majority (but not all) for the better.

"Our shows have achieved an ever increasing degree of professionalism of which we are all proud. Unfortunately, in the process, we have sacrificed much of the charm of amateurism — amateurism in its finest sense."

Looking ahead to the move to Pacific Terrace and its attendant union policy, the report continues, "LBCLO has long been acclaimed the leader in community musical theater in California, perhaps in the nation. This has been due not only to the quality of our productions, but to our serving as a place where young performers can learn and develop their particular skills and talents.

"We must not allow this element of our success to die for any reason."

"A WORKSHOP, or laboratory, would accomplish this end.

"The logical place to house such a project would be in the present CLO facility on Fourth Street. This would necessitate purchase of the property which would continue to serve as CLO offices and rehearsal hall. In addition it would provide space for classrooms, where all disciplines of musical theater could be learned — singing, dancing, acting, scenery design, lighting, etc."

"IN GOING BACK to old standards for this season, and probably for the future, we are gaining support," Waggoner said. "The quality of this first performance of the season in acting, scenery, music — in every way — is as good as any we've ever done."

As an example of the community's reaction to its season, Waggoner offered a letter.

It began: "Dear Friends — Bless you!! Bless you!!! For scheduling these three 'goodies' as your productions for next season!! I am so pleased that I shall again become a member — and this time a sponsor!

"I cancelled my membership last year in protest to some of the numbers included in the previous year's productions...."

The letter was signed by Florence E. Farrand, immediate past president of California Retired Teachers Association.

It's indicative, Waggoner believes, of the greater response that will come to Long Beach Civic Light Opera's new direction toward old ways.

IT HEMS, BASTES, MEASURES BUTTONS AND MAKES BUTTONHOLES JUST AS IF IT HAD HANDS.

Model 920

The trouble with a lot of sewing machines is they don't do a lot of work. You have to baste by hand. Hem by hand. Make buttonholes by hand. Sew hard-to-reach places by hand. And on and on.

The Futura* II machine by Singer is different.

It was designed to do the handwork for you. It blindstitches to give you invisible hems. It even speed bastes—fast and neat—so you don't have to.

It has an exclusive buttonholer that actually measures your button and makes a buttonhole to fit it—all in one step.

What's more, it also has our exclusive Flip and Sew* two-way sewing surface. A flat surface for 80% of your sewing jobs that snaps into a tubular surface for the other 20%. Like cuffs and pants and sleeves and neck seams.

There's even our push-button bobbin winder that winds in the machine right from the needle. You don't touch it.

As a matter of fact, there are so many extraordinary features on the Futura II machine by Singer, you're not just getting a sewing machine. You're getting an extra pair of hands. Come to Singer and try it for yourself.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Salmonella is food poison culprit

Food poisoning still causes more than two million Americans to fall ill each year, reports the American Medical Association.

The foremost food hazard continues to be poisoning by microbes, says Philip L. White, Sc. D., secretary of the AMA's Council on Foods and Nutrition.

And the major cause of food-borne illness is faulty food handling.

A common offender in food poisoning is an organism known as salmonella, found mostly in raw meats, raw poultry, eggs and dairy products. These organisms can produce headache, vomiting, diarrhea, stomach cramps and fever. The condition is seldom fatal but can be serious for infants, the elderly and the chronically ill.

Recommended precautions to help avoid salmonella poisoning:

—Use hot, soapy water to wash hands, utensils and cutting boards that have been in contact with raw meats, poultry, eggs and pastry mixes.

—Do not buy foods stored above the frostline in store freezers.

—Wash raw food thoroughly.

—Refrigerate all perishables promptly. Do not leave groceries in the car while running other errands.

—Do not thaw meats at room temperature.

—Do not stuff poultry until just prior to cooking.

—Use only clean eggs, without shell cracks, in foods not thoroughly cooked. Better still, avoid raw eggs.

—Refrigerate leftovers promptly.

—Wash poultry and the surface of raw beef to reduce the number of organisms.

—Always follow label instructions for storing and preparing packaged and frozen foods.

A dose of salt

A dose of "health salts" each morning may help ward off heart attacks, particularly in soft-water areas.

According to Drs. John Bradshaw and Geoffrey Dean of the Irish Medico-Social Board, the magnesium in the salts may help the chronic magnesium deficiency often seen in such areas.

Heart disease and high blood pressure are more common in soft-water areas, the report says.

The doctors, reporing in the Practitioner, a British medical journal, say chronic magnesium deficiency is just as significant and can lead to heart trouble. Hardness of water is linked to magnesium and calcium deposits.

Persons who die of heart attack tend to have fewer magnesium concentrations in the heart muscle than those who die of other causes.

A sumry of the report appears in the Medical Post.

Easy anesthetic

An anesthetic patch with 30 per cent lidocaine cream applied to intact skin produces complete skin anesthesia for minor operations.

The patch also can be used for other painful procedures such as skin testing for allergies, according to the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

Ban Brazil nuts

Brazil nuts, said to contain a poisonous substance, have been banned in Austria.

Government officials are confiscating Brazil nuts throughout the country, reports Medical Tribune, a newspaper for doctors.

The move was made in an attempt to protect the population from aflatoxin, a poisonous substance sometimes found in the nuts.

Aflatoxin, produced by a mold, particularly in products coming from the tropics, also has cancer-causing properties.

IN-SIGHTS

School cracks down on teen smokers

DEAR DR. MENNINGER,

My 14-year-old daughter, Susan, loves school. The last few weeks of summer, she couldn't wait to get back to classes. She's in the eighth grade in a junior high school where they have been having quite a bit of trouble with teen-agers smoking.

This year, the school decided to crack down on the problem, and they have instituted some harsh penalties. The first time a student is caught smoking at school, he or she is given a warning, and the parents are called. The second time, the student is suspended for three days.

dr. walt menninger

Today, I got a call from the principal. He caught Susan smoking, and this was the warning. She says that this was a fluke; she was just taking a drag on a friend's cigarette.

At this point, my wife and I don't know what to do. Even though we both smoke, we don't think that Susan ought to be doing so at her age. I don't know whether to let it pass or to really come down hard on her and bawl her out. What would you suggest? Sincerely, D. M.

DEAR D. M.,

An increasing number of teen-agers are smoking. A national survey in 1971 found 15 per cent of young people smoking.

The latest survey in 1974 reported one out of four (25 per cent) young people were now smoking. This compares to a fairly constant report of about 40 per cent of adults who smoke (39 per cent in 1971, 41 per cent in 1974).

Again, the marked increase is in younger age groups. In 1971, only 5 per cent of the 12-13 year olds were smoking; now that's up to 13 per cent. The 1974 survey found 25 per cent of the 14-15 year olds were smoking and 38 per cent of the 16-17 year olds were smoking. So Susan has a good deal of company.

Since the incidence of smoking in teen-agers is so prevalent, I'm not sure you'll get the results you want by either extreme of letting it pass or bawling her out. Rather, I would suggest sitting down and discussing the situation with her in a straightforward manner, touching on the issue of smoking and its relationship to staying in school.

MANY TIMES we are faced with rules with which we may disagree. Your daughter and her friends may disagree with the school rules about smoking, but as long as they exist, they are part of her "reality." And she must consider the "cost" of challenging that reality. Is she willing to pay the price of suspension from the school she so enjoys in order to smoke?

Most adolescents think primarily in terms of here and now; they often fail to consider the future consequences of their actions. Your responsibility is to help Susan appreciate those potential consequences, and to then trust her ability to judge the best course of action.

Of course, some teen-agers challenge rules as a way to prove they are independent and can do their own thing. The task of the parent is to help the teen-agers find a way to do his or her own thing without compromising the future.

In the case of smoking, the future consequences also include the high probability of health problems over the long run, particularly when one starts smoking at an early age and continues it on a regular basis.

However, as long as you and your wife smoke, you present a model with which your daughter may wish to identify. Teen-agers do not always appreciate advice of "Do as I say, not as I do."

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Tips when the party's on you

DEAR MR. SMITH: According to current Internal Revenue Service rules, how much must one spend for business entertainment expenses before a receipt for those expenses is needed? I keep a daily log of

jacob smith

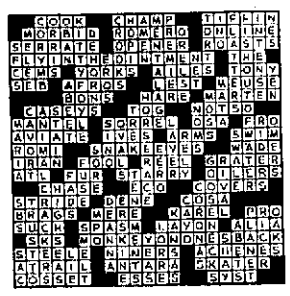

such expenses (who, what, where and the purpose). Is my lunch or dinner that is included on entertainment occasions also deductible from gross income? — L. P.J.

Your contemporaneously-prepared daily log is extremely important. In addition, obtain a paid bill or receipt for any single expenditure of $25 or more. When you entertain for business, it is not required that you reduce your deductible expense by the cost of your own meal.

DEAR MR. SMITH: As a self-employed golf pro I purchased a 10-year medical policy with the condition that if no claims were made I would receive 80 per cent of the premiums back. The 10-year period is almost up and the insurance company is in financial difficulties. They offered me 15 per cent of what is due me instead of the 80 per cent as outlined in the policy. How can I take this $5,000 loss on my 1976 tax return? — J. F.

I think you will first have to determine whether all the premiums you paid over the 10-year period have been deducted in your tax returns. If so, then the 15 per cent refund you receive will either be taxable income or it will decrease your current-year medical expense. There would then be no deduction for any financial loss. However, if all or any part of the premiums were not deducted, then you have a non-business bad debt (the same as a short-term capital loss) deduction in proportion to your non-deducted premiums.

ROY ROBERTS
Fancy champagne brunch at Rascals

NEARLY EVERYONE feels like a rascal at times. After my Uncle Louie has a glass of champagne he gets pretty frisky. Sometimes he's tricky and mischievous even when he hasn't had a drink.

Which reminds me that Rascals, Long Beach's swank new restaurant at 4401 Atlantic Ave., has a nostalgia theme that dates back to the Hollywood movie era of the 1920s, '30s and '40s. Remember such classic rascals as Errol Flynn, Rudolph Valentino, W. C. Fields and Theda Bara, the vamp? Well, that's what Rascals restaurant is all about. It's the kind of place where you can have a rascally good time, dining, drinking and dancing.

Rascals is also for those who don't feel like devilish rascals. It's a beautiful place to take your family and small children. Especially this morning when Rascals serves its delectable champagne brunch. That brunch — with many colorful selections, hot and cold — is served every Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The brunch includes a glass of sparkling champagne and selections of fresh fruit and salads from the salad bar. Currently in season are Crenshaw melon, honeydew melon and watermelon. The salad bar also offers such fruits as pineapple and cherries. The entrees are served by waitresses or waiters costumed as such personalities as Mae West, Groucho Marx, Charlie Chaplin or perhaps Fanny Brice, or Elizabeth Taylor. The entrees, served with hot fresh blueberry muffins range from cheeze blintzes, $2.95, to creole or mushroom omelets, $3.75; smoked Nova Scotia salmon with eggs, $3.95, and eggs Benedict, $4.25. There are also other selections.

Rascals (formerly Welch's) is a stunningly beautiful restaurant and discotheque owned by Roy Roberts and W. C. Bob Wills. Roy was a founder of Occidental Petroleum and former head of Mutual Broadcasting. Bob is president of Three Chefs Corp. Their company vice presidents, who helped create Rascals, are Bill Shepard and Ken Rapley. Its new manager is Dave Reichley.

Rascals, which appeals to people of all ages, has a beautiful disco with a huge collection of old and new records. The music doesn't intrude into the dining areas. There's disco dancing during the Sunday brunch, during the daily luncheons and all night long.

Rascals' big exotic cocktails are half-price Mondays and Tuesdays from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. and Wednesdays from 9 to 11 p.m. On Mondays and Tuesdays, the prime rib, a large juicy tender slice, is $6.95. It's normally $8.95. Other premium entrees for dinner range from the top sirloin steak, $6.95, to flaming steak Diane, $9.75; king crab, $7.45, and skewered steak pieces, $6.95. Each comes with all you wish from the soup-salad bar.

THE POPULARITY of Sunday brunches has become a phenomenon in Southern California restaurants.

Another one that this department highly recommends is served every Sunday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Currie's Santa Fe, long a highway landmark at 1735 W. Pacific Coast Highway, just west of Santa Fe Avenue. New owners Lynn Huff and Bill Newbury don't include champagne with their deluxe, "sitdown" brunch, but they do include just about everything else. The starter is chilled orange, grapefruit or tomato juice. The entree plate is as attractive as a scene in Technicolor, including wedges of fresh cantaloupe, honeydew melon and watermelon plus two eggs (any style), potatoes O'Brien, Irish-style, or hominy; ham, bacon, sausage or beef patty.

Also included are hot homemade cinammon rolls, biscuits with country gravy and a generous condiment platter containing wild honey, strawberry jam, apple butter, grape jelly, yogurt, whipped butter and cream cheese. The brunch is $2.99 for adults; $1.99 for youngsters.

Open every day for luncheons, dinners and banquets for groups from 35 to 75, Currie's has been revitalized by Lynn and Bill. Their new No. 1 chef is a talented, versatile woman, Ann Duchak, whose daughter, Pat Daniels, is hostess. Luncheon is Mondays through Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. If a guest wishes luncheon on Sunday instead of brunch, it will be served cheerfully from Currie's new luncheon menu.

Monday through Friday, Currie's features a special luncheon for $2.95 with tossed green salad or soup du jour and other items. Here's the sked: Mondays, a surprise entree; Tuesdays, lamb shanks; Wednesdays, chicken-fried steak with country gravy; Thursdays, ham with limas; Fridays, corned beef and cabbage. A new seafood entree served every day at luncheon is scalone, a patty combining scallops and abalone. It's $2.95 and delectable. Cocktails are at reduced prices during the happy hour, 3 to 7 p.m.

Decorated in the desert style of New Mexico, Currie's attracts many sports minded people for its Monday night TV fooball games when the special is a hot dog with beer for $1. When the Rams play in Los Angeles on Sundays, Currie's arranges for a 45-passenger bus to transport fans from the restaurant to the Coliseum.

At dinner every night, Currie's emphasizes its new Chef's Choice for $3.50, offering fried chicken with country gravy and whipped potatoes or steak tidbits with a sauce en casserole plus rice. Included are green salad or soup and hot bread. Also featured are the entrees Currie's has made famous since the 1940s — the big beautiful filet mignon au jus, prime rib au jus, lobster thermidor, broiled sanddabs, braised beef shortribs, roast turkey, and other steaks, including the Currie's special. Those dinners are $4.95 to $7.95.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Finds his reward rebuilding lives

mildred flanary

As director of the Salvation Army Men's Social Service Center, today's chef of the week, Capt. Charles Strickland, is carrying on in exemplary style the important work started in 1865 by the late William Booth, founder of the Army.

Strickland is beginning his sixth year at the Long Beach center, where there are 90 full-time employees. Their salaries are taken from the yearly operating budget of $840,000. Through the support of public donations of clothing, furniture and other household items, the Army operates nine thrift stores — providing the public an opportunity to buy items at reduced rates.

Strickland says, "Of all the services in which we are involved, I find working with men who need help and lodging to be most rewarding."

The "clients" are men, mostly in their mid-40s, who live in the large three-story building constructed in 1924. They men are accepted as residents when they agree to work on personal problems, such as the treatable handicaps of emotional disability or alcoholism.

Most men stay about six weeks, obtaining therapy skills to prepare for reentry into society.

"The men spend some time with religious matters," said Strickland. "We try to direct them to a personal relationship with God. We have a chapel program five days a week." The men receive a cash stipend of $5 to $18 a week, depending on their progress in therapy.

STRICKLAND WAS BORN in New Bern, N.C., and following graduation from high school there, entered the U.S. Air Force and served for four years. It was while in the service in Arizona that he met his wife, April, who shared his special interest. Following discharge, both enrolled in the Salvation Army School for Officers Training. They were commissioned (ordained) as officers in June, 1965.

Areas of service have included Ogden, Utah; Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Santa Barbara and Hawaii.

In the interim, Strickland has graduated from Santa Barbara City College with an A.A. Degree. He says, "If all goes as planned, I will receive my B.S. in business administration from Long Beach State University in December."

The Stricklands have two sons and a daughter, all students at Long Beach Brethren School. Craig is 11, Derek, 5, and Linnea, 9. When time permits, the family enjoys bowling, swimming and camping.

April says, "Charles has about given up on reminding me to shut the cupboard doors; and NOT to refrigerate the peanut butter. There was a time when he considered a peanut butter sandwich a 'must' on his menu. He's changed now to mashed banana sandwiches, because the peanut butter wouldn't spread."

Today, he and April have combined their cooking talents on a Butter pineapple cake, a dessert for a typical Southern supper of pork chops, collard greens, sweet potatoes, hush puppies, and a salad of sliced tomatoes and pickled cucumbers. We recommend it for any menu!

BUTTER PINEAPPLE CAKE

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
¾ cup milk
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream sugar and butter. Add eggs and beat thoroughly. Sift flour, measure and sift with baking powder and salt. Add alternately with milk to creamed sugar and butter. Beat thoroughly. Add vanilla.

Divide and pour into four well oiled cake pans. Bake at 375 degrees about 15 to 20 minutes. COOL.

TOPPING

1 20-ounce can crushed pineapple
1 5-ounce can evaporated milk
1 tablespoon sugar (may be omitted, if desired)

Mix pineapple with juice, milk and sugar. Chill for 2 to 3 hours. Chilling thickens mixture. Spoon mixture between each layer and on tops of layers. Slice and serve.

Serving suggestions:

After final layer has been covered with the pineapple mixture, sprinkle with shredded coconut. Decorate with cherries and/or bananas.

Topping can be used on your own favorite butter or yellow cake. Cake can also be baked in an oblong cake pan.

Dear Mr. Corn:
Rubber bridge, both vulnerable, 60 on score, what is the best opening with:

In Bushes, Dayton

♠A K 7 10/31-A
♥A K 8
♦A K 10 7
♣K J 9

Answer: The standard opening bid with a balanced hand of 25-26 points is three no-trump and I see no reason not to make that bid. For tactical reasons one might bid only one no-trump in hopes of luring an aggressive opponent into a trap.

However, in my opinion, that action will miss more slams than it will catch opponents who bid on nothing.

Dear Mr. Corn:
Please settle this controversy. Does it take seven points or eight points to make a positive response to a strong two bid? Some texts specify eight points, some of my partners say only seven.

Fine Lines, Graham, Tex.

Answer: What controversy? On some hands it's seven; on others maybe it's eight. Let me put it another way. Suppose partner opens two spades and you hold the ace of hearts and the king of spades.

Is that really only seven points? On the other hand, suppose you hold a singleton spade and eight scattered points in queens and jacks. Is that really eight points?

Point count is only a guide in bidding. Each hand must be evaluated, using the point count as a guide, and tempered by the actual bidding that influences the assessment of the value of specific cards.

Dear Mr. Corn:
What happens at a tournament if a player accidentally overhears someone else's results on a hand he is yet to play?

Sneak Previews, Chicago

Answer: The player should report this fact to the tournament director who will take the appropriate action.

At the New England Knockouts, one player overheard the result involving the very last hand. He reported this to the director and a substitute board was played. In this case, virtue was truly rewarded.

The result overheard would have produced a tied slam and a loss by three IMPS. The substitute board netted a gain of six IMPS for a close three IMP win!

Dear Mr. Corn:
What would you bid with this hand after partner bids one club?

Caught It, San Mateo, Calif.

Answer: I would bid two clubs. One spade is a possibility but very risky. If one bids one spade one may never be able to support clubs. A pass is also possible but I prefer to raise while the stakes are not too high.

♣Q 10 8 6 3

Dear Mr. Corn:
I open one club and partner jumps to four spades. What type of hand does he promise?

Broken Promises, Detroit

Answer: A long spade suit and a prayer that he can make four spades opposite a normal opening bid. The jump to game does deny interest in slam contracts.

Time doesn't dim validity of her advice

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from HEAVY-HEARTED DAD whose pregnant daughter wasn't even through eighth grade, I had to write. This is for all teen-age girls whose boyfriends try to pressure them into going all the way:

I'm 16 and my boyfriend is 18. Sure, we go parking and make out, but when he mentions fourth base, I set him straight right away.

My feeling is this: We have our whole lives ahead of us, so why take a chance on ruining it when we're young?

If your boyfriend says, "If you love me, you'll prove it by going all the way," tell him to get lost. Keep a level head and don't ever go so far you can't turn back. It's not worth it. Sign me ... A FIRM "NO"

DEAR FIRM: Congratulations! Fifteen years ago I wrote a book, "DEAR TEEN-AGER," but the chapter "Should I Prove My Love?" is still sound advice for teen-agers. And here it is:

Girls need to "prove their love" through illicit sex relations like a moose needs a hat rack.

Why not "prove your love" by sticking your head in the oven and turning on the gas? Or playing leap-frog out in the traffic? It's about as safe.

Clear the cobwebs out of your head: Any fellow who asks you to 'prove your love' is trying to take you for the biggest, most gullible fool who ever walked. That proving bit is one of the oldest and rottenest lines ever invented!

Does HE love YOU? It doesn't sound like it. Someone who loves you wants whatever is best for you. But now figure it out. He wants you to:

Commit an immoral act ...
Surrender your virtue ...
Throw away your self-respect ...
Risk the loss of your precious reputation ...
And risk getting into trouble ...

Does that sound as though he wants what's best for you? This is the laugh of the century. He wants what's best for HIM ... he wants a thrill he can brag about at your expense.

Love? Who's kidding whom! A boy who loves a girl would sooner cut off his right arm than hurt her. If you want my opinion, this self-serving so-and-so has already proved that he DOESN'T love you.

The predictable aftermath of "proof" of this kind always finds Don Juan tiring of his sport. That's when he drops YOU, picks up his line and goes casting elsewhere for bigger and equally silly fish.

At times, still another version of this modern tragedy occurs, as indicated by this letter I once received:

DEAR ABBY: I went steady for seven months with a boy I thought was the most wonderful person in the world. I thought I'd always stay decent. After a while we weren't satisfied with just kissing.

He asked me to prove my love. I thought as long as we planned to be married in a few years, what would it matter?

I gave in to him, Abby, and I found out it mattered a lot. He lost all respect for me. He started going with other girls. He even talked about me to other boys.

Please print this for all the girls to see. Maybe it will help someone who is tempted to prove her love like I did. — SORRY NOW

If he loves you, let HIM prove his love — by marching you to the altar!

Keeping up with scene in Mexico

Mexico City

Mexico West says if you fly into Mexico from a Mexican border airport, you will pay the same fare as before in pesos. Only now your dollar gets you 25 pesos. Double the old 12.50, thanks to another devaluation last week.

Not so if you fly from

stan delaplane

international airports. Fares there are worked out in U.S. dollars. Mexico West therefore figures if you fly to La Paz in Baja California from Los Angeles, you'll pay something around $150.

But if you cross the border and take the plane from Tijuana — paying in pesos — you get the ride for $76.

Other savings changing dollars into the new devalued peso: Gasoline unleaded was 92 cents, now about half that. Car ferry service between Baja and Puerto Vallarta or Mazatlan is down.

Toll road charges down. Car insurance rates are NOT down. Car parts are imported to Mexico and are bought at dollar prices.

MEXICO WEST is a lively 12-pager covering tourist travel, buying, roads, fishing, and so on. Mainly about Baja California. But they reach out to the Mexican West Coast wherever the car ferries run. Baja Trail Publications, Box 15444, Santa Ana, CA. 92705, one year $5, every other month.

Editor's note:

The two-year-old bimonthly publication is edited by Elmar Baxter, director of public relations for the Port of Long Beach and a Baja aficionado of long standing. Among his Mexican credentials is co-authorship with Tom Miller of the "Baja Book," a definitive touring guide of the peninsula, with maps made from authorized National Aeronautics and Space Administration satellite photographs.

The dollar begins to climb again in the world market. (Or other currencies are dropping.) Anyway, your dollar buys more pounds, francs, lire at the bank.

THE LONDON cab ride that cost you $2.40 last year should be around $1.65 today. And the French franc is running close to five for the dollar. I was only getting four to the dollar a couple of years ago.

But French prices still startle the most traveled Americans. Ed Fleishell, just back from a business trip that took him through a lot of wine and restaurant country says: "I figure it cost $100 a day for two of us just for restaurants."

He said: "And I don't mean expensive, three-star places either. Matter of fact, I think the one-star and two-star restaurants give you better food and service.

"MICHELIN three-star restaurants have it made. As soon as they get three stars, EVERYBODY goes there. You, a Frenchman, have a good customer coming from the States. You take him to a three-star restaurant."

"Now the one-star is trying for two stars. And the two-star is like Avis. Trying harder — for the third star."

FLEISHELL told me: "I ordered a bottle of Chateauneauf du Pape and it came to $14. Now I sell that wine at Le Club for $10. This man just walks down the road and buys it from the winery, right? I've paid shipping charges, importers profits, taxes and I make money at $10."

"So I said this to the owner and he told me: 'M'sieu, in your American restaurants, the customer sits before dinner and consumes many expensive martinis, Scotches.

'The Frenchman may have a tiny aperitif before dinner. But he does not drink $20 worth of gin and vermouth. Therefore, you make money on gin. We must make our money on wine.'"

INCIDENTALLY, Le Club is the only first-class restaurant on snobby Nob Hill where the frosty, dry martini still costs only $1.50. I am cutting out places where the tab shows martinis at $2.50 to $3.

The $3 martini is about standard in France now.

PALM Springs offers diversions by day and night.

GAL-IVANTING

Season springs anew

Like a sleeping princess, Palm Springs slumbers through its long hot summer awaiting the kiss of an autumn knight. Then, the desert resort springs to life for another season.

Our little princess is maturing. She is becoming a queen. No longer is Palm Springs a culturally vacuous place devoted solely to poolside lizards and fun-in-the-sun.

Theater, for instance. Last year when the impressive Desert Museum opened its multi-million dollar doors, its old location was taken over by the performing arts. The Palm Springs Theater opened its pilot season then with little fanfare, but reviews it garnered were the envy of theatrical entrepeneurs in Los Angeles.

THIS SEASON, with four major productions featuring world-renowned stars, theater in Palm Springs will rank with any in the West.

Despite its growth, Palm Springs retains a low architectural profile. With fragrant air, soaring snow-capped mountains and palm-studded oases, the natural ecological balance is as much a part of desert alchemy as suntanned faces hobnobbing in street cafes and nighttime bistros.

The first thing I do on my weekend arrivals is pick up a copy of Key Magazine to find out what is going on. It is available free at the airport or from most hotels, restaurants and shops in town.

Each October's seasonal "opening night" provides a moveable feast of entertainment as suspenseful as the TV network's annual turnover. Some bistros barely make it through one season. Others catch on and stay around forever.

AMONG THE latter is Melvyn's charming Ingleside Inn which opened last year. Its popularity is reinforced by George Allardice and Russ Haddock, the desert's favorite troubadour and accompanist, who appear to be ensconced in the lounge quite permanently.

Ace Baldwin at Perrinas piano bar is another "establishment." Perrina's calm linguine is an experience nobody should miss. Order it with a salad and a bottle of wine.

For Sunday night, I'll take Bob Corwin on the piano at Sorrentino's seafood house. This highly-trained musician does as well with classics as he does with pop.

For the disco set, a new one called the Bomba

choral pepper

has opened in the Trinidad. The hotel and restaurant has a new owner, Ken Hole from Vancouver. It now is redecorated in typical West Indies fashion.

The menu features flaming dishes with unusual salads and a tropical fruit bar for deserts. Entertainment is in the bar until 10 PM, when the disco opens in the dining room.

As a part-time resident of Palm Springs, the above are my own favorite spots; but on each visit my list grows. Yours will, too.

Grove Garden

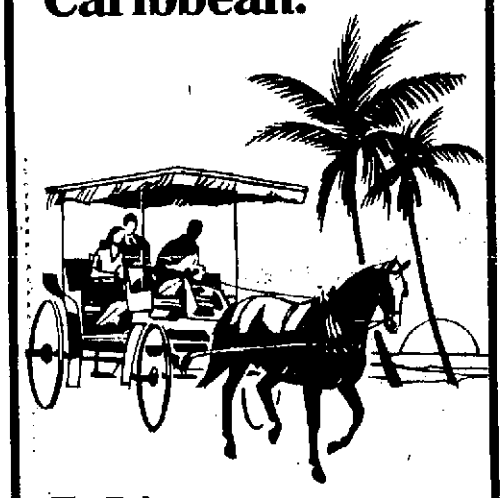

Hundreds of flowers, plants, shrubs and other greenery from around the hemisphere comprise the Garden of the Groves in Freeport, Bahamas.

The admission-free beauty spot also has three waterfalls, a man-made pond and a re-creation of a famous European chapel for meditation.

AUTUMN LEAVES GRACE VIRGINIA'S CAPITOL IN RICHMOND

BEST OF BICENTENNIAL

Where it all began

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

RICHMOND, Virginia — It's not too late in the year to blaze a Bicentennial trail through the flaming forests of this state where American history began. New England's Indian summer is drawing to a close, but Virginia's fall foliage is in full bloom and the major historical attractions are open all year long.

You get both in a single glance here in the capital city, where the Grecian-styled Capitol building designed by Thomas Jefferson crowns a central hilltop park, surrounded at this season by a carefully-tended landscape of green, red and gold. Variegated leaves hardly touch the ground before they are whisked away by the rakes of gardener teams.

The structure itself is one of the many minor prides of Jefferson, after the three achievements he considered his legacy to the nation: Author of the Declaration of Independence, instigator of the first statute for religious freedom and founder of the University of Virginia.

Unlisted on his self-written epitaph are the Capitol, the stately home at Monticello on which he lavished nearly 40 years of spare-time architectural talent, the university's famed Rotunda at the Charlottesville campus, which was the basis for the design of the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, and his terms as Governor and President.

RICHMOND is the hub of Virginia's wealth of historic colonial attachments, preserved or restored as they were when erected. To the east are the crude log huts of Jamestown, site of the 1607 landing of the first company of English settlers in America. To the west is Charlottesville and Jefferson's elegant hilltop homestead a few miles outside the city.

Both north and south lie other centers of early Americana, from spacious plantations to the battlegounds of the Revolution and the Civil War. Modern highways and freeways have replaced the rutted trails which linked the Colonial settlements, but the countryside between remains much the same as Jefferson's description in a letter written in 1788:

"... a flower here, a tree there; yonder a grove, near it a fountain; on this side a hill, on that a river. I know nothing so charming as our own country."

This autumn tour through the Virginia of Washington, Jefferson, Thomas Paine, Capt. John Smith and Gen. Robert E. Lee combines the best of two worlds. What there were of Bicentennial throngs (the expected overcrowding never materialized this year) have left the scene and the scenery to latecomers.

THE COLORFUL pageant of nature and history began immediately after arrival at Dulles International Airport. Although American Airlines lists Dulles as a Washington destination for its daily DC10 flights from Los Angeles, and other connecting flights into Washington National Airport, both terminals are actually in Virginia.

Dulles is about 30 miles west of Alexandria, just across the Potomac from the nation's capital. The rental car drive into Alexandria along the freeway serving the airport was a preview of the next four days. No billboards marred the view of wooded hills and open farmland decked in harvest tones.

Temperatures were brisk in the mornings, but sunny and warm to the mid-60s by early afternoon four days of the tour. Changeable weather to be expected at this time of year gave us rain only one day.

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

Fly by night & $ave

It was twilight, and New Orleans was a dusky blue fused with gold — far too beautiful to leave. Besides, there was also the possibility of sitting around discussing soybean futures and dining with a new-found friend.

Since he looked like The Bionic Man and the proposed restaurant was Gallatoire's, any sane female would instantly phone the airline she'd planned to spend the evening with and say, "You do what you want at 7:30 but I'm staying here."

BEING OF sound mind, I did call. They were very understanding. They even offered an alternative 2 a.m. departure that made me wonder if helpful Heloise had gone into the aviation business. When I raced up to the airport counter at 1:45 a.m., however, Heolise was off duty. It was nonetheless a night of nights: She'd been replaced by Santa Claus.

"I see you have a full-fare coach ticket," said St. Nick. "If you'll wait just a minute, I'll give you a refund. This is a coach flight, so it's less."

Yes, Virginia, that's how it is. You fly by night for 20 per cent less than you fly by day. Take that, bank account, and don't forget to credit it to me.

Well, that's how it works MOST of the time. There are some night flights that haven't any competition, so of course the airlines in charge have neglected to file lower fares. To be a cheapie night flight, the thing has to be designated night coach, not merely take off after 9 p.m. and before 7 a.m.

NOR ARE night-coach flights as numerous as nickels. Delta has pushed them, however, and this season they are on the increase, though still operating only between big cities that attract lots of daytime passengers and are presumed capable of generating more business if the price is right.

At the moment that appears to be an expanded

jane morse

list of places principally along the routes of American, Delta, Eastern, National, TWA and Western.

The big item to remember is that night coach tickets are just about the only discount fares left with no strings attached. When you do locate one, you don't need to have pink eyes, furnish your mother's maiden name or sign up during the preceding leap year. If there are seats, you can buy one right up until departure time.

So night coaches take off and land at odd hours. Look at it this way: It's not a great saving, but it's a good saving and all you have to lose is a little sleep.

City of museums

Fort Worth, Texas, has an unusual complex of four museums whose exhibitions are non-competitive, according to Continental Airlines travel experts.

They are the Museum of Science & History, with both live and mounted animals, historical objects and exhibits designed to appeal largely to youth; the Art Center, with a large collection of impressionists and sculpture of the Southwwest, the Amon Carter Museum of Western Arts, with paintings by Charles Russell and Frederic Remington, and the Kimball Museum, wwith a collection of classical and modern masters, and a library of 20,000 art volumes.

At that moment

"He who tooteth not his own horn," said John Llewelyn Lewis, "the same shall not be tooted."

Nobody tooted his louder during the stormy years labor came of age, or did more in the rearing, than the union leaderith the eyebrows like hedges and jaw like a coal stove. John L. took on most everybody and most always won.

"Organize the Unorganized" and "Never a Step Backward" were the slogans of the ninth grade dropout who could quote Shakespeare and Scriptures to the low and the mighty and tell an armed man to "take that gun out of your pocket or I'll shove it down your throat."

The former coal miner who dug his way to the top of the United Mine Workers and founded the Congress of Industrial Organizations battled presidents of companies and presidents of the United States from Wilson to Truman. Feeling he had been double-crossed by one President, he said to his face: "Nobody can call John L. Lewis a liar and least of all Franklin Delano Roosevelt!"

He called Vice President John Nance Garner "a poker playing, whiskey drinking, labor baiting, evil old man." About the best anyone could manage in retaliation was one company executive who stammered: "Mr. Lewis, I-I-I am not afraid of your eyebrows."

Tough or courtly, imperious or impish, Lewis set the pattern that other labor leaders were to follow. He made the sit-down strike, which he said dated back to the builders of the Pyramids, a national weapon of the late '30s. Even high school students in Cleveland sat down in protest that their newly arrived class pins "were a lot of junk." There was violence, often, but Big Labor had been born.

MIDWIFE LEWIS was always in the news. In 1937, about four per cent of the stories in the New York Times for the whole year revolved around John L. But no headlines were bigger than when he pulled his men out during World War II contrary to a union no-strike pledge. "John Lewis, damn your coal black soul," cried Stars and Stripes from Europe. Unbowed, Lewis won but was magnanimous in victory. One day when he found Roosevelt maneuvering some miniature ships on a battle map, he offered to send him a set of electric trains for Christmas ...

Now, on this Nov. 19, 1946, Lewis has done it again. The government has seized the mines, but Lewis has called his men out anyway. He's demanding a 40-hour week instead of 54, with no loss in pay.

With a toss of his cane to the curious and a tip of his hat to a lady, Lewis, chewing on a cigar, drops into the lobby of Washington's Carlton Hotel to read in peace about one of the few battles he was to lose.

It was to cost him $10,000 personally and his union $700,000 in court fines, but no one could forget the debt labor owed the man who made management listen to a favorite quote from the Bible: "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn."

get on with it. His patience was severely tried, but luckily he liked Dustin and they got along. Olivier can't remember his lines the way he used to because of his recent illness, but Dustin required just as many retakes. It all evened out."

And what about line producer Robert Evans, who has taken his share of credit for the film's success? "Bob found the book, came to me and helped every inch of the way. I didn't want Dustin. I thought he was too old. I wanted an unknown. Evans begged me to reconsider. So we made a pact that we'd never mention his age in the film.

"Evans came up with the idea of Olivier. I thought he was too ill to work. Evans pressured me into using big-star names. Then when we started shooting, we had some differences. The film was not well-organized, Bob couldn't understand why I wanted a lot of garbage littering the streets of Paris — little things. But all good producers — and there aren't many — have as their first concern the film itself.

"Not until we were in the cutting room did I realize what a remarkable, tasteful man Robert Evans is. I was deceived by the eye-catching, glamorous lifestyle he likes to advertise.

"We developed an extremely close relationship. I know people regard him as a figure of fun, but he's amazingly acute. He really made hundreds of valuable contributions. He was an objective eye and ear, and I trusted his advice completely."

AT WIT'S END

Chaperone's checklist

erma bombeck

At some time in a parent's life, he or she will be asked to chaperone something at the school.

Chaperoning is basically a depressing job. It is the moment most people have been dreading ... the day you traverse the gap from swinger to swingee.

I do not like chaperoning for other reasons. It is not my idea of fun to sit and watch someone doing what I would be doing if I didn't have to sit there and tell them not to do it.

As the wife of an educator, I have had my share of supervising dances, trips, proms and social affairs. It would be selfish of me not to share my expertise.

1. One of the primary duties of a chaperone is to find the party. Obviously you cannot chaperone if you have no one to chap. We have found the best way to find the hidden location of a party is to follow a car full of kids with your lights out.

2. Proms often have two punch bowls. One is a blend of 15 fruits that make your face break out as you pour it. The other will put a little fun in your life, quicken your footsteps and make the evening bearable. Unfortunately, the chaperones are not told about this bowl.

3. Be sure of your authority. When you walk into the parking lot and discover three hoods who do not attend your school, but who are ripping off a car and have a tire iron in their hands, make sure you have a better threat than, "You know, this makes you ineligible for the Robert Frost awards in the spring."

4. BE AWARE of the fact that music at proms and parties could make you sterile. The art of conversation is reduced to lipreading and pantomime. As an experiment, I once repeated a single sentence for the entire evening, "Is there somewhere I can go to scratch my teeth?" Everyone pretended to hear what I was saying. Thirty-five people said they were pleased to meet me too. Eight said, "It's too much work for you. Come to our place." And one said, "Thank you. My mother made it."

5. It is not as difficult knowing when the party is over as you might think. There are little things ... like you are humming and tapping your foot and the band is gone ... your eyes no longer smart from Clearasil, and you realize that from habit you shouted, "Is there somewhere I can go to scratch my teeth?" and the English teached sniffed and said, "I'd say you got into the wrong punch bowl."

Jinx? Ha! Brown peps UCLA past Washington

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

SEATTLE — The Jinx is dead.

Theotis (Big Foot) Brown and James Owens stomped UCLA's 18-year Husky Stadium jinx to extinction Saturday afternoon as the Bruins escaped tenacious Washington, 30-21.

A crowd of 47,719 watched in amazement as Brown thundered to a school-record 220 yards on 35 carries. In the process the 6-3, 215-pound sophomore scored touchdowns on dashes of 29, 15 and 51 yards.

Besides breaking Kermit Johnson's mark of 183 yards, Brown joined 20 other Bruin backs who have crossed the goal line three times in one game. Oddly, one of those, Wendell Tyler, spent most of the chilly afternoon on the bench after suffering an ankle sprain and twice fumbling — neither of which the Huskies recovered.

Head coach Terry Donahue didn't hesitate to insert the 175-pound Owens into Tyler's left halfback spot and the sophomore from Sacramento reeled off 123 yards in 22 carries, scoring his first Bruin touchdown on a broken-field gallop of 34 yards.

The game was won by the offensive line. Methodically, tight ends Rick Walker and Don Pederson; tackles Rob Kezirian and Gus Coppens; guards Greg Taylor and Keith Eck, and center Mitch Kahn tore gaping holes in the Husky defense.

"I wouldn't be doing justice if I didn't praise the offensive line," a relieved Donahue said afterward. "That's the best its played this season."

It was a contest of two excellent running teams and the object was to force the other club to throw the football. UCLA's defense succeeded; Washington's did not.

Plagued by the toughness of ends Manu Tuiasosopo and Tim Tennigkeit and the pursuit of linebackers Frank Stephens, Jerry Robinson, Tom Murphy and Raymond Burks, quarterback Warren Moon could complete only 11 of 27 passes for 132 yards.

One of those was a 28-yarder to tight end Don Greenwood midway through the final period. It went for a touchdown when safety Pat Schmidt tried a leaping interception and missed.

That was the only TD Bruin defenders surrendered. Twice they forced the Huskies into field goals — Steve Robbins from 31 and 32 yards out — while Joe Steele sped 89 yards with a kickoff 6:27 into the second quarter.

UCLA held Washington to 111 yards afoot, limiting giant Robin Earl to just 58 yards on 13 carries. The Huskies were hampered when Steele was forced out of the lineup with a deep thigh bruise after his touchdown.

"I'm shot emotionally," Donahue said with a hoarse voice. "I didn't feel we had the game won until I saw double zero on the clock."

Brown shunned the praise with the same efficiency he dispatched Washington tacklers.

"Our offensive line controlled the game from the opening kickoff to the final gun," he said, beaming. "As for the jinx, I don't believe in those things. To me, the better team will always win."

24-14 LBSU win may prove costly

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

WICHITA, Kan. - Long Beach State decisioned host Wichita State, 24-14, Saturday night in a contest that could prove costly to both clubs.

The 49er bill will be the most difficult to pay.

In all likelihood, Long Beach has lost guards Jerrell Smith and Greg Scoles and defensive end Scott Johnson.

All suffered knee injuries as Long Beach was recording its seventh victory in eight outings this season.

If they are hurt as seriously as it appeared, none of the three will be available as the 49ers close out their season with Pacific Coast Athletic Association foes Fresno and Fullerton State and traditional rival San Diego State.

Wichita's payment will come from the bank.

SC defense 'too much' for Bears

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

"It wasn't beautiful, but it was a win," said USC coach John Robinson Saturday after the Trojan defense had smothered California during the course of a 20-6 victory before 60,323 fans at the Coliseum.

Perhaps for a team leading the nation in total offense, it wasn't the Mona Lisa.

But what the Trojans lacked in offensive punch, they offset with a brilliantly conceived and executed defensive plan that sent a battered, bruised and discouraged all-America quarterback candidate to the sidelines in the fourth quarter.

Cal's Joe Roth must have felt like Custer.

"They were too much," said the Bears' quarterback of USC's defenders, who knocked down his receivers at the line of scrimmage, flooded the deep zones, tore apart his protection and put his best receiver, Wesley Walker, out of the game in the second quarter.

Roth completed only 12 of 27 passes for 109 yards before giving way to backup quarterback Fred Besana in the fourth quarter.

The high-powered Bears had only 201 yards in total offense, 18 by rushing, and had to settle for field goals of 33 and 47 yards by Jim Breech.

So the Pacific-8 Run for the Roses rolls inexorably toward a Nov. 20 showdown between those crosstown alleycats, USC and UCLA.

Third-ranked UCLA is 4-0 in the league and 7-0-1 over-all. Fourth-rated USC also is 4-0 in the conference, and has a record of 6-1.

"Now we have to go like heck to get past Stanford and Washington before we get to play UCLA for the Rose Bowl shot," said USC defensive tackle Gary Jeter, who was one of Roth's main marauders.

On a day when all-America tailback Ricky Bell was knocked out of action with a twisted ankle to go with his hip-pointer, the Trojans found enough other weapons to repel Cal, which lost its third consecutive Pacific-8 game.

Quarterback Vince Evans passed and ran effectively, split end Randy Simmrin worked some magic with his hands, and freshman Charles White came off the bench to add 91 yards to Bell's total of 78 in 24 carries.

"I was surprised at Cal's intensity on defense," said Robinson. "Because of that, we played somewhat conservatively."

Although held to 376 yards — 115 below their average — the Trojans converted on their best scoring opportunities.

For instance, they got off in front in the first quarter after freshman Mike McDonald recovered a fumbled punt by Cal's Vern Smith.

Starting from the Cal 22, the Trojans scored in six plays, Bell going the last four around left end, aided by a block from fullback Mosi Tatupu.

TROJANS' BELL 'UN-COVERED'

Everything was set up for Ricky Bell to make a move on Pitt's Tony Dorsett in their Heisman Trophy duel.

Three writers and four photographers from Sports Illustrated were on hand as the USC tailback went against California Saturday at the Coliseum. He was scheduled to be the magazine's cover picture and story.

But Bell, who came into the game with a hip-point injury, sustained a twisted ankle on his first rushing attempt in the second half.

After treatment from USC trainers, he re-entered the game and carried four more times, but was laboring badly and left the contest midway in the third quarter.

His rushing record for the day: 24 carries for 78 yards.

After the game, Sports Illustrated decided to scrub the Bell story.

The magazine's new cover choice? Tony Dorsett, of course.

Pierce bulls way past LBCC, 14-13

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

Fullback Bob Durham scored on a two-yard plunge with 3:07 remaining and Gifford Sears booted the point after touchdown to give Pierce College a come-from-behind 14-13 victory over Long Beach City College Saturday night.

Durham's blast before 4,006 disappointed Homecoming fans at Veterans Stadium capped an 86-yard, 13-play Brahma drive that ate up only four minutes of the final period.

His two-yard run, one of only a handful of rushing plays that netted anything during the second half against the Vikings' stiff front line, ended what had been Long Beach's domination of the game.

The final TD came only after Durham bounced off the LBCC front line for what appeared to be no gain, then spun loose of one LBCC tackler and twisted past several other defenders before bulling his nose just inches across the goal line.

The win lowered Long Beach to 1-3 in the Metropolitan Conference and 2-5 over-all.

Pierce retained its conference lead at 4-0 (6-1-1 over-all). LBCC has now lost three in a row. The Brahmas have not lost since their second game of the season.

The state's leading percentage passer, Charlie Young, entered the game with 1,646 yards on 143 completions and was forced to rely on his arm most of the second half as Long Beach continually thwarted any attempt by Pierce to establish a running attack.

Young, who averages 235.1 yards passing per game, finished 22-of-40 (55 per cent) for 253 yards.

If Pierce thought the stumbling Vikes would be a pushover it found out otherwise in a hurry.

Long Beach, ranked last in conference defense against the rush and fifth ahead of Valley and East Los Angeles against the pass, deflected seven passes and intercepted three.

Pierce netted a modest 154 yards on the ground against a defense that had given up an average of 234.3 a game.

The interceptions, one each by linebacker Chad Nikoletich, and defensive backs Charlie Green and Steve Toucey, equaled the entire number of interceptions LBCC had accomplished in its previous seven contests. Each stalled a key Brahma drive and kept LBCC in the driver's seat until the final three minutes.

Toucey's grab stalled a Brahma drive at the LBCC 26 after a march of 50 yards with only 55 seconds left before the half.

Nikoletich picked off another with 2:25 left in the third quarter as Young tried to throw on second-and-goal from the LBCC two.

Green made his theft on a deep swing pass at the LBCC 20 and returned it 40 yards. At the time, that seemed to have sealed Pierce's fate.

Yet the Brahmas, who had been denied scoring opportunities deep inside LBCC territory once in the second quarter by Toucey's steal, twice in the third quarter because of Nikoletich's effort and on downs, then twice in the fourth quarter on downs and Green's heroics, came back one last time.

Unable to run during the final drive, Young took to the air and LBCC began to crumble. Passes of 16, 20 and 13 yards to Bill Spooner highlighted the Brahmas' final crucial series, before Durham tied the score.

Kings' power play comes through, 4-3

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

"We've been moving the puck well which opens things up for the good shot. We were due for a couple," Tommy Williams was saying after his second power play goal of the night with 7:11 remaining enabled the Kings to deflate the Cleveland Barons, 4-3, Saturday night to the delight of 10,840 fans at the Forum.

The victory, coupled with Montreal's first loss at home this season, to Boston, pulled the Kings within two points of the division-leading Canadiens.

Reflecting on his line which scored all four goals (Mike Murphy and Butch Goring also connected), Williams said, "When you get off to a good start you play with a lot more confidence. To do well you've got to work hard. When you do, you make things happen."

Williams, whose seventh and eighth goals of the season enabled the Kings to remain the second highest scoring among the NHL's 18 clubs, said, "We really had a good home stand. We got beat by a good team (Boston) and then won three in a row. Remember, Boston walked in and beat Montreal tonight."

Coach Bob Pulford also smiled when the subject of the Kings' power play arose. "We were struggling for awhile but with (Gary) Sargent and (Marcel) Dionne on the point and Butchie up front, it's been more effective," he explained. "Before, we had Butchie playing back, but Sargent's versatility gives us a chance to use Goring up front where he's more effective.

Goring, who notched his seventh goal along with three assists, said, "We knew if we worked at the power play we'd eventually get some results. Nobody cares who scores."

After falling behind 1-0 on Dave Gardner's first goal of the campaign, Goring's goal, which ricocheted off defenseman Greg Smith's skate, squared the matter at the 7:13 mark of the first period.

Murphy's 11th goal of the season put the Kings ahead 2-1 only to have Wayne Merrick's second goal of the year tie the match with 3:37 to go in the first period.

Williams and Gary Sabourin traded goals in the second period and Tommy, who also scored the winning goal against Detroit in the final 11 seconds on Tuesday night, then beat Baron goalie Gary Simmons for the decisive goal in the final period.

Cerritos upsets S.D. Mesa

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

After a season of frustration and derision, the Cerritos College defense gained some measure of redemption Saturday night by turning in its best effort of the year to lead a 20-7 upset of fifth-rated San Diego Mesa before an appreciative homecoming audience.

It was Cerritos's initial South Coast Conference win and evened its season record at 3-3-1. But it may have dropped the Olympians, now 2-2, and 5-2 over-all from the SCC title race.

Mesa accumulated 328 yards but that total was nearly 100 below what Cerritos had allowed six previous opponents. In addition, the Falcons recovered two fumbles and snared four interceptions from Steve Fairchild, the SCC's total offense and passing leader.

Meanwhile, Cerritos' offense continued its improvement, this week under the direction of quarterback Kevin Hamilton who replaced Mark Chandler midway through the first quarter.

Hamilton completed 8 of 10 passes for 65 yards but his most productive task was handing off to Marty Campbell, and Joe Fletcher who gained 134 and 100 yards respectively. Cerritos picked up 360 total yards, 118 in the air.

However the Falcons were sluggish in the early going, squandering scoring opportunities from the Mesa 24, 19, 9, and 11. They finally broke the ice with Campbell's 14-yard run 4:08 before halftime after a 56-yard drive.

Less than four minutes later it was 13-0 when Hamilton hit Phil DuBois with a 7-yard toss after the first of Dan Buckley's two interceptions gave the ball to Cerritos on the Olympian 25.

Cerritos concluded its scoring on its first possession of the second half by plodding 73 yards on 16 plays, Hamilton finally diving in from the one with 5:44 showing on the clock.

Thereafter it was left to the defense which effectively corralled Mesa except for a 12-yard TD pass from Fairchild to Barry Harris with 4:19 to play after a fumble had given the ball to the Olympians 52 yards from the goal line.

Fairhcild hit 17 of 38 passes for 201 yards.

Barloon sparks Viking poloists

Joe Barloon scored four goals and Eric Atkeson turned in 14 saves in the goal to spark Long Beach City College to a 11-2 water polo win over Ventura Saturday and win the championship of the Cypress Tournament.

Lytle, Leach keep Wolves first, 45-0

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Michigan's Rob Lytle doesn't think he has a chance to win the Heisman Trophy as the nation's best college football player because "our program is built around a team effort and not an individual one."

But it would be tough to convince coach Bo Schembechler of the No. 1-ranked Wolverines that Lytle doesn't deserve the honor.

"In my opinion, there is no back in the United States of America who does more for his team than Lytle does for Michigan," Schembechler said after Michigan's 45-0 Big Ten victory over Minnesota Saturday.

"He can play fullback, tailback, run, catch, lead—whatever you want done. There's no back like him."

Lytle rushed for 129 yards in 20 carries, scored on a two-yard run and a 13-yard pass from Rick Leach, and also did an outstanding job of blocking and faking.

Lytle, a senior who entered the game with a rushing average of 7.7 yards per carry, said if this wasn't the best Michigan team he's played on, "it's certainly the most diversified. Both the defense and offense can do everything well.

"The No. 1 ranking helps us a lot now that we all know it's within reach for the entire season," he said. "Everyone is working harder and is more serious about hanging onto it."

It was almost a toss-up between Lytle and sophomore quarterback Leach as to who was the top offensive star. Leach tossed two touchdown passes, ran for two others and rushed for 114 yards in 10 carries.

Minnesota's quarterback, Tony Dungy, completed 12 of 20 passes but failed to move the Gophers.

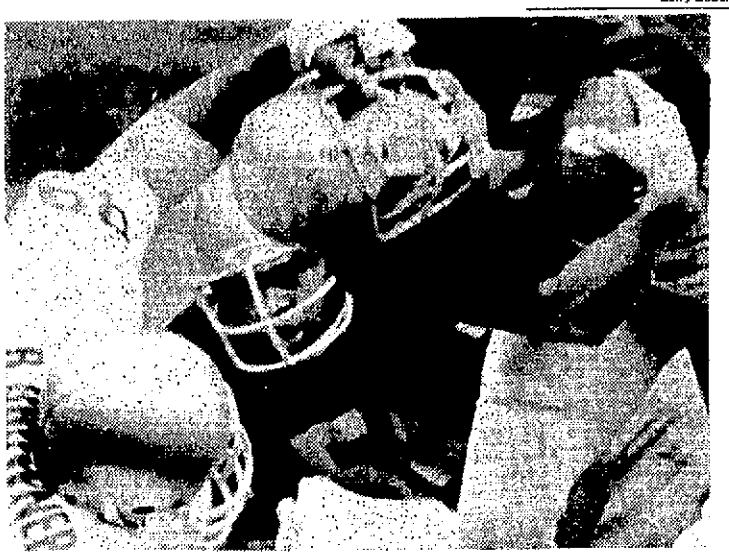

"Michigan should be able to go all the way if they don't mess themselves up and let someone upset them," Dungy said. "The big difference was Michigan's quickness and big people. No one will hold Michigan under 21 points. They will score on anybody."

The victory was the eighth in a row for the unbeaten Wolverines and raised their conference record to 5-0.

The game was played before a Michigan Stadium crowd of 104,426—fifth largest in Wolverine history.

TD record for Hill; Stanford routs Beavers

STANFORD (AP)—Defensive end Duncan McColl made two key fumble recoveries and Tony Hill caught two touchdown passes to break a Stanford record set by McColl's father, leading the Cardinals to a 24-3 Pacific-8 football victory over Oregon State Saturday.

Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin passed for 233 yards and three touchdowns, breaking open a close game in the final period with his second touchdown pass to Hill and a scoring toss to James Lofton.

Immediately after McColl fell on a fumble at the Beaver's 16-yard line late in the first period, Benjamin hit Hill in the end zone.

It was the 14th career touchdown catch for the senior flanker, tying the record held by Bill McColl, a Stanford all-America 25 years ago.

Oregon State's Kieron Walford kicked a 55-yard field goal, breaking a team distance record, in the second period and the Beavers drove to Stanford's eight early in the third period. But McColl killed the drive with his second fumble recovery.

Stanford increased its lead to 10-3 on Mike Michel's 34-yard field goal early in the final period before Hill made his 15th touchdown catch on a 6-yard pass from Benjamin and Lofton scored on a 4-yard pass.

The Cardinals, who face Pac-8 co-leader USC at home next weekend, are 3-1 in the conference. The battered Beavers, whose long injury list got some additions Saturday, are 1-3.

Bucks erupt, bury Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — For a while, Indiana's fired-up Hoosiers actually thought they had a chance to beat Ohio State for the first time in 25 years.

Until the closing minute of the second quarter Saturday, Indiana led 7-6, had not allowed Ohio State a single first down and had yielded just 35 yards to the Buckeye offense.

Then the roof fell in.

Pete Johnson scored his first of two touchdowns with 16 seconds left in the half, the Buckeyes added two more TDs in the third quarter and three more in the fourth period for a 47-7 victory.

"In the second half, they just overpowered us and pounded us," said Indiana Lee Corso of the eighth-ranked Buckeyes.

"But I can tell you this — we played them in the first half about as well as anyone can play football. We played them like your supposed to."

Ohio State coach Woody Hayes, who was fuming along the sidelines after the Hoosiers took the early lead, called the first half a "chamber of horrors."

"That's as bad as we've played," said Hayes, who conceded that Indiana "does not have that bad of a team."

"They ran out of gas," said Hayes. "They don't have the reserve strength that we have. We ran them into the ground."

The Buckeyes' first touchdown, following an interception by Nick Buonamaici at the OSU five-yard line, was hotly disputed by Corso.

Irish struggle past Middies

CLEVELAND (AP)—Navy's Joe Gattuso was beaming like a winner after Notre Dame's 27-21 victory over the Midshipmen Saturday.

"I thought we should have won," the Navy halfback said. "Today we became a football team."

Navy, which has won just one of its eight games this season and was ripped 70-14 by powerful Michigan, scored a touchdown in the fourth quarter, had a drive stopped deep in Irish territory and had a pass intercepted in Notre Dame's end zone on the last play of the game.

"I've been involved in games like this before where a team is favored because of its record," Notre Dame coach Dan Devine said. "This was a similar situation where we could have been upset, and I warned our people about it all week."

The passing of Irish quarterback Rick Slager and a pair of field goals by Dave Reeve were the difference in the intersectional football battle, as Notre Dame came from a 14-3 deficit to take the lead for good with 21 second-quarter points.

"I want to give Navy a great deal of credit for the way they played," Devine added. "But I'm not totally surprised because they were only one touchdown behind Michigan and one touchdown behind Pittsburgh at halftime, and both teams had to score for those leads right before the half."

Navy coach George Welsh said, "This was out best game of the year, no doubt about it. This game should help us if we're mature enough to handle it despite the loss."

It was Notre Dame's sixth consecutive win.

Navy quarterback Bob Leszczynski's pinpoint passing kept the Midshipmen in the game.

The Irish broke a school record by holding Navy without a touchdown in the first quarter—their 21st straight quarter without a touchdown.

The victory kept Brigham Young's chances alive for a possible trip to the Fiesta Bowl on Christmas Day. BYU is now 3-1 in conference play. ASU dropped to 2-2.

A Larry Miller intercception of an ASU pass from quarterback Dennis Sproul led to BYU's first score. Split end John Van Der Wouden scored from four yards out on a fake field goal try. Dave Taylor's kick was good and BYU led 7-0 with the game less than two minutes old.

Sproul wasted little time in pulling ASU even as he connected with speedy wingback Larry Mucker on an 80-yard pass and run play.

Sproul scored on a one-yard keeper with 22 seconds left in the first quarter to give ASU a 21-17 lead. But that was the last score ASU could manage in the game.

The Ducks stretched their lead to 22-15 with 3:11 to go on a 27-yard field goal by Roy Geiger, his third of the game. But Thompson, the No. 5 passer in the nation, held in check by the Oregon defense, completed seven passes on the winning drive.

At one point in the drive, Washington State had first down and 39 yards to go on its own 33, but Thompson hit Mike Levenseller over the middle for 40 yards and a first down on the Oregon 27 with 41 seconds remaining.

Wyoming shocker scrambles WAC

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Tom Drake booted four field goals Saturday, the last a 31-yarder with 1:26 left, as Colorado State upset Wyoming, 19-16, and threw the Western Athletic Conference football race into a wild scramble.

Wyoming is 4-1 in the conference while defending champion Arizona State, Brigham Young and Arizona each entered the day with one league loss.

Drake kicked his game-winner after a pass interference call on Wyoming's Dennis Camino put the ball on the Cowboy 18-yard line. Camino was called on a pass from Dan Graham to wide receiver Harry Washington, who hooked up on a 56-yard touchdown pass with 10 seconds left in the first half to tie the game at 13-all.

After the game the first thing Colorado State coach Sarkis Arslanian recalled was a promise he made to himself three years ago.

"The first time we played up there (in Laramie), they beat us, 35-3, and kind of rubbed it in. I vowed we'd never lose again to Wyoming as long as I was coach," Arslanian said.

Colorado State has now whipped the Cowboys three years in a row, Arslanian's only loss to Wyoming being that first game in 1973.

Iowa's rally keeps Northwestern winless

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—A three-yard touchdown run by Butch Caldwell with 3:14 remaining allowed Iowa to beat a gambling Northwestern team, 13-10, Saturday.

Winless Northwestern marched to the Iowa 12-yard line after the go-ahead touchdown and, on fourth and five, shunned an almost certain tie by not going for a field goal.

Cornerback Rod Sears knocked down a pass intended for Northwestern's Scott Yelvington in the end zone with :47 to play. Iowa then ran out the clock.

The victory evened the Hawkeyes' record at 4-4, moved them to 2-3 in the conference and guaranteed their best season in seven years. Northwestern fell to 0-8 and 0-5.

Buff explosion sinks Sooners

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)—Fired-up Colorado, rallying behind versatile sophomore quarterback Jeff Knapple and the hard running of Tony Reed and Jim Kelleher, exploded for three second-half touchdowns and ripped Oklahoma, 42-31, in a wild Big Eight football game Saturday.

The 19th-ranked Buffaloes, trailing 31-20 midway through the third quarter, struck quickly. Knapple unloaded a 70-yard bomb to wingback Billy Waddy to pull within 31-26, and Reed ran for the two-point conversion.

Less than a minute later, Colorado middle guard Charlie Johnson stripped the ball from Sooner halfback Elvis Peacock, giving Colorado possession at the Oklahoma 27-yard line.

Six plays later, Kelleher ran one yard for the go-ahead score.

The Buffs then marched 85 yards in 11 plays for a third TD. Knapple passed 38 yards to Emergy Moorehead and ran 19 yards to the two-yard line, setting up another Kelleher touchdown—his third of the day.

Three turnovers in the final 10 minutes thwarted the Sooners' comeback attempts.

The 13th-ranked Sooners had rolled to a 14-3 lead in the first quarter, largely on the breakaway running of fullback Ken King, who got Oklahoma rolling with a 71-yard jaunt for a score midway through the opening period.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Jones fumes over 49ers' low rating

Dwight Jones has so much basketball talent at Long Beach State that he became indignant the other day when he noted in one publication that his 49ers were ranked No. 17 in the nation.

Ordinarily, having one's team ranked in the top 20 is cause for rejoicing and, perhaps, taking the champagne bottle out of the refrigerator for a little premature celebration, but not so with Jones.

"We deserve better," he fumed. "Just look at our recruiting, for openers. We got Francois Wise, Northern California player-of-the-year and that section's No. 1 athlete for the entire school year.

"We also got Donnie Martin, Oakland's player-of-the-year, and Michael Wiley, Long Beach's co-player of-the-year and also CIF co-player of-the-year. We got the three top high school kids in their areas in the state, who also were high school all-Americans.

"Then, we've got our entire squad back from last year, plus two redshirts who figure to be immediate starters, and a JC all-America. Doesn't that merit us better ranking than No. 17?

"The trouble with national publications is that the Eastern influence is too much for anyone else to counteract, unless you happen to be UCLA."

DWIGHT JONES
'We deserve better

WHEN HE CLIMBED down the wall, Dwight was asked if he wasn't concerned that he might have too much talent. USF had a similar situation last year and had nothing but trouble trying to keep a dozen all-stars happy.

"I'd rather have too much talent than not enough," Jones responded. "But we don't have any problem. My seniors and juniors will start. My freshmen were not told that they would start. They weren't recruited with that promise.

"Other teams with many returning starters and some super freshmen have had problems because they'd promised the freshmen they'd start. I didn't. But the freshmen will get playing time this season because they're too good to stay on the bench altogether.

"In fact, my freshmen are fortunate in one respect. We are primarily a freshman-senior team (the 49ers have three juniors and no sophs), so the freshmen won't have the problem of competing with sophomores for three years. They know they've got plenty of playing time ahead."

WHEN ONE WONDERS why so many talented players chose Long Beach State, Dwight has a ready answer.

"The success of our recruiting is because the players were sold on our school by other players.

"Take Francois Wise. He visited five other major schools when he narrowed down his choices—Indiana, Marquette, Providence, USC and Cal—but chose Long Beach. Our players had sold him on the idea that it was a good place to be.

"Ed Ratleff, Glen McDonald, Leonard Gray and other former stars with us have been a great help, too. These NBA players take time out to write and talk to kids about Long Beach State."

'COMPARISON OF JONES' 1976-77 squad with Jerry Tarkanian's great 24-2 team of 1973-74 naturally follows, but Dwight isn't getting carried away.

"This club doesn't compare yet with that team because that was a once-in-a-lifetime squad," he conceded. "But I think we'll win in excess of 20 games.

"Most interesting part of this season will be the early part—our first six games. If we're 6-0 or 5-1, we'll have a great season.

"We'll also have a great season if our post play is good. If it's not, we'll just be good. Our post play is our big question mark. We have to be strong enough to neutralize the best big men in the country. You can't go into the playoffs against the likes of UCLA and USF without top play from your center.

"Going against a top center like Indiana's Kent Benson without someone just as good opposing him, scares me."

UNLIKE MOST of his peers, Jones is not reluctant to rattle off a starting lineup. The former Pepperdine star has no hesitation about naming names.

"If we were to play a game tomorrow, I'd start Larry Hudson, Richard Johnson, Lloyd McMillian, Clarence Ruffen and Dale Dillon. But real quick I'd send in Donnie Martin, Francois Wise, Michael Wiley, Mark Steffl and Tony McGee.

"Instead of playing predominately just seven or eight men, I'll go with 10 players at almost equal time. Why not? We've got the talent."

Hudson, Ruffen and Dillon are returning starters, while seniors Johnson and McMillian redshirted last season. McGee also was a starter last season, with Steffl the JC all-America.

"Our first five forwards are among the best five of any team in the country,' enthused Jones. "We're so strong there that last year's leading scorer, McGee, is our No. 3 forward now (behind Hudson and the alternating forward-guards Johnson and McMillian)."

Interestingly, the 49ers' two all-America candidates this season are the redshirts, Johnson and McMillian. Jones has a singular observation about redshirts (those who sit out a season):

"Ordinarily, I don't like to see players come off a redshirt year. It's hard for them to get competitive when they return. But Richard and Lloyd are overcoming that obstacle very well."

UNLIKE THE SCHOOL'S football schedule, the 49er basketball schedule has some intersectional class this season. But Jones wants more.

"Our 97-3 home record is one reason a lot of teams won't play us here. But I'm not ashamed of our schedule this year. We're finally playing USC—or at least we're in their December Classic—and we'll meet Southern Methodist, Colorado, Illinois and Arizona State (the latter two in Long Beach Arena).

"We're in the talking stages with Atlantic Coast Conference schools, too. There's a possibility of being in a future tournament with South Carolina and Wake Forest, and also of playing single games with Maryland and North Carolina State."

Unlike many of his peers also, Jones won't close his doors to the press.

"I may need a minute to cool off after a game, but my locker room always will be open to the press," declared Dwight.

That should zoom him from 17th to No. 1 immediately.

LUBBOCK,Tex. (AP)—Shaking his head in disbelief and trying to curb a smile stretching across his face, Texas Tech coach Steve Sloan sighed and said, "I can hardly stand up."

The personable young Red Raider coach was almost overcome with emotion as he groped for words to discuss Tech's 31-28 Southwest Conference victory over rival Texas Saturday.

"I believe this was the greatest game I've ever seen," said the former Alabama quarterback.

The come-from-behind decision kept the sixth-ranked Raiders unbeaten through six games and tied with Arkansas for the SWC lead at 3-0.

Sloan poured out praise for almost everyone, but he couldn't say enough about junior quarterback Rodney Allison, who pulled the team together when it was flirting with disaster and plagued with penalties.

"Rodney was great," Sloan said. "The biggest play of the game may have been when he was trapped trying to pass and then scrambled out for a first down there in the fourth quarter."

Allison, confronted with a third-and-seven situation, scrambled 22 yards for a first down that kept alive the Raiders' final touchdown drive, a 76-yard effort.

Billy Taylor scored the winning touchdown on fourth down, diving across the goal from inches away.

Larry Isaac, who gained 91 yards against the Longhorns, set a school rushing record at Tech, compiling 2,347 yards on 471 carries. He broke the existing record of 2,280 on 526 trips set by all-America Donny Anderson in 1963-65.

"Naturally, getting the record was a thrill, but it doesn't even come close to beating Texas," Isaac said.

Tech's defense stopped a final Longhorns drive on the Red Raider 38-yard line. Texas coach Darrell Royal disdained a chance for a tying field goal.

LBSU WINS—

Included in the Shockers' season ticket plan this year, is a money-back quarantee if the team loses at home.

Fans — they will get half their money back — hadn't had an opportunity to test the guarantee until Saturday night.

There is a stipulation in the agreement that fans must remain until the game is over, and then have their tickets validated to receive the refund.

It was unlikely many of the 8,431 Homecoming fans would have sat through 43-degree weather in Cessna Stadium to get $2 back after three periods of play.

But a blocked punt early in the final quarter and an ensuing Wichita touchdown put the Shockers back in the game with 12 minutes remaining.

Long Beach managed to turn back that rally, however, so Shocker fans will have to settle for money.

The 49ers protected their advantage much as they had in last week's 21-10 win over Lamar, by simply lining up and running the football.

Against Wichita, however, they did something different. Fullback Mark Bailey had a chance to carry the ball.

Bailey responded with his best statistical effort of the season - 98 yards in 17 carries.

He got much of that - 90 yards in 15 rushes - in the final 30 minutes.

Quarterback Joe Paopao was also impressive, passing for 191 yards and two touchdowns, on 10 completions in 16 attempts.

His scoring strikes were for 79 yards to Johnny Washington, who also scored on a 13-yard run, and three yards to flanker Jeff Jones.

Long Beach amassed 387 yards while its defensive unit was restricting Wichita (3-5) to 138, including only 54 rushing.

LBSU coach Wayne Howard had been unusually apprehensive entering Saturday's intersectional encounter, no doubt influenced by the fact that Wichita, winless (0-4) on the road, was unbeaten (3-0) at home.

The Shockers were in a good position to make it 4-0 early in the second quarter when they twice downed punts inside the 49er 10.

The first kick was touched at the one, but the 49ers, trying to protect a 7-0 lead, escaped that predicament when Woody Tresseler, standing inches from the backline of the end zone, got off a 42-yard punt.

The second punt was downed at the Long Beach eight and, on first down, Washington fumbled, Alvin Brooks recovering for the Shockers at the one.

Wichita's first play lost five yards, but Jeff Shepler took an option pitch from Adkins and scored from the six an instant later to tie matters at 7-7.

Washington redeemed himself as soon as Long Beach could get off its next offensive play.

The 49ers started their next drive at their own 31 but drew successive five-yard illegal proceedure penalties before they could snap the ball.

On first-and-20 from his own 21, Paopao flipped a screen pass to Washington, who nearly fell when he skidded on the slippery artificial surface catching the ball.

The 49ers' 150-pound tailback maintained his balance, however, and slipped down the west sideline, breaking into the open at the 50.

Bailey screened the last two defenders with a chance to get Washington for the final 30 yards to complete a spectacular 79-yard, run-pass play.

The 49ers also used the pass to get their third touchdown.

Paopao, who was 8-for-11 for 160 yards in the first half, took his offense 80 yards in five plays and 1:22 for a 21-7 intermission advantage.

The big strike was a 47-yard bomb to split end Mike Willis, who made a tumbling catch at the Wichita 27.

Willis donated 24 more yards to the march on the next snap when Tony Sumler interfered on a Willis attempt to catch a Paopao pass at the three.

With 28 seconds remaining in the half Paopao then threw three yards to flanker Jeff Jones, playing for the first time in three weeks.

Long Beach extended its advantage to 24-7 midway through the third period when Tresseler kicked a 40-yard field goal after Paopao had passed 16 yards to Dennis Byrd to get the 49ers within kicking distance of the end zone.

The 49er defense, led by front liners Glen Tenove, Kise Fiatoa, Rich Valenzuela, Gary Greene, Fran Fredette, Jeff Lyall and Ron Kip were equally impressive throughout the first three periods.

It was really no contest, in fact, until Marc Stenzel blocked Tresseler's fourth-quarter punt.

It took little more than a minute for Adkins to get his team's second touchdown, the senior quarterback passing 16 yards to wide receiver Leon Dobbs, who made a fine, tumbling catch in the back of the end zone.

The 48-yard march was aided by a pair of penalties on the 49ers—15 yards for piling on and 9 for pass interference.

Alabama's burst tops Miss. State

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama used long touchdown runs by Johnny Davis and Pete Cavan and kept the ball for most of the third quarter to beat Southeastern Conference rival Mississippi State, 34-17, Saturday.

Mississippi State led 17-12 at the half, but Alabama opened the third quarter with an 82-yard drive capped by Davis' 27-yard touchdown scamper. Jack O'Rear scrambled for two points.

Five minutes later, Cavan rambled 25 yards on a draw play to put the Tide in front, 27-17.

Alabama held the ball for more than 10 minutes in the third period.

Gamecocks run away for 27-7 victory

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—South Carolina broke open a tight struggle with two fourth-quarter touchdowns behind the running of tailback Clarence Williams to take a 27-7 victory over North Carolina State Saturday.

Williams dashed for 105 yards in 23 carries as South Carolina won its sixth game of the season against three losses and kept alive its hopes for a post-season bowl appearance.

Representatives from the Gator Bowl and the Peach Bowl attended the game.

State's record dropped to 3-51. The Atlantic Coast Conference team was within striking distance of the Gamecocks for three quarters, but USC pulled away in the final period.

Terps explode for 24-14 win

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—"A long punt or kickoff return really ignites a team," said coach Jerry Claiborne of Maryland, "and that's what happened today. We went ahead after the run by Dean Richards."

Fifth-ranked Maryland was trailing Kentucky, 7-6, with time running out in the first half Saturday, when a 49-yard punt return by Richards gave the unbeaten Terps a scoring chance and they quickly capitalized on the way to a 24-14 victory.

With a personal foul penalty tacked onto the end of the run, the Terps took over on the Kentucky 11. Three plays later, Tim Wilson scored the first of his two touchdowns and a two-point conversion made it 14-7.

That score came with 2:06 left in the first half, but the Terps still had time to storm back to the Kentucky 31 before missing a 48-yard field goal attempt on the final play. Still fired up, they drove 77 yards with the second half kickoff, with Wilson adding a clinching TD.

"We got the play on offense, and our defense did an excellent job," Claiborne said, "except for those two big plays."

He referred to two Kentucky touchdown passes, for 26 yards in the first quarter and 52 yards with one minute left in the game. Otherwise Kentucky was limited to 141 total yards.

Florida wins, 24-19, runs win streak to six

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida struck quickly on the rifle passing arm of Jimmy Fisher and running of Willie Wilder to record its sixth successive victory Saturday, 24-19 over Auburn, for a solid lead in the Southeastern Confrence.

It was the fourth SEC victory for 12th-ranked Florida, leaving the Gators the only team unbeaten in conference play and 6-1 over-all.

Fisher earned Florida its first touchdown late in the second quarter, covering 61 yards in two plays. Both were passes to wide receiver Wes Chandler.

Fisher hit Chandler with a 64-yard scoring bomb in the fourth quarter to clinch the victory.

Tar Heels in record win

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—Delbert Powell's 98-yard kickoff return set a North Carolina record and Tom Biddle's four field goals tied another as the Tar Heels routed Wake Forest, 34-14, Saturday.

Wake Forest (3-6) scored its touchdowns on runs of seven and one yards by freshman tailback James McDougald, bidding to become the first ACC freshman ever to rush for 1,000 yards in a season.

Bulldogs survive rainy day in Georgia, top Cincy, 31-17

ATHENS, Ga. (AP)—Georgia quarterback Ray Golf scored a pair of first-half touchdowns, but the seventh-ranked Bulldogs had to survive a fourth-quarter scare from aroused Cincinnati for a 31-17 victory over the 20th-ranked Bearcats Saturday.

Goff scored on runs of 13 and 14 yards, Kevin McLee added a seven-yard touchdown and Allen Leavitt booted a 33-yard field goal as Georgia (7-1) took a 24-3 lead into the final quarter in the game played in a steady rain.

But the Bearcats, suffering their first loss after six victories, erupted for 14 points in a three-minute span at the start of the final quarter to edge within 24-17.

Texas A&M crushes SMU, 36-0

DALLAS (AP)—Workhorse fullback George Woodard rushed for 155 yards on 34 carries and freshman Curtis Dickey dashed for two third-quarter touchdowns Saturday to lead Texas A&M to a 36-0 victory over Southern Methodist.

The SMU defense stopped repeated Aggie scoring threats in the first half, and only a 56-yard field goal by Tony Franklin avoided a scoreless tie at intermission.

In the third quarter, A&M went on 39- and 98-yard drives climaxed by one and nine-yard scores by Dickey to take an unsurmountable 16-0 lead.

The victory gave the Aggies a 6-2 season record and a 3-2 SWC mark. SMU dropped to 2-6 and 1-4.

LSU tramples Miss., 45-0

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Terry Robiskie and Charles Alexander each rushed for more than 100 yards and an alert defense set up five touchdowns with interceptions and fumble recoveries as Louisiana State crushed Mississippi, 45-0, Saturday night.

Robiskie, becoming Louisiana State's all-time career rushing leader, ran for 129 yards and scored the first touchdown on an 18-yard run.

The unlikeliest quarterback

"Our fans are unique . . . like, I threw six interceptions last week. They didn't boo that much. They hung right in there with me, and I really appreciated that." — Jim Zorn.

Only a lefthander can understand the misery of going through life in a righthanded world, and only a person whose surname starts with Z can appreciate being anywhere except at the end of the line.

Last in the alphabet, last in life, put down by can openers and maitre d's alike—this is the double curse carried by James Arthur Zorn, who plays quarterback for the Seattle Seahawks.

There are more than a thousand professional football players listed in the Football Register. Guess who's last.

There are only two southpaw quarterbacks starting in the National Football League. Ken Stabler is one. Name the other.

"Let me say," Zorn says, "I am pleasantly surprised by what has happened to me this year at Seattle."

JIM ZORN
Last but not least

NOBODY EXPECTED the Seahawks to win many games in their first year, so aside from playing for a team that is 1-6 coming into today's match against the Rams at the Coliseum, Zorn is in hog heaven.

He gets to throw more passes than anybody in the league—237 so far—and has more job security than James Harris, a quarterback whose team is 5-1-1.

"Zorn is our quarterback," says Seahawk coach Jack Patera. "He's going to be inconsistent because this is his first year, but when he gets time to throw he's a heckuva passer."

Seattle's offense is based on one theme: Zorn drops back to pass, then (a) Zorn throws or (b) Zorn runs for his life.

With 125 yards on 26 flights of desperation, Zorn is within 13 yards of being the Seahawks' leading rusher, and he may be that before the day is out. The two running backs ahead of him have been benched.

"I scramble when I need to," he says. "If the receivers aren't open, I can't sit in the pocket and get smacked. That kinda hurts. Ever since I was in high school, if nothing was there I'd just take off."

HIGH SCHOOL was Gahr in Cerritos, where Zorn won all-Suburban League distinction when he became a starter as a senior. The next two years at Cerritos College he was second string behind two different quarterbacks.

Cal Poly Pomona and Wake Forest were the only four-year schools subsequently interested in mining this untapped talent — "The only reason Wake Forest heard of me was because a friend of mine told the coach I was a great athlete," Jim says—but he repaid Pomona's faith by leading the NCAA's College Division in passing as a junior.

"I was thinking about a pro football career in my senior year," he says. "Scouts were coming around timing me and I got excited about it."

BUT HIS statistics tailed off in his senior season and the scouts lost interest.

"Last year was a downer," Jim admits. "I really thought I'd be picked somewhere in the middle rounds of the draft, but I wasn't selected at all. Disappointed? I mean, that was it. I was through. I wasn't going to play football anymore."

But Dick Mansperger, the director of personnel for the Dallas Cowboys, suggested signing Zorn as a free agent.

"We had seven quarterbacks in camp," Jim recalls, "not counting Roger (Staubach) and Clint Longley, and I had to beat out those guys just to be No. 3. I was feeling pretty good about that."

But a few days before the opener against the Rams, the Cowboys, hurting for running backs, jumped at a chance to sign Preston Pearson, so somebody had to go.

Guess who.

"What a blow," Zorn says. "It wasn't that another quarterback beat me out. I knew then that I could play, but I didn't know if anybody else knew I could."

THE RAMS invited Zorn to Blair Field for a tryout and were considering signing him after last season when Mansperger, now with the Seahawks, became twice Zorn's saviour. Seattle's training camp, a Devil's Island type of complex in eastern Washington, truly tested Jim's perseverance.

"When I got to camp there were nine quarterbacks—nine!" he says. "I was just another free agent—certainly not the favorite. Every day a different guy looked good.

"But I just kept doing the best I could each day and then, all of a sudden, the coach told me I was No. 1 before the opener against St. Louis."

Patera, who coached the defensive line at Minnesota for seven years, says, "Jim Zorn reminds me of a young Fran Tarkenton, the kind of quarterback that makes things happen—sometimes good, sometimes bad."

IT WAS mostly bad last week—a 41-14 loss to Detroit in the Kingdome.

"Our fans are unique," Zorn notes. "They really support us. When it's time to boo, they boo. When it's time to yay, they yay . . . like, I threw six interceptions last week. They didn't boo that much. It was amazing. Usually, you throw two and a crowd would boo you right out of the stadium.

"But they hung right in there with me, and I really appreciated that."

After his impressive showing in Dallas' camp last year, Zorn, 23, had offers from other NFL clubs but says, "I'm glad I chose the Seahawks. I like it in Seattle. I miss the sun and the surf somewhat, but it's nice."

ALTHOUGH HE is a native of the Southland, Zorn never has played in the Coliseum. He came close last year.

"When Dallas played the Rams in that charity game I just about got to play, but the Rams kept the ball the last nine minutes and ate up my time.

"It's going to be exciting because I know a lot of people. I'll be down in December after the season for awhile, too . . . see my family for Christmas and then go to the Super Bowl."

Hopefully, Jim Zorn's application for a ticket will not be filed alphabetically.

Seahawks take Northwest by storm

How to succeed without winning

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

"Every week has been like Super Bowl Sunday," the man says.

He is Don Andersen, the Seattle Seahawks' public relations man, so such hyperbole is not unexpected. But read on.

"We promote ourselves as the professional football team of the Northwest."

Good luck, you say?

"We have 350 season ticket holders in Alaska, 500 to a thousand in Vancouver and Victoria, Canada, and some in eastern Washington, Montana and Idaho.

"Three thousand come to the games by ferry from the islands in Puget Sound. They come in by private planes, private yachts, Amtrak . . ."

The team is 1-6 but still they come, those owners of 58,000 season tickets—quite a few thousand more than the Rams (5-1-1) sell, by the way—arriving by land, sea and air to cheer one of the most incredible success stories in sports.

But success as in spinning turnstiles, not in wins and losses. Yet.

The Seahawks are 21-point underdogs against the Rams in the Coliseum today (1:05, Pacific Standard Time). Coach Jack Patera does not argue with the odds.

"We don't pay a whole lot of attention to whether we're big underdogs," he says. "We were favored against Tampa Bay. We really didn't know how to handle that."

Season records

	RAMS (5-1-1)
30	Atlanta	14
10	Minnesota	10
24	N.Y. Giants	10
31	Miami	28
0	San Francisco	16
20	Chicago	12
16	New Orleans	10
131		100
	SEATTLE (1-6)
24	St. Louis	38
7	Washington	31
21	San Francisco	37
13	Dallas	28
20	Green Bay	27
13	Tampa Bay	10
14	Detroit	41
112		204

That was Seattle's only win, 13-10, a result to which Patera ties little significance.

"Tampa Bay lost and came back and nearly beat Miami," he says. "We won and came back and got trounced by Detroit."

Halfway through the first season, Patera offers no evaluation.

"We didn't set anything we'd like to do except win every game, and we certainly haven't done that," he says. "We felt if we could put a solid foundation down, the qualification would be made next year.

"We've tried to be consistent in what we've done. We've made some really good plays, but where are they when you need them?"

Patera came into the job defensively oriented—a pro linebacker for seven years, a defensive line coach for 13.

His first selection in the college draft was Steve Niehaus, a defensive tackle from Notre Dame. In the expansion draft, he plucked linebackers Mike Curtis from Baltimore and Ken Geddes from the Rams.

But offense—specifically the passing game excercised by rookie quarterback Jim Zorn—has been the team's strength. Defensively, the Seahawks have given up more points (204) than any NFL team except Kansas City (213).

ROBERTS' ROUSER:
Rams 31, Seahawks 10

"With the defensive background I have, I think it was interpreted that I'm going to have a great defense," says Patera, who developed the Rams' Fearsome Foursome of the sixties.

"Curtis happened to be our 'name.' I don't think Tampa Bay came out of the veteran allocation with a name—but the first thing they did was trade for a quarterback.

"So John McKay became an offensive coach with Steve Spurrier and I became a defensive coach with Mike Curtis. I do feel that to become a champion, you have to build a very solid defense, but a lot of this stuff gets blown out of proportion."

The other side of the oddity is that Seattle has scored twice as many points (112) as Tampa Bay.

It's a far cry from Super Bowl Sunday, but it's a start.

RAMBLING: The Ram quarterback situation has been in such a state of flux that if James Harris were not to throw at least one pass today, he would not qualify for next week's league ratings for lack of enough attempts. As it is, he rates fourth in the NFL (97.0) behind Dallas's Roger Staubach, 107.1; Baltimore's Bert Jones, 103.3, and Oakland's Ken Stabler, 100.7. Zorn is far down the line at 48.5 and leads the league in interceptions with 15. The Ram secondary also leads in interceptions with 16, and Monte Jackson remains the individual leader with six. . . . The Seahawks are without their best offensive lineman, tackle Norm Evans (ex-Miami), who has missed three games with an injured knee. . . . The Rams' Larry Brooks and Seattle's Niehaus lead their clubs with six sacks each. . . . About 55,000 "extras" are expected to be on hand. During the first five minutes of halftime a sequence will be shot for a TV movie, The Loneliest Runner. . . . Fullback John Cappelletti left the New Orleans game early with a pulled hamstring but is expected to start today.

HARRIS STARTS TODAY

James Harris, who missed two games due to a shoulder injury, will be the Rams starting quarterback against the Seattle Seahawks today.

"James Harris' shoulder is well," coach Chuck Knox said Saturday. "He has been throwing well in practice and has earned and deserved to start and be the No. 1 quarterback."

Harris' three-year record as a starter is 19 victories and 5 losses. He currently ranks fourth among NFL passers.

Pat Haden will be the first backup, ahead of Ron Jaworski.

BRUINS SMASH SEATTLE JINX, 30-21—

The talkative Brown also delivered some kind words about his roommate, Owens.

"J.O. came in during a pressure situation and really came through," said Brown. "His TD was the key one."

UCLA led by only four points, 17-13, with five minutes of the third quarter remaining when the offense took possession at its own 36. Six plays and a costly pass interference penalty later, Owens slashed over Eck and Coppens, broke one tackle, veered to his left and sidestepped another Husky before crossing the goal line. Frank Corral's kick pushed the advantage to 24-13.

It was not a good day for the kicker — or even a good weekend. He missed the team plane Friday morning and arrived too late for the afternoon workout. Saturday he missed field goals of 51, 47 and 30 yards and even an extra point.

Luckily for the Bruins, those points were not vital. The offensive line saw to that.

"They just blew Washington off the line and all I had to do as find the hole," said Owens. "That, and concentrate on holding onto the ball. I knew I'd get a chance some time and I had to prove myself to the coaches."

"When one of your backs runs 9.3 (Owens) and the other 9.6 (Brown), our job isn't that tough," said Taylor, a guard. "I think Washington saw what Stanford did against us with a 4-3 front and thought that could stop us. But it takes a whole year to perfect that — not one game."

The Huskies deployed in a five-man, Okie front early, but jumped into a 4-3 with nose guard Charles Jackson playing middle linebacker.

"We had never seen that in their films," said Kahn, "and I think it hurt them to use it. Jackson isn't fast enough laterally and I was able to get to him and cut him down on nearly every play."

The Bruin offense was somewhat hampered by the wet sidelines and failed to get their pitch game in gear.

"I switched from dry to wet turf shoes in the third quarter," said Brown, "but that didn't seem to help. They did a great job shutting us off outside."

That was about the only phase of Washington's game plan that worked.

GAME OF THE WEEK
Dallas 24, Washington 17

The Dallas Cowboys meet the Washington Redskins in the nation's capital today in what could be a shootout between crippled quarterbacks for the National Football Conference East Division lead. The division-leading Cowboys have won six of seven, losing only to St. Louis two weeks ago. Washington, 5-2, is tied with the Cardinals for second place. Important, however, is that a victory by the Redskins would leave them the only team without a loss to another team in the division. Starting quarterbacks for both teams, Dallas's Roger Staubach and Washington's Bill Kilmer, have been injured this season but it is doubtful that either will sit out this important contest. Despite tradition of Washington beating Cowboys at RFK and Dallas returning favor in Texas Stadium, game pits youth vs. age and therein lies the difference. Forecast of Dallas win is based on Staubach's playing.

The rest of the winners:

Home team capitalized.
SR: Series record includes official league games only.

TODAY

RAMS 31, Seattle 0 — Seattle's nightmarish experience vs. Detroit last week may be a portent of things to come. Unable to run the ball, Seahawks will find airlanes clogged by Ram interceptors. Statistics tell the story of Seattle's pathetic defense. Ram runners, receivers and passers, whoever they might be, should have a field day.
SR: First meeting.

BUFFALO 27, N.Y. Jets 13 — Both teams plagued by problems on and off the field. Can't believe Jets capable of sweeping anyone this season. Gary Marangi may give Buffalo shot in arm and O.J. is getting rhythm back.
SR: Buffalo, 18-15.

CINCINNATI 27, Cleveland 17 — Cincinnati has won nine of last 10 regular season games in Riverfront and rare but decisive win at Houston suggests team is beginning to reach potential. Cleveland had lost 11 in a row on road before nipping Atlanta two weeks ago. Bengal defense ranks among top three in NFL. Condition of Ken Anderson and Greg Pruitt an important factor for Cincy.
SR: Cleveland, 7-6.

DETROIT 20, Green Bay 13 — Green Bay's 212 rushing yards against Lions in earlier meeting this year were the most by Packers since end of '73 season. Pack has played four good games in a row but team is 3-15 on road over the past two-plus seasons. When aroused, few teams play defense more tenaciously than Detroit. Lions will be aroused after upset loss to Packers a few weeks ago.
SR: Green Bay, 45-35-6.

Kansas City 27, TAMPA BAY 16 — Don't believe Tampa's 20-point splurge last Sunday represents a significant change in over-all inept attack. Chiefs don't own the best defense around but have more than enough scoring weapons to outpoint Bucs.
SR: First meeting.

Minnesota 20, CHICAGO 13 — Bears have been waiting for this since they blew opportunity to win first meeting three weeks ago by missing two extra point attempts. Opportunity will not knock twice. Vikes have begun to blend running with passing and there's no reason to believe they won't rack up ninth in row over Chicago.
SR: Minnesota, 16-13-2.

New England 27, MIAMI 17 — Although Pats have not defeated Miami in Orange Bowl since Dolphins' first year in the league (1966), Grogan's Heroes appear primed to end that streak. New England's 278 rushing yards home win over Miami last month, most ever recorded against a Don Shula-coached Miami team. Dolphin defense a near-disaster area.
SR: Miami, 13-7.

New Orleans 20, ATLANTA 14 — First meeting this year saw Saints chalk up most decisive victory (30-0) in club's history. Atlanta couldn't have played worse — seven turnovers. Falcons among really weak teams in NFL, while New Orleans is proving it is a cut above that category.
SR: Atlanta, 10-5.

N.Y. GIANTS 20, Philadelphia 17 — Giants' situation is growing more desperate every week. However, most brutal part of schedule is over now. Question remains whether even drop in class vs. wounded Eagles, who are in own tailspin, will really help.
SR: New York, 49-34-2.

OAKLAND 23, Denver 16 — Surprisingly, Denver has fought Raiders tougher at Oakland than at home where, earlier in season, they blew at 10-0 lead and lost, 16-10. Oakland's specialty teams among league's best and could neutralize much of Denver's offensive thrust by keeping Upchurch in tow. Must win for Denver but Stabler & Co. too explosive.
SR: Oakland, 25-6-2.

PITTSBURGH 27, San Diego 14 — Indications are the "real" Steelers have returned and are quite serious about defending their title. Chargers have demonstrated an ability to score — only once held to less than 17 points — but Steel Curtain playing with great pride and that's bad news for Dan Fouts' confidence.
SR: Pittsburgh, 4-0.

San Francisco 20, ST. LOUIS 17 — Classic matchup between high-powered Card offense and airtight 49er defense, which hasn't yielded a touchdown in last three games. Scheduling break for San Francisco, which has played its best games on the road this season. 49ers get eight days between games, St. Louis only six.
SR: St. Louis, 4-3.

MONDAY NIGHT

BALTIMORE 34, Houston 13 — Colts look like the complete team. Bert Jones is best young quarterback in the league and Baltimore defense has to rank near the top. Once highly-rated Houston defense has been shredded past two weeks and there has always been some question about Oilers' ability to compete with quality teams. Baltimore, with eight consecutive regular-season victories at home, is definitely a quality team.
SR: Even, 1-1.

Bears bemoan errors, laud 'physical' Troy

BY DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Mike White had a few words for his California Bears immediately following their 20-6 demise at the Coliseum Saturday against USC.

They were hardly complimentary.

The general consensus in the Golden Bear locker room was that it wasn't only the Trojans who defeated the Bears, it was also the Bears themselves. Quite handily, as a matter of fact.

"It was a combination of both," said a disconsolate White. "We beat ourselves as much as USC did. We made too many mistakes for the eighth week of the season.

"And by mistakes, I mean both in execution and in silly penalties."

Almost bereft of a rushing offense—the Bears netted a meager 18 yards on the ground—quarterbacks Joe Roth and later Fred Besana were obliged to do what the Bears do best—put the ball in the air.

But the redoubtable Trojan secondary took that away, too.

"Their pass defense was fantastic," observed Roth, quietly stripping a protective bandage from his tender right knee, a knee that was banged up again in the fourth quarter when he took an illegal shot from Harold Steele that cost USC 15 yards and cost Cal the services of Roth for the remainder of the afternoon.

"I fell right on the knee again," Roth said. "But I could have gone back in.

"It was very hard to find somebody open...their coverage was great," Roth continued.

To compound Cal's misfortune, wide receiver Wesley Walker viewed the second half from the Bear bench, attired in a swath of bandages that encased his entire right leg. He was missed, said Roth.

"Wesley opens up a lot of things for us. We can't go deep when he's not in there. If we try to, we certainly don't have as much room."

Walker went out late in the second period when Trojans David Lewis and Rick Odom made a sandwich out of him.

That was typical of the fierce Trojan play in the secondary all day.

"They were chopping off our wide men at the line of scrimmage," White said, "and trying to disrupt our pass routes. Their pass defense concept was very good. They also put a lot of pressure on our passers."

In an attempt to circumvent the USC rush, Cal utilized the shotgun formation for the first time this year but the results were low calibre.

"We wanted to give Joe a little more time and also try and protect his knee," White explained.

But even the shotgun didn't help and Roth once was sacked for a 19-yard loss by Gary Jeter.

It was like that much of the afternoon for the suddenly punchless Bears, once one of the most feared offensive machines on the West Coast.

"I felt we had a good game plan and we would have had a chance to win if we had played more tenaciously," White said. "But when you're 2nd and 20 and 3rd and 35 you can't expect miracles."

Naturally, the Bears were asked to compare the basic talents of the Trojans and UCLA.

Several responded.

"UCLA's offense more closely approximates that of Georgia and Oklahoma," White answered. "USC has the best defense we've seen since Oklahoma. They are definitely in the Sooners' class...and better. UCLA has great defensive quickness and they're going to need that quickness against USC's strength and power. The Trojans have the physical people."

"They're similar on defense," Roth analyzed. "I'd say USC has more team speed but I've been rushed harder than today."

Phil Heck, the superb California linebacker, claimed the Trojans are "far more physical than UCLA."

"I felt we beat ourselves with a lot of mistakes and basically, we didn't tackle anybody. They ran right through us."

Heck was of the opinion that Ricky Bell, who appeared far from peak form while managing only 78 yards in 24 carries, wasn't himself.

"He didn't run as recklessly...or as hard as he did last year. Charlie White was the guy that hurt us. Boy, has he got a future."

The future, of course, includes a Nov. 20 date with UCLA. And if California sentiments are correct—tab the Trojans.

Trojans slicker Cal

USC's Mosi Tatupu (36) lumbers straight head for nine-yard touchdown run in third period Saturday at the Coliseum after taking handoff from quarterback Vince Evans (8). Evans' fake before handoff is so effective Cal defender Wade Johnson (foreground) doesn't even see Tatupu. Trojans won, 20-6.

TROJANS' DEFENSE SMOTHERS CAL—

California chopped the Trojan lead to 7-3 in the second quarter after USC's Dennis Thurman fumbled at the USC 25 and Charlie Yauman recovered for the Bears.

California moved to the 16, then got a 33-yard field goal from Breech.

With 1:03 left in the first half, Breech missed a 52-yard attempt, and the Trojans moved 80 yards in 56 seconds for a touchdown that took a toll on the Bears.

Evans' 55-yard pass to Simmrin moved the Trojans into scoring position at the Cal 27 with 41 seconds remaining. Another nine-yarder to Simmrin moved the ball to the 18, and a screen to Bell punched it to the 16.

USC took its last time-out of the half after Evans scrambled to the 8. The Trojan quarterback attempted to pass on the next play, was nearly pulled down at the 20 by Cal's Burl Toler, then broke loose up the middle for a touchdown, bursting through three Bear defenders near the goal line.

Although Glen Walker's conversion was wide, the 13-3 margin the Trojans took into the dressing room forced Cal to revise its plan of attack.

Roth tried everything, even working out of a Shotgun formation for the first time this season. But the Bear quarterback never took his club into deep contention.

Perhaps the most telling series occurred early in the third quarter after Ken McAllister had returned a punt 60 yards to the USC 34.

Poised to put pressure on the Trojans, the Bears were hurled back.

On first down, running back Oliver Hillmon was stopped for no gain. On second down, Jeter knocked Roth down for a 19-yard loss. After a delay of game penalty had moved the Bears back to their 42, Hillmon lost six on a vicious tackle by USC linebacker Rod Martin.

Faced with fourth and 40, the Bears punted and were heard from only once after that, when Breech kicked a 47-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

But that came after the Trojans had taken a 20-3 lead on a 60-yard, third-quarter drive that was finished off by Tatupu's nine-yard rumble up the middle.

Bell said he should be ready for the Stanford game at Palo Alto next Saturday.

"With a little bit of God's help, I should be able to come back," he said.

Asked how he thought his Heisman Trophy chances were now that his rushing average per game had dropped to 164.8, Bell laughed: "Heck, if it's a popularity contest, why should this hurt my chances? All you Heisman voters like me, don't you?"

Inside linebacker Eric Williams, who had 15 tackles, 10 unassisted, looked back upon the Missouri game as motivation for USC's strong defensive performances in the last six contests.

"We were embarrassed," he said. "But that's when we came together as a team. There was no more individual stuff after that.

"Today, we just mixed up our defenses to confuse Roth. He was hounded all day. I felt kind of sorry for him."

The Trojans picked a fine way to show sympathy.

WHY ITASCA HAD THE GUTS TO TRIPLE THE AVERAGE MOTOR HOME PROTECTION.

The 1977 Itasca Owner Protection Plan is already an industry phenomenon. It'll cover you for no less than three years or 36,000 miles. And not just on a few isolated parts, either. We'll cover the inside, the outside, the underside—anything operational, except normal replacement items like spark plugs and oil filters.

In fact, if you keep your 1977 Itasca serviced regularly, we'll assure you that for three years or 36,000 miles, no repair job resulting from a mechanical malfunction will ever cost you more than $25. And for the first year or 12,000 miles—Itasca's Limited Warranty period—it won't even cost you a penny.

How can we afford to offer such a plan? Because we think our Itascas can stand up for a lot longer than three years or 36,000 miles.

And we've got more than a few reasons for feeling so confident.

WE'RE BUILT ON A SOLID FOUNDATION
The Itasca chassis, drivetrain and engine are built and backed by Chevrolet. And you can't get much more reliable than that.

WE ONLY INSTALL EQUIPMENT WE CAN STAND BEHIND
Every interior appliance we install is thoroughly tested. It has to be. Because we also back our appliances for three years or 36,000 miles.

WE'VE GOT THE DEALERS TO MAKE IT WORK
Itasca is one of the fastest growing motor homes in years. And one reason is because we already have over 150 carefully screened, qualified dealers around the country.

If you have a problem with your Itasca, no matter where you are, there's an army of people who can solve it.

WE'VE GOT THE BACKGROUND TO GIVE YOU THE BEST
Itascas are built by the people who make Winnebagos. No doubt, you've heard of them.

Winnebago people have been doing things right for a long, long time. And we think Itasca is the culmination of all that know-how and experience.

Our background has taught us how to offer comfort and quality at prices as low as $15,037* for our 25' mini, $17,526* for our 25' full-size motor home. And these manufacturer's suggested retail prices even include transportation.

Now, a lot of other people will tell you they're just as proud of their motor homes. But how many of them will back up their words with 36,000 miles of protection?

*DEALER PREP AND TAXES ARE EXTRA.

$300 BONUS OFFER
The first sixty buyers of a new Itasca, from October 21 through November 28, 1976, will get their choice of a microwave oven, a portable color TV or a $300 cash rebate. Make your best deal with a participating Southern California dealer, then present this coupon for your bonus.

Dorsett, Pitt trim Syracuse

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tony Dorsett rushed for 242 yards, including a 33-yard bolt for the winning touchdown, as second-ranked Pitt survived a scare and defeated aroused Syracuse, 23-13, Saturday.

The Panthers (8-0) fell behind 13-10 at 6:12 into the third quarter when Syracuse's Dave Jacobs booted a 55-yard field goal, longest ever at Pitt Stadium.

However, Dorsett capped an ensuing 80-yard touchdown drive with his 33-yard scoring run.

Dorsett, who sat out most of the first quarter with an elbow injury, piled up his yardage on 34 carries, which also included a second-quarter scoring plunge.

He now has 1,314 this season and 5,448 yards on his career.

After breaking Archie Griffin's NCAA career mark of 5,177 yards the week before against Navy, Dorsett also surpassed an unofficial mark of 5,297 yards set by Howard Stevens at Louisville and in two years of small college play for Randolph-Macon.

Bobick belts out decision over 'Sanford'

LAS VEGAS (AP)— Undefeated heavyweight Duane Bobick won his 38th professional fight Saturday when his jarring body blows brought him a unanimous decision over Fred (Young Sanford) Houpe.

Bobick, 214, from Bowlus, Mit lost the opening round to the 195-pound Houpe from Oakland, but by the fourth round his body shots had slowed his slim opponent.

Houpe had not lost in 12 previous bouts, but by the end of this fight at the Aladdin Hotel Theater for the Performing Arts, his left eye was closed and even a rally in the final round could not bring him the victory.

A crowd of 4,000 watched as the Bobick-Houpe was the second of two nationally televised 10-rounders.

In the first, Mike Quarry of Orlando, Fla., scored an upset in out-pointing Tom Bethea of New York in a light heavyweight bout.

Quarry used his left hook to full advantage in taking the victory in a brawling battle.

Michigan St. rips Purdue

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan State exploded for five second-half touchdowns, three on scoring passes by quarterback Ed Smith, and came from behind Saturday to swamp Purdue, 45-13.

Trailing 13-10 at the half, Smith hit split end Eugene Byrd for 24-yard strike and then tossed eight yards to fullback Levi Jackson for another score. Moments later, reserve tailback Leon Williams roared 33 yards in three plays, the last a 12-yard sweep to cap a third-period scoring spree.

Rockets host Mets at LBCC

The Long Beach Rockets, off to a less-than-auspicious start, host the L.A. Lions in Southern California Winter League play today at Long Beach City College at 1:30.

Despite the presence of Bobb Grich in the lineup and the outstanding pitching of Greg Harris , the Rockets went down to their second defeat in three games last Sunday when the Robinson Mets broke open a scoreless game in the ninth inning to post a 3-0 win.

Grich is in Baltimore this week on personal business, so will not be in the Rocket lineup this afternoon, but his Oriole teammate, Tony Muser, has joined the team and will be at first base.

Harris will again open on the mound for the Rockets with Don Driskill in relief. Doug Stodgel will be behind the plate.

Lakers tackle Pistons, bid for 2nd home win

The Detroit Pistons will try to end a long losing streak on the West Coast tonight when they take on the Lakers at the Forum in a 7 o'clock game.

Detroit has not won on the road against a Pacific Division team in more than a year, spanning 15 games. The Pistons lost in Seattle Friday and Portland Saturday on their current four-game road trip.

Center Bob Lanier leads the Pistons' attack. Two newcomers are Ralph Simpson, an all-ABA guard acquired in a recent trade; and forward M.L. Carr, who teamed with Marvin Barnes at St. Louis last year. Barnes is on the suspended list.

The Lakers come off an impressive win over Atlanta Friday in their home opener. A win tonight would level their season record at 3-3.

SHORT SHOTS: Detroit is loaded with guards. Simpson, a 20-point career scorer in the ABA, is only No. 3 behind veterans Eric Money and Chris Ford. Then comes Kevin Porter and rookie Phil Sellers of Rutgers . . . John Mengelt is still another but he is injured and unsigned. No wonder Detroit let Bo Lamar go to the Lakers, who had to give up a second-round draft choice in 1978 . . . Laker coach Jerry West says he will rotate his four guards. Here are their number of minutes, shooting percentage and points average: Lucius Allen 175, .422, 10.6; Don Chaney 145, .344, 4.4; Mack Calvin 94, .400, 11.0; Bo Lamar 75, .548, 10.0 . . . Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is averaging 37 minutes, 29 points, 16.8 rebounds, 3.2 blocks and is shooting .602 from the field . . . The Lakers are idle until next weekend when the New York Knicks and Kansas City Kings come to the Forum.

VAGABONDA, under a hustling well timed performance, lagged while being outrun, moved nearer in traffic between horses on the far turn, eased out for a clear path leaving the quarter pole while continuing her full stride, responded to aggressive hand urging most of the way through the stretch and nailed BASTONERA II in the final strides to win going away. The latter raced with easy striking distance of the leaders, saved ground to come between horses and briefly hold the edge between calls then could not hold the winner. ACCRA II broke alertly to force the pace, wore down Lucky Spell to be first into the stretch and gradually slackened. GO MARCH, in traffic on the backstretch, maneuvered and improved her position while really never a strong threat. CHARGER'S STAR slipped through on the rail for her best bid about the quarter pole and tired. SUMMER EVENING raced close up lost a little ground into the stretch with her best bid and tired.

The latter was taken well in hand early and reserved off the pace from along the rail, responded to move clear into the final furlong and gave way grudgingly. Vagabonda upsets S'Anita winner

Outsider Vagabonda, saving her best for the last furlong, scored a thrilling come-from-behind victory over favored Bastonera II Saturday to win the $57,000 Las Palmas Handicap at Santa Anita.

Carrying 118 pounds including jockey Octavio Vergara, Vagabonda lagged far behind the leaders early in the race and was still eighth as the 12-horse field drove along the backstretch.

But when pace-setting Lucky Spell suddenly dropped back and Accra II assumed command, Vagabonda found running room inside and moved into third.

In the final furlong, the team of Vergara and Vagabonda simply showed more speed over the turf course to win by three-quarters of a length, with Accra II third, 1¼ lengths back of Bastonera II.

Vagabonda, a 5-year-old mare owned by Arno D. Schefler, ran 1⅛ miles in 1:48⅗. The lightly regarded, Kentucky-bred Vagabonda paid backers $18.20 to win, $5.60 to place and $5.20 to show.

Bastonera II, the 3-2 favorite, carried the nation's second-leading rider, Laffit Pincay. She returned $3.20 and $3. Accra II, who went off at 27-1, had Jerry Lambert in the saddle and returned $9.80.

The victory was a repeat performance for Vagabonda, who previously had scored an upset over Bastonera II in the San Rafael Stakes at Santa Anita last April. Later she won Del Mar's Ramona Handicap, and in 1976 has four victories in 13 races.

Bastonera II, who had to carry 122 pounds, has been in the running for the title of best older filly or mare in the country after several stakes conquests at Hollywood Park and placings in the Beldame and Ruffian races in New York earlier this year. However, it was Vagabonda, who earned the $34,500 first prize.

TELEFERNER, The West's No. 1 filly candidate for the 1977 Kentucky Derby, goes after her fourth consecutive victory today when she takes on seven rivals in the $121,900 Oak Leaf Stakes.

The richest race in the West for 2-year-old fillies, the Oak Leaf pits Teleferner against such local stars as Lullaby, Asterisca and Any Time Girl.

Telferner, owned by J.C. Polalard, has won the Anokia Stakes, the Del Mar Debuatante and Del Mar Sorrento Stakes.

Her rider in the race offering more than $73,000 to the winner will be Pincay, who is battling Sandy Hawley for national riding honors.

Bill Shoemaker has the ride on Lullaby, who was second in the Hollywood Lassie Stakes to Wavy Waves and won Del Mar's Junior Miss Stakes before running second in the Sorrento.

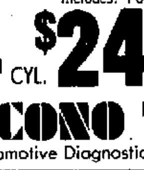

Any Time Girl, voted top 2-year-old filly at Longacres this year, won Bay Meadows' Debutante Stakes in her most recent outing.

Distance of the Oak Leaf is 1 1/16 miles and all entrants will carry 115 pounds.

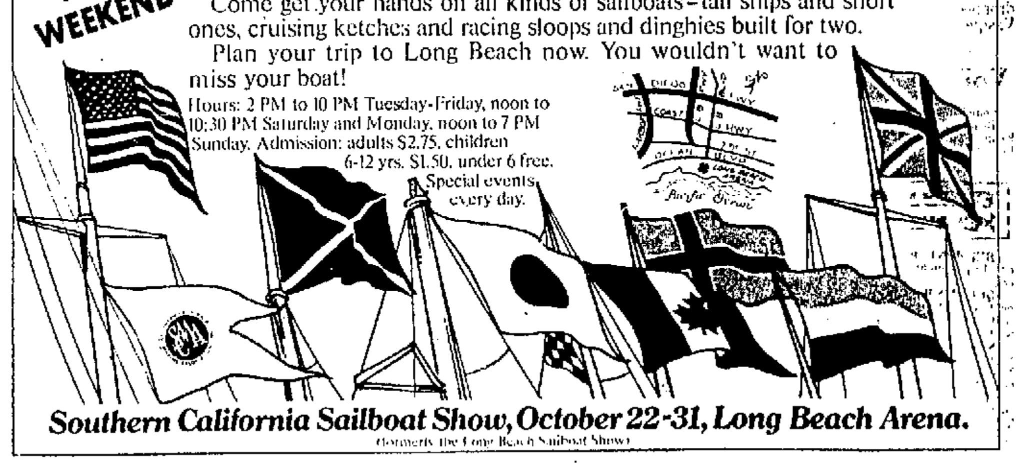

Completing the field are My Fantasy, Alis et Animo, Glenaris and Lady TV.

RV show to start at Dodger Stadium

If the sailboats don't grab you before closing time at 7 tonight, the recreational vehicles will have their turn next. The 24th Recreation Vehicle and Manufactured Housing Show will open Saturday for a nine-day run at Dodger Stadium.

The Long Beach Sailboat Show ends a successful run tonight and the sponsoring Southern California Marine Association is happy with the results. More than 250 boats of all sizes are still on display today, and there are several sold signs on some of the larger boats in the Arena and the adjoining tent.

SCMA officials say that next year's show will be even larger. The new Convention Center building will be completed and a section of that will be used, along with the Arena.

Dodger Stadium, always idle at this time of the year, won't look that way when 1,400 units are placed in and around the Stadium for the RV show. As with the boat show here, there will be units priced from what one might call "moderate" to several at and above the $50,000 mark.

There will be campers, camper shells to fit on small trucks, self-contained vehicles of 35 feet and even one fifth-wheel unit that is 40 feet long. Not only that but the 40-foot unit has a tilt-out room for more space, washer and dryer and even a trash compactor.

THE DODGER STADIUM SHOW is sponsored jointly by the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association and the Manufactured Housing Institute. Dealer days will start on Wednesday; the general public period will begin Saturday at 10 a. m. Hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays and noon to 9 weekdays. Admission prices are $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for juniors (6 to 16 years) and free for those under 6.

The MHI part of the show will feature complete homes that can be hauled to home sites. Some of those units will amaze you because there is more square feet of floor space than a person finds in the average two- or even three-bedroom house.

While there are numerous RV shows throughout the year, this is the one where both RVIA and MHI have an opportunity to pull out all the stops and show virtually everything that is made.

A few examples: Executive Industries will show a self-contained unit that has a plush rear lounge entertainment area. Six persons may sit there in comfort. Vogue's 35-foot model has a carousel bar; King's Highway has a 35-footer with an eye-level oven and double sinks; Born Free will be showing a motorhome that has been road-tested to give 10 to 12 miles to the gallon; Holiday Rambler has a huge bay window for panoramic viewing.

OUTDOOR MINIS—Barcum House of Wheaton, Ill., which introduced a series of fish Ident-I-Cards last spring, now has a nine-card set about waterfowl, all in color and encased in plastic. The complete set shows the 36 species of ducks and geese that are hunted in North America. The cards are weatherproof, 4x6 inches and designed to fit in a hunter's coat pocket. They are available at some sporting goods stores.

Folsom Lake has a new schedule that goes into effect Monday—7 a.m. to 7 p.m. All of the boat ramps at Folsom are closed because of low water except for shallow-draft and car-top boats that can be launched by hand. The two ramps on Lake Natoma, downstream from Folsom, are open the year around. Geese are beginning to arrive at Folsom, but they are for looking, not shooting.

Larry Hopper, Santa Ana, repeated his 1975 victory at Lake Mohave with another win in the Western Bass Association tournament at Cottonwood Cove. He caught 33¾ pounds of bass in two days to top a field of 175 anglers and take home the first prize of $1,000. The next WBA event will be conducted at Lake Don Pedro in Central California Nov. 20-21, with a guaranteed purse of $10,000.

Johnson Motors has produced three new films, Canada's Salmon Coast, Lake Michigan and Obregon Bass Fishing, each of which runs 30 minutes. The films are available at no cost except for return postage. Write to Solana Studios, 4365 N. 27th St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53216.

LBSU volleyball team faces a formidable week

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Hopefully, Long Beach State's volleyball team is enjoying a relaxing weekend. Monday things will be different.

Upcoming for LBSU may well be one of the toughest weeks on the 49er schedule. The 49ers face top-ranked USC Tuesday evening, Brigham Young here Wednesday and then prepare for the UCLA National Volleyball Invitational Friday and Saturday at Pauley Pavilion.

Weakened by injuries, LBSU lost to Pepperdine in five close games Thursday evening at the Malibu campus. Coach Dixie Grimmett hopes Eleanor Zazueta and Rene Rasmussen will be back in the lineup for the USC clash.

The Trojans, who beat LBSU earlier in the season, cemented their first-place standing nationally Thursday evening with a win over UCLA.

Coached by Chuck Erbe, the team was ranked No. 1 in a pre-season poll by Volleyball Magazine, followed by the defending national collegiate champion Bruins.

USC will one of the 24 teams participating in the UCLA event. By coincidence, the 49ers first opponent in pool play will be Pepperdine.

The tournament has been a good indicator of volleyball strength nationally. The tourney winner has gone on to win take the collegiate title each of the past five years.

MINUS THE full-time services of two top offensive players, Long Beach City College's basketball team squeaked by El Camino, 48-46, Wednesday...Juan McLean, who was out with a sore knee, and Toni Bell, who sat out part of the game with a touch of flu, generally generate high double figure scores. As it was, Toni managed to take scoring honors with 16 points. Rhonda Hendersen had 11, Vicki Llewelyn, 8... Because of coach Donna Prindle's bench depth, LBCC was able to hold El Camino to 17 points in the second period after the Vikings trailed 29-22 at half time...Defensive leaders were Brenda Pinesett, Irene Flanagin, Vicki and Eleanor Fields. Cathy Kellis and Rhonda made key free throws at the end of the game to insure the two- point win...Coach Prindle described her JV team as "balanced," an adjective the squad lived up to by outpointing Santa Ana, 33-31. Dawn Wiley scored 8 points, had four steals and four assists. Jane Baker, Virginia Lozano and Veronica Viceroy each added six points. Jane also was high with 14 rebounds and contributed three asssits.

CYPRESS may have been hungry for a win against the Cerritos cagers but the Falcons showed superior strength to earn a 76-54 victory...Double figure scorers for Cerritos were Connie Vanderberg, 19. 56 per cent from the floor; Donna Schultz, 16; Barbara Reinalda, 11, and Janice Viano, 10...The Falcons are on the road for the month of November. The next home game will be Dec. 1.

THERE WAS good news and bad news last week for the LBCC volleyball team. The Vikings opened with an easy 15-8, 15-0 win over Cypress...Then the Vikings "played the best I've seen them play," according to coach Merri Machado, but lost to El Camino, 15-4, 15-11, 16-14...In the recent San Bernardino tournament, the winning teams were those with the best depth to outlast the grueling schedule. LBCC lost to L.A. Valley during its seventh match of the day. Longest break of the day was 30 minutes of rest.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

IF THE LBCC field hockey team can skip by Rio Hondo and Pierce Colleges, its league record would climb to 4-1. The Vikings host Rio Hondo Tuesday and play at Pierce Thursday...Patty Cape was a one-woman scoring machine Tuesday in the Pasadena match. Driving in every goal, Patty, backed by fine team play, sparked the Vikings to a 4-0 win.

PREP PATTER — The volleyball race at the high school level is gathering momentum as competition among Millikan, Wilson and Lakewood fires up...Tuesday, Millikan varsity handed Wilson its first loss of the year in two games, 15-4, 15-9, leaving the Bruins tied for first place with Lakewood. Millikan remains second...For the confident and elated Rams, the win evened the score for an earlier loss on the Bruin home court. Millikan coach Suzzane Miguel said her team is pointing toward its game with Lakewood. "The first game was close, and I think the next time we are going to do it."...Wilson and Lakewood maintained their one game edge over Millikan during Thursday's round of play. Jordan fell to Wilson, 15-9, 15-10...Lakewood took Poly in three games, 2-15, 16-14, 16-14...In other matches, Millikan and Poly topped Compton and Lakewood beat Jordan...In JV competition Wilson pushed Millikan out of first place leaving the spot open to the Bruins.

Wilson's strong varsity tennis team continued undefeated, beating Jordan, 19-3½, and Millikan, 12-10½...The squad is headed by Mary Reeves, Karil Chang, Kathy Wheat, singles; and Brenda Metoyen-Gail Moorhead, Joy Backstrom-Anne Tally, Monica Reyas-Laura O'Neil, doubles, with Lisa Holzman, varsity substitute...Lakewood's JV team defeated Jordan, 5-2½, and Poly, 7½-0. The Lancer varsity scored identical 17½-5 wins over Poly and Jordan...Other tennis results included Poly's shutout of Compton, 22½-0, varsity, 7½-0, JV, and Wilson JVs' 4½-3 victory over Jordan.

RACE ROUNDUP

ROOSEVELT RACEWAY — Windshield Wiper roared from behind on the far outside in the stretch and punctured the dream of Keystone Ore to win the Pacing Triple Crown by winning the $161,290 Messenger Pace Saturday night. Keystone Ore, the 1-2 favorite with Stanley Dancer in the sulky, had burst out of the pack coming to the head of the stretch and appeared on his way to becoming the first Triple Crown winner in six years. But it was all in vain. Billy Haughton brought Windshield Wiper to the far outside and sped down the stretch to beat the odds-on favorite by three-quarters of a length in 2:00 for the one mile. Windshield Wiper went off at 9-2 with the crowd of 17,400 and paid $11, $3.40 and $2.60. Keystone Ore, who finished a neck ahead of Raven Hanover, returned $2.40 and $2.10. Raven Hanover, handled by George Sholty, returned $2.80 to show. Keystone Ore had won the first two legs of the Triple Crown, the Cane Pace at Yonkers and the Little Brown Jug at Delaware, Ohio. Windshield Wiper earned $80,640 for his seventh victory in 23 starts this year.

AQUEDUCT — My Juliet, a 4-year-old filly on the comeback trail after a leg injury suffered last May, upset Bold Forbes, the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner, in the $55,300 Vosburgh Handicap. A crowd of 26,960 saw the daughter of Gallant Romeo ridden by Anthony Black and overlooked at 9-1, lead all the way in running the seven furlongs in 1:21⅘ under 120 pounds. At the finish, she was two lengths ahead of Bold Forbes, the 1-2 favorite under top weight of 126 pounds. Bold Forbes was one length ahead of It's Freezing, was disqualified from second place and dropped to third after Jacinto Vasquez, the rider of It's Freezing, claimed interference in the stretch run. Another claim of foul against Bold Forbes, this one by Mike Venezia, the rider of Soy Numero Uno, the 5-2 second choice, was dismissed. My Juliet paid $20.20.

HAWTHORNE — Almost Grown led all the way to win the $126,720 Hawthorne Gold Cup before 15,595 spectators. Teddy's Courage, in contention all the way in the 1¼-mile race, finished a neck back in second. Romeo was a close third in the field of 10. American History, the 5-2 favorite, finished ninth. Almost Grown, scoring his first stakes victory, earned $96,720 and paid $9.80.

KEENELAND — Optimistic Gal, sent off as the odds-on favorite, coasted to an easy victory in the $81,550 Splinster Stakes. Rokeby Stables' Ivory Wand was closing ground at the finish, but jockey Craig Perret never used his whip on Optimistic Gal, who scored by five lengths. Ivory Wand had a 14-length margin over Rocky Trip, with Enchanted Native another length back. The winner, timed in 1:51⅘ for the 1⅛ miles, paid $3.40.

Earl Wilson

Sex showman scores again

NEW YORK — Hillard Elkins doesn't mind being controversial.

Back from England and on the way to Hollywood, he padded about his East Side townhouse, while his fifth bride, Judith Wilson from England, was napping somewhere upstairs. It was mid-afternoon.

In his hands were sheaves of London newspaper clippings, mostly critical of his sequel to "Oh! Calcutta!" The Evening News said that "Carte Blanche," the sexy musical, was "just a crude shocker," with splendidly endowed ladies and lots and lots of naughty words.

"I'd say the reviews were mixed," smiled Hilly as he hurried in from the kitchen with some freshly brewed coffee. "They went from raves to absolute kills. Even the kills had some good things we could put on the marquees.

"I think 'Carte Blanche' goes further than 'Oh! Calcutta!'" he said, producing still more clippings. "We get a little more serious. In 'Calcutta' we treated sex humorously.

"We've got some fetishes . . . you name them, we've got 'em. We've got a little bit of whipping, flashing and some bestiality to keep everybody happy. What kind? Just a dog. The man they called 'Lord Porn,' one of the guys championing purity, sat through it and didn't object."

SO WHEN will 'Carte Blanche' hit Broadway?"

"Not for a year." Still amused by the reviews, Hilly handed over one that said, "To call the evening rubbish is to dignify the trash can."

The headline, when he got married a couple of weeks ago, said the "Carte Blanche Man Weds." He told one paper that sexy shows had no influence on his private life.

"Are you going to be proud of being called a producer of pornography?"

"But I'm not!" he said quickly. "My objective is not exploitation but to entertain. I'm proud of the fact that I had a show that had the first love affair between a black and a white. (Sammy Davis Jr. and Paula Wayne in 'Golden Boy.') That was the year the networks got upset because Harry Belafonte touched Petula Clark on television.

"That was a long time before 'The Wiz.' I'm proud of bringing over from South Africa the shows 'The Islands' and 'Sizwe Banzi Is Dead' and the awards they got.

"I think I'm going to have trouble bringing 'Carte Blanche' to Broadway. The League of New York Theaters tries to be a censor. Sex on the stage and in films has become a political football. It's very easy to get votes if you attack a sex show.

"I JUST don't believe that a man who pays 0 to see a sexy show is going to leave the theater and try to rape the first woman he sees. In London both my shows are running 10 blocks apart, and they're both selling out."

Elkins at 47 has many precious projects ahead. He has three movies in mind, plus "An Evening of Newley and Bricusse" at Chelsea Town and "The Innocents," based on Henry James' "The Turn of the Screw." And he and Judy, former wife of film producer Gene Gutowski, will be having a honeymoon in Hawaii.

"We met 11 years ago and then saw each other again a year ago and fell in love," he said.

A story was circulated that Hilly owned a theater and gave it to Claire Bloom as a wedding present, one marriage ago. Hilly looked wistfully around the room, at the various paintings, including one of Napoleon.

"I wish I had owned one," he said. "I'd have made half a million on 'Calcutta' if I'd had my own theater."

Today's Best Laugh: Comic Mickey Freeman was given a plaque by a fraternal group during dinner at a restaurant. "It's the first time," he said, "I ever got an award with a choice of two vegetables."

Wish I'd Said That: Once a dirty book was something to be dusted. Now it's reissued as a paperback.

Remembered Quote: "When you borrow money from a friend, think first of which of the two you need most." — Raymond Serra.

Kenton doesn't jive much about jazz—he plays it

By BARBRALU FRIED
Ridder News Service

Stan Kenton is as reticent with words as he is prolific in his music.

Pianist, arranger, big-band conductor, composer, teacher and record executive, Kenton has "influenced and haunted the contemporary American music since his first band opened in 1941, according to Hi-Fi magazine.

Kenton just doesn't have a lot to say about it—he's too busy doing it.

The 64-year-old Kenton has been involved in music since age 16. Now his career has crystallized into three main energy outlets: directing his band, leading clinics at schools throughout the country and running his recording and distributing firm, Creative World.

Behind all three activities is Kenton's dedication to jazz. "It's the most important music," he said during a phone interview.

The clinics Kenton conducts for high-school and college music departments are an attempt to help both teachers and students become more aware of jazz, how to play and teach it. Kenton and his musicians teach improvision, rhythm and how to play in a group.

Kenton started the clinics in 1958 because "20 years ago there were no jazz teachers, no books, no nothing. Professional musicians never had the time."

Now Kenton finds the time, although he is on the road at least 49 weeks a year and performing every day.

Kenton's current 19-member band is the latest of a long string of bands he's been involved with since he played with local Los Angeles groups in the early 1930s. He has been associated with dozens of musicians and arrangers, some of whom went on to their own impressive careers, like Kai Winding, Maynard Ferguson, Chris Connor and June Christy.

Kenton has explored just about every format into which jazz can delve.

Star of 'Star Trek' treks down 10 years of memory

By LINDA CORNETT
Ridder News Service

Capt. Kirk is an officer totally in command of his ship and his crew, a determined explorer who would not flinch at facing a whole battery of Klingons to reach the ghost ship, mysterious force or intergallactic meddler beyond, a warm man with a deep concern for his crew and friends and a comfortable collection of human faults.

William Shatner is a man who insists "I am not Captain Kirk" but takes pride in being "known" at Cape Kennedy.

Shatner discussed the 10-year phenomenon of "Star Trek," plans for a "Trek" movie and lack of plans for a return of the long-remembered, often-rerun television series in a brief telephone interview from his California home.

"Star Trek," which followed the star ship Enterprise and her crew on two years of space-roving adventure, was officially put to rest in 1968. Unofficially the television program lives on in reruns and the memories of thousands of fans and the near-fanatical Trekkies.

The explanation, Shatner stated, is elusive. However, he offered a series of "one-liners" that probably contribute to the continued following:

"The congeniality of the family within the stories; the excitement of action adventure; the underlying theme that had a deeper meaning than the story line; the personal appeal of members of the cast; the adherence to standards of good science fiction."

Trekkies, Shatner confessed, leave him "amazed at the whole thing, quite frankly."

The amazing perseverance of the fans has brought a revival of sorts—a feature-length "Star Trek" film. Shatner, who has signed for the film, refuses to disclose the plot. It exists at present, he said, as a scenario that will be "talked about, changed and rewritten" several times before shooting begins in March.

The film, Shatner hopes, will be only the first of a series of movies with the original crew (Leonard Nimoy is negotiating a contract for the first) and the "basic layout of the star ship." There will be "some big names" in the series, Shatner predicted.

Although "nobody knows" the chances for a revival of the television "Star Trek," Shatner said he prefers the movie option. He is not sure, he said, that he would agree to return to the "lot of work" of a television series.

Although he has not stepped onto a set as Capt. Kirk for eight years, Shatner said he still has an interest in the country's space program.

"I get back and forth to Cape Kennedy quite a lot," he said with pride. "Yesterday I was on a nuclear sub."

However, he insists, "I am not Capt. Kirk."

Singer plans new tour of Soviet Union

NASHVILLE (AP)— Country music entertainer Roy Clark is making plans for his second concert tour of the Soviet Union.

Last winter, Clark was the first country music artist to headline his own show in the Soviet Union.

No dates have been set for a second tour, a Clark spokesman said Saturday.

Elsewhere on the Nashville music scene, country music singer Loretta Lynn said she had gained 36 pounds in the past year.

"A year ago I was a scrawny 100 pounds," she said. "Now I am up to 136. I feel much better."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Begins a busy year of many small lessons in pragmatism. The main problem is to stick with a given project long enough to see if it works and learn why if it won't. Unused resources are either brought into amazingly productive use or left for others to exploit. Relationships are liable to changes from outside causes; it's up to you how to react. Some of today's natives conceal one grand ambition under a casual surface, others scatter their attention over a wide area. Those born this year will be impatient.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Your workweek begins with an obstacle or show of resistance. Forcing issues won't bring desired results. Try another approach with a different group.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Fortune smiles on your candid efforts. See that you smile back, as the going is a bit rough. Make sure what you say is solidly upheld by reliable evidence.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Competition is brisk and a trifle harsh. A lackadaisical attitude doesn't escape notice. Be quick to check your figures. File petitions for what you want.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): It's so easy to overstate your case, but you're better off in long run by saying little and doing more via practiced methods. A looked for contingency finally comes.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Strive for consistent planning and sensible behavior. Take a strong stand on topics, and be sure to keep informed. Practical jokes are out of order.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your chances of getting the upper hand are good if you don't react to needling. Do exactly what you decide without comment. Use your sharp eye to detect fine points.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Choices are already made; get busy on constructive work set in motion. Take advantage of current opportunity. Don't hold onto unprofitable items.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In spite of yourself, you do something obstinate or whimsical with your work. Straighten matters out and get into production again.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Travel and self-promotion are heavily favored. Announce plans and have alternatives to accommodate unforeseen conditions. You can enlist aid for imaginative schemes.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You've let yourself in for more adventurous experience than planned. Be precise with details and refuse a temporary compromise. A bargain is anything but.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're in for extra spending, like it or not, so bring cash, references and a notebook for accurate records of purchases. Don't spend time objecting.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): You can drive a fair bargain. It's wiser to deal with people you're acquainted with than to dicker with strangers. Romance is intense.

Self-picture of boorish tyrant

By GENE SISKEL
Knight News Service

A documentary film on the Uganda tyrant, "Idi Amin Dada," made in 1974 by a French film crew, has been called a rare work of documentary film art, principally because of its dispassionate attitude toward its monstrous subject.

Well, there's no question the 90-minute film conveys a stunning reality — that a boorish killer actually is running a nation of 10 million — but, beyond that, I found "Idi Amin Dada" to be more routine than anything special.

Filmmaker Barbet Schroeder and his small crew apparently went to Uganda in 1974 and asked Amin to help him make a documentary — about Amin. The strategy was shrewd. Amin is nothing if not an egotist, and he began staging events for Schroeder's camera.

Long a foe of Israel, Amin stages for Schroeder's film crew a fake invasion of Israel's Golan Heights. This he does with a couple of tanks, maybe 20 men and a jet airplane. It's all staged on a hunk of desert with Amin, in his ever-present military uniform, whooping it up like the power-drunk cowboy bombadier in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove."

The film "Idi Amin Dada" (it's never explained whether "Dada" is Amin's real last name or just a self-applied moniker that crudely marks him as the father of his country) is very good at depicting Amin's personality traits.

He's an incurable braggart: He boasts of his nation's navy, even though Uganda is land-locked. He boasts of his sexual prowess, after showing some of his 18 children, by saying, "I have 12 boys and six girls. I am a very good marksman, yes."

What the documentary doesn't show, however, is how Amin rose to power and how he stays there. The film also is sketchy about background details of Amin's life. Instead, the picture concludes abruptly with a narrator asking, "After a century of colonialism (in Uganda), isn't it a deformed image of ourselves that Idi Amin reflects?"

A little research into Amin's background reveals that Amin has refined colonial atrocities into a fine but blunt art. The documentary slides over the fact that 18,000 to 80,000 Ugandans have been listed as missing persons since Amin's military coup in 1971. The pictures avoids discussing the widely held opinion that Amin is suffering from an advanced case of syphilis.

No mention is made of the fact that one of Amin's wives was found dead, chopped into little pieces, following a rumor that she was carrying on with another man. One opinion has it that Amin was mistaken about his wife's (one of four) infidelity. She was murdered, apparently, shortly after she had visited her gynecologist.

"Idi Amin Dada" does show us a garrulous giant of a dictator who is charming in a crude way. And maybe that's the source of his power within the world at large. He's thought of as a crazy buffoon, so the big powers leave well enough alone.

But "Idi Amin Dada" is not as successful in presenting Amin's position within his own country. True, we see the deference paid to him at every turn. True, we see him wander about the nation as if it were his own back yard. But the film never investigates Amin's absolute control of the military, the source of his stranglehold on 10 million human beings.

FILM NOTES: I spoke to director Schroeder while he was in New York City for the New York Film Festival. He said that Amin stays in power because "he is very cunning, very clever and he is ruthless.

"Certainly one day he will be killed," Schroeder says. "He is dangerous because he believes in what he is doing. He's not the sort of dictator who one day will run away to Switzerland where he had hidden a great deal of money. He thinks what he is doing is right. He thinks he is making a revolution.

Actually what he is doing is giving more and more power to the army." And that, according to Schroeder, ultimately may be what destroys Amin, when a new strongman emerges within the army.

Schroeder also elaborated on the last line of narration in his film, which positions Amin as a logical end-point of colonialism. "He had no moral values taught to him," Schroeder explained. "He was in the British colonial army. That was his school.

"He participated in the repression against the Mau Mau liberation forces, and that's not the best place to learn about human rights. He got used to killing then. I don't think he has any moral standards."

Rites slated for guitarist

Private services for Phil Reed, 25, lead guitarist of the Flo and Eddie rock band, will be held today on a boat near San Pedro.

Reed, who died last Sunday after a fall from the ninth floor of his Salt Lake City hotel room, was cremated Wednesday.

Salt Lake City police were investigating reports that an illegal entry into the room adjoining Reed's might be connected to his death.

Liza went out on a limb, sawed it off

By SUSAN STARK
Knight News Service

With "A Matter of Time," the disaster movie takes a new turn. This one is not about a disaster; this one is in and of itself a disaster — for Vicente Minnelli, the director, for his daughter, Liza, for her co-star Ingrid Bergman, and for the audience which, with good reason, had expected nothing less than a dazzling entertainment from their three-way collaboration.

Minnelli, who in the past has given us some of filmdom's all-time great musicals, like "Meet Me in St. Louis," "An American in Paris" and "Bandwagon," has reportedly disavowed the new film.

The word is that someone else cut the film and that Minnelli, after viewing the work of the outside cutter, said the film was not merely someone else's version of his film — it was not his film at all.

Be that as it may, it is impossible to imagine how Minnelli himself might have pulled a substantially better movie out of the existing footage. Perhaps the work might have had continuity, perhaps he'd have seen to it that the prints were color corrected, but there is not much he could have done about the picture's most noticeable flaw, which is the casting of Liza Minnelli in the lead role.

Minnelli, vibrant and dynamic and affecting a performer as she is, simply cannot pull off the role of a young woman who, by her beauty, takes the world by storm. They can dress her up and make her up from here to kingdom come. They do. And she still looks like . . . well, like Liza.

As Nina, the country girl who comes to Rome to work as a chambermaid in a once-elegant hotel, Minelli must grow gradually into the kind of woman Ingrid Bergman's Contessa Sanziani once was. The countess — old, broke and dotty — regales the chambermaid with tales of her ultra-glamorous past, of the days when the richest and most gifted men in Europe vied for her favors.

The film visualizes her recollections, putting Minnelli at the center of them, decked out to kill, with consistently ludicrous results. Not casting someone who looked at least a little like the young Ingrid Bergman, someone beautiful, in the Nina role, sabotaged the film's chance for success going in. And Minnelli has no one to blame for that but himself.

Batman's boy Robin says he's bigger than ever now

By VICKI AVIDIVA
Knight News Service

In his second year at UCLA, where he was majoring in drama, the young man picked up his real-estate license as well.

He sold a home to a Hollywood producer and, in the course of things, was put in touch with an agent.

Some chapters later, student Burt Ward was Robin, Boy Wonder, on the "Batman" TV series, which some called a new low in video trash and others the supreme satire.

Burt says 120 episodes were filmed while the show was in prime time for more than two years.

The Robin of the 1966-68 TV series says his fame is greater than ever, due to reruns: "In prime time the show only went throughout the western half of the U.S. Once syndicated, it went all over. It is now known in 88 countries."

These days he can be found engrossed in law books. "I'm studying law right now—only as an interest, though, kind of a continuing self-education plan. I do not want to become a lawyer, but I've been considering something in politics."

He says, looking back, that the series was "way ahead of its time."

Final round today

Nicklaus has 2-shot lead in Aussie Open

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Defending champion Jack Nicklaus opened a two-stroke lead in the Australian Open golf championship Saturday with a 54-hole score of 215.

Nicklaus overtook the second-round leader, American Curtis Strange, after a par-72 on the tough 7,100-yard Australian Club course.

Strange, who had a four-stroke lead before Saturday's play, slipped to second after shooting a five-over-par 77.

Australia's David Graham is in third place at 219 after three rounds. One stroke behind Graham is Australian Bruce Crampton, who had a 68 for Saturday's low round.

Other scores include Maurie Bembridge, Britain, 220; Terry Kendall, New Zealand, 221; Darrell Welch, Australia, 222; Ken Nagle, Australia, 223; Bill Brask, USA, 223; Barry Burges, Australia, 223; Clyde Boyer, Australia, 223; David Good, Australia, 223; Rodger Davis, Australia, 224; and Bob charles, New Zealand, 224.

The fourth and final round will be played today.

U.S. PROS TRAILING IN JAPAN

SODEGAURA, Japan (AP)—Hsieh Min Nan of Taiwan scored a four-under-par 68 Saturday and took the third-round lead by two strokes in the $100,000 Bridgestone golf tournament.

The leading American is Hale Irwin, who moved up to a 14th-place tie after shooting a one-under-par 71 Saturday for a three-round total of 216.

Americans Forrest Fezler and Orville Moody, the 1969 U.S. Open champion, were in a 20th-place tie at 217.

Pensacola golf rained out

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP)—A torrential rainstorm washed out Saturday's play and postponed until Monday the scheduled windup of the $125,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament, the last individual event on the pro tour this year.

Jack Tuthill, tournament director for the PGA Tour, ruled the Pensacola Country Club course unplayable Saturday morning and announced single rounds of 18 holes will be played both today and Monday.

The storm, which caused some local flooding, hit Pensacola during the night and turned greens, tees, fairways and bunkers into lakes.

"The course was completely unplayable," Tuthill said.

"With the large cut (83 men qualified for the final two rounds), plus the short daylight hours at this time of the year, plus the fact that it's going to take us some time to get the course in shape, it's almost impossible to go for two rounds on Sunday," he said.

No one had teed off when play was washed out Saturday.

After 36 holes, defending champion Jerry McGee led at 137, five under par. Former Masters champion Tommy Aaron was one shot back at 138.

Former Pensacola title-holder Lee Elder, veteran Frank Beard and Mac McLendon, a winner a week ago in the Southern Open, were bunched at 139.

ELECTION '76

A slip-and-slide race to a photo-finish

By BILL BROOM
National Bureau Chief

WASHINGTON — At the start, the 1976 presidential election looked like a runaway. Into the homestretch, it began to resemble a photo finish.

Jimmy Carter, overwhelming favorite to become the first southerner elected President since Zachary Taylor in 1848, saw his 30-point lead in the public opinion polls shrink in 75 days to a mere 3 to 6 point margin.

President Ford, bearing the scars of Watergate and handicapped by a sagging economy with the highest unemployment rate in any election year since the Depression, somehow was narrowing the gap.

"The polls are so close that I think we have an excellent opportunity to pull the political surprise of the century and to come back and win," an ebullient Ford said as he left the White House for the third and final television debate.

Key offices, issues Tuesday

When voters go to the polls Tuesday, their ballots will call for votes on a half dozen races, from the Presidency down to judicial offices; on 15 state propositions and on a variety of local measures.

All of the candidates and issues deserve careful consideration, but some are more important than others. The Independent, Press-Telegram in recent weeks has been making recommendations on ballot measures. Today, we summarize our recommendations on what we believe to be the major offices and issues, as follows:

PRESIDENT — We believe the major concern of American citizens this year is their growing tax burden. We believe that burden can only be relieved by cutting back on government programs and employes. We believe that President Gerald R. Ford is committed to that sort of program.

Democrat Jimmy Carter, heavily backed by union bosses — but not always by union members — proposes that if he is elected he will institute many new government programs. He also promises tax reductions, but you can't have it both ways. More government means more taxes.

We favor Ford's program of paring down the federal government, cutting federal spending and working toward a balanced budget. This program already has halted double-digit inflation and produced a recovery in the economy. We recommend the re-election of President Ford to continue that program.

U. S. SENATE — For the same reason that we recommend re-election of President Ford, we advocate the election of S. I. "Sam" Hayakawa as a U. S. Senator. Hayakawa, too, believes government is too big and that the cost of maintaining it is an unreasonable one for the taxpayers.

The Democratic incumbent, John V. Tunney, on the other hand, sees new federal government programs as the answer to all the nation's problems. Tunney, we believe, is one of the "big spenders." Unfortunately, he isn't "the last of the big spenders."

There is an additional problem with Tunney as a senator. He too frequently is absent from Congress. As we outlined in an earlier editorial, he has missed many votes which were important to his Californian constituents and to the nation as a whole.

California needs two full-time Senators. Hayakawa will give the job his full time, and will work toward less government and lower taxes.

CONGRESSIONAL — Our endorsement in the 34th Congressional District is based on the belief that a vote for Dan Lungren is a vote for economy. Lungren said earlier in his campaign he is running for Congress, "because I'm tired of seeing nearly half my income taken in taxes; because we must bring an end to foolish programs that waste billions of our dollars each year." With this, we wholeheartedly agree.

Lungren is a young man, 30 years old, but he has had jobs where he had to work hard for his money: a shipyard worker, a department store salesman and a construction laborer. He is now an attorney. While going to Georgetown University in the nation's capital to get his law degree, he learned about government by working for two senators and as a staff assistant to Anne Armstrong, U. S. ambassador to Britain.

We believe the voting record of the Democratic incumbent, Mark Hannaford, is one in support of big government spending programs. He voted, for example, with the House majority to boost President Ford's budget by more than $18 billion.

We believe the voters must elect men who will vote against increased government spending and the resulting higher taxes, and we recommend the election of Dan Lungren, who we believe is such a man.

STATE SENATE — Incumbent Senator George Deukmejian has served a total of 14 years in the State Senate and Assembly, and has built a solid reputation for opposing unnecessary spending, and yet introducing and supporting legislation to correct real problems of Californians.

Senator Deukmejian was elected by his Republican colleagues as Minority Floor Leader, the No. 2 man in the Senate. This key position of responsibility in the Legislature gives Long Beach added strength in its Sacramento representation.

The more than 150 bills which Senator Deukmejian has authored and which now are state law range from those imposing tougher penalties on crimes of violence to appropriations for education in Long Beach, from one establishing the Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance Program to several on treatment of alcoholics, drug abuse and delinquency prevention.

We recommend that voters in the 31st Senate District re-elect Senator Deukmejian.

STATE ASSEMBLY — Long Beach's two Assemblymen, Mike Cullen in the 57th District and Fred W. Chel in the 58th District, have done a good job of representing their constituents and in working with city officials, and both deserve to be re-elected.

Cullen especially was effective in working out a compromise on the new California Coastal Conservation law among environmentalists, local governments, developers and organized labor. He helped Long Beach city officials make known their concerns to state legislators.

Chel has been an assemblyman for only one term, but has shown a good understanding of government. He has announced his intention of working for property-tax reform and an increase in jobs through private enterprise. We support both objectives.

STATE MEASURES — The 15 state propositions have varying degrees of importance, but only two, we believe are very controversial: Proposition 13 to establish gambling on greyhound racing, and Proposition 14, the United Farm Workers' initiative.

Proposition 13 should be defeated. There are many problems concerned with inhumane treatment of the animals and the concern of law-enforcement officers that the gambling would attract organized crime. The major reason for its defeat, however, is that it is rigged to turn over a multimillion-dollar gambling operation to the promoters.

As the proposition is written, virtually no one but George Hardie, the front man for the gamblers, and his cohorts would be able to get one of the licenses which would grant them a monopoly on greyhound racing in California. The provision that some of the revenue would be turned over to various charitable uses is a sham, because the amount is a small fraction of what the proponents would pocket.

Proposition 14 also should be defeated, primarily because it is unnecessary and, because it is an initiative, would freeze what should be flexible labor law into a statute that could be changed in even the smallest degree only by another statewide election.

The rights of farm workers to vote in secret elections for or against union representation are guaranteed in the existing Agricultural Labor Relations Act of 1975. Although there was a period last year when the Agricultural Labor Relations Board ran out of funds, the Legislature has appropriated money for fiscal 1976-77, and the ALRB is fully financed and active.

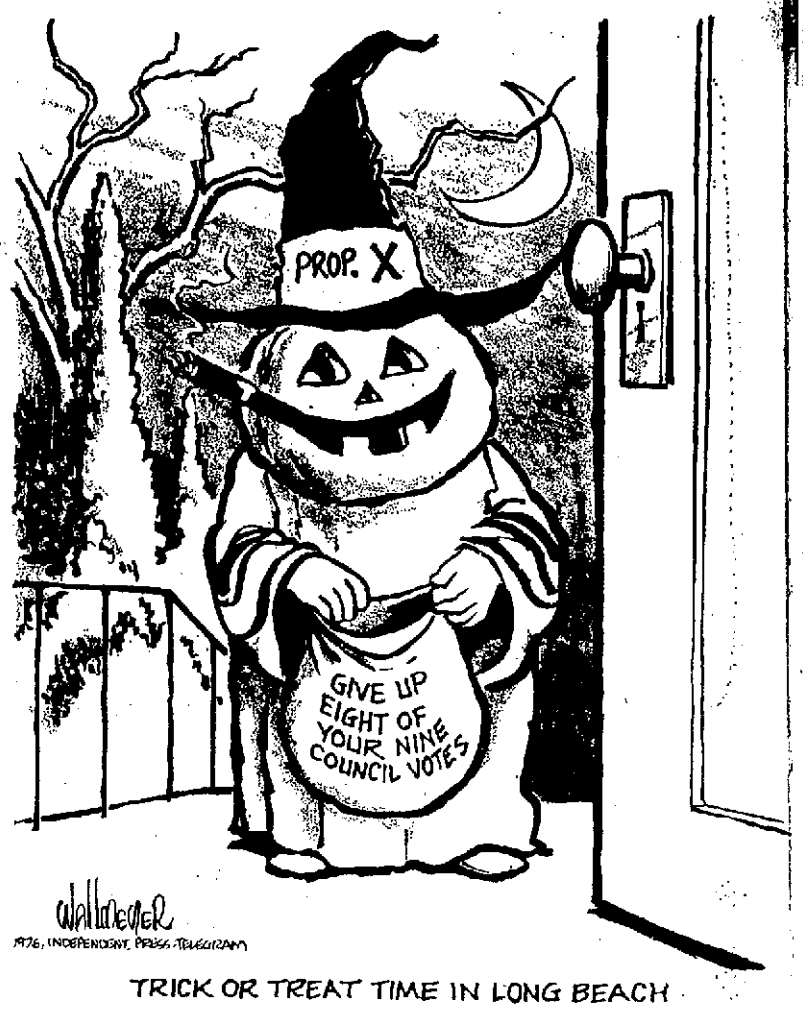

LONG BEACH PROPOSITIONS — Only one of the two city measures, Proposition X, is of significance. Proposition Z merely eliminates from the charter a section pertaining to the "Department of Public Welfare," which no longer exists.

Proposition X concerns the nomination and election of City Council members. At present, they are nominated by district, with only voters in each district voting for their representative. The two candidates with the most votes in the primary run citywide in the general election. Proposition X would provide that both nomination and election would be by district, and only voters in the district would vote for the representative from that district.

We believe the present system requires a council member to be responsive to his district, because he is nominated by the district, but he must also be responsive to citywide problems, because he is elected by voters citywide.

The key argument against Proposition X, we believe, is that if it is adopted, Long Beach voters will be able to vote for only one council member. They now can vote for or against all nine. Because council members now have four-year staggered terms, a voter would get to vote for only one council member once every four years.

This is completely inadequate representaion, and we recommend a NO vote on Proposition X.

TRICK OR TREAT TIME IN LONG BEACH

Race 'up for grabs'

WASHINGTON — As this is written, the presidential election is up for grabs, winnable by either President Gerald Ford or James Earl Carter Jr.

We have that on the authority of George Gallup and Lou Harris, panjandrums of the polling business. In fact, "up for grabs" is the exact phrase Harris used in an appearance before Washington reporters Wednesday.

"If Jimmy Carter loses this election, and I for one would not rule out that possibility...he will have booted, by far, the biggest lead in modern political history," said Harris.

Gallup, who has been taking the public pulse since 1935, said there has been a greater shift of opinion in the last few weeks than he has ever encountered.

AS THE POLLSTERS spoke, Carter's 35 point margin over Ford had shrunk to a 3-4 point edge in Harris' reckoning and six points in Gallup's.

By any measure, Carter has run the worst campaign, shown himself to be the least effective candidate since Barry Goldwater. Let's throw in Herbert Hoover for the hell of it. Even St. George McGovern put up a better fight.

The Carter bloom was never fuller than on the concluding night of the Democratic National Convention last July in New York. In seriatim, he wilted his candidacy with nine major blunders.

While the six weeks between the convention and Labor Day dribbled away, Carter drained his fish pond, played softball with the press (thus easing their culture shock at encountering Plains) while the chore of assembling a national organization and planning the campaign went undone. He thus began his travels, on Labor Day, with an inept advance team, non-existent liaison with state and local Democratic organizations and no clear idea of what lay ahead.

While shirking his organizational chores, Carter entertained at Plains a succession of his party's elder statesmen and gurus. The intent was to show that this inexperienced one-term governor was exposing himself to the Democratic party's wisest counsel. The effect however undercut the outsider-populist-common man image, free of ideological taint, he had so carefully contrived in his winning drive through the primaries.

THE THIRD AND fourth mistakes sound contradictory but are not. Carter failed to expand the small staff of talented Georgians who had served him so well in winning the nomination to include men and women with prior experience in a national campaign. Meanwhile, he reached a decision to impose state campaign directors from outside the states in which they were assigned to perform. The local leaders were furious and insulted and their performance has shown it, particularly in California.

With a $24 million limit on campaign spending, Carter's Atlanta headquarters failed to establish budget controls. A wad of dough was blown on aimless, criss-crossing of the country in September at great expense. When big money was needed for the final two weeks, the cupboard was almost bare.

As a campaigner, Carter abandoned the message that had served well in the primaries — that of the outsider seeking to cut through the cynicism and knavery of Washington with humility and compassion and good intention. It broke his rhythm, disillusioned thousands and raised the suspicion he had conned everybody during the primaries. The anti-hero looked like any other pol willing to change his tune to please his audience. Good Jimmy. Bad Jimmy. Will the real Jimmy please stand up?

Meanwhile, Carter talked too much about himself. He had some desperate need to explain his religiousness, southernness and ruralness. Some people would call this inferiority complex.

AS THE CAMPAIGN got rough and the opposition started to attack, Carter proved to be thin-skinned. He also proved to be a stubborn man who bore criticism from his own camp not at all, or gracelessly. His reaction to pressure was to reveal a mean and nasty streak in his character. The quiet eloquence of Carter in the spring gave way to shrill hyperbole in the autumn ("the tax laws are a disgrace to the human race," etc).

In short, Carter failed to perceive the difference between running for the nomination and running for the presidency, where the stresses are greater, the demands more complex, and the media unrelenting.

A similar failure, should he be elected, could cost the country dearly. Let us pray he is the fast learner his issues advisers say he is.

Ladies room in the Senate

By BOB SCHMIDT
(From Our State Bureau)

SACRAMENTO — Women acquired the right to vote in the United States in 1920, and in 1922 helped elect five women to the California State Assembly.

There has never been a greater number serving at the same time, but there should be when the 1977-78 session gets under way next Dec. 6.

Three women now serve in the Assembly: Pauline Davis of Portola, Leona Egeland of San Jose, and Teresa Hughes of Los Angeles. Mrs. Davis is retiring, but four women are definite favorites to join Egeland and Hughes.

The four favorites are Carol Hallett in the 29th District which includes Monterey and San Luis Obispo; Jane McCormick Tolmach in Ventura's 36th, Maxine Waters in Los Angeles' 48th, and Marilyn Ryan in the Palos Verdes Peninsula-beach cities' 51st.

Mrs. Ryan and Hallett are Republicans. The others, along with Egeland and Hughes, are Democrats.

Betty Smith in the 1st District, and Cindy Wear in Gardena's 53rd, are also possible winners. Both are Democrats.

In all, there are 37 women seeking Senate and Assembly seats. Thirteen are Democrats, 12 are Republicans, nine represent the Peace and Freedom Party, and three wear American Independent labels.

Since the first California Legislature convened in Monterey in 1849, 16 different women have won 62 elections for Assembly seats, but no woman has ever served in the Senate.

That fact is a key campaign issue in four Senate races.

Long Beach City Councilwoman Renee Simon is taking on veteran Republican Sen. George Deukmejian in the 31st District, which as a consequence of reapportionment consists entirely of the City of Long Beach.

Much of the district is therefore new to Deukmejian, although he is well known throughout the city because of his long service. He was first elected to the Assembly in 1962, and moved to the Senate in 1966.

Another incumbent Republican forced into a defense of his record is Lou Cusanovich in the San Fernando Valley's 19th District. Cusanovich was elected to the Assembly in 1956 and to the Senate 10 years later. He is opposed by Sabrina Schiller, an actress and a consumer's lobbyist, and she has put together a slick campaign which is giving the veteran fits.

A third woman aspirant for a Senate seat is Rose Ann Vuich in the San Joaquin Valley's 15th District. She is a long-time party activist who is taking on GOP Assemblyman Ernest Mobley for the seat vacated by the retiring Howard Way.

One of the two senate districts newly created by reapportionment includes the Whittier-Santa Fe Springs area. Assemblyman William Campbell, a Republican, is well known in the district and should win, but his opponent, Betty Wilson, is also well known.

Republicans feel confident they can win all four seats, but Capitol planners, at least, are taking no chances.

Unlike the Assembly, the Senate chambers in the 106-year-old Capitol have never had a women's rest room. Earlier this year temporary chambers were constructed to be used while the old building is being brought up to earthquake-safe standards.

The new Senate chamber includes a women's rest room.

Capitol ethics need change

WASHINGTON — The integrity of Congress was enunciated in its earliest days by Thomas Jefferson, who returned a gift to a Baltimore merchant and wrote sternly, "It is a law, sacred to me while in public character, to receive nothing which bears a pecuniary value."

Jefferson's words were read, admired and quickly forgotten. From the earliest days of the Republic, the votes of congressmen have been bought by lobbyists, compromised by women and traded for large and small favors.

Even as we write this, the Justice Department is investigating allegations that South Korean agents have passed out cash and gifts to members of Congress. There are also 101 other ways that congressmen cheat the taxpayers. We have written about them until the words are tired.

Congress has produced an occasional statesman, but more typical has been the limited politician with a narrow background and parochial interests. His is not the ennobling power to shape bold national policies or the awesome authority to make great decisions.

More characteristically, his is the petty privilege to frustrate and delay the proposals of others, to hold up the appointments recommended by the President, to bargain selfishly for patronage and pork as the price of his support for national programs.

He inhabits a private, privileged world that is largely insulated from the outer world. Capitol Hill has its own police force, its own banks, its own ways and means. It has barber shops and beauty shops; shops for carpentry, electrical work and, to insure that congressional bottoms are properly cushioned, upholstery shops. There are steam baths, swimming pools and gymnasiums, where overweight legislators can cavort in private.

The trappings and the traditions alike are dedicated to the comfort and convenience of the members. It is a spoils system — a system contrived, that is, to spoil the congressmen. Even the elevators, marked MEMBERS ONLY, whisk the annointed to their floors leaving their constituents to struggle for space in the public lifts.

EACH MEMBER is provided a suite of ornate offices, complete with carpeting, paneling and leather appointments. Enthroned behind a massive desk and framed by flags, he is attended by truckling subordinates. The office walls usually are adorned with plaques, scrolls and inscribed photographs of the great, all attesting to the excellence and imporance of the occupant.

The senior members are assigned private hideaway offices in the subterranean recesses of the Capitol building. In protected isolation, they can catch a nap, rendezvous with a pretty secretary or simply get away from the hurly-burly.

Senators John Sparkman, D.-Ala., and Frank Church, D.-Idaho, happen to have adjoining hideaways, linked by a bathroom-bar which could be entered from either side. But the 76-year-old Sparkman, by right of seniority, outranks the 52-year-old Church. So orders went out to board up Church's entrance and leave Sparkman with his own private toilet and boozing facilities.

Congress also exempts itself from many of the laws it enacts for others. The civil rights laws, work safety regulations and other strictures don't apply on Capitol Hill. The government departments, whose appropriations come from Congress, are also eager to placate its members. Senator Charles Percy, R.-Ill., for instance, commanded a Pentagon limousine and an Army helicopter to rush him to Dulles airport because he was late for a plane. It flew him to Denver for a skiing vacation.

Members of Congress receive deferential and obsequious treatment from many quarters. The flattery tends to inflate them with self-importance, although outwardly they maintain a humble pose. For the public doesn't abide arrogance in elected officials.

SOME ARE exemplary public servants whose contributions will never be adequately appreciated. But others are irresponsible opportunists who slide through their careers without making any real contributions.

The collectivity and secrecy obscuring the unheralded dedication of the former also cover up the dereliction of the latter. Only the insiders can truly distinguish the doers from the droues. The rules and customs that prohibit one congressman from disparaging another prevent the public from ever sharing in this knowledge.

The system is ideally constructed, therefore, for the person who regards his membership as an avenue to special privilege and personal gain. There is a code of conduct which is seldom enforced. The only real guide is the individual's conscience.

The wining and dining of legislators is a major industry in Washington. Campaign contributions sometimes become almost indistinguishable from bribes. In addition to the annual $44,600 salary, each member can trim half-a-dozen congressional allowances. The stationery shops, restaurants and other Capitol Hill establishments offer only bargains — all subsidized, of course, by the taxpayers.

THE MINOR excesses invariably lead to larger outrages, which are countenanced by Congress. The transgressions of morality and the law have become all too commonplace on Capitol Hill.

The tragedy is that most members of Congress are honest and honorable men who serve the nation better perhaps than the voters deserve. But in the convivial and confidential atmosphere under the Capitol dome, they condone the outrages, protect the perpetrators and resist reforms.

For our regular readers, not much in this report is new. We have harped on the same theme for years. We raise it again because Tuesday is election day. The voters can bring about a change in the ethical standards of Congress by mandating a change in its membership. The least that conscientious citizens should do is to demand some genuine reforms in exchange for their votes.

Letters to the editor

Survey says NO on X

As election day approaches, the Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce has been made aware of the latest in the series of public surveys conducted by some 28 students of the Distributive Education Clubs of America chapter at Long Beach City College. These surveys have been done as a community project that will be entered into national competition by Long Beach DECA, which last year was judged No. 1 chapter in the state and No. 4 nationally.

This survey was of particular interest as it dealt with the subject matter to be voted on as Proposition X on Tuesday's ballot

Although the DECA questionnaire did not mention the ballot measure by name or use the exact words of that measure, which is written in a way that many find confusing, it did ask the direct question: "Do you favor a change to district elections for city councilmen in place of the current citywide election system?" Out of more than 800 answers, 44 per cent said no, while only 37 per cent said yes. The balance were undecided. That means that if these views were translated into votes on Proposition X, the measure would likely be defeated.

A second question asked: "Do you feel your representation at City Hall will be weakened if you are limited to voting for only your district's councilman instead of all nine?"

That is exactly what Proposition X proposes, and this question was answered yes by 47 per cent and no by 36 per cent. This set of answers also would indicate that a No vote on Proposition X would be called for.

The DECA students mailed a random-sample poll to about 3,000 homes spread throughout the city's postal zones to secure the above results.

We salute the students involved in DECA at Long Beach City College for their participation in community events and will be most interested next Tuesday to see if the voters in Long Beach prove them correct with a NO on X.

League's liberal bias

Not content with having excluded our minority candidates from the presidential debates, a decision guaranteed to present to the American public a choice between liberal Mr. Ford and even more liberal Mr. Carter, the national League of Women Voters completed its "stacking of the deck" by personally picking panelists from notoriously liberal newspapers for the third debate. It should be noted that this selection was made solely by the League. Neither candidate had, or asked for, veto power over the League's selection.

Selected as panelists were Robert Maynard of the Washington Post, the noted liberal syndicated columnist; Joseph Kraft, and Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times. Barbara Walters served as moderator. Quite predictably, their performance, as gauged by the questions they asked during the debate, served to enhance and propagate the liberal point of view.

Sen. Dole's criticism of the League for its liberal bias, which he made during his vice-presidential debate with Sen. Mondale, was well-deserved and long overdue. It was high time that someone peeled off the League's transparent cloak of nonpartisanship and exposed their ultra-liberal bias on issues. The claim by Sen. Mondale, well-known as one of the most ultra-liberal members of Congress, of having received a 100 per cent (correct voting) rating by the League merely served to prove Sen. Dole's point.

Israel an asset

General Brown's charge that Israel is a burden to the United States is simply not true. Israel is, in reality, America's frontier in the Middle East.

The logistics of transferring and maintaining 3 million American Marines in the Middle East are nigh on impossible. If it could be done, the cost would run into trillions of dollars, with highly dubious military or other benefits for the United States. However, in Israel we have the equivalent of 3 million Marines permanently stationed in an area of vital U.S. interest, serving in effect to extend America's frontier to the Middle East, with the priceless additional benefit of sparing the blood of American soldiers.

Israel stands for the best ideals and principles of the United States, has single handedly stopped the advance of communism in the Middle East with the blood of its brave men and women.

The implication that General Brown has left with the American people is that our Joints Chiefs of Staff would abandon this gallant country for the very same Arab countries that played Russia off against the United States, imposed an oil embargo on the United States, blackmailed us with threats of further embargoes and high oil prices and, ironically enough, are today independent from Russian domination only because the gallant Israeli defenders gave their lives battling Russian client states.

The facts show that Israel is an asset to the United States and the development of a permanent and true alliance between Israel and the United States is as important to United States interests today, and in the future, as was the western extension of the United States with the Louisiana Purchase by the visionary Thomas Jefferson in 1812.

A call to voters

Let's all pull together before we go to the polls Tuesday and take a good, hard look at who we are going to have in office for the next four years. We have had nothing but promises ever since World War II, but how many of those promises were ever kept?

You and I are the government. It's up to each of us to clean up the corrupt mess this administration has us in. This present administration is shameful. When in our history did we have a vice president and a president either have to resign or be impeached? I am ashamed of it.

Why we, the people of Southern California, have to sit back and accept whatever they hand us while Richard Nixon lives like a king? After all, he is responsible or the mess our country is in.

Think about the unemployment in California alone. Big time spenders — haven't we had enough?

Let's all take a good, hard look before we put our X alongside the name on the ballot. We need a new broom and a clean sweep.

Please help. We need each and every one of you out there to cooperate.

Campaign of tactics, not issues

In an ordinary year, the drama of a campaign turnaround, of the tension produced by personal confrontations in debates before the television cameras might have aroused intense emotions and involvement by the electorate.

But the outlook for the bicentennial election is for a low voter turnout, possibly fewer than 50 per cent of those eligible.

Some observers thought the public's disillusionment and apathy was caused by a reaction to Watergate. But others attributed it to the lack of dialogue between the candidates. Neither seemed willing to commit himself to any serious discussion of issues. And in the absence of any clear concensus among the American people about where the country should be headed, such caution appeared justified.

Ford and Carter defeated more ideologically-oriented opponents for the nomination by conscious avoidance of issue-oriented campaigning. But their focus on personalities and "themes" has resulted in one of the more barren and petty general election campaigns within memory.

George McGovern, the 1972 Democratic nominee said he doubted he had "ever seen an emptier campaign, a pettier campaign" and there were widespread complaints among party professionals that neither candidate was giving the voter anything to vote for.

INSTEAD, the media and the public focused on mishaps. Carter's standing in the polls sank after he gave an interview to a girlie magazine and the President's comeback was stalled for almost 10 days because of a verbal lapse in discussing eastern Europe.

These relatively trivial episodes were magnified into major debates about the fitness of the candidates Carter's judgment in agreeing to an interview among the pinup girls and Ford's poise and precision of thought.

Such was the superficiality of the campaign as it entered the final stage. And that resulted in another of a series of anomalies and contradictions that have marked the 1976 campaign.

As election day neared, more voters were undecided about their preference than at the start.

The economy, a dominant issue in all U.S. elections, was having relatively minor impact.

BECAUSE OF widespread disenchantment with Washington caused by Watergate and scandals in Congress, this was thought to be the year of the outsider. Carter won his party's nomination by campaigning as the quintessential outsider and then shifted in September to claiming kinship with Harry S. Truman, and parading the streets of Chicago with that insider's insider, boss Richard Daley.

The President began his thematic and stylistic campaign as the protector of the public purse, boasting of vetoes that had saved almost $10 billion in federal spending. By early October, he was boasting to New York audiences about federal aid to cities and had given a windfall of hundreds of millions of dollars to wheat farmers through new crop support levels.

At the outset, a series of televised "debates" between the candidates was expected to fire voter interest as it had in the 1960 election, the first and only time they were tried.

THE DEBATES turned out to be fully as decisive as the candidates expected them to be, but lacking in content. The candidates were judged by the media and the electorate not on what they said, but how they acted and looked while saying it.

The result has been an electorate with no real commitment to either candidate. Neither the President nor his challenger started the campaign with a national following. And only the final days of the election offered either an opportunity to firm up the undecided and the millions of others who offered only tentative backing.

Nevertheless, Carter held his spot as the favorite. The massive advantage Democrats hold in voter registration and the distribution of electoral votes will be hard for Ford to overcome.

But the prospect of a light turnout and the paradoxical nature of the campaign placed an even greater emphasis on the personal favtor as the chief ingredient of the election.

PRESIDENT FORD, the polls indicated, is perceived by the electorate as a decent man who means well and tries hard, but lacks imagination and the know-how expected of a president.

Sputtering down the stretch, either candidate seemed capable of losing the election, and neither appeared able to mount an initiative that would win it. That being the case, the race seemed likely to go to he who avoids the disasterous mistake.

No other candidate in modern political history has lost as much ground as fast as Carter did. Few observers credit the President with achieving that shift. If anything, Ford's campaign has been marked by failed tacties and fumbles of a magnitude seldom achieved by an incumbent.

What appears to have happened in the post-Labor Day stage of the campaign is a growing uncertainty among voters about Carter's character and capacity for leadership. The Democrats reenforced those feelings by engaging in abrasive tactics, harsh rhetoric, and a tendency to over-promise.

MEANWHILE, the President seemed to be gaining ground faster when he was not campaigning. But his celebrated boo-boo in the second television debate, the statement that Eastern Europe is free of Soviet domination forced him on to the campaign trail to recover lost momentum.

Ford's performances there did little to elevate the rhetorical level or common sense content of the campaign. He acceded to the advice of his advisers that the time had come to get tough with Carter as Carter had been with him after the second debate.

Carter enters the stretch with a slight lead in the polls that can hold up if the Democrats succeed in turning out a big vote, a 50-50 likelihood. The Democratic registration drive was only partly successful. About two million new Democrats were added to the voting list in big city areas, but it wasn't enough to compensate for even greater loses in registration since 1972.

California registration has dropped almost a half million in the past four years. In Cleveland it is down one hundred thousand and in New York, one million.

OTHER HANDICAPS to the Carter campaign were beginning to mount. Because of federal spending limits, Carter lacked the money to visit all the cities where local Democratic leaders say it would help get out the vote.

Ford on the other hand carefully rationed his spending. He had enough left to finance a major 10-day closing campaign swing through the eight largest states. His campaigns manager said he needs to win five of them to have a chance of winning the election, but the President was said to be leading in only two — California and Michigan.

But Ford hoped that his 10 days in the stretch would generate the kind of ground swell that carried Harry Truman to an upset victory in 1948. He often compared his campaign to Truman's.

Ford also had enough money to generate a major blitz of television commercials, far more than Carter will be able to finance.

GOP strategists also noted that Carter is particularly vulnerable to last-minute slippage. In the late northern Democratic primaries Carter ran well behind his strength as shown in polls in Michigan, Maryland, California and New Jersey. Ford's advisers hoped that would happen again.

During the final period Ford will do everything possible to provoke Carter into making a major mistake.

The pettiness of the campaign has given rise to a new kind of political jokes. The one that probably summed up the campaign most accurately and most tersely came from the writers on the Johnny Carson television show.

Said Carson: "This election is a contest between fear of the known and fear of the unknown."

For Ford, Dole an uphill campaign all the way

By GIL BAILEY
From our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — If Gerald Rudolph Ford's plans had worked, this would have been the first election since 1946 in which he was not a candidate.

Rep. Ford, R-Mich., House minority leader, in 1973 had planned to retire at the end of this Congress, convinced that the Republicans would not gain control of the House and he would never achieve his ambition of becoming Speaker of the House.

Instead Richard Nixon selected Ford to become vice president, replacing the disgraced Spiro Agnew. The Congress agreed after Ford promised not to run for president in 1976.

Nixon resigned and Ford became the first non-elected president in the history of the United States.

NOW, HE SEEKS to be elected to that post on the basis of his "proven leadership."

Ford, despite his incumbency as President, has faced an uphill fight with the early polls showing his Democratic opponent, Jimmy Carter, in the lead.

In an election short on major issues, such as the Vietnam War or civil rights, image has become the key in the race.

Is Jerry Ford more honest and trustworthy than Jimmy Carter?

Is Jerry Ford a bungler who "can't chew gum and walk at the same time," as the late Lyndon Johnson is quoted as saying?

Has Jerry Ford "saved" the economy or is he responsible for the still high unemployment?

These are the issues that surround President Ford as he strives to win his first national election.

JOINING HIM in the race is another man who had planned to sit out this election, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who barely survived the 1974 election.

For Dole, who had faced heavy criticism for his role as chairman of the Republican National Committee from 1971 to 1973 during the Watergate years, 1976 was to have been a "free ride," a chance to watch others struggle for election.

Thus, the Ford-Dole ticket was built on the unique history of the presidency from 1972 to 1976. First Agnew, then Nixon stepped down. First, Ford was named vice president to become president, then Nelson Rockefeller vice president only to announce that he would not seek election.

When Ford was first nominated for vice president there were questions about his competency and some of those questions are still being asked in this campaign.

FORD POINTS to his record as president as an answer to those who doubt his capabilities.

He is the first president since Dwight David Eisenhower who can truthfully say the United States is at peace.

He says that inflation has been slowed and that the economy is improving.

He attacks the "big spenders," Democrats, in Congress.

Some of the toughest criticism to come Ford's way has come from within his own party where a determined challenger by the name of Ronald Reagan almost defeated him for the nomination.

Yet Ford's 25-year record in Congress is clearly that of a conservative as is his record of vetoes of spending bills.

"They'll rue the day. He's more conservative than Nixon and his judgment's not as good," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., a liberal shortly after Ford was picked as vice president.

Edwards and the liberal wing of the Democratic Party have not changed their minds but for a time conservative Republicans felt that Ford was just too liberal. As a result the Republican Convention was a chancey time for Ford who survived one test by a bare 10 votes.

HE WON BUT in his winning found his party divided. In selecting Dole as his vice presidential running mate, Ford chose his partner in an effort to mend some of his damaged political fences.

Many in the farm states were angry with Ford over the Soviet wheat embargo and his farm policies generally. Dole is a farm state senator and he can and has appealed to the farm vote.

Dole is quick on his feet with a sharp sense of humor. In this area, too, he aides a President who is not a classical orator.

Dole is a conservative and that is reassuring to the conservative wing of the Republican Party.

Their current task is build a Republican minority into a majority of the Electoral College votes.

Generally, both Ford and Dole have waged their campaigns on traditional Republican issues: economy in government, military preparedness and experience in government.

HOWEVER, the underlying issue of the campaign seems to be "trust" — who is more trustworhty.

Ford, the ex-All American center from the University of Michigan, presents an image of "Mr. Good Guy, but that image was damaged somewhat when he pardoned former President Nixon before Nixon was charged with any crime.

In addition the Watergate Special Prosecutor is investigating allegations made concerning Ford's handling of campaign contributions. However, Ford's finances were investigated by both House and Senate committees during vice presidential confirmation proceedings and both House and Senate confirmed him.

Ford at age 63 radiates health and an increasing sureness in his role as president. In fact he now admits that he hopes to follow in the footsteps of another president, Democrat Harry Truman, in showing the polls to be wrong by bringing in an upset victory.

PERHAPS, Ford's greatest weakness has been in the area of both verbal and physical stumbling although at least some of Ford's stumbles on the ski slopes may have drawn more amused sympathy and identification than disrespect.

One of his advantages has been his wife, Elizabeth (Betty) Ford, and children.

A number of Democrats have said, "I'd vote for Ford if it was Betty Ford."

The President's wife has spoken out on such issues as abortion, sometimes contradicting her husband's positions. She has also behaved with grace in the face of her own cancer operation and her continuing pain because of a neck condition.

The Fords as a couple and as a family have become a familar and satisfying symbol of stability on the American scene.

Dole on the other hand at 53 is a relative unknown on the national scene.

A wounded and decorated World War II Army veteran, he has never lost an election, first winning a seat in the Kansas legislature in 1950. Dole has spent 16 years in the House and then the Senate, winning re-election to the Senate in 1974 in a close race.

HE IS KNOWN in the Senate for the sharpness of his tongue as he battled Democrats attacking the policies of former President Nixon. During his years as chairman of the Republican National Committee such Nixon attackers as the Washington Post also received verbal lashings from Dole.

Only during the last few months of the Nixon regime did Dole criticize the former president. His support of the Nixon became a campaign issue in 1974 with Dole winning re-election in Kansas with a slim 50.9 per cent majority.

In 1972 Dole and his first wife of 24 years, Phyllis Holden, were divorced. On Dec. 6, 1975 Dole married Federal Trade Commissioner Mary E. Hanford.

The Ford-Dole ticket is a classic Republican one. Their task is to convince the American people that their minority party should draw the support of a majority of the American voters and in order to do so they must convince millions of Democrats to vote Republican.

A preposterous idea but it really worked

By AL EISELE
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Shortly after watching the 1972 Democratic National Convention pick Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota as its presidential nominee, then Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia called together his wife Rosalynn and a few close friends and aides to discuss the possibility of running for president himself in 1976.

For anyone but Carter and his confidantes, it was a preposterous notion, and they took special care not to let word of the meeting at the governor's office in Atlanta leak out lest they be ridiculed for their unrealistic ambition.

The 47-year old Carter, who had completed only two years of a four-year term as governor and would remain sufficiently obscure to stump the panel on the television show "What's My Line?" a year later, asked each of those present at the 1972 meeting to help him assess his chances as a national candidate.

IT WAS quickly pointed out to Carter that he had numerous disadvantages. He was relatively unknown, he was a southerner, he had no Washington power base and he would be out of a job in 1974 because of Georgia's one-term gubernatorial limit.

But Carter, displaying the supreme self-assurance and almost fanatic determination that were to become his most distinguishing characteristics, pointed out that those same disadvantages could be turned into politically powerful advantages.

Instead of being an unknown southerner, he could be a fresh face from a part of the country that was ready to rejoin the nation's political mainstream. Instead of having no power base in Washington, he could be an outsider who could restore faith in government. Instead of being politically unemployed in 1975-76, he would be free to campaign fulltime.

But the clincher that persuaded Carter to run and ultimately changed the course of American political history was that he was now convinced that he was as good or better tn any of the others who aspired to the presidency.

BEFORE BECOMING governor in 1970, Carter was a former Naval officer, a South Georgia peanut farmer and a state legislator who looked with awe and even reverence on the office of the presidency and those who sought it.

"Then in 1971 and 1972," he later wrote in his aptly-titled autobigraphy, "Why Not the Best?", "I met Richard Nixon, Spiro Agnew, George McGovern, Henry Jackson, Hubert Humphrey, Ed Muskie, George Wallace, Ronald Reagan, Nelson Rockefeller and other presidential hopefuls, and I lost my feeling of awe about presidents. This is not meant as a criticism of them, but it is merely a simple statement of fact."

Despite its far-fetched appearance at the point of origin, Jimmy Carter's decision in late 1972 to run for president turned out to be one of the smartest decisions he or any other American politician has ever made.

But just four short years later, James Earl Carter Jr., the born-again Baptist peanut farmer from Plains, Georgia, has taken control of the nation's oldest political party, made himself one of the most famous Democrats of his time, and brought himself to the point where he has excellent chance of being the next president.

Jimmy Carter's meteoric rise from political nobody to Democratic superstar is one of the truly remarkable stories of modern American politics. Few people have come so far and so fast.

After establishing a tenuous political base as chairman of the Democratic party's 1974 campaign committee, a post that enabled him to travel around the country and study the politics of each state and region, to establish a loose network of supporters and to probe the mood of the electorate, Carter took the first major step toward the White House.

ON DEC. 12, 1974, one month before his term as governor ended and nearly two full years before the 1976 election, he announced his candidacy for the 1976 Democratic nomination in a speech before the National Press Club in Washington.

In that speech, Carter announced the major themes of his campaign: restoring public trust in government, reforming government to make it more efficient and responsive; overhauling the nation's tax and welfare systems, instituting a comprehensive national health care program and eliminating waste in the military budget.

Carter's strategy as he set out on the long, difficult road to the White House was a daring one. It was to run everywhere, both in the states that would have presidential primaries in 1976 and in the states where convention delegates would be chosen by their peers.

Carter spent most of 1975 on the road in a relentless and grueling quest for support. He planned to spend 250 days on the road, but he spent close to 300, traveling to all major cities and almost every state and often staying in the homes of supporters.

BY LATE 1975, Carter was satisfied that he was making progress, having raised nearly $750,000 and qualified for federal matching campaign funds. But his progress as measured in the all-important public opinion polls was agonizingly slow.

By year's end, Carter was still unknown by 97 per cent of the American people, and was receiving little attention, other than for the novelty of being a peanut farmer with an engaging smile who was running for president.

But on Jan. 19, 1976, Carter's long-shot campaign and his political prospects changed dramatically when he led all other candidates in the first big political event of the year, the Iowa precinct caucuses.

Although Carter won only a scant 28 per cent of the vote in Iowa, it was a major breakthrough that won him his first national headlines and media exposure and transformed him from "Jimmy Who?" to a bona fide presidential contender.

President

GERALD R. FORD, 63, Republican, is seeking election to the office of President of the United States, to which he succeeded Aug. 9, 1974, following the resignation of Richard M. Nixon. When President Ford assumed the office, the nation was suffering the worst inflation in its peacetime history, was moving into its worst recession in a generation and still was involved in the divisive Vietnam War. The faith of many people in their government had been shaken by Watergate. In the two years Ford has served as 38th President, inflation has dropped from an annual rate of 12.2 per cent to 4.6 per cent. Unemployment was cut from a peak of 8.9 per cent to about 7.5 per cent, with employment up about 3 million. The nation is at peace aboard for the first time in more than a decade, and there is a returning confidence in the White House. Seeking his first full term as President, Ford basically promises to carry on the same type of programs. His Vice Presidential running mate is Senator Robert Dole of Kansas.	X
JIMMY CARTER, 52, Democrat, governor of Georgia since 1970, previously had served eight years in the Georgia State Senate. In 1973, the Democratic National Committee asked Governor Carter to become the party's national campaign chairman for the 1974 elections. He officially became a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination on Dec. 12, 1974. He outdistanced other Democratic candidates in the primaries and was nominated by the Democratic National Convention. Carter advocated support of the Full Employment Act of 1976. He proposes reform of the national tax system, welfare reform, with substantial federal funding; creation of a federal Department of Education; a national halth insurance program; increased funding for public mass transit and housing; creation of a national consumer protection agency. He opposes deregulation of the price of "old" oil and favors putting importation of oil under govenment control. His Vice Presidential running mate is Senator Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota.
PETER CAMEJO for President and WILLIE MAE REID for Vice President are Independent candidates.
GUS HALL for President and JARVIS TYNER for Vice President are Independent candidates.
ROGER L MacBRIDE for President and DAVID P. BERGLAND for Vice President are Independent candidates.
LESTER G. MADDDOX for President and WILLIAM D. DYKE for Vice President are the American Independent Party candidates.
MARGARET WRIGHT for President and BENJAMIN SPOCK for Vice President are the Peace and Freedom Party candidates.

U.S. Senate

DR. S. I. "SAM" HAYAKAWA, Republican, is most noted for halting the riots and resuming classes at San Francisco State University in 1968. He advocates stimulation of agriculture, business and industry to combat unemployment; a strong national defense; tougher crime laws; development of nuclear energy; a balanced program between environment and economics; "self-destruction" of federal programs unless re-enacted by Congress; "mutual responsibility" in foreign aid.	X
JOHN V. TUNNEY, Democrat, is seeking re-election to a second term. He has been criticized for absenteeism, but contends he does most of his work in committees. He first cosponsored, with Sen. Ted Kennedy, a national health insurance plan, but later withdrew his support. He voted against delay in production of the controversial B-1 bomber and repeal of the depletion allowance for oil companies. He voted for a $5.1-billion public works program and an increase from $160 million to nearly $280 million in President Ford's budget for solar-energy research.

State Measures

1 Provides for $500 million bond issue to provide funds for financing housing. Pro: Like the successful Cal-Vet loan program, this would increase housing for low and medium-income people without cost to taxpayers because interest charges and fees on the loans will finance the program. Con: Financing housing should be left to private enterprise. If the loan program should fail to be self-supporting, taxpayers might end up paying off the bonds. OUR RECOMMENDATION: This measure will help alleviate a shortage of housing units for low and middle-income people without cost to taxpayers.	YES
2 Provides $280 million for park, beach, recreational and historical preservation purposes. Pro: More park and recreation land is needed and, as property costs continue to rise, delay in acquisition could mean some land, particularly coastal property, would be lost to the public. Con: Parks and recreation should be financed from the general fund to eliminate high interest costs. State acquisition of land removes it from the tax rolls. Operating the new facilities would be added cost, because revenue from parks and recreation covers only 30 per cent of operating expenses. OUR RECOMMENDATION: Taxpayers still are paying off the $150-million bond issue of 1964 and the $250-million issue of 1974 for park and recreation land. The new issue, when interest is added over the 20-year repayment period, would cost $456 million. Government owns much undeveloped land in California and this should be developed before buying new acreage and taking it off tax rolls.	NO
3 Provides $25 million for financing residential energy insulation and solar heating and cooling systems. Pro: The state should encourage use of solar energy to conserve resources. State loans for insulation would help many homeowners who cannot afford conventional loans for such installation. Con: Solar energy still is too expensive for even middle-income families. It is premature, at least, for the state to use its credit for this type of loan program. OUR RECOMMENDATION: This would be a gift of public funds to certain homeowners, which is the reason for Prop. 12 on the ballot. Because the present cost of solar energy is too high for middle-income families, even with state loans, this would be a gift of public funds to those who need it least, the well-to-do.	NO
4 Authorizes Legislature to call for competitive bidding on contracts at the University of California. Prohibits denial of admission for race, religion or ethnic heritage. Pro: The Legislature should have authority to see that U.C. adopts bidding procedures which insure that the regents act responsibly in spending the taxpayers' money. The additional anti-discrimination clause would make state constitutional provisions more complete. Con: Independence from political interference has enabled U.C. to develop into one of the nation's top universities. This would lessen this independence. The regents already require competitive bidding in almost all instances. The added anti-discrimination clause is unnecessary because it is covered by federal law and university policy. OUR RECOMMENDATION: This is another attempt by the Legislature to get politial control over the university. Competitive bidding is now the policy. The anti-discrimination provision is unnecessary because it is mandatory under federal law, so obviously is just an attempt to pick up additional votes.	NO
5 Increases maximum contract rate of interest collectible by nonexempt lenders for nonpersonal, nonfamily and nonhousehold loans. Pro: This puts a more realistic ceiling on business loans, bringing more money into the state to stimulate the economy and create jobs. It keeps a ceiling on interest by tying the maximum rate to the discount rate, charged by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco on money advanced to member banks. Con: Present constitutional provisions have protected the public against high-interest rates for 40 years. Increased borrowing costs for business would be passed along to consumers. Consumers would have difficulty getting loans because available money would go to business loans. OUR RECOMMENDATION: This makes no change in the present 10-per-cent ceiling on interest on loans for personal, family or household purposes. It applies only to business and industrial loans. The present limit is unrealistic and California businesses have difficulty getting funds because lenders prefer to lend money in states where earnings are better.	YES
6 Extends time for governor's veto and changes effective date of statutes under specified circumstances. Pro: It is difficult for the governor to give sufficient study, in the 12 days now allowed, to the numerous bills he receives after the Legislature adjourns for its mid-session recess. This measure would extend the time to 30 days. The right of referendum is protected.. Con: The benefit of giving the governor added time to consider bills is not worth the price of confusing the referendum process. The measure also shortens the time for the public to become aware of a new law before it takes effect. OUR RECOMMENDATION: With adequate protection of the referendum, it is a big improvement to give the governor 30 days, instead of 12, to consider bills before he has to act on them. Under present law, some bills do not become law for 12 to 14 months. This would make them effective on the Jan. 1 following the day they are signed.	YES

Candidates and measures

7 Renames the Commission on Judicial Qualifications, authorizes it to admonish judges, expands grounds for censure, removal of judges. YES

PRO: At present, the commission may recommend to the Supreme Court the reprimand, suspension, removal or retirement of a judge only for willful failure or inability to perform his duties. This would eliminate the "willful" requirement and make possible the handling of problems arising from age and health.

Con: There is no organized opposition.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The measure will change the name to the Commission on Judicial Performance and increase its power to monitor the performance of judges to insure that Californians get the best possible judicial system for their tax dollars.

8 Authorizes appointments of county school superintendents, establishment of joint county school boards and superintendents, by majority vote. YES

Pro: Would give voters in the 47 general-law counties the option of having the county superintendent of schools elected or appointed, as now is the case in the 11 charter counties. They now must be elected. Voters in small adjoining counties also would have the option of combining two or more county boards.

Con: Elected superintendents can be voted out of office for incompetency; voters would have less control over an appointed superintendent. If county boards were merged, voters might have to travel long distances to attend meetings.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Charter counties such as Los Angeles County have the option of appointing or electing county school superintendents. General-law counties, such as Orange County, should have the same choice. The decision would be made by majority vote of the citizens.

9 Requires legislative confirmation of the governor's appointees in state constitutional offices. YES

Pro: The offices of lieutenant governor, secretary of state, controller, treasurer, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction and members of the Board of Equalization normally are filled by election. If a vacancy occurs, the governor appoints a successor. Requiring the Legislature to confirm such appointments would widen the scope of review of the appointee.

Con: The governor is elected as the people's representative to fill such vacancies when necessary. This measure would hinder his responsibilities and could cause delays in filling vacancies.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Because these top state offices usually are filled by election, it is logical to require that appointments to fill a vacancy be considered by as many elected representatives as possible. A review by the state's senators and assemblymen would provide greater public input than by just one man, the governor.

10 Prohibits a property tax, without voter approval, in a new district that includes all or portions of two or more counties. YES

Pro: Would protect property taxpayers from imposition of a tax for a special, multicounty district without their approval. Such districts usually are created by the Legislature which, under present law, could waive a vote on a maximum tax rate for the district.

Con: This would make it more difficult to create and finance a necessary special district. It also is inconsistent, because the Legislature still could create a special district within one county, set a tax rate and waive the requirement for voter approval.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This measure would return to the taxpayers significant control over property taxes for certain special districts.

11 Requires the Legislature to adjust ratios to maintain equality between secured and unsecured property. YES

Pro: In any year the assessment ratio is changed, such as from the present 25 per cent to 100 per cent, the Legislature can adjust the tax rate on secured property, land and buildings, to maintain the same tax levy. This proposition would make possible a similar adjustment on unsecured, or personal, property.

Con: This does not take into account the possibility of establishment of different assessment rates for business and residential property.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This will not increase or shift anyone's property taxes. It merely will make possible the adjustment of tax rates on both secured and unsecured property in any year in which the assessment ratio is changed.

12 Would authorize the Legislature to establish a loan program as described in Prop. 13. NO

Pro: Would make possible a state program to stimulate a market, through low-interest loans, for solar heating and cooling and energy-saving insulation programs.

Con: The state constitution prohibits the Legislature from giving public funds to aid any person or corporation. This measure would permit such gifts for solar energy, under a program to be established if Proposition 3 is approved.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The prohibition against gifts of public funds is a good one, and the low-interest loans for solar heating and cooling and special insulation would be a gift to people who need it least, the well-to-do. Low and moderate-income families cannot afford such frills, even with low-interest loans.

13 Establishes a state commission to license and regulate the conduct of wagering on greyhound dog races. NO

Pro: The state allows betting on horse races; why not on dog races? The initiative has safeguards to insure humane treatment of the dogs. The racing would provide new revenue for state and local governments and for specified programs to aid children, senior citizens and medical research.

Con: Gambling is detrimental to society and the state should not legalize more. Crime has always been associated with gambling, and greyhound racing would increase police problems. The activity can be cruel and inhumane to the dogs. Provisions of the bill virtually give its promoters monopoly on the multimillion-dollar gambling operation.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This is an attempt by a group of promoters, headed by George G. Hardie, to get a monopoly on a lucrative gambling empire. Law enforcement officers throughout the state say the gambling would be "an open invitation to organized crime." The charitable groups supposed to benefit from the revenue actually would get only a small part of the huge profits; the promoters would get most of the money. Humane groups say that, despite safeguards, it almost is inevitable that the animals will be mistreated.

14 Reenacts the Agricultural Labor Relations Act of 1975, with amendments, and requires the Legislature to implement it. NO

Pro: The measure is needed to protect the rights of farm workers to vote for their representation in labor negotiations. The "access rule" does not violate private property rights, and has been upheld by the Supreme Court. The state legislative counsel has ruled the Legislature would retain final power over financing.

Con: Farm workers already have the right to vote, by secret ballot, for labor-union representation under the Agricultural Labor Relations Act adopted by the Legislature in 1975. Because Prop. 14 is an initiative, it can only be changed by another statewide vote of the people. If the Legislature wanted to make even the most minor change in the law to iron out a problem in its operation, it could not do so. The proposition requires the Legislature to appropriate funds "as may be necessary" to the ALRB, giving a "blank check" to a board which overspent its 1975-76 budget in less than six months.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: All of the rights demanded by the United Farm Workers already are provided by the existing Agricultural Labor Relations Act. Prop. 14 is unecessary and would freeze into law, which could only be changed by another statewide vote, provisions which must be kept flexible so that the Legislature can, if necessary, adopt amendments to make it workable and fair to farm workers, growers and the public.

15 Adds two public members to the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners and increases educational and licensing requirements. YES

Pro: Gives consumers a direct voice in health matters involving chiropractic, insures that doctors of chiropractic continue to meet high standards of qualification, and eliminates duplication of testing.

CON: Would be an additional burden on individuals seeking to practice chiropractic in California and would not necessarily make them better chiropractors.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: This will increase the standards for chiropractors in California and give consumers a direct voice in matters pertaining to the profession. The proposition is supported by state and national chiropractic associations and by the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

County Measures

A To amend the county charter, creating an elected mayor and giving him executive powers now vested in the Board of Supervisors. NO

Pro: A countywide elected mayor would be a check on uncontrolled spending by the supervisors. The present system encourages each supervisor to represent only his own district, not the county as a whole, and the mayor would represent all of the people. Limits would be placed on the number of staff members for the mayor and the supervisors.

Con: A county mayor would be the most powerful financial figure in California and would dominate the supervisors by his power to prepare the budget and control construction contracts, lease awards, architectural assignments and zoning arrangements. The mayor could make in private most of the decisions the supervisors now make at public meetings.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Transfer of executive powers from supervisors to mayor would take away virtually all of their responsibilities. They would be left with legislative and judicial functions but, at county level, there are few such functions. The mayor, as an individual, would not be subject to the Brown Act, which requires that public business be conducted at public meetings.

B To amend the charter to provide for an increase in the number of supervisors from five to nine. NO

Pro: Today, each supervisor represents a population of more than 1.4 million, more than that of 15 states. Supervisors' deputies would be cut from high of 17 to a maximum of five each.

Con: A larger legislative body will increase costs and decrease the responsibility of individual supervisors. In the unincorporated areas, which the supervisors serve directly, each supervisor represents only about 200,000 persons. The others live in cities.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Although the proposition sets an initial limit on deputies, their number can be increased later. The larger board eventually will mean greater cost. The proposition includes no plan for redistricting. Districts could be gerrymandered so cities like Long Beach have minimum representation on the board and downtown Los Angeles interests dominate it.

C To authorize $40 million in bonds to help finance construction of a cancer hospital and research institute. YES

Pro: Los Angeles County has the largest urban population in the world without a cancer hospital and research institute. The county now has outstanding general obligation bonds totaling only $25 million, which is low for its financial capacity.

Con: There already are thousands of cancer research organizations and another is not needed. Total cost, including interest, would be $64 million, plus annual costs of operating the facility.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Each year, Los Angeles County records more than 22,000 new cases of cancer. The hospital and research institute, to which the federal government and the University of Southern California Medical School also would contribute funds, would help make progress in the treatment of the disease.

D To provide that reimbursement for travel expenses of county employes in performance of their duties be established by ordinance, rather than by charter provision. YES

Pro: Because of such charter provisions, the county is placed at a disadvantage when it begins bargaining with employe organizations. The clause will cost the county millions of dollars in future years if not removed from the charter.

Con: The charter specifically defines travel reimbursement as a protection for employes and the provision should not be removed. It would be a mistake to put such decisions in the hands of the supervisors.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The charter provides that employes be reimbursed for "actual, necessary expenses." Supervisors set a maximum uniform price for lodging and meals, but transportation is paid at a per-mile rate. Employe unions recently won a law suit on their contention that the reimbursement did not met the charter provision. Unions use the charter provision as the starting "base" for collective bargining on travel reimbursement.

E (This proposition is on the ballot only in unincorporated areas.) To permit the County Housing Authority to construct or acquire, with state and federal funds, up to 10,000 low-income dwelling units for senior citizens. YES

Pro: Decent low-rent housing for the elderly poor is needed and can be provided at no increase in local taxes.

CON: Low-rent housing is not low-cost housing, and taxpayers would have to pay for this high-cost housing, which rents for less than it costs.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: The County Department of Community Development estimates there are more than 250,000 senior citizens in the unincorporated areas who would qualify for this housing, and that 170,000 additional units are needed. The program is similar to the successful Long Beach Housing Authority program.

F To create a new county, Canyon County, from 761 square miles at the northwest corner of Los Angeles County. YES

Pro: County officials estimate it costs taxpayers $10 million annually to deliver services to this outlying area. This expense would stop if Canyon County is established.

Con: Los Angeles County will lose $14.7 million in assets, and its taxpayers will have to subsidize the new county by as much a $15.5 million.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Voters in the area petitioned for the new county. The proposition will have to get majority votes in both the area of the new county and the whole of Los Angeles County as it now exists. If voters in an area want to form a new county, they should have that right.

Long Beach Measures

X To provide that members of the City Council be elected only by voters of the district to be represented. NO

Pro: District elections would make council members more responsive to voters in their district, help minimize influence of big-money interests and the local newspaper, reduce the cost of election campaigns and make the office more available to voters.

Con: The present system, nominating council members by district and electing them citywide, makes them responsive to both their district and the city as a whole. Problems facing City Hall today cross district lines and are citywide in nature. Voters pay taxes for the city as a whole, and should be able to vote for all representatives who decide how that money is spent.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: Voters now can vote for or against all nine members of the City Council. If this proposition is adopted, they will be able to vote for only one council member, once every four years. Candidates who have been active in civic affairs are well known and need not spend a large amount of money to be elected. Endorsement by the newspaper or support by so-called "big money interests" does not mean automatic election, as present council members know.

Z To remove from the city charter one section referring to a "Department of Public Welfare," which was abolished by city voters in 1960. YES

Pro: This is simply a "housekeeping" change to remove from the charter an obsolete section and to bring the charter into conformance with state law.

Con: No arguments were filed.

OUR RECOMMENDATION: State law assigns public welfare as a reponsibility of the county. The section to be deleted inadvertantly was left in the city charter when voters in 1960 approved deletion of all other references to a city Department of Public Welfare.

Pros and Cons of Proposition X

These Pros and Cons are presented as part of the Voter Service Program of the League of Women Voters of Long Beach Area. They have been compiled from arguments supplied by proponents and opponents of the various ballot measures. The League does not judge the merits of the arguments nor guarantee their validity.

Proposition X

The Long Beach City Charter now provides for City Council members to be nominated by district in a primary election and then elected citywide in a general election.

The proposed amendment would require that council members be elected only by the voters in their district. In the primary election, if any one candidate received more than 50 per cent of the votes cast in the district, he/she would be elected. In districts where no one candidate received more than 50 per cent of the primary vote, there would be a run-off, within the district, of the two receiving the highest number of votes.

Pro

1. District elections would make council members more responsive to the voters in their district.
2. District elections could help minimize the influence of the big money interests and the local newspaper by eliminating the expense of a citywide campaign. People known in their district could run for council without extensive financial backing.
3. Local government is supposed to be the level closest and most available to the neighborhood and the individual citizen. District elections would increase this availablility.
4. With district-elected council persons representing and working for various areas of the city, developments which should benefit all taxpayers might be dispersed more evenly, rather than being concentated in the geographically small downtown area.
5. State and national representatives, elected by district, are expected to consider both their district's concerns and those of the state or country as a whole. Voters should expect the same principle from council persons.

Con

1. The present election system encourages council members to be responsive to the district where they are nominated, while requiring them to be responsive to citywide concerns.
2. Council members are not presently controlled by special interests because they are accountble to both their districts and the voters of the entire city. Because of the relatively manageable size of the city, unduly large amounts of money are not necesssary for a citywide campaign, especially if a candidate has been involved in community activitiees and is familiar to many voters.
3. Problems facing City Hall today cross district lines and need to be addressed on a citywide basis for the good of the entire community.
4. Since voters pay taxes for the city as a whole, they also should be able to vote for all the representatives who decide how those monies are spent.
5. District representation would encourage "favor trading" among council members whose primary concern would be their particular neighborhoods. It would discourage a cooperative working spirit for the good of the city as a whole.

Proposition Z

This would remove from the charter references to the "Department of Public Welfare" which was deleted in 1960 by a vote of the people.

Pro

This is simply a "housekeeping" change to remove inappropriate references and bring the charter into conformance with state law.

Con

No arguments filed.

Congress, State Senate and Assembly candidates

31st Congressional

U.S. Rep. Charles H. Wilson, 59, D-Hawthorne, who has served as congressman from the 31st District since 1962, is unopposed for reelection.

In 1954 Wilson was elected to the State Legislature as assemblyman from the 66th District. He served in that office until elected congressman. His committee assignments include Armed Services, Post Office and Civil Service; chairman subcommittee on Postal Facilities, Mail and Labor Management.

The 31st Congressional District serves the cities of Compton, Gardena, Hawthorne, Lawndale, Lynwood, Paramount, most of north Torrance, sections of Los Angeles City and some unincorporated areas.

The Democratic registration is 112,563 and there are 29,121 registered Republicans.

32nd Congressional

Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Harbor City, 63, a former mayor of Hawthorne, an assemblyman from 1943-51 and lieutenant governor from 1958-67, seeks a fifth term in Congress and is challenged by Republican Clifford Young, 30.

Young, of Carson, is president of Stewart Lithograph Inc., of Los Angeles. He is a graduate of California Baptist College, Riverside, where he was student body president. He is a formermember of the Republican State Central Committee and was a deputy campaign director in 1974 for the Houston Flournoy gubernatorial campaign.

Anderson is a member of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee (chairman of its Aviation subcommittee) and the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

The 32nd District includes the west portion of Long Beach, all of Harbor City, Lomita, San Pedro and Wilmington and portions of Carson, Torrance, Compton and Los Angeles and the islands of San Clemente and Santa Catalina. The Democratic registration advantage over Republicans is 64.4 to 28.2 per cent.

33rd Congressional

Rep. Delwin (Del) M. Clawson, 62, R-Downey, is being challenged for his seat as U.S. representative from the 33rd District by Democrat Ted Snyder, 52, of Whittier, director of community relations at Rio Hondo College.

The 33rd Congressional District encompasses a major part of Cerritos, Downey, Diamond Bar, East Whittier, Hacienda Heights, La Habra Heights, La Mirada, Norwalk, Santa Fe Springs, Whittier, and sections of Pomona and Walnut. Approximately 54 per cent of the voters in the district are Democrats and 41 per cent Republicans.

Clawson was elected to Congress in a special election in 1963 and was reelected each term since.

Democrat Snyder is a 21-year resident of the district. In addition to his public relation position at Rio Hondo College, he teaches an evening class in U.S. government at the college.

Registered voters in the district number 119,902 Democrats and 86,715 Republicans.

34th Congressional

First term Democratic incumbent Mark Hannaford, 51, is opposed by Republican Dan Lungren, 30, a Long Beach lawyer.

Hannaford is a member of Banking, Currency and Housing and the Veterans Affairs Committees of Congress and is vice chairman of the group of 75 members elected in 1974. He was an associate professor of political science at Long Beach City College from 1966 to 1974, during which years he was also a Lakewood councilman. He was mayor of Lakewood from 1968-70 and from 1972-74. He has a master of arts degree from Ball State University and was a John Hay fellow at Yale.

Lungren, member of a Long Beach law firm, was a 1968 honors graduate of the University of Notre Dame, studied law at USC and received his J.D. degree from Georgetown University Law Center. He served on the Washington staffs of former Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., and Sen. Bill Brock, R-Tenn. He was a special assistant to the cochairman of the Republican National Committee and was a political consultant to former HEW Secretary Robert Finch.

The 34th District includes East Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill, Hawaiian Gardens, Artesia, Bellflower, Cerritos and, in Orange County, Rossmoor, Seal Beach and parts of Westminster and Huntington Beach. Registration: Democrats, 58.2 per cent; Republicans, 35.4 per cent.

38th Congressional

Rep. Jerry M. Patterson, 40, former mayor of Santa Ana, is seeking his second term in the U. S. Congress from Orange County's 38th District, and is opposed by James O. (Jim) Combs, 49, a minister and business man.

Patterson, an attorney who was graduated from Long Beach State University in 1960 and who won his law degree in 1966 at USC, serves the Banking, Currency and Housing Committee and the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee in the House. He is a Democrat.

Combs, who lives at Costa Mesa and who has served as secretary-treasurer of the Continental Institutional Corporation in Long Beach, has had pastorates in Baptist churches in San Antonio, City and Joplin, Mo., and in Costa Mesa. He also was an instructor at the Christian Heritage College at Anaheim. He is a Republican.

Registration in the district includes 120,435 Democrats and 76,305 Republicans.

The district encompasses Buena Park, part of Fullerton, La Palma, Cypress, west Anaheim, Los Alamitos, Stanton, Garden Grove, Santa Ana, most of Westminster, Midway City, and parts of Fountain Valley and Huntington Beach.

27th State Senate

A Republican stalwart and a Democratic maverick are squared off in the 27th Senatorial District from which Sen. Robert Stevens is retiring.

Republican Robert G. Beverly was a Manhattan Beach city councilman before being elected to the Assembly in a 1967 special election. Beverly, who gave up his post as Assembly minority leader when he entered the Senate race, has authored more than 130 bills that have become law, specializing in the fields of criminal justice reform, tax relief, and environmental protection.

Democrat James Q. Wedworth is already in the Senate but no longer has a district to call his own. He moved out of the remains of his former district when reapportionment gave most of it, including Hawthorne where he had been mayor, to Sen. Ralph Dills, D-Gardena. Wedworth is the co-author of the Wedworth-Townsend Act of 1970, which authorized the paramedic program.

The district includes the Wilmington-San Pedro area, Lomita, Torrance, Redondo Beach, Hermosa Beach, El Segundo and all four Palos Verdes Peninsula cities.

There are 126,191 registered Democrats and 96,980 Republicans in the district.

31st State Senate

Boundaries of the new 31st Senate District, apportioned in 1974, encompass all of Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill, Hawaiian Gardens and parts of Carson and Dominguez.

Because of reapportionment it is an open district but State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, seeks to return to the Senate under the new number. The new district includes a part of his former 37th District.

He is opposed by Long Beach Councilwoman Renee Simon, 48, the Democratic nominee. Mrs. Simon was elected to the council in 1972, reelected in 1975.

Deukmejian, 48, was elected to the Assembly in 1962, to the Senate in 1966. He is a member of Judiciary, Government Organization, Revenue and Taxation and Business and Professions Committees, the California Job Development Board and the Joint Audit Committee. He is chairman of the Narcotics Trafficking subcommittee of Judiciary. He is Republican floor leader of the Senate.

District registration: Democrats, 60.1 per cent; Republicans, 33.3 per cent.

33rd State Senate

Vying for the State Senate seat in the newly created 33rd Senate District are William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights, who is currently serving as assemblyman from the 64th District and Betty Wilson, Democrat, who is now serving her fourth term as mayor of Santa Fe Springs.

Campbell, now in the fourth term in the State Assembly, was first elected in 1966 in an overwhelming Democratic district. A former school administrator, he is a member of the Assembly Education Committee, the Government Organization and Housing and Community Development Committees. He is also chairman of the Assembly Select Committee on Fire Services.

Mrs. Wilson was elected as the first woman mayor in Los Angeles County in 1957 when Santa Fe Springs voted to incorporate. She was the first woman chairperson of the committee of National League of Cities, is listed in Outstanding Civic Leaders of America, and is the winner of Peace Dollar — the highest award presented by People to People International Program.

The new 33rd Senatorial District includes Diamond Bar, Walnut, West Covina, Rowland Heights, Hacienda Heights, La Habra, Whittier, La Mirada, Norwalk, Downey, Artesia, Santa Fe Springs and Cerritos.

The latest voter registration count in the new district included 127,838 Democrats and 92,010 Republicans.

37th State Senate

In the newly created 37th State Senate District, Democrat Assemblyman Paul B. Carpenter, now representing the 71st District, is opposed by Republican Loran Norton of Santa Ana.

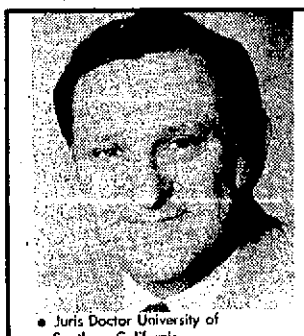

Carpenter, a 48-year-old Cypress resident, holds a Ph.D. degree in experimental psychology and is a former teacher in the California State College system. He is presently a member of the Education Committee and vice chairman of the Human Resources Commimttee.

Norton, who uses the nickname "Kojak" in his campaign literature, is a former Santa Ana police lieutenant and a former alternate member of the California Coastal Commission.

The 37th State Senate District, created in 1974, encompasses the 71st and 72nd Assembly districts and has a total population of 550,000. It covers the cities of Buena Park, Cypress, Garden Grove, La Palma, Los Alamitos, Midway City, Santa Ana, Stanton, Westminster, the western part of Anaheim and a small portion of Tustin.

Voter registration includes 128,959 Democrats and 85,844 Republicans.

ELECT AN ASSEMBLYMAN WHO CARES . . .

EDD TUTTLE
57TH ASSEMBLY

Committee To Elect Tuttle, Evan Whipple, Director; John Cutter, Treasurer, 3647 Atlantic Ave., L.B. 426-9738

The candidates

52nd Assembly

Democrat Vincent Thomas of San Pedro, the "dean" of the Assembly with 36 years seniority, is being challenged by Torrance Republican Verna Mattox. Also in the race is Ida Bader of Lomita for the American Independent Party.

Thomas is chairman of the Assembly Intergovernmental Relations Committee and a member of the committees on Human Resources and on Labor Relations; the permanent subcommittee on employment and economic development; and the Pacific Marine Fisheries Commission.

Mrs. Mattox has held no previous elective office, although she ran for the Torrance City Council two years ago. She has been active in party circles since 1952.

The district includes all of San Pedro, Wilmington, Harbor City and Lomita, Catalina and San Clemente islands, the eastern two-thirds of Torrance, part of Rancho Palos Verdes, and the unincorporated area known as West Carson.

Registered voters include 60,687 Democrats and 31,604 Republicans.

53rd Assembly

Republican Paul Bannai, the only Nisei member of the Legislature, has won two close elections (the latest by 365 votes) in this heavily Democratic district where he is being challenged by Cindy Wear, who won the three-way contest in the Democratic primary by only five votes.

Bannai is a member of the Assembly committees on Finance, Insurance and Commerce; the Judiciary; and Revenue and Taxation. He also serves on the Commission for Economic Development, Joint Legislative Committee on Job Development, and the Commission of the Californias.

Ms. Wear is making her first bid for elective office, although she has been a field consultant to Sen. Alan Cranston and worked at the state Democratic Convention for the selection of former assmblyman Charles T. Manatt as party chairman.

The district consists of the northern and eastern half of Carson, three county unincorporated areas including Lennox, and the cities of Gardena, Hawthorne, and Lawndale.

Registration includes 61,524 Democrats and 20,339 Republican voters.

54th Assembly

Assemblyman Frank E. Vicencia, 45, D-Bellflower and 54th District representative in the State Legislature, is being opposed by Republican Richard G. Coxson, 48, of Bellflower.

The 54th Assembly District includes the cities of Bellflower, Paramount, Compton, Lynwood and unincorporated Willowbrook. Approximatly 77 per cent of the district's registered voters are Democrats and 19 per cent Republicans.

Vicencia, a native of the Southland, operated a dairy supply business and later a public relations firm before he was elected to the State Legislature in 1974.

Coxson was born in Chicago, Ill., graduated from Augustana Academy at Canton, S.D., and earned his B.A. degree in math and business administration at Luther College in Decorah, Iowa. Coxson and his wife Ferne and eight children have resided in the Bellflower area for the past 20 years.

There are 61,664 registered Democrats and 13,516 registered Republicans in the district.

57th Assembly

Assemblyman Mike Cullen, 49, is seeking a sixth term. His Republican opponent is Edd Tuttle, 29, member of a family-owned photography business in Bixby Knolls.

Cullen received his B.A. degree from George Washington University and his law degree from Yale. He is chairman of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee, vice chairman of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee and a member of Assembly Committees on Governmental Organization, Intergovernmental Relations and Local Government.

Tuttle received his AA degree at Long Beach City College and attended UCLA and Chico State College. He is a parttime teacher at City College.

The district includes West Long Beach, Carson and Dominguez. Registration: Democrats, 63.5 per cent; Republicans, 29.6 per cent.

58th Assembly

Assemblyman Fred Chel, 46, D-Long Beach, is seeking his second term. He is opposed by Republican Dale Dykema, 46, owner of Dykema Travel, Lakewood.

Chel, a lawyer, received his B.A. degree from Pepperdine University, his J.D. degree from UCLA. He is a member of Assembly Committees on Judiciary, Revenue and Taxation, Transportation.

Dykema has a B.A. from Calvin College, Grand Rapids, Mich. and a master degree in business administration from the University of Michigan.

The 58th District includes East Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill and Hawaiian Gardens. Registration: Democrats, 57.7 per cent; Republicans, 35.9 per cent.

63rd Assembly

Republican Assemblyman Bob McLennan, 61, who has represented the 63rd Assembly District since 1963, is opposed by a Cerritos business executive, Democrat Bruce Young.

The 61-year-old McLennan, who is the only medical doctor in the California Legislature, is a member of the Assembly committees on Election and Reapportionment, Health and Intergovernmental Relations.

Young, a 30-year-old marketing director for A&W Root Beer, is a member of the ABC School District board of trustees.

The 63rd Assembly District inclues the cities of Artesia, Cerritos, Downey, Norwalk, Santa Fe Springs and part of South Whittier. Registered are 66,609 Democrats and 35,649 Republicans.

71st Assembly

Orange County's newly realigned 71st Assembly District, which does not have an incumbent running, will be wide open for a battle between Chet Wray of Westminster and Phil Seitz of Anaheim.

Wray, 53, a Democrat long active in party politics, was born in Searcy, Ark., and got his early education there.

He has been with General Motors for 23 years, mostly in quality control.

Seitz, 31, is a Republican; he served as a field representative for Sen. Dennis Carpenter in 1971 and then for Assemblyman Robert Badham.

The 71st Assembly District includes Buena Park, Cypress, west Anaheim, Stanton, Westminster, Los Alamitos, Rossmoor, west Garden Grove, and parts of Fountain Valley and Huntington Beach.

The district has 68,932 registered Democrats and 44,904 Republicans.

73rd Assembly

Republican Assemblyman Robert H. Burke, who has served in the Assembly since 1966, is again being challenged in the 73rd Assembly District by Democrat Dennis Mangers, the man who almost defeated him in 1974.

Burke, a 54-year-old engineering graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, is vice chairman of the Rules Committee and a member of the Ways and Means and Transportation Committees.

Mangers, a 36-year-old vice president of the American Learning Corporation of Long Beach, lost the 1974 election to Burke by the narrow margin of 1,620 votes.

Attention All Long Beach Voters

IF PROP. X PASSES, IT'S 9 to 1 YOU'LL LOSE

9. You'll lose your right to vote on all nine City Council members
   (You'll be allowed to vote for only one.)

8. You'll lose millions of your tax dollars squandered by officials who don't have to be responsible to you.
   (Isn't your tax bill high enough now?)

7. You'll lose when "ward" politics make Long Beach more susceptible to the corruption you want to stop.
   (Ward politics won't solve our city's problems.)

6. You'll lose when city problems are answered by political trade-offs between council members from each "ward."
   (We can't afford this kind of "wheeling and dealing" at public expense.)

5. You'll lose when council members no longer are answerable both to voters in their districts and city-wide.
   (If you're dissatisfied with elected officials, get rid of them, not your right to elect them.)

4. You'll lose the city-wide voting protection against the danger of "big money" buying elections.
   (It's easier for special interests to "buy" a district than the whole city.)

3. You'll lose your right to recall all nine City Council members.
   (You'll be allowed to vote recall of only one.)

2. You'll lose your opportunity to vote for strong, competent leaders you respect in other districts.
   (And you'll lose the right to vote against candidates you may distrust or disfavor.)

1. You'll lose the ability to block projects detrimental to your district.
   (Prop. X invites more noise, pollution, etc.)

County Propositions A and B are vital and complex issues

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

Everyone agrees that passage of Proposition A — calling for creation of an elected county mayor — will bring about dramatic changes in the present form of county government.

But the almost impossible question for voters to decide is whether those changes will be better or worse for the taxpayer.

And, to compound, or confound, the issue, voters also are being asked to consider expanding the Board of Supervisors from five to nine members under Proposition B.

The two measures are separate. Expansion of the board would become effective only if voters approve creation of the County Mayor.

BUT THOUGH they are separated on the ballot, the two issues are in reality integrally intertwined.

For many years Supervisor Kenneth Hahn tried to initiate a ballot measure aimed at creating a separation of powers by way of electing a County Mayor.

Under the present form of government the five supervisors, elected by district, administer the executive, legislative and quasi-judicial functions. Hahn's argument has been that a separation of powers is necessary to obtain a system of checks and balances as exists in most traditional forms of government in America.

Hahn's many efforts to get the issue on the ballot failed this year when the concept was boosted by a report from the public commission on county government, working under the aegis of the county bar association on a Haynes Foundation grant.

WHERE HAHN'S arguments failed in the past the commission's proposal caught on like wildfire and were widely touted as the answer to the economic and efficiency problems facing the county.

One of the key questions facing voters is: If the county mayor proposal was not considered attractive enough in past years to make the ballot, what has changed to make the proposal viable in 1976?

Outside of the boost from the commission's report and the attendant support from many agencies plus a shift in philosophy in the Board of Supervisors, no other answer is apparent.

But even if all the arguments in favor of a County Mayor were acceptable the question of expanding the Board of Supervisors appears to redound against the concept.

SIGNIFICANTLY, many of those supporting the county mayor concept, including one of its main backers, Supervisor Pete Schabarum, are not in favor of board expansion.

Proponents of the County Mayor have often used the argument that the elected executive is necessary to relieve supervisors of the vast amount of work they are now saddled with by being the executive-legislative quasi-judicial arm of government.

Opponents however seize on this to say that if supervisors' workloads are significantly reduced there is a strong argument to either reduce the size of the board or cut their $49,000 annual salaries to a level commensurate with their lesser duties.

Proponents also have argued that the new form of government would reduce, county costsor two reasons: One the give-and-take of a mayor's veto power over budget appropriations; the second that the charter amendment would limit the size of professional staffs for both the mayor and the Board of Supervisors.

OPPONENTS counter this by saying an increased layer of government usually translates into increased costs and they express the doubt that staff sizes will be limited for very long.

If Proposition A passes, the new mayor would first be elected in November 1978. He would become responsible for the executive and administrative functions of government, including preparation of the annual budget and direct responsibility for collective bargaining with county employes.

Supervisors would have to authorize expenditure of all county funds, and would set the property tax rate. The mayor would be able to veto or reduce appropriation items which then would require a two-thirds vote of the board to be overridden.

The mayor would appoint all members of boards, commissions and committees as well as most department heads. Thes appointments all would be subject to approval by the Board of Supervisors.

The mayor may appoint his own seven deputies without confirmation by the board, but the assistant county mayor appointment must be confirmed.

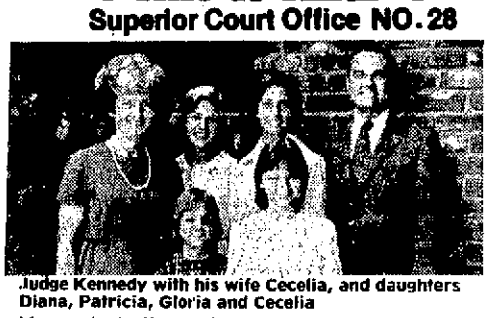

If Proposition B is approved along with Proposition A, the other four supervisors would not be elected until 1980.

Proponents have argued that with only five supervisors the representation ratio is one board member for 1.4 million people. Expansion is necessary to allow for better representation (nine supervisors would each represent about 750,000) and to allow for minority representation on the board.

Opponents counter by pointing out the mayor would represent seven million people — which in terms of funding and provision of services leads the individual taxpayer with even less say in government.

Don't travel all over Southern California, see the new 1977 models under one roof. Park free and browse leisurely in air-conditioned comfort while viewing over 100 new cars. Sports cars, standard cars, imports, compacts, mini, midi and maxis . . . They're all here. Monday, November 1 through Sunday, November 7 at "The Mall for All Seasons."

Los Cerritos Center

605 Frwy. at SOUTH ST., CERRITOS

Auto show set at Cerritos Center

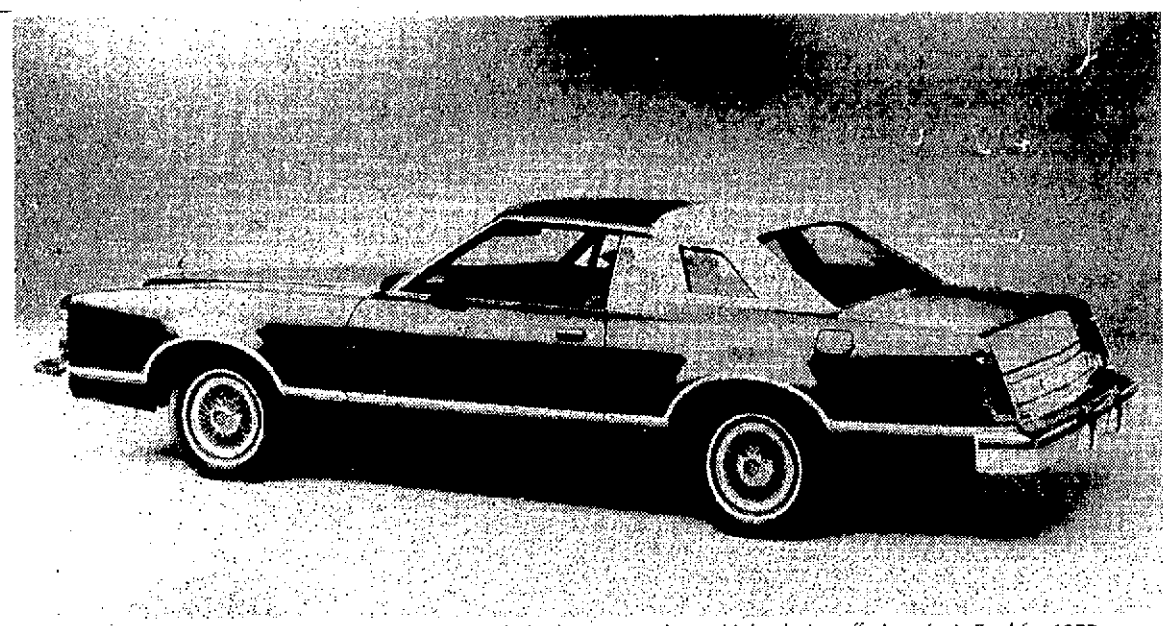

Over 200 cars and their exhibitors will be featured at the Fifth Annual Los Cerritos Center New Car Show Monday through next Sunday, Nov. 1-7. The show, which has been an annual event at the Center since 1972, will showcase the entire spectrum of the 1977 line of domestic and foreign cars.

The show has become a popular concept in exhibiting automobiles by highlighting the full range of next year's models under one roof for prospective buyers to examine at their leisure.

Ms. Pat McGrath, Advertising Director for the center said, "When we first started the show five years ago, it was an almost unheard of method for displaying the upcoming models in that it didn't cost the public anything to see the show and they were all in one place.

"However, it was such a tremendous success with the dealers and the public that we've made it an annual feature for the benefit of the public who does not want to travel all over the Southland looking over the new car models."

The seven-day show will be viewed by an estimated quarter of a million spectators who travel from all over Southern California to see the new line of imported and American model cars.

A new sporty, two-door model of the Thunderbird is among the multiple choice offerings from Ford for 1977.

Thunderbird takes off in new direction

Thunderbird, the famed and prestigious Ford Motor Company product that created the personal luxury-car market, takes off for 1977 in a new direction, in a new size and with a new, lower price tag.

Built on a 114-inch wheelbase, it is a mid-size car that retains many of the traditional Thunderbird styling touches that more than a million owners and millions of admirers have come to know over a period of 21 years.

The new Thunderbird is slimmer and sleeker and will expand its reach to compete in the upper end of the intermediate segment of the market when introduced this fall.

"We expect the 1977 Thunderbird to be the high-flyer in the intermediate segment," William P. Benton, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager, said. "For a mid-size price, it offers good looks, good handling, a quiet, smooth ride and high levels of standard equipment."

The appearance of the 1977 Thunderbird is spotlighted by a unique wrapover roof treatment, featuring beveled glass opera windows in the center pillars. Other distinctive features include a chrome-plated grille, hidden headlamps and wall-to-wall taillamps.

Thunderbird emblems are placed tastefully on the opera windows, the taillamps, the hood ornament and the wheel covers. The Thunderbird script is on the left door of the hidden headlamps and on the trunk lid.

Standard equipment on the 1977 Thunderbird includes:

—A 302 CID eight-cylinder engine and automatic transmission.

—Power steering.

—Power front disc brakes.

—A nimble handling suspension with a rear stabilizer bar.

—An Aeronutronic Ford AM radio (customer may delete).

—An extended-range 26.5-gallon fuel tank.

—An illuminated electric clock.

—A dual note horn.

Also included as standard features are functional fender louvers, drip moldings, door-belt moldings, roof wrapover moldings, rocker panel and wheellip moldings and full-wheel covers.

Sixteen exterior paint colors are offered for the 1977 Thunderbird. New vinyl roof colors are rose, dove grey and chamois, increasing the total to 12.

On the inside, comfort is accented by elegance and luxury.

—A new five-pod instrument panel features European-type graphics and woodgrain applique.

—Standard bench seats and optional split bench and bucket seats have handsome new sew styles.

—The quarter trim panels are "coved" for maximum rear-seat elbow room.

—Seven interior trim colors include the new dove grey and chamois.

To heighten appeal and retain Thunderbird's traditionally high levels of interior comfort, luxury and elegance, an interior Decor Group is available. It includes split bench seats with a manual passenger recliner (or bucket seats with a console at no extra charge), cut-pile carpeting, decor door trim panels, color-keyed deluxe belts, quarter trim panel armrest pads and a passenger visor vanity mirror.

An optional exterior Decor Group includes a vinyl roof, dual remote-control sport mirrors, dual accent stripes and styled road wheels.

Major options available to the Thunderbird buyer include automatic temperature control air conditioning, fingertip speed control, power side windows, six-way power seats, a power moonroof, a vinyl roof, a new illuminated entry system, an AM/FM "search" radio and an AM/FM stereo radio with Quad-8 tape player.

Powertrain options include a 351 CID two-barrel or 400 CID two-barrel eight-cylinder engine.

Olds chassis features

Oldsmobile's redesigned family-sized Delta Eighty-Eights and Ninety-Eights include a number of chassis changes. Following are highlights of some of the main changes for 1977:

Frame: The front, center and rear frame rails plus the front engine crossmember have increased section size to provide equivalent structure with reduced weight by more efficient use of material. The deeper center side rails are below the converter and provide added protection to the converter.

The front torque box has been extended rearward to provide a mounting surface for the transmission crossmember. This also improves the structure and reduces the weight of the transmission crossmember.

The front suspension has been redesigned to improve ride isolation and to optimize ride and handling characteristics. The front ride travel has been increased and uses longer springs with a lower operating stress. Spring rates are reduced and matched with new shock absorber valving to maintain big car ride feel.

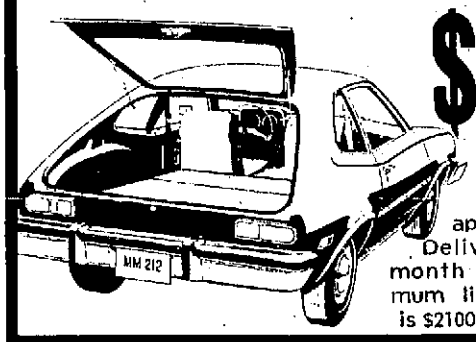

Rear Suspension: The new rear suspension is a conventional four-link design. It has increased ride travel and uses longer, lower rate springs to reduce stress and to maintain a soft ride.

Five-speed gearbox on Datsun 280-Z

A TRADITION CONTINUES

America's No. 1 sports car, the Datsun 280-Z, retains its overall configuration for 1977, but there are 18 engineering and styling changes from stem to stern.

The 1977 edition of Datsun's 280-Z sports car is now on sale with more engineering improvements and styling refinements than any of its predecessors.

An optional five-speed overdrive transmission heads the list of mechanical features. Also added for '77 are functional hood louvers, a Space Saver spare tire, upgraded radios, restyled bumpers and stylized wheel covers.

Inside the Z car, designers have added such touches as breathable vinyl seats, cut-pile carpeting, visor vanity mirror, padded armrest lid for the center console box and an ashtray lamp.

America's most popular sports car continues to be powered by an overhead cam six-cylinder engine with electronic fuel injection that delivers 170 h.p.

The long list of standard features continued for this year includes power assist brakes, fully independent suspension, rack and pinion steering, radial tires, 8,000-rpm tachometer, reclining bucket seats, power antenna and AM-FM radio.

Transmissions include the standard four-speed manual, an optional automatic or the new five-speed.

Robert O. Link, vice president and general sales manager of Nissan U.S.A., said the '77 changes follow a tradition of making annual improvements to the Z car without obsoleting prior models. Link continued:

"Like the earlier additions of electronic fuel injection and the 2+2 model to go with the two-seat coupe, our 1977 model gives customers more refinements in performance, comfort and convenience. The typical 280 buyer has an income well above average but he still demands value for his dollar."

Datsun's sales of Z cars since the first 240-Z was introduced in 1970 have been limited only by production capacity. Link said volume of the 1976 models will top 56,000 units and he predicted a similar performance for 1977.

The distinctive shape of the Z will be unchanged for '77, although the new bumpers add 0.2 inches to the overall length (173.4 for the coupe and 185.6 for the 2+2).

Buyers will have their choice of 10 colors, three of them new: Sunburst Yellow, Light Gold metallic and Sparkling Burgundy metallic.

The new 280-Zs deliver a combined city-highway fuel economy of 21 miles per gallon with manual transmissions and 20 m.p.g. with automatic, according to EPA tests. In California, where stricter emission standards are required, the manual transmission delivers 19 m.p.g. and the automatic 18 m.p.g.

Suggested retail prices for the 280-Z with the standard four-speed transmission was $6,999 for the coupe and $7,799 for the 2+2. The five-speed transmission carries a suggested price of $165. The automatic lists for $320. California models are $95 higher because of special emission controls.

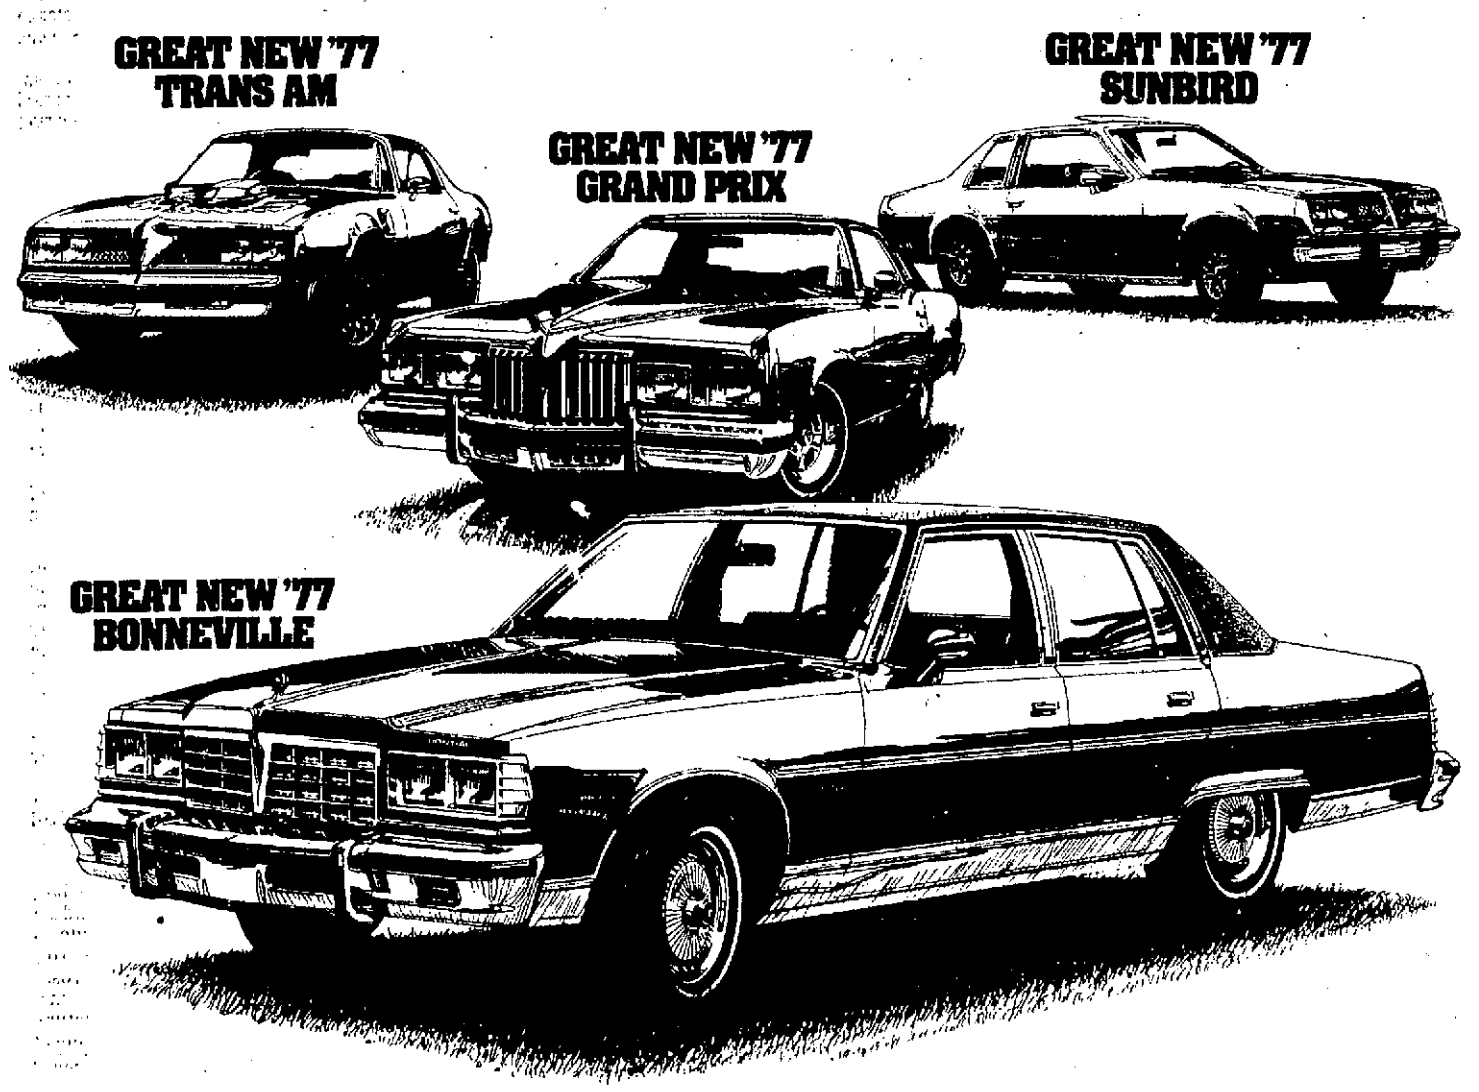

More improvements made on 1977 Comet

In keeping with a strategy employed since the car was introduced in 1971, Lincoln-Mercury Division's compact Comet is little changed in appearance for 1977 but further improved functionally.

"Comet justifiably has earned a reputation for outstanding reliability and durability at modest cost," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and division general manager.

"We've improved and refined it each year since its introduction and 1977 is no exception.

Every show has its main attractions.

Two all-new engines in Pontiac lineup

Pontiac's 1977 model lineup, highlighted by a new generation of full-size cars and the introduction of two all-new Pontiac engines, have been introduced.

Smaller on the outside but roomier on the inside, Pontiac's new full-size models incorporate comfort and convenience in a new size designed for today's motoring needs.

Inside, Catalina, Bonneville and Bonneville Brougham models have more head room, more rear leg room, and one-and-a-half cubic feet more usable trunk capacity than comparable 1976 models.

Occupant entry and exit is substantially easier for the 1977 models because of the new exterior design, which features less door glass curvature and a higher roof line. Seat height also has been increased for improved comfort. Full-width, flat-contour instrument panels provide better accessibility for both driver and passenger.

Catalina models feature dual rectangular headlamps and a new brushed-knit Dover cloth interior. Catalina's standard engine is the 3.8-litre (231 c.i.d.) V-6 with V-8 optional engines including the new 5.0-litre (301 c.i.d.), the 5.7-litre (350 c.i.d.) and the 6.6-litre (400 c.i.d.).

A flush central grille theme accentuates the front of the Bonneville. Available in a two-door coupe and four-door sedan, Bonneville interiors are available in rich, Lombardy velour cloth or Morrokide. Standard engine on Bonneville models is the 5.0-litre V-8, with the 5.7-litre and 6.6-litre V-8 engines available as options.

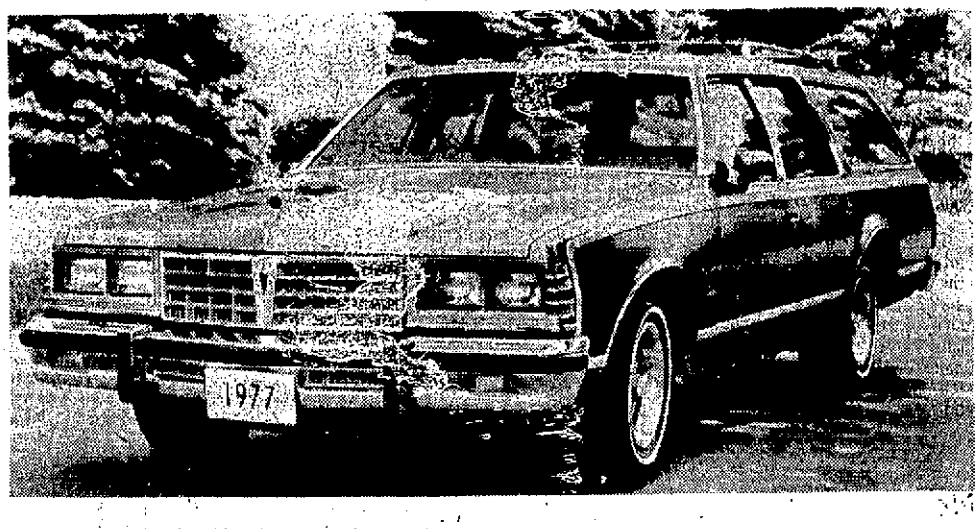

Bonneville Brougham includes all standard features on the Bonneville plus the "Brougham" luxury interior package. Valencia, a new luxurious trim of Lombardy and Plaza striped cloth, is available on Bonneville Brougham models only.

Catalina Safari and Grand Safari station wagons feature a new three-way tailgate, increased cargo loading height and width, two lockable storage areas and a rear-facing third seat option. Standard engine on all full-size wagons is the 5.0-litre V-8, with the 6.6-litre V-8 available as an option.

Citizens Band (CB) radios are offered on all full-size Pontiac coupes and sedans in two versions.

The 1977 full-size Pontiacs, built on a 116-inch wheelbase, are designed for efficient packaging and fuel economy and feature an engine electrical diagnostic connector, an air conditioning electrical diagnostic connector and a Freedom Battery that never requires additional water. General body construction of the full-size Pontiacs permits less maintenance and better durability.

Pontiac's two new engines are a cast iron 2.5-litre (151 cu. in.) L-4 and the 5.0-litre V-8. Both engines have a four inch by three inch bore-stroke measurement.

ROOM TO SPARE

Pontiac's full-size 1977 station wagons, Catalina Safari and Grand Safari, are shorter and lighter than their 1976 counterparts, while continuing to offer a spacious interior. Full-size Pontiac wagons feature a new three-way tailgate, a rear-facing third seat option and two lockable storage areas, one in the load floor and one in the left rear quarter.

The smoothly-performing L-4 develops 90 horsepower at 4400 rpm's, while the V-8 turns out 135 horsepower at 3800 rpm's. The 452-pound V-8 is among the lightest of all domestically-produced eight-cylinder engines. It will provide customers with six-cylinder-type economy along with true V-8 style performance.

Cylinders on the new V-8 are bored and honed with a simulated head bolted into place to ensure a perfect piston ring fit when the actual cylinder head is finally bolted on. This reduces engine friction.

The new four-cylinder engine will be utilized on Pontiac's Astre and Sunbird, as well as on the Ventura coupe and sedan, which will be the domestic industry's only four-cylinder compact cars. The 5.0-litre V-8 will be available on Ventura, Firebird, LeMans, Grand Prix and full-size models.

Bold new front styling, highlighted by dual rectangular headlamps, will offer a dramatic change for Pontiac's popular sporty Firebirds, available in four models: the base Firebird, the stylish Esprit, and the performance-oriented Formula and Trans Am. Built on a 108-inch wheelbase, Firebird engine availability ranges from the 3.8-litre V-6 to the 6.6-litre V-8.

A new hood with simulated air scoops and a standard rear spoiler are featured on the Formula. A special version of Pontiac's largest engine is available as a Trans Am and Formula option. Called the TA/400, it provides improved performance.

A stronger front grille design and a more luxurious interior, highlighted by a new, Grand Prix-style instrument panel, are included in the compact Ventura series for 1977. Both the Ventura and the Ventura SJ are offered as a two-door coupe, three-door hatchback coupe and four-door sedan. The base Ventura coupe and sedan offer the new 2.5-litre L-4 engine; other engine availability includes the 3.8-litre V-6 and the 5.0-litre V-8.

Three distinct models of Pontiac's popular personal luxury car, the Grand Prix, will be available for 1977: the regular Grand Prix, the sporty Grand Prix SJ and the luxurious Grand Prix LJ. The new 5.0-litre V-8 will be standard in the base Grand Prix and the LJ, with engine options.

Ford offers widest choice of cars available

From subcompact to full-size, Ford Division's 1977 lineup offers customers the widest choice of car sizes available.

Heading the list are two all-new mid-size cars — the luxurious Thunderbird, a two-door hardtop, and the LTD II, offering sporty-looking two-door models as well as elegant four-door models and station wagons.

Other 1977 entries include the full-size LTD, with its renown for quiet, comfort and ride; the Granada, Ford's hot-selling "swing" car; Pinto, America's most popular subcompact; Mustang II, a small specialty car sales leader; Maverick, the proven, durable compact, and the highly popular Econoline Club Wagon. All 26 models in these eight car lines go on sale at Ford dealerships Friday, October 1.

"For 1977, Ford Division cars are uniquely in step with the market," said William P. Benton, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager. "Our lineup gives customers the opportunity to select the right size car to meet his driving needs."

The 1977 Thunderbird, for example, is a specialty car on a 114-inch wheelbase. Overall length is 215.5 inches. Thunderbird offers high levels of standard equipment, a quiet, comfortable ride and excellent handling — all at an affordable price.

Ford Division's other new mid-size entry, the LTD II, comes in three series. The base LTD II "S" and mid-series LTD II each feature a two-door hardtop, a four-door pillared hardtop and a station wagon. The top-of-the-line LTD II Brougham offers a two- and a four-door model, and the elegantly appointed LTD II Squire is Ford's high-series mid-size station wagon.

All LTD II models have a lean, sculptured look, yet offer six-passenger comfort.

"Both of these cars will greatly strengthen our position in the largest segment of the automobile market," Mr. Benton said. "The Thunderbird and the LTD II two-door models give Ford Division a powerful one-two punch in the specialty or upper end of the segment, and the four-door LTD II models and station wagons are ideal for buyers seeking six-passenger comfort and other full-size car attributes — at a smaller price."

For 1977, all Pinto models have a new, sportier-looking front end. A new all-glass third door (a no-extra-cost option) gives three-door Pinto models a fresh, modern look, and two- and three-door Runabout models are in a lower inertia weight class (2,750 pounds) — the same as the 1976 Pinto Pony models.

Addition of a Pinto Cruising Wagon in 1977 will greatly expand the subcompact's appeal in the youth segment of the automobile market. Other new Pinto options include a flip-up open air roof, a Sports Rally Package with tachometer and gauges and a four-way manual driver's seat.

In 1977, Granada becomes the first domestic car to offer a four-speed manual overdrive transmission as standard equipment.

The Ford LTD remains full-size for 1977. The top-of-the-line LTD Landau has been repositioned into the price class of the LTD Brougham — which has been deleted from the lineup — but continues such standard luxury features as hidden headlamps, wide, color-keyed bodyside moldings and a high level flight bench seat with a fold-down center armrest.

Mustang II for 1977 offers a host of improvements, including added standard equipment on 2+2 models at no added cost, the flip-up open air roof and four-way manual driver's seat, a Ghia Sports Group and other exciting new options and money-saving packages that group popular optional items.

Maverick also offers new options and convenience features, including four-way manual seats, wire wheel covers and wide bodyside moldings.

New exterior paint, vinyl roof and interior trim colors add sparkle to the appearance of 1977 Ford Division cars.

To meet the U.S. government's more stringent 1977 model year emission control standards, most Ford cars have revised emission control systems that include a larger volume catalyst and Ford's new Duraspark high-energy solid-state ignition system which provides increased voltage at both starting and running speeds, allowing leaner air-fuel mixture and even longer spark plug life.

New wiring designs for '77

All Dodge 1977 models built in North America use a new terminal system for more positive locking, increased lead-in for better alignment, superior electrical performance and more reliable assembly.

Each terminal has a solid male blade, improved female receptacle and corresponding insulators, which provide the locking feature.

'77 Pacer two-door is distinctive design

The new two-door Pacer station wagon is as distinctive as the innovative Pacer sedan introduced in 1975.

It brings to the station wagon market the same features which make the sedan a uniquely functional car — exceptional interior room and comfort within trim exterior dimensions, and superior visibility — front, rear and side.

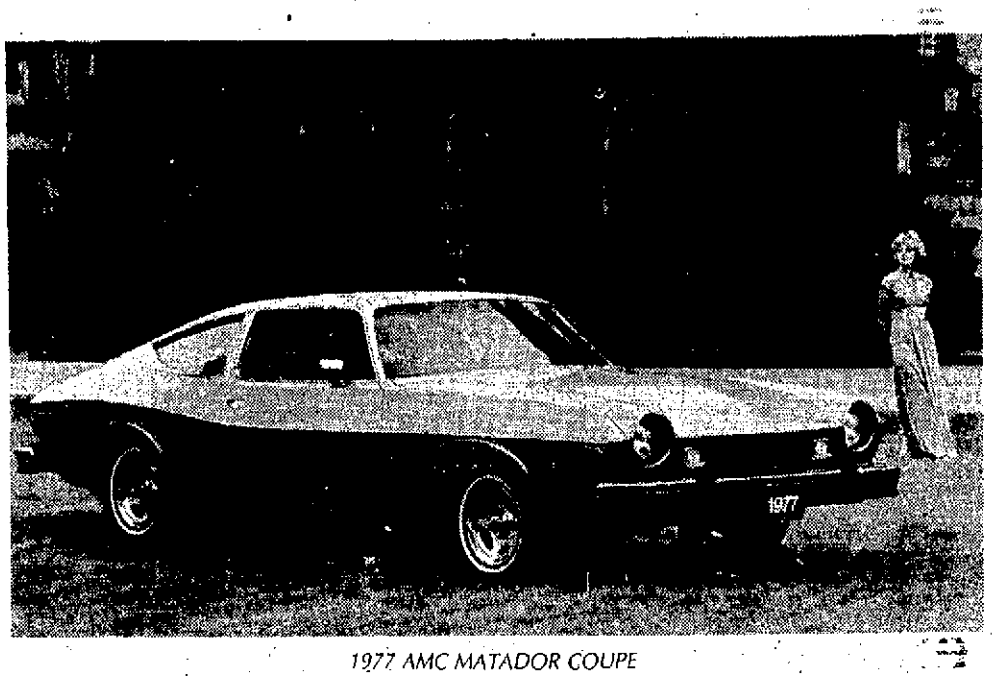

Designed with convenience in mind, it has asymmetrical doors with the passenger door being four inches wider than the driver side. With all its spacious interior dimensions, the Pacer wagon is only 174 inches overall (four inches more than the sedan) and provides 48 cubic feet of cargo capacity and increased front and rear headroom.

Even with its additional usable space, the wagon weighs only 76 pounds more than the sedan.

The wagon's long liftgate extends down to a bumber height floor for ease of loading and unloading. For ease of operation, the enclosed lift supports utilize compressed gas cylinders. Vertical taillamps, which permit the long liftgate, distinguish the rear styling of the wagon.

The wagon shares with the Pacer sedan the comfortable ride and handling qualities associated with much larger cars. Both feature rack-and-pinion steering and isolated front and rear suspension.

Standard engine for both wagon and sedan is the AMC 232 CID six, with the 258 CID six available as an option.

1977 AMC MATADOR COUPE

Continuing AMC value

The 1977 AMC cars represent a major step-up in American Motors' continuing escalation of product values in the Gremlin, Hornet, Pacer and Matador lines.

All 1977 AMC models offer higher levels of standard equipment, more efficient performance, and added appearance and convenience features.

An all-new, spacious Pacer wagon joins the AMC lineup for 1977, along with a freshly-styled Gremlin and a sporty AMX version of the popular Hornet hatchback.

The intermediate-size Matadors are upgraded to offer exceptional combinations of standard equipment, luxury and convenience that contribute to the pleasure of fine car ownership.

Adding substantial value to the 1977 AMC cars in terms of warranty and service are the exclusive AMC Buyer Protection Plan, the industry's only full warranty, and the Service Protection Plan, which guarantees all customer-paid service work on any AMC car regardless of year manufactured.

With these programs and the extra values offered in the 1977 cars, American Motors strengthens its commitment to responding to the needs of car buyers, both in product design and features and in the best warranty and service protection available.

The 1977 Matador coupe, four-door sedan and station wagon, AMC's entries in the growing intermediate market, offer a long list of standard equipment, including power steering, power front disc brakes, automatic transmission, individual reclining seats, custom steering wheel, light group, custom door trim panels and other convenience and decor items that previously were optional or part of a luxury Brougham package.

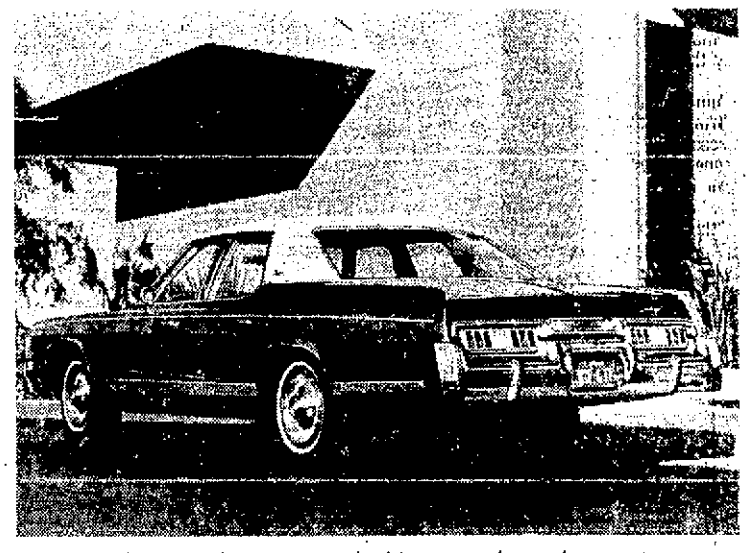

Basic values in terms of comfortable ride, usable room and performance are strong competitive features of the Matador line. The Matador wagon cargo capacity of 95.2 cubic feet, including 8.0 cubic feet in a hidden compartment, is the largest of any intermediate-size wagon.

Standard engine for the Matador coupe and sedan is AMC's 258 CID six. The 304 CID V-8 is standard on the wagon and optional on the coupe and sedan. A high performance 360 CID V-8 is optional for all 1977 Matadors.

GMC offers wide variety of trucks

To meet the growing demand for customized vans, GMC is introducing the Gypsy Traveler, a Vandura van with the interior upfitted by the Motortown Corp. of Dearborn, Mich.

Two other specialized applications for the Vandura are available — the Gypsy option, which represents a personal-use vehicle designed for owners who want to cutomize their own vans, and the Gaucho model, a travel and recreational vehicle capable of transporting five passengers up front and hauling a variety of cargo in the rear section.

Royal Monaco for 1977 provides big car comfort and convenience

Government standards a factor

Government-mandated safety standards continue to have a major effect on the design, weight, and cost of Chrysler Corporation passenger cars for the 1977 model year.

Sydney L. Terry, Vice President-Public Responsibility and Consumer Affairs, said existing noise and safety requirements have already added 315 pounds and $544 to the company's cars, "and new standards for the 1977 models will increase weight by an additional 18 pounds and consumer cost by another $73 per car."

Terry said design changes this year will assure that 1977 model cars can withstand specified front and rear impacts up to 30 miles-an-hour, side impacts up to 20 miles-an-hour, and simulated roll-over with minimal fuel leakage.

"We have also made changes to assure that the hood hinges with limited rearward movement by the hood or other exterior parts in a frontal accident, and to assure that full-size car bumpers will withstand corner impacts of three miles-and-hour without damage," Terry added.

Compact and intermediate cars had these bumper improvements on the 1976 models.

The completely new 1977 Cougar XR-7 will feature bold styling and an efficient, comfortable interior.

Lincoln-Mercury will expand Cougar lineup

Nearly 10 years ago, Lincoln-Mercury Division introduced the Cougar — the most successful new offering in the division's 30-year history. This fall, Lincoln-Mercury expects to repeat that success with a complete lineup of all-new intermediates bearing the famous Cougar name.

Led by the sporty XR-7, the Cougar car line will be expanded to include two-door, four-door and station wagon models.

"The Cougars will provide the division with an opportunity to increase its share of the fast-growing intermediate market," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and Lincoln-Mercury Division general manager. "Currently, the intermediates are the biggest segment of the industry, accounting for 27 per cent of total car sales.

"Cougar XR-7 will be aimed at the intermediate specialty two-door buyers who dominate the segment. The Cougar and Cougar Brougham models, which will offer first-class family transportation in a comfortable, six-passenger package, will be aimed at Cutlass and Century buyers.

"In 1977, for the first time, the excitement and styling flair associated with Cougar in the past will be available in a family-sized car a cut above ordinary intermediates."

The Mercury Cougar has given Lincoln-Mercury a decade of success in two different segments of the domestic auto market. Presently the division's leading intermediate, Cougar has been a sales winner for 10 years — first as a small specialty car and then as an entry in the intermediate-specialty market.

Introduced as a 1967 model on September 30, 1966, the car showed early promise during its first and most successful model year. Motor Trend Magazine named Cougar its "Car of the Year" for 1967.

According to the magazine's editors, "the winner must show a combination of engineering, styling and market timing sufficient to set an industry trend."

Cougar had all three characteristics in abundance. With its powerful engine offerings and responsive handling, the first Cougar represented a direct engineering response to the demands of the growing small-specialty-car segment.

Its crisp, sophisticated design, wide range of optional equipment and luxurious interior appointments added a dimension previously absent from that segment and the timing of its introduction was right on target. In the classic tradition of American business success, Cougar was introduced to meet a demand at the beginning of an uptrend.

In its first year on the market, Cougar captured 13.7 per cent of its segment and outsold its only direct rival by 29 per cent. During that first year, sporty-car enthusiasts snapped up 125,000 Cougars — which still stands as the car's model year sales record.

Although Lincoln-Mercury's "top cat" continued to take a substantial share of its segment over the next seven model years — claiming 14 per cent in 1973, its final year as a small-specialty car — its total sales declined with the shrinking segment, dropping to 52,900 in the 1973 model year.

For 1974, Cougar was redesigned and introduced into the larger intermediate segment. As it had in 1967, the new Cougar offered the sportiness of performance instrumentation and responsive handling, but added a higher level of luxury to its stylishly comfortable interiors. Once again the formula worked. The new car posted 78,700 sales during the 1974 model year.

During the depressed 1975 model year, Cougar's sales sank to 49,200, but in the 1976 model year it has become the division's leading intermediate with sales totaling 76,600 units through August 21.

The styling of Buick's Regal coupe for 1977 is highlighted by a new grille with chrome accent strips and a wide header bar. The two-door Regal, one of the most popular models in Buick's intermediate series, is powered by a V-6 engine with a V-8 as an option.

—CB radio option on '77 Buicks—

A combination AM/FM stereo and citizens' band radio, all packaged inside the instrument panel, will be offered on full-size Buicks in 1977.

A three-way switch on the dial controls the function of the radio. One setting is for AM/FM stereo, one is for the CB and the third controls both automatically.

When set on automatic, the radio plays until a CB broadcast is received. Then the radio shifts to CB reception and the message comes over the stereo speaker system.

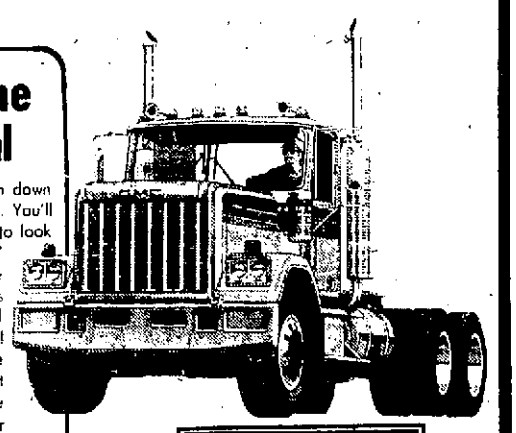

This combination radio option is limited to AM/FM stereo radios only.

For those who want their CB radios separate, the below the dash option is offered on all '77 models, except Skylark.

Another new radio option is a digital clock combined with AM/FM stereo. The clock face is combined with the radio dial which shows the time constantly.

However, when you push a button to tune the radio, the digital readout changes to show the station frequency. The frequency is displayed for a few seconds and then the radio dial again becomes the clock face, showing the time. The readout also displays month and day and elapsed driving time on demand.

Buick Redefines the Full-Sized American Automobile.

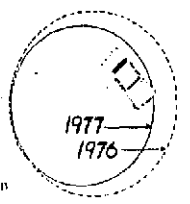

1977: A Design that's More than New Sheet Metal.

You are looking at three new full-sized Buicks that are fundamentally different from the full-sized Buicks of the past.

Riviera, Electra and LeSabre all exhibit a new trimness of line. A classical restraint in their design. An efficient use of space, inside and out. Better gas mileage than last year's counterparts. They are full-sized cars that are actually fun to drive.

New Agility in Traffic.

A direct product of the changes we've wrought in these full-sized Buicks is greater maneuverability in city traffic.

These new Buicks are designed to be responsive to the wheel. To be fun-handling in the corners. To be easier to turn. And to park.

They all feature four-wheel, coil-spring suspension: Forward-mounted steering gear linkage. Unequal-length front control arms. And four-link rear suspension.

In short, we've developed suspension systems that bring a new measure of ride control to the full-sized Buicks.

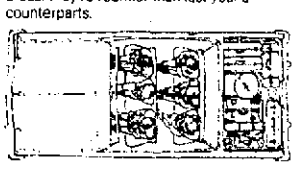

The '77 LeSabre Sport Coupe, for example, uses front and rear stabilizer bars. Special springs and shock absorber valving. And responsive, fast ratio power steering. A similar suspension set-up can also be found on the '77 Riviera.

Here's the point. These automobiles still deliver full-sized comfort. But there's a new emphasis on driveability. The result: full-sized cars that are actually fun to drive.

Room For All Six of You... and Your Luggage.

There's something interesting about all this efficiency and agility. Namely that we provide it without asking you to give up one of the basic things you buy a full-sized car for. Room.

As the chart indicates, these cars are roomy. In many of the more meaningful areas, they're roomier than last year's counterparts.

In fact, the new Riviera and LeSabre Coupe offer more than two and a half inches of additional rear leg room over comparable 1976 models. That's a lot. And trunk capacity has increased on most full-sized Buicks as well.

	Riviera		Electra 225 Sedan		LeSabre Coupe
	1976	1977	1976	1977	1976	1977
Front Head Room	38.1 in.	38.1 in.	39.3 in.	39.1 in.	38.1 in.	38.4 in.
Rear Head Room	37.1 in.	38.0 in.	38.2 in.	38.0 in.	36.5 in.	38.2 in.
Front Leg Room	42.2 in.	42.2 in.	42.2 in.	42.2 in.	42.1 in.	42.2 in.
Rear Leg Room	35.4 in.	38.7 in.	40.8 in.	40.9 in.	35.8 in.	38.7 in.
Trunk Capacity	16.1 cu. ft.	19.8 cu. ft.	20.3 cu. ft.	20.4 cu. ft.	17.5 cu. ft.	21.2 cu. ft.

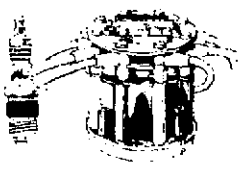

Engineered for Improved Efficiency.

Of course, the major goal in redefining the full-sized car was to improve efficiency. Not just in the use of space, but in the operation of the car.

So, we've reduced the size of our standard V-8's this year. Even the renowned Buick V-6 already a frugal source of power, has been modified to weigh less than last year.

And there are a number of special features that help promote efficient operation. High-Energy Ignition, for example, eliminates the need for ignition condensor and points—and therefore eliminates the need to replace them. Spark plugs last longer compared to just a few years ago. And there are longer intervals between scheduled maintenance.

Also new this year is the availability of the V-6 LeSabre in California. This is the first time California drivers have been offered the advantages of a V-6 engine in a full-sized Buick.

In any case, the bottom line in any discussion of operating efficiency is gas mileage. And if you'll consult the following chart of EPA mileage estimates, you'll notice some figures that are really quite surprising for full-sized automobiles.

1977 EPA Mileage Estimates*	Hwy	City
LeSabre: 5.7 litre (350 CID) V-8 with Automatic Transmission and 2.73 Axle Ratio	21	16
Electra: 5.7 litre (350 CID) V-8 with Automatic Transmission and 2.41 Axle Ratio	20	14
Riviera: 5.7 litre (350 CID) V-8 with Automatic Transmission and 2.41 Axle Ratio	20	14

*These are estimates. The mileage you get may vary according to your driving habits, the condition of your car, and its equipment.

Not available on LeSabre Sport Coupe.

Luxury is Always Standard Equipment.

The standard equipment on a Buick has always been impressive. That's something we haven't changed.

Every full-sized Buick comes with automatic transmission, power steering, and power front disc brakes. All standard.

Every full-sized Buick has thick, comfortable seating. Plush expanses of cut-pile carpeting. And intelligently arranged, convenient instrumentation.

Every full-sized Buick is amply endowed with such niceties as Full-Flo ventilation. An inside hood release. Armrests. All standard.

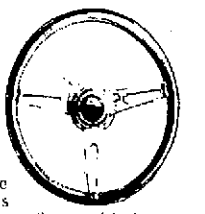

In fact, as you reach top-of-the-line models the standard equipment becomes even more impressive.

Riviera and Electra, for instance, come equipped with power windows.

Riviera and LeSabre Sport Coupe are equipped with a standard Rallye steering wheel.

It's pretty obvious that efficiency doesn't have to mean a loss of comfort or convenience.

They're Meant to be Driven.

The 1977 Riviera, Electra, and LeSabre. They are very special cars, not because they are new cars. But because they are the cars of the future.

You must sit in them. You must drive them. And you can do that at your Buick dealer.

1977 Olds Starfire SX Sport Coupe

New generation of Olds

A new generation of more fuel-efficient family cars and a long list of engineering improvements highlight Oldsmobile's 1977 lineup.

The division is covering the market in six distinct car lines . . . Starfire, Omega, Cutlass, Eighty-Eight, Ninety-Eight and Toronado . . . with 28 models, six less than last year.

New for 1977 are the Cutlass Supreme Brougham colonnade hardtop sedan, Delta 88 pillar coupe, Delta 88 Royale pillar coupe and Toronado XSR.

Discontinued are the Cutlass Supreme Cruiser, Cutlass Salon sedan, Delta 88 hardtop coupe and hardtop sedan, Delta 88 Royale hardtop coupe and hardtop sedan and Toronado Custom coupe. In addition, three Custom Cruisers have been discontinued as separate models, but are available as 1977 options.

The 1977 Starfire and Starfire SX feature a distinctive front end that includes a new grille with vertical ports. Also new are a larger emblem between the grille sections and block lettering identification that replaces the Oldsmobile script.

Dual rectangular headlamps are again mounted in a soft plastic front end panel that flexes with the energy-absorbing front bumper in minor impacts and returns to its original shape.

In the rear is a hatchback door that lifts up revealing the carpeted load floor which may be extended by folding the rear seat forward. A space saver spare tire and inflator bottle are stored in the right rear quarter well, hidden from view by a soft trim tire cover.

Standard for both models is the 140-cubic-inch (2.3 litre) four-cylinder engine with the 231 (3.8 litre) V-6 optional. A floor-mounted, four-speed synchromesh transmission is standard.

The Starfire and SX are offered in one body style, a four-passenger sport coupe with high-back bucket seats in the front. The base model has vinyl trim and a new interior door design with carpeting and woodgrained moldings replacing map pockets.

The Starfire SX has a higher level of trim in a choice of cloth or vinyl. Also included are steel-belted radial ply tires, wheel opening moldings and a custom sport steering wheel. On the base Starfire, bias-belted tires are standard and radials are optional.

The Starfire GT option continues to be available on both models. The GT package includes the 231 (3.8 litre) V-6 engine, special hood and side stripes in black, white or gold to complement the car's body color, Starfire Rallye wheels, raised white letter tires and an instrument panel that includes tachometer, clock and gauges.

Highlighting the 1977 Toronado are a number of design changes, the new Electronic Spark Timing, a special XSR model and the cubic-inch (6.6 litre) V-8 engine.

This front-drive personal luxury car is available in two coupe models . . . the Brougham and XSR. They feature a new hood, front end panel and a distinctive grille with a rectangular pattern.

High Styled 1977 Chevrolet Caprice

Chevrolet: all-new full-size car

The 1977 Chevrolet debuts as an all-new, full-size car for America, more closely tuned to changing consumer life-styles and matched with the nation's goals of conserving fuel and natural resources.

The completely redesigned Caprice and Impala models offer crisp new styling with a long list of design and engineering improvements. The new Chevrolets boast more fuel efficiency and safety effectiveness while being 11 inches shorter and almost 700 pounds lighter than their predecessors.

The new models have more room inside despite the smaller exterior size. This includes more rear legroom and more front and rear headroom along with added usable storage space in the trunk.

Matching the trim new dimensions, additional operating efficiency and fuel economy is made possible by the addition of a 4.1 litre (250-cubic inch), six-cylinder engine and a smaller displacement 5 litre (305-cubic inch) base V8. The six-cylinder engine is the standard power plant for sedans and coupes while the 5.7 litre (350-cubic inch) V8 becomes the top optional engine. All are used in conjunction with the automatic Turbo Hydra-matic transmission.

Ride and handling characteristics parallel the dramatic advances in weight reduction and interior accommodations.

The 1977 Chevrolet is being offered in two series — the top-of-the-line Caprice and the ever-popular Impala. Two-door coupes, four-door sedans and four-door two- and three-seat station wagons are available in each series. The former Impala S and Landau options are discontinued.

The 1977 Chevrolet has a 116-inch wheelbase, a reduction of 5.5 inches from the 1976 Chevrolet. Its overall length is 211.9 inches (10.8 inches under the 1976 Chevrolet). However, its height of 57.4 inches is 2.3 inches greater than the former model, an important factor in the car's interior roominess. Its width is 75.4 inches, a reduction of approximately four inches.

The new Chevrolets mark the first time a number of advance design tools have been used for an all-new vehicle program. Among these applications were use of ⅜-scale plastic models and an electronic analyzer to check and study early body structure, computerized mathematical models of car components, and wind tunnel aerodynamic studies of scale and full-size models. These techniques enabled Chevrolet to make early changes in the new vehicles' designs to insure the most efficient use of materials.

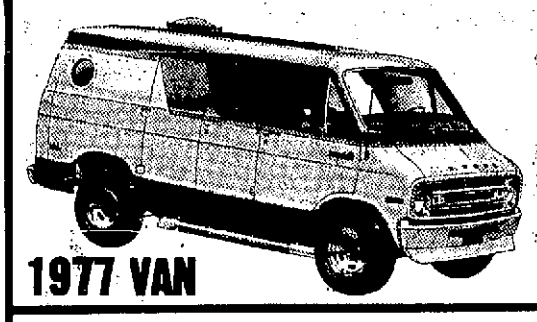

Other Chevrolet highlights for 1977 are:

- A new acoustical package tailored to assure greater ride quietness at all levels.
- A new cowl high ventilation system combined with the new modular heater and air conditioner controls centrally located for driver and passenger operation.
- New lighter weight front and rear steel bumper face bars backed with high strength aluminum reinforcements that save more than 100 pounds in weight.
- Inertia seat back locks on coupes for ease of entry and exit to and from rear seat.
- A new chassis with short and long arm coil spring suspension in front and four-link coil spring rear suspension.
- New perimeter frame that contributes importantly to overall improvement of vehicle's structural efficiency.
- Lighter weight 15-inch wheels and smaller radial ply tires as a feature of the weight reduction program. (Heavier capacity tires and wheels for wagons and a wide range of optional tires.)

'77 Cadillac Eldorado offers refined design

'77 CADILLAC FLEETWOOD ELDORADO COUPE

New bumpers, large cornering lamps and the extensive use of chrome trim blend the front and side of the '77 Cadillac into an integral unit. The new bumpers feature unique dual rubber strip inserts adding to bumper protection.

"Rear styling of these cars is highlighted by a new vertical integrated taillight and side marker lamp positioned above the rear bumper outer," Edward Kennard, Cadillac official, stated.

"The rear deck is sharply sculptured to contribute to the more formal appearance, and to optimize trunk space."

The design of the 1977 Eldorado has been refined to enhance the elegance associated with this fine front-wheel-drive automobile.

"The grille and headlamps have been unified into a horizontal design that is capped with a bright brushed chrome molding. The bumper end caps have a vertical chrome crest on a rich black background," Mr. Kennard said. "Individual Eldorado lettering is used on the hood face above the grille."

New Eldorado vertical tail lamps are located in the bumper ends. Side marker lamps, which include the Eldorado name on the red lens, are set in the rear quarter panel.

The international-size Cadillac Seville for 1977 continues its unmistakable design concept, with rectangular lamps, standup wreath and crest hood ornamentation and a newly styled vertical grille signifying its distinctive heritage. New amber park and turn signal lamps provide a functional, well-defined appearance.

"Seville's timeless styling concept is obvious in the simplicity of the rear design, featuring large wraparound taillights and full rear wheel openings," Mr. Kennard explained.

The Cadillac general manager reported that all 1977 models are offered in 15 standard and 6 optional firemist paint colors, 18 of which are new this year.

All standard and optional vinyl roofs, except the Eldorado, utilize a new padded "Tuxedo" grain material. The Eldorado features a padded elk-grain roof covering. The 1977 Seville is now offered with either a padded vinyl roof or the newly created smooth painted metal top. Sixteen vinyl roof choices are available, with three of these being exclusive to the Seville.

"The interiors for our new De Ville, Brougham and Limousine models are completely redesigned, including a new seat design and totally different instrument panel," according to Mr. Kennard.

The new instrument panel is highlighted by a "center control area," allowing easy driver and passenger access to the radio. Climate Controls, air conditioner outlets, and accessory switches. Driver-only items such as headlamp, cruise and wiper controls are located on a separate control panel to the left of the steering column.

The upper portion of the instrument panel includes an information band which contains the driver tell-tale and warning lights, hidden behind an opaque surface when not illuminated.

All 1977 models use a newly designed two-spoke steering wheel, featuring high gloss simulated Rosewood trim, which is used extensively on the instrument panel and throughout the interiors of all models, except the Eldorado which uses low sheen Rosewood grain trim.

New trim selections for all 1977 Cadillacs include sporty plaids, plush velours, knits and distinctive leather/vinyl combinations. The Eldorado offers four special two-tone leather/vinyl interior trims, while the Seville features new "Dover" knit cloth as standard equipment with optional leather/vinyl trim available.

An exclusive Cadillac feature for 1977 is a new seat belt system for all models except Eldorado. The seat belt retractors are concealed in the side pillar. Unique components in the retractor and buckle allow further belt movement flexibility.

Mr. Kennard described the engineering of the 1977 models as "representative of the most advanced automotive techniques in the industry, including many which were developed in conjunction with our Seville project."

All 1977 models as "representative of the most advanced automotive techniques in the industry, including many which were developed in conjunction with our Seville project."

All 1977 Cadillacs, except the Seville, are powered by a new 15 percent smaller, lighter weight 425 cubic inch (7.0 Litre) V-8 engine. The Cadillac Electronic Fuel Injected engine in this displacement is optional for the De Ville, Brougham and Eldorado models. The Seville is equipped with its proven efficient 350 CID (5.7 Litre) V-8 Electronic Fuel Injected engine.

These engines are combined with a standard Turbo Hydra-matic transmission and low ratio axles for optimum performance.

"Cadillac Electronic Fuel Injected engines precisely meter and control fuel delivery using a laser beam trimmed computer 'brain' to operate the system," Mr. Kennard said. "These engines are designed to offer quick response, fast starting, consistent performance, smooth engine idle and fewer scheduled maintenance operations."

The Cadillac general manager reported the expanded use of four wheel disc brakes in 1977, with the Seville and Brougham now joining the Eldorado with complete four wheel disc brake systems as standard equipment.

The De Ville and Limousine models continue to use the front disc and large rear drum brake arrangement.

Extensive anti-corrosion features incorporated into all 1977 Cadillacs include the use of zinc rich primers, deadeners, plastisol, hot melt sealers and wax coatings in strategic locations. Other corrosion protection advances involve the use of galvanized steel, zinc-iron alloy, zinecrometal (steel coated with zinc paint on one side before forming), and bi-metal moldings (stainless steel laminated to aluminum).

"Cadillac's use of contemporary techniques and materials make our 1977 cars the most corrosion free automobiles we've ever manufactured," according to Mr. Kennard.

Additional customer value benefits of the 1977 Cadillacs were designed and engineered with the convenience and security of the owner in mind.

A new optional AM/FM push button stereo radio with 23-channel citizens band controls and integral AM/FM-CB power antenna is available for the first time in 1977. A unique security feature of this Cadillac AM/FM-CB radio is the antenna which retracts into the front fender of the car when the radio isn't in operation.

Datsun success is linked to parts availability

"For want of a shoe,..." goes the old saying. A modernized version of that adage could apply to the parts end of the automobile business: "For want of a part, the repair job was lost. For want of a repair job, the customer was lost — for good."

Nearly a generation ago, that was the case for many importers who were just getting a toehold in this country. The pipelines that stretched across the oceans often produced a flood of cars but only a trickle of parts. And that's no way to run a railroad.

The importers quickly realized that if they wanted to succeed in the lucrative U.S. market, they had better have a parts network that was equal to or even better than their domestic rivals. The fact that overseas nameplates captured nearly 20 per cent of the market last year is evidence that they've found such a system.

Take, for instance, Datsun, which sold more cars and trucks in 1975 than any other importer. The company stocks more than a six months' supply of parts and has a 75-day supply always on order from Japan. By air or by land, it sends parts out to its 969 dealers, including Coast Datsun in Long Beach, Long Beach Datsun, Moon Datsun in Lakewood, Dot Datsun in Huntington Beach, and Dick Barbour Datsun in Cypress.

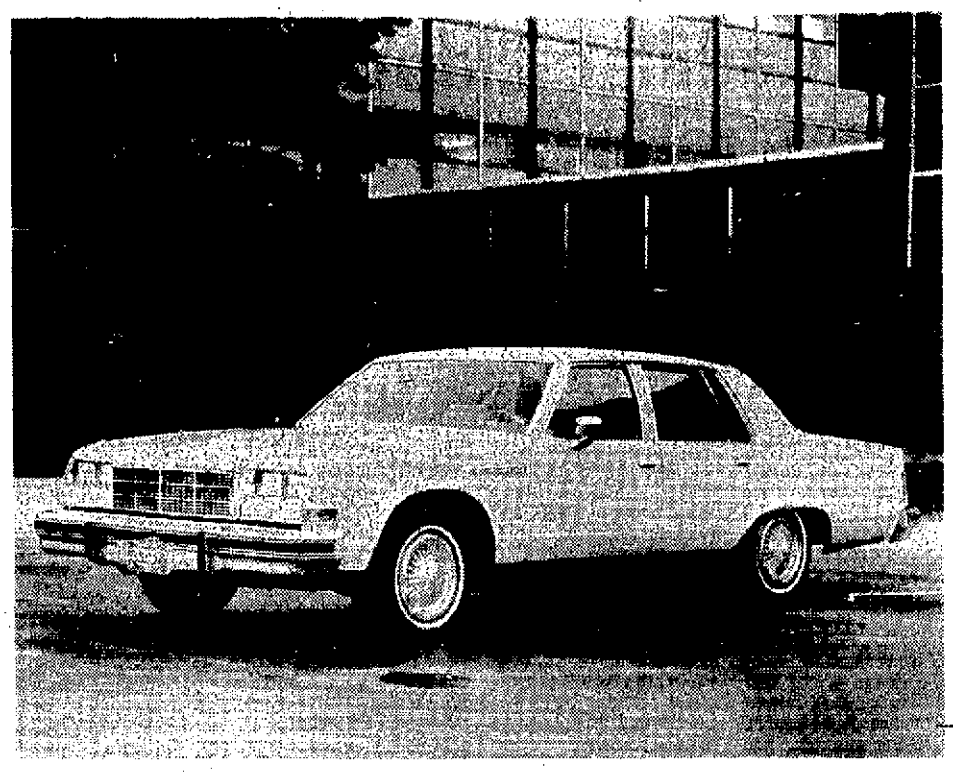

The dealerships are supplied from 10 regional depots in Costa Mesa, Calif.; San Francisco; Portland, Ore.; Denver; Chicago; Boston; Norfolk, Va.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Piscataway, N.J.; and Dallas, plus the master depot in Compton, Calif. Combined, the depots have nearly 1.3 million square feet of storage space and house an inventory in excess of $120 million.

Datsun's main depot, with more than 376,000 square feet, is the largest of any automobile importer. It stocks more than 57,000 parts numbers, more than twice as many as the other depots.

Datsun parts arrive in the U.S. by ship and by air. Parts brought in by ship, the primary method of transportation, equal 15 million pounds each year.

If a part is not readily available, it is flown here from Japan by emergency air order. Last year, Datsun received the equivalent of two fully loaded 747 jumbo jet freighters, or about 400,000 pounds of parts.

In addition, emergency orders from the main depot in Compton can be air freighted to any point in the United States within 24 hours.

Buick's new Electra for 1977

Buick unveils 1977 models

Buick Motor Division has taken the wraps off its 1977 models, described by General Manager David C. Collier as "a new generation of more efficient family-size cars."

The exterior dimensions of the Electra, LeSabre and Riviera all have been resized. Collier said, but they still contain ample interior room for six passengers and have more trunk capacity.

For example, the 1977 LeSabre sedan is 10 inches shorter, 2.7 inches narrower and about 665 pounds lighter, yet it has more headroom and more rear legroom than its 1976 counterpart, and the trunk capacity has been increased from 19.7 to 21.2 cubic feet.

Collier pointed out that the lighter weight made it possible to maintain the same level of performance with smaller engines, thus improving fuel economy.

The Riviera, Buick's entry in the personalized luxury car market, also is completely new for 1977, with a specific suspension that gives it a unique combination of smooth ride and precise handling.

All models in the Electra, LeSabre and Riviera series have pillared roofs and doors with full frames around the glass.

"This design has enabled our engineers to obtain a greater degree of quietness and structural isolation in these cars than they have been able to achieve previously," Collier said.

The front end design of both the Electra and LeSabre is made even more distinctive by the canted headlight bezels which slope rearward away from the upright grille.

Ventiports, Buick's hallmark, add a further touch of distinction.

The styling of LeSabre has been made more colorful by the red and amber taillights that wrap around the rear fenders, serving the dual purpose of side marker lights. The amber lights serve as directional signals.

New grilles and new header moldings highlight the styling changes in Buick's popular intermediate Century and Regal models.

Styling changes in the Skyhawk and Skylark also were limited to grille changes.

Wraparound window featured on Chevrolet

The trim new styling of the 1977 Chevrolet features a forward thrust with a strong fender-high horizontal line the full length of the car and a gently sloping aerodynamic hood. An exclusive coupe profile features a wraparound rear window. Caprice and Impala models have distinctive grille, ornamentation and trim features inside and out.

The Caprice radiator grille texture continues beneath the bumper and a new stand-up Caprice hood ornament on flip-flop pedestal is highlighted. The Impala front end features a Chevrolet bow tie trademark in the center of the grille. Both Caprice and Impala have dual horizontal headlamps.

The 1977 Caprice and Impala models usher in a new era of Chevrolets emphasizing efficiency of size and operation. Despite impressive weight-savings and trim new smaller dimensions, big car roominess and comfort are continued, especially in the new station wagons. Station wagon highlights for 1977 include a new three-way tailgate, lockable stowage compartment in left rear quarter panel and new utility tray in each quarter trim panel. The Caprice Classic and Impala wagons are available in two-seat or three-seat versions. A compeltely new car for 1977, the standard Chevrolet and wagons feature a new 116-inch wheelbase and new body, chassis and frame design.

If you can see your reflection, look for $

When you setp out to the family car next, gaze into the finish and see if you can see the whites of your eyes. If you can, there may be dollar signs, there too.

"It is a truism that a car with a well-cared-for paint job is going to sell as a trade-in for a higher price than a comparable vehicle whose paint has been allowed to deteriorate badly," says Leslie Wood, Johnson Wax consumer information specialist.

The same is true for the vehicle's interior, she adds, offering these suggestions:

Wash your car's exterior with warm water and mild detergent whenever road dirt and grime begin to show. Many owners do this once a week. Don't let the detergent dry and spot the finish.

Apply a good coat of wax several times a year to help keep the showroom shine. If the finish is in good condition you can use a no-buffing liquid. If not, the best way to restore the shine is to use a product like J/Wax Kit, which comes in both liquid and paste form. The trick, of course, is to keep the finish shiny by keeping at the waxing. It is far easier to give a quick touch up than to have to attack badly oxidized paint.

Lincoln Continental is refined in appearance

Refined in appearance and in the level of its handsome appointments, Lincoln Continental for 1977 continues to offer the full-sized convenience and riding comfort traditional in luxury cars.

Two-door coupe and four-door sedan body styles as well as the highly distinctive Town Car and Town Coupe are available.

"The elegant touches we've added to the exterior, the luxurious leathers and velour interior fabrics and the quiet comfort of the ride, more than ever make Lincoln Continental a standard by which other luxury cars will be judged," said Walter S. Walla, Ford Motor Company vice president and Lincoln-Mercury Division general manager.

"We have continued to expand the number of color and trim combinations available and have added new comfort and convenience items to our list of options so that owners can better individualize their Continentals."

For instance, buyers in 1977 can select from 16 exterior body colors, 14 vinyl-roof colors, 11 paint stripes and 14 bodyside moldings. Five of the exterior colors with matching vinyl roofs are new.

The 1977 Lincoln Continentals are readily identifiable by a new, radiator-style vertical grille. A new Valino-grain vinyl roof is standard on the Town Car and Town Coupe and optional on other models.

Interior refinements include new chamois and cordovan trim colors. A two-tone cordovan and white leather and vinyl interior is available in the Town Coupe. A new high-gloss walnut woodgrain applique is used throughout the interior.

Options available to augment the distinctive styling of the 1977 Lincoln Continental include cast-aluminum Turbine-Styled Wheels and a wide fixed-glass panel Moonroof with interior sun screen.

An Illuminated Entry System — which turns on the interior lights and a ring of light around the door key lock cylinder whenever the door handle button is pushed on either front door — is optional. Other new options include an electrically heated left-hand remote-control outside mirror (part of the Defroster Group), and a CB (citizen's-band) radio with remote power antenna. Two-door models feature new anti-theft interior door-lock buttons.

'77 Rabbit is 10% more powerful

Volkswagen's 1977 Rabbit hatchback, available in two- and four-door versions, has an engine that is about ten percent more powerful than last year's thanks to a fuel injection system that takes the place of a carburetor.

Also new are adjustable front seat headrests, improved interiors and headlight flashers for daytime signaling.

Like all 1977 VWs, the front wheel drive Rabbit carries a 12-month, 20,000 mile limited warranty

Cadillac brings Long Beach the next generation of the luxury car.

1977 Fleetwood Brougham

1977 Coupe deVille

Introducing Cadillac 1977. The brilliant new Fleetwood Brougham with four-wheel disc brakes. The sleek new Coupe deVille. And the stunning new Sedan deVille.

Isn't "next generation" overstating it? Not at all. This is a totally new Cadillac. Engineered from the ground up for more efficient use of space. New body. New chassis. New suspension system. New frame. New engine.

Building on success. How do you improve a car that consistently has had the highest repeat ownership and the highest resale value of any U.S. luxury car make? Basically, by retaining what you like about Cadillac—the comfort, luxury, security and roominess—and adding to it.

More efficient use of space. There's more rear legroom and headroom in the DeVilles. Fleetwood Brougham retains the legroom and headroom of its spacious 1976 counterpart. And all have that roomy, Cadillac-size trunk.

Greater fuel economy. In 1977 EPA mileage tests, Cadillac was estimated at 12 miles per gallon city and 16 mpg highway. Your mileage could vary depending upon the type of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition and available equipment.

It's a lively generation. Here, in Cadillac 1977, is an agile luxury car. Quick to respond. With pickup—all-around performance—that could surprise you. There's more maneuverability for easier parking and a more confident feel in city traffic.

Even more comfort and convenience. There's a new instrument panel that organizes things for you. New easy-entry/easy-exit door design. Match-mounting of tires and wheels for a superb ride. And a new seat/shoulder belt combination you can conveniently draw across your lap any way you like.

To protect your investment. The 1977 Cadillacs are designed to battle rattles and rust. Extensive rust-fighting measures include anti-corrosion inner front fender panels. And widespread use of Zincrometal® and bimetal (stainless steel on aluminum).

A ride you won't believe . . . until you take a test drive. Your Cadillac dealer would be happy to arrange it.

And for a different kind of luxury . . . you might consider the international-size Seville by Cadillac . . . or the 1977 Eldorado with front-wheel drive.

Dodge Charger for 1977 presents a look for formal luxury in its Special Edition version.

Charger: luxurious or sporty

Sportier options, mechanical improvements, and a redesigned Daytona décor package are among a host of new features offered in the 1977 Dodge Charger Special Edition.

Charger SE has a new, distinctive chrome-plated grille for 1977, with a horizontal texture and a five-piece tape stripe application. The tape stripe is the same as the chosen body color.

SE also features a new hood tape treatment. The stripes are color coordinated with the vinyl roof and consists of a double stripe on the hood and grille panel. For 1977, Charger SE also features distinctive deck and side stripes.

Charger's fixed quarter window has been re-styled and squared to present a more formal appearance. These quarter windows are available with or without louvers.

Rear bumpers have been redesigned to accomodate new tail lamps which are set into injection molded nylon quarter end caps.

Charger SE offers, as optional equipment, a removable hatch roof. This new roof features tinted, see-through glass panels over the driver and right side passenger areas. They are easy to remove and can be stored in the trunk.

Charger continues to offer two vinyl roof designs in 1977. The halo and landau style roofs both are available as extra cost options. A new, blue color is being offered for the Charger landau vinyl roof design this year in addition to seven previously available shades.

The Charger Daytona decor package has been redesigned for 1977. A bold, two-tone paint treatment featured applied on the rear quarter panels and the front fenders extending to the doors. The wide pontoon-shaped paint applications are available in three new color combinations: light blue/dark blue; pale yellow/medium gold; and medium silver metallic/black. In addition to the new paint treatment, the Daytona also has stripes on the deck lid, cowl and roof line accent stripes. Racing mirrors, grille accents and Daytona decals also are included in the package.

A new corduroy cloth and vinyl seat material is being offered on the bucket seat for 1977. This new, soft to the touch material is available in three combinations: tan, red, and black. The latter two color offerings have silver accents on the seat inserts.

The "60/40" velour front seat provides a high level of driver and passenger comfort. The driver's portion of the seat is approximately 60 percent of a divided bench and includes a fold-down center armrest. Adjustable recliners work independently for the driver's backrest and the passenger's. They provide seating positions from 3 degrees more upright than normal to 71.5 degrees horizontal, and a total of 14 different stops.

Courtesy lights in the doors and quarter trim panels, and a recessed armrest integrated into a soft moulding add to the elegance of the interiors.

Standard interior colors are black, blue, green, gold, red, tan or white mixed. Shag carpeting and vinyl bucket seats are standard.

Charger offers a selection of V-8 engines, ranging from the 318 cubic inch two-barrel powerplant to the 400 cubic inch with electronic lean burn.

Befitting its specialty car status, the 1977 Charger Special Edition has bars as standard equipment.

Cadillac radio options include scan feature

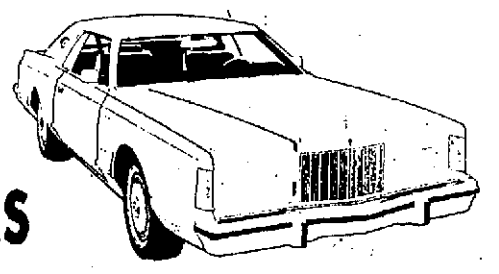

Other Cadillac radio options include a new AM/FM push button stereo radio with digital display of time, date, elapsed trip time and station.

A new exclusive Cadillac option, the "scan" feature, is built into the signal-seeking radio bar above the station selector buttons. When the "scan" button is used the signal-seeking device scans the radio dial, sampling each station signal it encounters for about 10 seconds. When a desired station is heard, another push of the "scan" button locks in the station.

All 1977 Cadillac stereo radios have new circuitry to minimize unwanted FM signals.

All models offer a new CAdillac Electronic Cruise Control option in 1977. This sophisticated unit utilizes micro-circuitry, and includes new "resume" and "advance" features allowing the driver increased flexibility for speed control.

"WHERE SERVICE MATTERS"

Expanded Volare production

Plymouth's Volare — instant success compact — features increased rear seat leg room in coupes for 1977 and an optional 225-2 barrel "Super Six" engine.

Volare, Plymouth's new family of small cars, became Chrysler Corporation's top selling nameplate in its introductory year and ranks among the top ten in industry sales, according to Richard D. McLaughlin, vice president of Chrysler's Automotive Sales Division.

"Volare has exceeded our expectations in terms of the early and strong public acceptance it has received; the number of conquest sales it has recorded and the very strong demand for the wagon version," McLaughlin said.

"Close to 40 percent of Volare sales have been station wagons and we expect that trend to continue in the 1977 model year, eventually leveling off to 38 percent.

"We have increased our production schedules to accommodate buyer demands for Volare. For 1977, we will have three assembly plants building the compact."

The 1977 Volare line-up will continue to offer three body styles on two wheelbases and in three price classes.

The coupe and sedan will be offered in standard, Custom and Premier models, while the station wagon will be available in standard and the Premier, which includes simulated exterior wood grain treatment.

Changes for the 1977 Volare line include new paints, new interior colors, and new options including a "T-Bar" hatch roof with two removable panels. The use of two-tone paint has been expanded from three to nine combinations, and eight new exterior colors will be offered.

Volare Premier wagons will feature as optional equipment, a new tan plaid cloth seating package. This "Hillcrest" design fabric on the 60/40 split bench will be highlighted by plaid accents on door trim panels, shag carpeting on the floor and will be available in combination with five exterior paint colors.

Rear leg and knee room in Volare two-door models has been increased nearly an inch by redesigning the rear seat.

Volare will continue to have the broadest range of options ever offered in a Plymouth compact, including virtually every feature available in full-size cars.

Volare's 1977 engine line-up has been expanded. Standard powerplant is the reliable 225 cubic inch, six-cylinder engine. An optional 225 "Super Six" engine with two-barrel carburetor will also be available specifically for economy-minded buyers who want a peppier, more responsive version. The power rating has been increased about 10 horsepower over the standard 225.

Gremlin appearance change

The AMC Gremlin, the first domestic subcompact car, receives its first major appearance changes for 1977 while retaining the unique Gremlin identity which contributed to its success.

The 1977 Gremlin, four inches shorter than previous models, has a lower, contemporary-style hood and more rear glass area. Front sheet metal, grille and bumper are also redesigned. Rear changes include a larger lift window, larger tail lights and bumper revisions.

Rear glass area is increased 23 per cent for improved visibility. The net result of the styling and design changes is a lighter, more open and airy look that enhances the Gremlin's trim dimensions.

Function and utility are also emphasized in the new Gremlin. The new rear design results in reduced liftover height for more convenient loading and unloading of luggage and packages. Usable passenger space remains the same, even though the 1977 Gremlin at 166 inches overall length is shorter than previous models. Cargo space, with rear seat folded, is a substantial 26.9 cubic feet.

The new Gremlin comes equipped with a higher level of standard equipment than last year's custom model. Standard equipment for 1977 includes custom vinyl bench seats, custom door trim panels, carpeted floor and cargo areas, custom steering wheel, spare tire cover, bright drip moldings, rocker panel moldings, wheellip moldings, two-speed wipers and electric washers, glove box light and cigarette lighter, and front disc brakes.

The "X" package option offers such sporty features as slot-styled wheels, engine-turned instrument panel overlay, bucket seats, sports steering wheel, D70 x 14 tires, special "X" stripe and lower back panel decal.

Standard Gremlin engine is the 232 CID six, with the 258 CID six available as an option. Both offer good fuel economy along with power and performance unique among subcompact cars.

A four-speed manual transmission is now available with both engines. qith the 258 2V six as a performance option, the 304 V-8 is no longer offered on the Gremlin.

Buick engines are equipped with EGR

All Buick engines will be equipped with exhaust gas recirculation (EGR) in combination with the catalytic converter in order to meet the more stringent emission standards for 1977.

Engines certified for California usage will add air injection and specific carburetor and distributor calibrations.

Buick offers five engines in 1977 — the 231 cubic inch V-6, and four V-8's — a 301 CID, a 350 CID V-8 with both two and four-barrel carburetion, and a 403 CID.

The V-6 is standard on LeSabre, Skylark and Skyhawk, and all Century models except the Regal sedan and Century station wagon.

The Regal sedan is powered by the 350-2 V-8, except those registered in California or high altitude areas, where the 350-4 is required.

The 350-4 V-8 is standard on the Century station wagon with the exception of those used in high altitudes. The 403 V-8 is required in those areas.

The 301 V-8 is offered as an option on the LeSabre and Skylark.

The 350-4 is standard on Electra, Riviera and Estate Wagon models and optional on LeSabre, and the 403 CID V-8 is available on all full-size cars in the '77 line — Electra, Riviera, LeSabre and Estate Wagon.

Lean burn expanded

Chrysler Corporation will install its revolutionary electronic lean burn engine system on four V-8 engine families in 1977 models.

Lean burn will be an optional feature on federally-certified 360, 400 and 440 four-barrel V-8's. The 318 two-barrel federally-certified V-8 will be available with lean burn later in the model run.

For the first time, an electronic lean burn engine — the 440 four-barrel — will be available in California in the 1977 model year. This engine will meet the most stringent emission requirements in the nation.

Chrysler introduced the electronic lean burn system in its 400 four-barrel engine during the 1976 model year.

FUN FACTS from WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

A SLOTH CAN TURN HIS HEAD THROUGH A 270-DEGREE ANGLE DUE TO AN UNUSUAL ARRANGEMENT OF NECK VERTABRAE.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT (356 B.C.-323 B.C.) CONQUERED MUCH OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, FROM GREECE TO INDIA, EVEN THOUGH HE DIED BEFORE HIS 33 RD. BIRTHDAY.

THE KING COBRA CAN KILL AN ELEPHANT WITHIN 3 HOURS BY STRIKING EITHER THE TIP OF THE TRUNK OR WHERE THE ELEPHANT'S TOENAIL JOINS THE FOOT.

MONTREAL'S $500 MILLION MIRABEL AIRPORT IS THE WORLD'S LARGEST, DEDICATED OCT. 4, 1975. IT COVERS 138 SQUARE MILES (OVER 4 TIMES THE AREA OF MANHATTAN).

You'll like the big, long-lasting flavor.

INSIDE WOODY ALLEN

THE JACKSON TWINS

By Dick Brooks

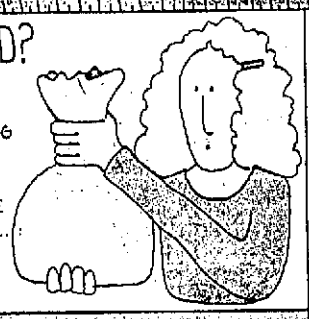

METRIC SYSTEM: PART FIVE

HOW MUCH DOES IT HOLD?

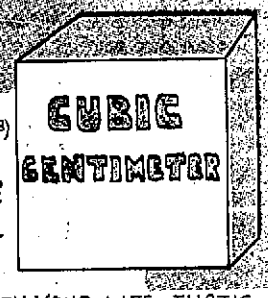

THAT'S A FAIR QUESTION. WE LIKE TO KNOW CAPACITY—OR VOLUME—SO WE KNOW HOW MUCH OF SOMETHING WE'RE BUYING—OR PUTTING IN THE PUDDING.

SO, THIS FIFTH PART OF THE SIX-PART SERIES IS ABOUT VOLUME. CLIP AND SAVE EACH ONE.

CM3

A SIMPLE WAY TO MEASURE VOLUME IS IN CUBIC CENTIMETERS (CM^3). ALL YOU DO IS MULTIPLY THE WIDTH TIMES LENGTH TIMES HEIGHT—THAT'S IF THE SIDES ARE ALL NICE, STRAIGHT CENTIMETERS. YOUR ANSWER IS CUBIC CENTIMETERS—SO IF YOU CALL THEM THAT INSTEAD OF A BUNCH OF OTHER NAMES, YOU'LL SIMPLIFY YOUR LIFE. THAT'S WHAT METRIC CAN DO FOR YOU.

NEXT: YOU'RE ALMOST CONVERTED

MAZE OF NAMES

IN OUR CUSTOMARY SYSTEM, WE HAVE PECKS OF NAMES FOR VOLUME, LIKE:

MINIM (ABOUT A DROP—WHICH YOU PROBABLY DIDN'T KNOW)
OUNCE (1/16 POUND; 1/32 QUART; A LITTLE MORE THAN A JIGGER—OR THE AMOUNT OF BRAINS THE OPPOSITION'S CANDIDATE DOESN'T HAVE)
POUND (16 TIMES A LITTLE MORE THAN HALF A JIGGER)
DRAM (ASK YOUR DRUGGIST)
TEASPOON (1/3 TABLESPOON; A RECIPE MEASURE)
TABLESPOON (3 TEASPOONS; A RECIPE MEASURE)
CUP (SEVERAL JIGGERS; A COUPLE OF SWIGS)

THERE ARE MORE—LIKE GALLON, PECK, BUSHEL, BARREL; MEASURING EVERYTHING FROM ANTIFREEZE TO POTATOES. IT'S HARD TO KNOW HOW MUCH YOU'RE GETTING—ISN'T IT?

SLIDE CONVERTER

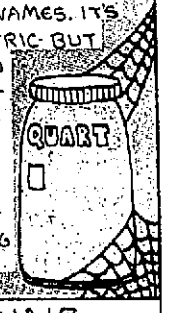

YOU MAY WANT TO KNOW HOW MANY LITERS IN A U.S. GALLON, OR HOW MANY FLUID OUNCES IN A LITER. THIS HANDY SLIDE CONVERTER WILL BE A VALUABLE TOOL. YOU MAY OBTAIN ONE BY SENDING $1 AND A SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE WITH YOUR REQUEST FOR IT TO:

METRIC CONVERTER
BOX 4994
DES MOINES, IOWA
50306

FORGET QUARTS

PEOPLE LIKE TO GIVE THINGS NAMES. LITER IS ONE OF THOSE NAMES. IT'S NOT REAL OFFICIAL METRIC—BUT IT'S USED TO MEAN 1,000 CUBIC CENTIMETERS (CM^3)—THAT'S A CUBE 10×10×10 CENTIMETERS.

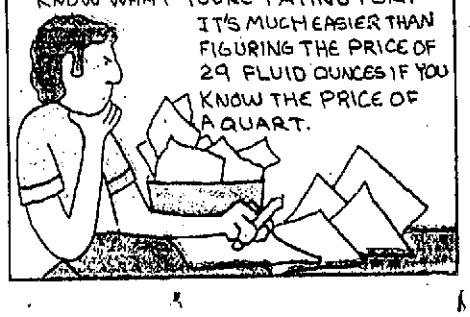

EASY? WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO WITHOUT QUARTS? FORGET THEM—THEY'RE NOT QUITE AS BIG AS A LITER ANYWAY.

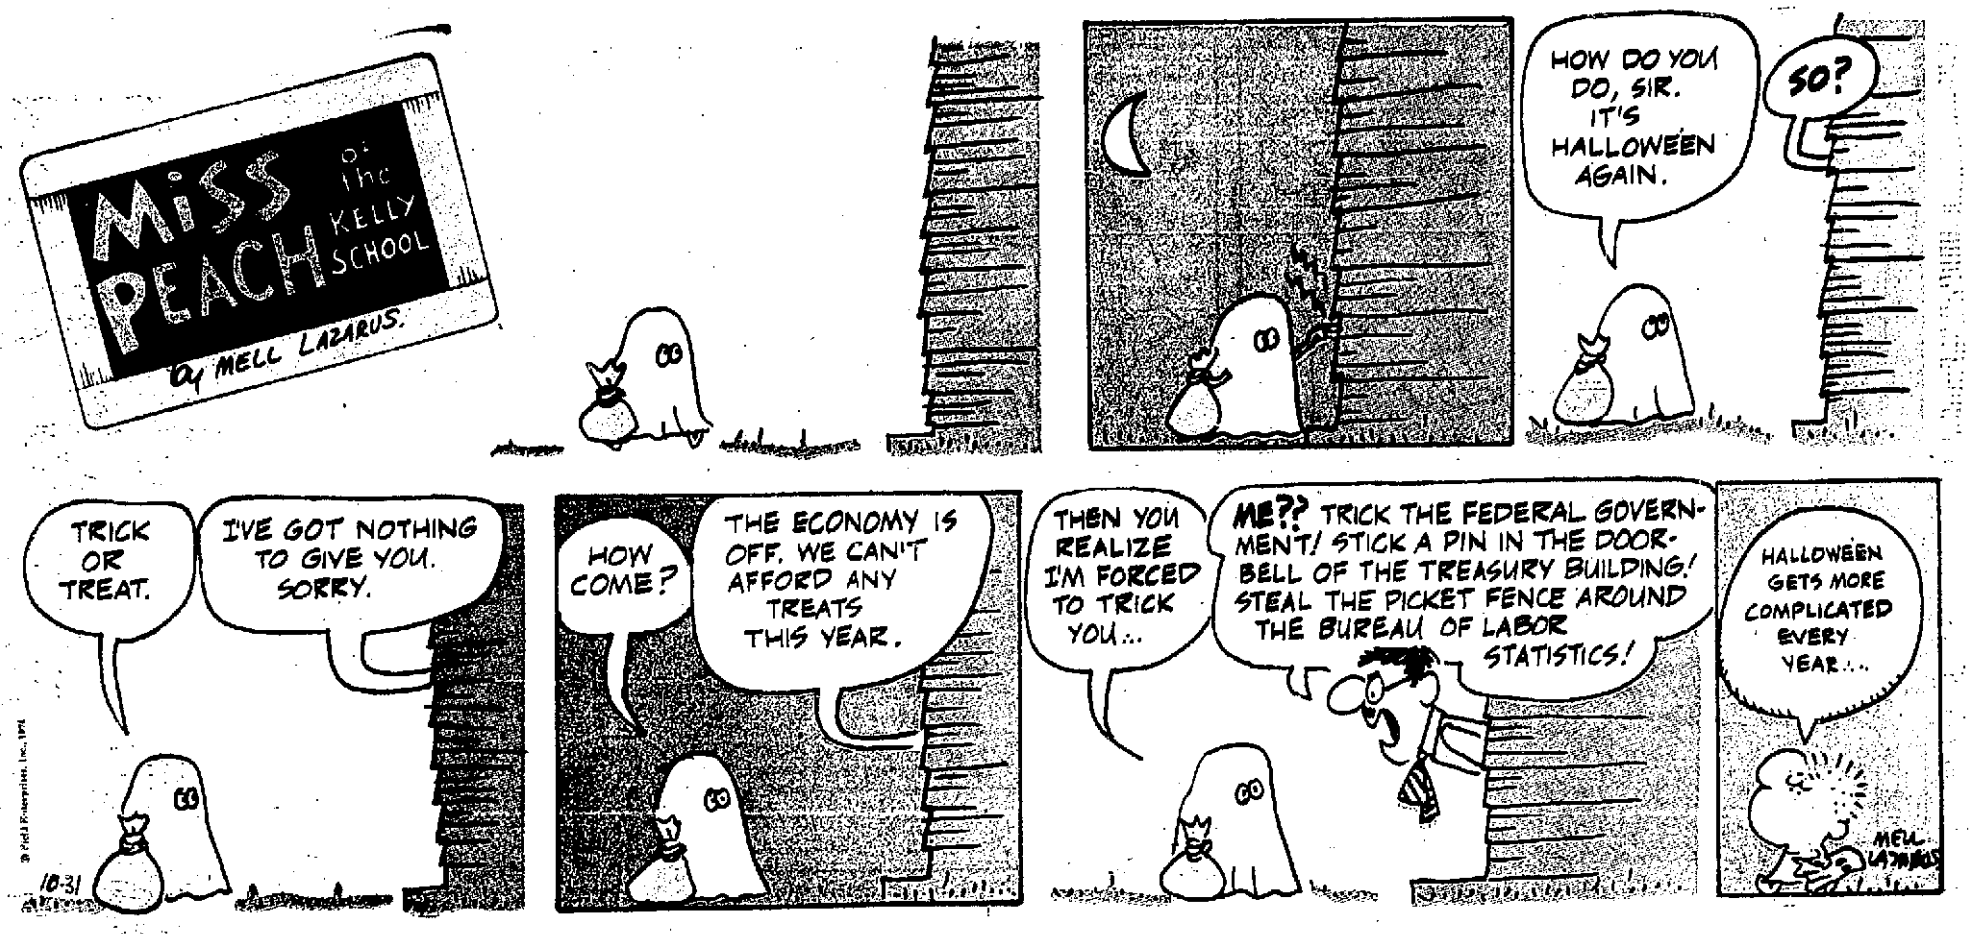

EASY FIGURING

SUPPOSE THE PRICE IS $1 PER LITER—BUT THE CUBE BEING OFFERED YOU IS 10×10×9 CENTIMETERS. THAT'S 900 CM^3. SINCE A LITER IS 1,000 OF THEM, 900 IS 90% OF A LITER. IF THE PRICE IS $1 PER LITER, YOU'RE BEING OFFERED 90¢ WORTH. OH BOY—YOU FINALLY KNOW WHAT YOU'RE PAYING FOR.

IT'S MUCH EASIER THAN FIGURING THE PRICE OF 29 FLUID OUNCES IF YOU KNOW THE PRICE OF A QUART.

by ED REED

"It's hard to feel important when all you ever get is a carbon copy of a carbon copy."

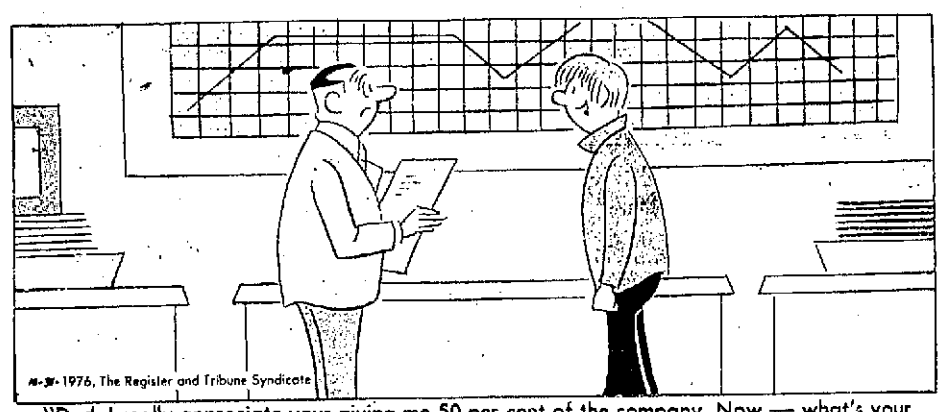

"My fiance feels he isn't worthy of me — and I agree."

"The polluted air finally reached us out here. The pigs aren't grunting anymore — they're coughing."

"I want to go someplace where I can get away from these vacation bills."

"Dad, I really appreciate your giving me 50 per cent of the company. Now — what's your best offer to buy me out?"

Debralee Scott big on 'Hartman' (say it again)

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

DEBRALEE SCOTT . . . sexy sister on 'Mary Hartman'

In the soap opera world of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," the middle name of all the characters seems to be trouble, trouble.

"Infidelity, insanity, alcoholism, perversion, assorted diversions — and an exciting new floor wax — are all yours on the continuing saga of the typical American housewife and her 'All American' family," proclaimed a blurb from Channel 11 heralding the start of the show's second season a few weeks ago.

Norman Lear's nationally syndicated, five-nights-a-week series was one of the most talked about television programs of the 1975-76 season, after being turned down by the networks. It airs on scores of stations across the nation, and is seen in the Los Angeles-Long Beach area weeknights from 11 to 11:30 on KTTV.

As the second season got under way, Mary Hartman (Louise Lasser) was still confined to the psychiatric ward at Fernwood Receiving Hospital. Her husband Tom (Greg Mullavey), plagued by the problem of impotence, was still seeing life through rose-colored bottles. Her mother, Martha Shumway (Dody Goodman), was without a mate, since Mary's father had mysteriously disappeared.

And Mary's younger sister, Cathy Shumway (Debralee Scott), was pregnant and couldn't name the father if her next romance depended on it.

Troubles? They've all got 'em on MH2. But perhaps none of the characters is worse off than poor Charlie Haggers (Graham Jarvis), husband of country singer Loretta (Mary Kay Place) and friend and neighbor of the Hartman clan. Charlie has lost his manhood to a bullet which struck him down low in a dark motel room. Only an animal transplant operation can restore Charlie's pride, and that would mean raising big dough.

OH, WELL, at least Charlie is one man who appears to be safe from Cathy. The sexy young sister of Mary is attracted to just about anyone wearing pants, and the word no isn't in her vocabulary.

Debralee Scott, who portrays Cathy, took time during a rehearsal lunch break the other day to tell me a bit about her role and herself. The interview was conducted in her dressing room on the soundstage at KTTV in Hollywood where Lear produces the series.

The young actress was dressed in form-fitting garb and appeared, you might say, extremely healthy. She's 23, or roughly the age Cathy is supposed to be. Cathy, you understand, is a lot younger than Mary.

Or, as Debralee explains it: "Cathy was a mistake."

Among Cathy's romantic playmates in the first season of the show — any one of whom might be the father of her unborn child — were, Debralee recalled, "an Armenian bartender; a deaf mute who dumped me for a Hollywood ingenue; Police Sgt. Dennis Foley, who also was making out with Mary and another girl at the same time, and Clete Meisenheimer, a news broadcaster who got me a job briefly as a TV weatherperson."

Asked if Cathy were meant to be considered a nymphomaniac, the auburn-haired actress replied: "No — she's choosy. She's looking for someone to love. She's a mixed-up kid right now. She's in a hurry, and she wants total happiness.

"Cathy is trying to get out of Fernwood (Ohio). She is much more well read than anyone else in Fernwood — or thinks she is. She's searching for something. Sometimes it's a tossup between her own independence and getting a man. I hope she stays independent."

After several romances had failed, Cathy went to a local church and tried to convince the priest she wanted to become a nun. Before long, Father DeMarco fell for her himself, and as the first season drew to a close Cathy and the priest ran off together.

"Nothing happened, though — or at least if it did, it was left to the viewers' imagination," Debralee explained.

MISS SCOTT doesn't buy the opinion that MH2 is a spoof of daytime soap operas. "It's not a takeoff on anything," she said, "it's an original. Audiences can do what they want with it — it's on two levels. They can laugh, or they can take it seriously, as many people do. Many viewers take the characters very seriously and worry about them.

"It's very close to life. It's intelligent — that's why the networks turned it down. I think American audiences are ready for it. My parents love it. They think it's funny, and they see nothing dirty in it. And my father is a very straight man — he likes John Wayne and Lee Marvin."

Debralee was born in Elizabeth, N.J., where she lived until she was 15, at which time her family moved to Stroudsburg, Pa. She spent her last year of high school in San Francisco, where an older sister lived, and also studied at the American Conservatory Theater there and went to San Francisco State University for two years.

"I've always wanted to be an actress — except for three days when I thought maybe I'd like to be a housewife and mother. And, golly, here I am! It shows what a little determination will do!" the exuberant young actress said.

"Of course, I've really been lucky. My timing has been good."

Although she considers her role in "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," her biggest break, Debralee was well on her way to success before landing the part.

After playing a corpse in "Dirty Harry" and getting bit parts in "The Candidate," "Superdad" and "American Graffiti" while living in San Francisco, she moved to Hollywood in 1973 and, "on my first interview," got one of the starring roles in the Hallmark Hall of Fame television drama "Lisa, Bright and Dark," with Kay Lenz, "my best friend," and Annie Lockhart, "whom I lived with for a couple of years."

She later was one of the eight stars in the CBS drama series "Sons and Daughters," about high school seniors in the mid-'50s, which aired in the fall of 1974. She played Evie, the easy target of all the boys. Her credits include a few other theatrical movies and TV dramas, and she had the recurring role of Hotsie-Totsie on the ABC comedy series "Welcome Back, Kotter," before shifting to MH2.

Debralee said she has been a "very outgoing" person all her life — "I was a cheerleader and all that" — and she feels she has plenty to cheer about right now.

"You are looking at one very happy girl," said Debbie, whose boyfriend is actor Rudy Ramos.

Now, if Cathy and the others on MH2 can just work out THEIR problems, maybe TV fans can get a good night's sleep.

PATTY DUKE ASTIN, as Bernadette, wants her marriage to Joseph Armagh (Richard Jordan) to be more than a business arrangement, on "NBC's Best Seller: Captains and the Kings," which will air a roundup of the first four chapters at 9 p.m. Thursday on Ch. 4 and a new chapter at 10.

Tube offers 3-hour look at movies over the years

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

This Sunday, NBC is airing a three-hour night of flicks called "Life Goes to the Movies," offering clips of about 200 films made over a 36-year span for viewer inspection.

It represents more than a year's work, consideration of some 800 films, and long, arduous haggling with owners of the chosen films for rights to air excerpts of the movies, says co-producer Mel Stuart.

And the theme of the opus is not simply that these films were what folks watched way back when, he adds, but rather "how they were a reflection of the manners, the mores and the political thrust of the American people when they were made."

ADDED STUART: "The easiest way to explain it is that there's a helluva long way from Andy Hardy to 'The Graduate.' 'The Graduate' wouldn't have been possible in the 1930s. There would have been riots in the streets."

The show is based on and has the same title as the 1975 book about Life magazine's often starry-eyed coverage of moviedom from 1936, when the magazine began, to 1972, when it ceased weekly publication.

The book — and the show's script — were written by Richard Schickel, a former Life movie critic who several seasons ago produced the much-praised public TV series "The Men Who Made the Movies."

Stuart, who co-produced "Life Goes to the Movies" with Schickel and directed it, said the show covers four basic eras of film — the late 1930s, World War II and the postwar years, the 1950s through 1963 and from 1964 through 1972.

LIZA MINNELLI, Henry Fonda and Shirley MacLaine host a three-hour "Big Event" special on Ch. 4 at 8 tonight titled "Life Goes to the Movies." It provides a nostalgic look at the great stars and great films from the mid-'30s to the 1970s.

HE SAID he'll try to show through those eras changing on-screen attitudes towards such things as romance and war, plus looks at the rash of Biblical epics in the 1950s and what caused them, and a phenomena of that decade — movies made specifically for the teen-aged market.

Stuart, a thin, wiry veteran of movies and television who won an Emmy in 1969 for his "Making of the President" TV documentary about the 1968 elections, doesn't think three hours of Sunday night movie-watching will prove too much for the television viewer.

"Number One, I'm breaking it up in a thousand ways," he said, referring to various visual and aural tricks of the trade he's put in the show to keep — he hopes — the viewers' attention.

"AND secondly, I'm giving them (viewers) Patton and Philadelphia Story,' and what else can they possibly see like this on another channel at one time."

The show, to be hosted by Henry Fonda, Shirley MacLaine and Liza Minnelli, isn't coming cheaply. Stuart says it's "probably the most expensive documentary ever made."

He declined to say how much it cost to put together, but grinned when asked if one could assume the tab runs way up the six-figure category.

"How about seven?" he suggested.

GOT A TV QUESTION?

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight News Service

Q. I watched the first show of "Happy Days" and thought Pinky was really super. But my mom says she read that Pinky will only be in four shows. Why is this? She and the Fonz should stay together. — M. P.

A. Roz Kelly, the gal who filled Pinky Tuscadero's costumes — almost — was signed for a limited number of shows. ABC's brass wanted to find out what the viewers thought before making a long commitment. Judging by the reaction and the big rating pulled by "Days," Pinky's a hit and you can figure she'll be around, though not every week.

Q. Is Roz Kelly the girl who won the "Don Adams Screen Test"? That girl was to appear on the new season of "Happy Days." — J. E.

A. "Screen Test" winners got bit parts. And the "new" season mentioned by Adams was the 1975-76 season. "Screen Test" was all done in early spring 1975, never made any more shows and is now off TV. Roz Kelly is no newcomer to movies and TV. Her first break was to play Barbra Streisand's roommate in "The Owl and the Pussycat" in 1970, works and ad agencies [illegible] of "Good Times" was going to be working on the Alaskan pipeline. But, now, they've killed him off on the show. What happened? — L. S.

A. First, it was Amos' character in "Good Times," James Evans, whose fate was decided. Actor Amos felt that he was being pushed aside in the show as Jimmy Walker got more and more important. Amos walked out.

Scripters planned to have Evans take an out-of-town job when it seemed as if Amos might be talked into returning to the show. He didn't, so the decision was made to finish off Evans. Many black groups were unhappy with the change in "Good Times" because it was felt the Evans family, with the father in the home, was a good image of black families.

Q. I was in New York not so long ago and one channel there had an entire week of British programs. When will the rest of America get to see these shows? — J. L.

A. What you saw was a week-long, all-day commercial for the British TV producing company Thames TV. It hoped net-

Spanish network to cover election

LOS ANGELES (AP) — True, Guillermo Restrepo lacks the fame of a Walter Cronkite. But on Nov. 2, he'll be Cronkite's equivalent for hundreds of thousands of viewers who want their news in Spanish.

He'll be in New York, anchoring Election Night coverage of the Spanish International Network (SIN), begun here in 1961 to provide programs for Spanish-speaking viewers in the United States.

Restrepo's broadcast — called "Destino '76" — will be fed by satellite, SIN says, from the company's New York outlet to seven stations in four states and possibly to Mexico's Televisa network.

All six SIN-owned stations in New York, Miami, San Antonio, Tex., and Los Angeles, Fresno and San Francisco, will air the show, as will two stations in Modesto, Calif., and Chicago.

ALL SERVE areas with high concentrations of Hispanic residents.

Restrepo, 33, says SIN's election night program, which the company says will cost $100,000 to put on, will of course report on the outcome of the night's main event — the presidential election.

But unlike the major networks, which will take the broad approach to election night coverage throughout the nation, SIN will be far more specialized in its coverage and analyses, he adds.

DANIEL VILLANUEVA, general manager of KMEX-TV (Ch. 34), in Los Angeles, forms a part of the "Destino '76" news team that will provide live, coast-to-coast coverage of the U.S. elections on Tuesday evening on the Spanish International Network.

For starters, Jacobo Zabludovsky, news director of Mexico's Televisa network, will be working with him, commenting on possible effects of the election on Latin America, he said.

And SIN won't emphasize state-by-state returns, said Restrepo, who says he began in news at age 12 as a police reporter on the newspaper of his hometown of Pereira in eastern Colombia.

HE SAID the network instead will concentrate on election-night results of House, Senate and gubernatorial races in 14 key states with large concentrations of Spanish-speaking persons.

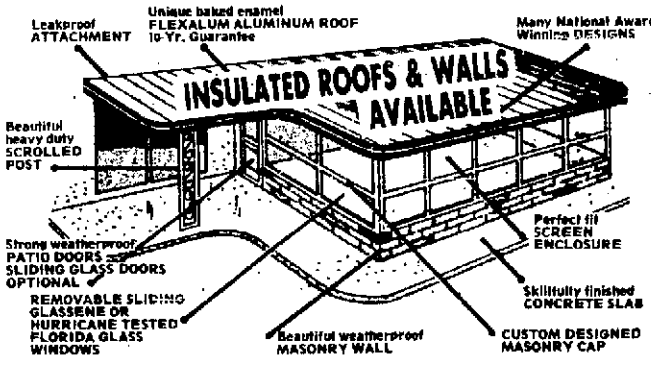

Restrepo, speaking by phone from SIN's New York offices, said close attention also will be given election-night winners — regardless of state — who now serve or want to serve on congressional committees whose work directly affects Hispanic-descent Americans or Latin America.

RESTREPO, who joined SIN more than seven years ago at its station here, KMEX, (Channel 34), said he doubts the major networks will report as extensively as SIN on the backgrounds of those who'll return to these committees or say they want to join them.

"To them (the networks) all the areas are important," he said.

"But some are more important to SIN's Spanish-speaking audience than others because their work is more related to decisions affecting Latin America or the Spanish-speaking people of this country."

which are headquartered in New York, would like its shows well enough to buy them. It's unlikely the stunt will be repeated, although Los Angeles and Chicago have been mentioned as other sites for the sales pitch. Americans already have seen some Thames TV shows. The Lee Remick series, "Jennie: Lady Randolph Churchill," and "World at War" are Thames TV products.

Q. I just glanced at "Sesame Street" and couldn't believe my eyes. Tyrone, the pimp, on the soaper "All My Children," is also on "Sesame Street" romping with the kiddies. Can it be true. — S. B.

A. Why not? Roscoe Orman, who plays Tyrone and "Sesame Street's" Gordon, is an actor doing two separate parts. Surely you aren't one of the many misguided who think the serials are so "true to life" that the characthers are real people and not actors playing roles.

Q. Tell me about the guy who played Alex in "Dawn: Portrait of a Teen-age Runaway." He's just dreamy. Where can I write to him? — S.D.

A. Leigh J. McCloskey is a native of Southern California, got his first big part last year when he played Billy Jordache in the final episodes of the original "Rich Man, Poor Man." He was considered too young to do the part in the series. Write him in care of ICPR, 9255 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

Q. Where can I write the producers of "Rhoda" to let them know how many viewers they will lose if they don't get Rhoda and Joe back together. — C. M.

A. Producers James L. Brooks and Allan Burns broke up the Gerard marriage because they were losing viewers with them together. Rhoda was funnier when she was chasing a man than after she had landed him. But, you can tell your side to Brooks and Burns at MTM Enterprises Inc., 4024 Radford Ave., North Hollywood, Calif., 91604.

Doctor, my mother treated me like an animal.

Dogs: we overfeed them. Overdress them. Sometimes we even send them to the shrink.

Be watching tonight on Channel 7 as Eyewitness News Reporter Fred Anderson begins a three-part series on our favorite four-legged friends.

You'll see how man's best friend often gets the best of us. Plus, you'll find out why dogs seem to like us so much... and why we go crazy over them.

Don't miss "Pampered Pooches" tonight at six. Because the world may just be going to the dogs.

INTRODUCING LIFE-SIZE COLOR TELEVISION

Advent's VideoBeam® 750 Brings Football (And Everything Else) To Life in Your Living Room.

Advent's VideoBeam ® 750 is a totally new kind of color TV set. Its 6-foot diagonal measure picture is more than 15 times the size of the picture most people watch at home.

It brings you TV as you've never seen it. Alive. Involving. In the room instead of in the box.

The Videobeam 750 is a unique two-piece TV set. Its console unit (about the size of an end table) projects the picture onto a separate screen.

It's as easy to operate as a standard color set. And its big picture is bright and clear. You can watch in ordinary light in an ordinary room.

Until you see Advent color television, you really haven't seen television.

SENATOR TOWER

ANNA CHENNAULT

Q. John Goodwin Tower, the Republican U.S. Senator from Texas, is splitting from his wife, the former Lou Bullington of Wichita Falls, Tex., after 24 years of marriage and three daughters. Isn't this because the mighty mite plans to marry the Chinese dynamo Anna Chennault, widow of Gen. Claire Chennault, who used to fly for the late Chiang Kai-shek?—G.T., Wichita Falls, Tex.

A. Senator Tower may in fact marry again. His second wife will not be Anna Chennault. At this point Mrs. Chennault is pretty much taken up by Tommy Corcoran, one of the last survivors of Franklin D. Roosevelt's brain trust.

Q. Is it true that sleeping pill manufacturers plan to package the Ford-Carter debates and sell them as sleep-inducing cassettes?—H.L., Washington, D.C.

A. Neither man is an orator. Both lack fire, zeal, crackle, pop, inspiration, the vital quality of arousing rapport with their audiences. They are stiff, automaton-like, and so obviously programmed as to eliminate all spontaneity.

Q. Is Armand Hammer, chairman of the Occidental Petroleum Corp., a crook? I have heard so much about this character and his relationship with the Soviet Union.—P.R., Los Angeles.

A. This past March, Dr. Hammer was sentenced to one year's probation and fined $3000 for making illegal political gifts of $54,000 to President Nixon's 1972 reelection campaign. Marvin Watson, one of Lyndon Johnson's top White House aides, helped Hammer cover up illegal campaign contributions. Watson used to work for Occidental. Hammer is a colorful and controversial character who reportedly helped the Communists under Lenin in the early 1920's and, because of that, supposedly has an "in" with the Soviets. He has been instrumental in fostering U.S.-U.S.S.R. cultural exchanges.

Q. I have been told that the one great American pharmaceutical development was cortisone. Who was responsible for this invention?—Louis Miller, Brooklyn, N.Y.

A. Edward Kendall, Ph.D., and Philip Hench, M.D., both of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., made the first major breakthrough in developing cortisone, along with Swiss chemist Tadeusz Reichstein. Dr. Hench believed that pregnant women secreted a cortical hormone that relieved the symptoms of arthritis. Dr. Kendall isolated six hormones or steroids secreted by the adrenal glands, labeling them A through F. Both researchers believed that the fifth steroid, compound E, was the most effective.

On Sept. 21, 1948, Dr. Hench administered a dose of compound E (later called cortisone) to a 29-year-old woman incapacitated by arthritis. Four days later she was active again. Cortisone was then administered to 13 other arthritics with similar dramatic results. In 1950 Tadeusz Reichstein, who isolated the first pure adrenal steroid, Philip Hench and Edward Kendall were all awarded the Nobel Prize for their research on treating rheumatoid arthritis. Their discovery and initial testing gave rise to the development of steroid drugs.

Q. How old is Rodney Allen Rippy, the darling little black boy featured in the Jack-in-the-Box TV commercials, and what is he doing now?—Lon Knox, Compton, Cal.

A. Rodney Allen Rippy is 8, recently completed a series of TV soft drink commercials for Nehi.

Q. Did Sinclair Lewis, one of America's greatest writers—he won the Nobel Prize—turn alcoholic when he learned that his wife, Dorothy Thompson, was a lesbian?—Leonard Richardson, Cambridge, Mass.

A. Sinclair Lewis started drinking heavily long before Dorothy Thompson engaged in her lesbian affair with Christa Winsloe, author of "Maedchen in Uniform."

Q. Actress Goldie Hawn was more than six months pregnant when she married Bill Hudson of the Hudson Brothers. Did she ever give birth to a baby?—Mary Chester, Towson, Md.

A. Goldie delivered via Caesarian section a 10½-pound boy named Oliver in September, 1976.

SEPARATED: BURT BACHARACH AND ANGIE DICKINSON

Q. Who or what is responsible for breaking up the marriage of Angie Dickinson and Burt Bacharach? She is the star of the TV series "Police Woman" and he is the former pianist for Marlene Dietrich and the composer of "Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head." —Theresa Kline, Atlantic City, N.J.

A. After 11 years of marriage, the Bacharachs have decided on a trial separation. They will share custody of their daughter Nikki, 10. Career differences is the reason they have given for the split.

Q. Is it a fact that Ryan O'Neal and Jack Nicholson no longer speak to one another because O'Neal stole Nicholson's girlfriend, Anjelica Huston, 24, daughter of director John Huston?—Florence Curran, Montclair, N.J.

A. Romeo O'Neal didn't steal her. The affairs of these Hollywood characters change daily. Anjelica is now back in Nicholson's arms. Tomorrow, who knows?

"...I'm a careful planner. I have an engineering background...I'm a quiet person and determined..."

PLAINS, GA.

As a result of Vietnam and Watergate, trust, in Jimmy Carter's opinion, has become the overriding election issue.

According to Patrick Caddell, Carter's pollster and campaign adviser, "The problem both candidates face is the embedded cynicism in the country. The people have been burned so many times they have trouble believing anyone."

In Plains, Ga., recently, PARADE caught Carter in an unusually reflective mood. Dressed in a faded blue work shirt, blue jeans and heavy-soled work shoes, he draped his 5-foot 10-inch, 155-pound frame around a comfortable chair and talked freely, first about his weaknesses:

"I'm impatient with inattention to duty or lack of a deep commitment to a cause. I'm very demanding, I think, on my fellow political workers and maybe I'm not as inclined as I ought to be to compliment or congratulate people who do a good job.

Admits mistakes

"I believe that I am stubborn, which may be a weakness or a defect. Tenacious is another word. Once I set my mind to do something, I find it very hard to deter from it. I make a lot of mistakes. Sometimes I've elected to admit them, sometimes maybe I admit them freely because I know they are going to be revealed anyhow."

Asked to describe himself, Carter hesitates briefly, then chooses these words: "I'm careful. I'm a careful planner. I have an engineering and scientific background. I'm an administrator. I'm a quiet person and determined.

"I have no rigidly defined political philosophy that can be described in one word. I'm quite conservative when it comes to government management, balanced budgets, careful spending, the elimination of unwarranted bureaucracy, paperwork, red tape.

His conservative side

"I believe in the strengthening of local governments, I believe in the free enterprise system, and I'm a strong and committed advocate of personal privacy. So those things would be considered conservative.

"On the other hand, I've a strong commitment to civil rights, to human rights, to environmental quality. I guess they would be considered liberal in some ways."

On the campaign trail: Carter shakes hands with fans at the Evansville, Ind., airport before speaking at a fund-raising rally.

Carter was perceived during the Presidential primaries as a brilliant political tactician. But one Carter characteristic that disturbs many skeptical observers is that he seems to be a loner.

Carter flatly denies that suggestion: "It's not true. I have a lot of close friends that I've had from my infancy all the way up through college and my naval career and, of course, now.

"If I hadn't had them, I could not have won [the Democratic nomination] because when I began my campaign I didn't hold public office, I didn't have a campaign organization, I didn't have much money. Nobody thought I would win. I was not accepted as a major political figure.

"But because of the tight-knit friendships that I've had, large groups of Georgia people who knew me well, who have been very close to me, went at their own expense to campaign for me in those [primary election] states.

"So far as I know, no other candidate in the history of the country has had that kind of home-base support.

"I have a desire sometimes to be alone, walk in my fields and woods and swamps where I grew up, but I've had a good demonstrated commitment of friends toward me, both personally and politically."

Strong desire to lead

Carter is an ambitious, aggressive, seasoned politician with a strong desire to provide moral and spiritual leadership to a country which recently has endured its worst political crisis since the Civil War. It is here that Carter believes President Ford has failed:

"There's only one person in this country who can speak with a clear voice to the American people, or call on them to make a sacrifice and explain why, or put forth programs to correct problems. And that's the President.

"In the absence of that leadership, the country drifts. When President Ford never puts forward a proposal to put our people back to work, you've got 535 members of Congress in a confused state, with no consistent voice and no consistent purpose.

"In sometimes a fumbling way, sometimes a mistaken way, they come forward with proposals on education or energy or agriculture or environmental quality or transportation or employment or housing.

"And when the President sits there—timid, dormant, without any leadership at all—and simply turns down everything that Congress proposes without putting forward any alternatives, this aggravates an already bad situation because it creates not only deficits and high unemployment, but it also saps

"...I probably don't come down hard enough on people...I'm very tolerant of human error..."

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Gerald Rudolph Ford, who became President when Nixon resigned in August, 1974, is determined to prove that he has earned his right to the job for four more years.

When Ford succeeded to the Presidency, he had no intention of making this year's race. "I would say I began thinking about it some time in the early fall of 1974," he told PARADE during a candid discussion of his personal and political beliefs.

One month after moving into the White House, "I saw that we had serious problems overseas with the war in Vietnam" as well as "serious economic problems developing" at home, says Ford, explaining why he decided to seek a full four-year term of his own:

"I became more and more convinced as we got later into 1974 and early into 1975 that it was essential that the person who was President during this difficult time at home and abroad had to be in a position to say that if he did a good job he ought to continue those policies for the next four years.

The firm decision

"It was sort of a developmental process in my mind, so it probably took a month or two, maybe a little longer, before I really made up my mind. It became more and more evident that it was necessary, certainly by early 1975."

Ford also recalls that his vivacious wife Betty told him, "If you think that's what you want to do, if you think that's the right thing to do, I'll support you."

"Since becoming President, I think the biggest problem we have . . . is that we have not sold the things we've done as effectively as we should," says Ford, who served as a Michigan Congressman for a quarter century.

Part of the difficulty in selling Jerry Ford to the country has been Ford himself—a President who acknowledges his inability to be tough on subordinates. (A case in point was the resignation this month of Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz.)

"I probably don't come down hard enough on people. I don't reprimand. I don't fire people. I'm very tolerant of human errors. I try to stimulate people to do things, but I don't slam the door in their face if they don't come up to my expectations."

Ford admits that "a little too much human reaction" may be involved, then adds, "That's probably one of my admitted errors. I can't be a toughy when it comes to friends."

A welcoming crowd watches as President Ford, in a happy mood, waves intertwined Italian and American flags during his visit to the Italian Market in Philadelphia.

That lenient approach placed an extra burden on Betty Ford in disciplining their children during their formative years, the President says. "She had to be the baddy," he recalls with a laugh, "and I was the goody."

Ford still is widely viewed by the country's voters as a "good guy"—a decent, honest and trustworthy man—and some who have worked for him in the White House believe he isn't given enough credit for his leadership.

One former aide contrasts Ford's style with that of his immediate predecessors, Richard Nixon, a Republican, and Lyndon Johnson, a Democrat:

"When Johnson brought a group of people together to discuss a problem, he usually had his mind made up in advance and simply wanted to form a consensus around his predetermined position.

'Ford solicits advice'

"Nixon would call people together for advice on a problem, but he was so secretive and played everything so close to the vest that you never knew where he stood until he went off to Camp David to mull over the situation.

"Ford has an open mind, he solicits advice, he really listens, he considers all views, then makes his decision on the basis of available information, not prejudice or predisposition."

Says another onetime Ford assistant: "The same plodding, methodical Jerry Ford known to the public also is a guy who takes advice well, is tough and remembers well." He believes Ford is "a damned fine leader," although he acknowledges that "it doesn't always come across well, and that's a shame."

That analysis is shared by a reporter who has covered Ford throughout his White House tenure. "He's a better President than a candidate," he says. "Ford's not always decisive, but he's not the bumbler he's often made out to be."

Along with other observers of the President, that newsman suggests that Ford has not made evident to the voters any long-range strategy for leading the nation. "He's playing it day-to-day. If he has any vision, it's a seat-of-the-pants vision."

'Little' to praise

Rep. Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, the Massachusetts Democrat who is House Majority Leader, says that "while Ford can be commended for his integrity, there is little else praiseworthy to be said of his brief tenure."

O'Neill knows the President better than most politicians because the two men worked together for 20 years and frequently played golf during Ford's days in the House. But politics has always transcended that friendship, and O'Neill has little good to say about the Ford candidacy.

Another view comes from Thomas E. Cronin, visiting professor of politics at Brandeis University: "Ford promised great communication, conciliation and compromise with Congress. Instead, he away the strength and the purpose and the confidence of our people in the future.

"I don't think President Ford is a leader. He has shown no inclination to exert his leadership. We've got hundreds of problems that need to be addressed, and he's been extremely timid and fearful about facing them.

"There's an almost total breakdown between the White House and the Congress. There's been no attempt on the part of the Administration to deal with unemployment, the unfair tax system, energy problems, the correlation between defense mechanisms and the effectuation of foreign policy.

"There has been no study of what could be done about the welfare mess or adequate health care. There has been no attention given to the efficiency of the government organization structure to break up the sweetheart arrangements that exist between the government and powerful and sometimes selfish special interest groups.

Says Ford dodges problems

"All these questions address themselves to the President, and whenever something's going wrong in Washington, whenever these questions have not been answered, President Ford acts as though it's not his responsibility at all."

But can Carter—who served a single term as Governor of Georgia—provide leadership?

Carter's eyes flashed when asked about criticism that his leadership is untested, especially in foreign affairs:

"There is no one who can demonstrate executive leadership in the foreign policy sphere except an ex-President and an ex-secretary of state. No one else.

"The only thing you can do is to assume that, with proper knowledge and intelligence and executive ability demonstrated in other areas of life, you could understand the complicated mechanisms of foreign policy and exert the same kind of leadership."

Both at home and when campaigning, the toothy smile, the soft-spoken words and the slate-blue eyes continue to be Carter trademarks. "When he gets mad, those eyes can be very intimidating," says Boston Globe political reporter Curtis Wilkie.

"He's very much aware of his eyes, and he uses them very well," adds Wilkie, who has followed Carter almost constantly since the New Hampshire primary. "They're incredible; they're like laser beams."

Like a number of other reporters who have watched Carter's meteoric political rise, Wilkie believes the Democratic nominee is "the smartest guy I've ever covered"—but he also describes Carter as "very cunning, very calculating."

One manifestation of those traits has been the charge, which has haunted Carter throughout the campaign, that he is purposely vague on the issues.

'Listeners confused'

Says Jim Merriner, political editor of the Atlanta Constitution, a paper which has long been at odds with Carter:

"The charge that Carter flip-flops on the issues is actually more complex and subtle than that. Listeners are sometimes confused or misled about Carter's stands because he has a kind of contortionist's ability to spread-eagle himself over all corners of an issue.

"Also, Carter can provoke wariness in his listeners by apparent exaggeration and inconsistencies in his statements. Political rhetoric is not held to scientific standards of truth, and Carter's stretching of the facts ordinarily would not rate a second glance.

"However, by pitching his campaign on promises never to lie to the voters or deliberately mislead them, Carter invites an extra sharp eye on his statements. Those statements often embody lawyer-like distinctions that seem to imply something other than what is stated."

Carter characterizes such suggestions as little more than nit-picking. He notes that today's complicated issues often demand complex answers. And he emphasizes that in this electronic age he can't afford to offer contradictory positions on issues because every public statement he makes is recorded and likely to be broadcast to the nation.

Seeks workers' support

Most of those statements are delivered not to elite audiences but rather to working-class supporters of the populist candidate.

"I won the Democratic nomination with the support of the workers," says Carter. "I didn't depend on Senators or members of Congress, or Governors, or newspaper editors, or labor leaders, or businesses to put me in office.

"I depend on the farmers, on factory-shift workers, on housewives and others going into shopping centers;" he adds. "My whole political concept has been to go directly to the people."

Ford

has gone out of his way to antagonize and paralyze Congress."

Similar criticism has come from Jimmy Carter, who has sought throughout the campaign to portray the President as a weak, ineffectual leader lacking vision and foresight.

"I think he's categorically in error," says Ford, claiming a record of high-caliber leadership in both domestic affairs and foreign policy.

"To take one example in the international field, this is the first Administration in the history of this country that's had a comprehensive African policy, and we're undertaking it under very difficult circumstances. It's an example of real leadership.

Cites economics

"If you turn to domestic problems, it certainly is an indication of leadership when a President has thrust on him—something he inherited—the worst economic recession in 40 years, and he has the courage and the judgment and the wisdom to do the right things to get us out of it."

Ford also rejects Carter's charge that he has appointed incompetent political cronies from his days in the House of Representatives to high-salaried policy-making positions.

"We've turned down some," Ford reveals. "We don't advertise that, but there are former colleagues of mine who did want appointments, but we made decisions to the contrary." The President then explains his approach to filling such jobs:

"The individuals I've appointed who came from Congress—both the Senate and the House—have been extremely capable and very well fitted for the job, both by experience and by judgment."

Ford is firm in his belief that Carter is not qualified to be President "because of the political philosophy that he holds." Explains the President:

"He is a liberal, whether it's in spending more money or in social legislation he seems to approve. He is a liberal in the typical Democratic category, and I don't think a person with that philosophical view ought to be President."

Has Ford made any mistakes during his nearly 30 years in politics? "I have never felt you ought to look back. You should not forget what happened in the past, but you ought not to dwell on it," he says. "I'm always looking down the road as to what to do in the future."

Asked about his support of the Vietnam war, he replies: "I think we made the right decision to go in as we did. Once we got as involved as we did in 1965-66 and that period, we either should have made a much greater military effort—which I think if we had at that time, we could have been successful—or we should have begun to phase out or not gotten committed.

Vietnam lesson

"That's the lesson I think we've learned in Vietnam. If you're going in, you have to go in full speed. If you don't, you shouldn't go in in the first place or you ought to back off in the process. That's a lesson I hope future Presidents have learned from Vietnam."

What would Ford be doing today if he hadn't entered public life? Would he have continued practicing law in his home town of Grand Rapids, Mich.?

"I like the law, but I think after a period of time I would have been interested in the judiciary . . . but that point never came because I got into politics about three years after I got back from military service."

Ford says he has not even considered what he might do if he loses the election because "I've always had a positive attitude toward winning a ball game or an election, so we have made no special plans whatsoever."

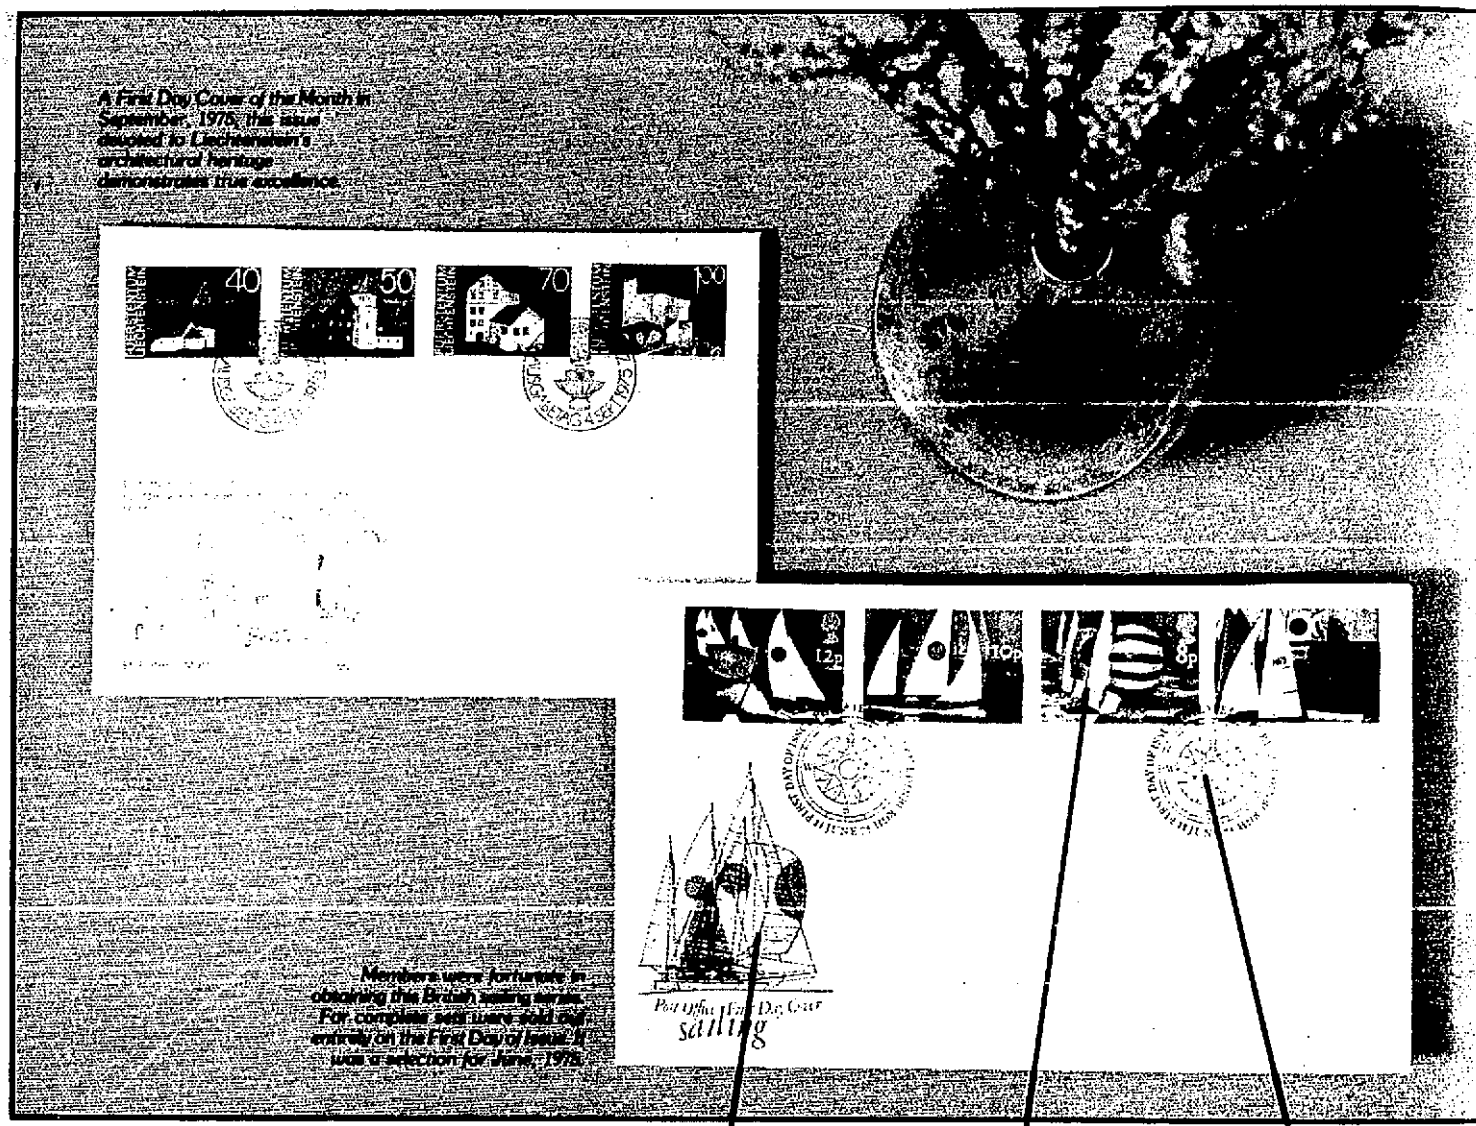

The President says that when he traveled to his alma mater, the University of Michigan, for a mid-September campaign appearance, "I was kidding one of the deans. . . . I said sometime I may come back and ask you for a job as a political science instructor."

Ford is convinced that he can and will win the race, but he is disturbed about the political alienation which may keep millions of eligible Americans from voting:

The duty to vote

"Everybody says, 'My one vote doesn't make any difference, so I'm not going to walk down to the corner to register and I'm not going to walk that same distance to vote.' If there are 60 million to 70 million people who do vote, the other 65 million that don't vote give to each of those other people two votes—or more.

"I think it's really unforgivable—totally indefensible," says the President. "If you aren't going to get excited about the candidates, get excited about America. That's what you ought to get excited about."

By long-established tradition throughout the world, each First Day Cover bears an original cachet harmonizing with the theme of the stamp.

Relatively few of a country's stamps are available abroad. Most are used in the country of origin. The Society obtains first editions only of the most outstanding.

Official First Day of Issue Postmark, available only on the First Day of Issue, certifies the first-edition. It is officially applied at the city of issue, in the country of origin.

For a limited time
You are invited to become a Member of the

First Day Cover-of-the-Month Society®

and thereby to personally acquire
First Day Covers of the world's most important stamps
as they are issued, from wherever they are issued.

Each month the Society will obtain three of the world's most important First Day Covers exclusively for Members.

Each will be authentic in every respect: in design, format, subject and, most importantly, the Official First Day of Issue postmark.

Memberships are now open for a limited time only. All applications must be postmarked by December 31, 1976.

In no small part because of their beauty, International First Day Covers are widely regarded as the most significant and important collectibles of our time. And for good reason. They are the first editions of the world's postage stamps. Forever limited to the precise number officially postmarked by each issuing nation on the precise First Day of Issue.

Truly, few things in the world inspire more favorable comment than the world's fascinating stamps. They are a nation's monuments in miniature. Masterpieces of the designer's and the printer's arts. Mirrors of the world's culture and history; wildlife and geography; art and architecture; men and women; hopes and aspirations.

Yet, relatively few ever reach collectors in the United States. Of them a small percentage are First Day Covers.

An old tradition.

The tradition of collecting International First Day Covers is a rather old one, dating back to the late 1800's. Over the years, wealthy collectors, diplomats, and members of royalty have built excellent collections.

They have prized them as the most desirable specimens of a Nation's stamps; for, unlike the entire printing of a new stamp, the First Day Covers are issued for one day only . . . and so certified by postal authorities of the issuing nation with the official "First Day of Issue" postmark.

A rare collecting opportunity.

The First Day Cover of the Month Society has been instrumental in overcoming the barriers of time, distance, language, and geography to make it possible for the collector of modest means to enjoy this same privilege of building an outstanding private collection of First Day Covers of the world's most significant stamps. And, of receiving them automatically through a convenient monthly acquisition plan, as they are issued, from wherever they are issued.

A Collection of world-wide importance.

Each month the Society obtains First Day Covers of three — and only three — of the world's most important First Day Covers. Exclusively chosen for the Membership, they are the handful which achieve a unique combination of artistic, historical, and technical perfection. The issues which, the Society believes, are the most likely to stand the test of time.

Selections of great merit.

Significantly, a number of First Day Covers selected by the Society have later become highly rated and eagerly sought after by collectors. An outstanding British Sailing issue of June, 1975, for instance, (illustrated at left), took the philatelic world by storm and complete sets sold-out on the very First Day of Issue. Certainly, there can be no guarantee that any particular First Day Cover will increase in value or merit with the passage of time. But this example points to the quality of the Society's selections.

All Society selections are carefully chosen according to the same rigorous criteria. And chosen before their merits are widely discussed; when they can be obtained by Members of the Society at the original issue price.

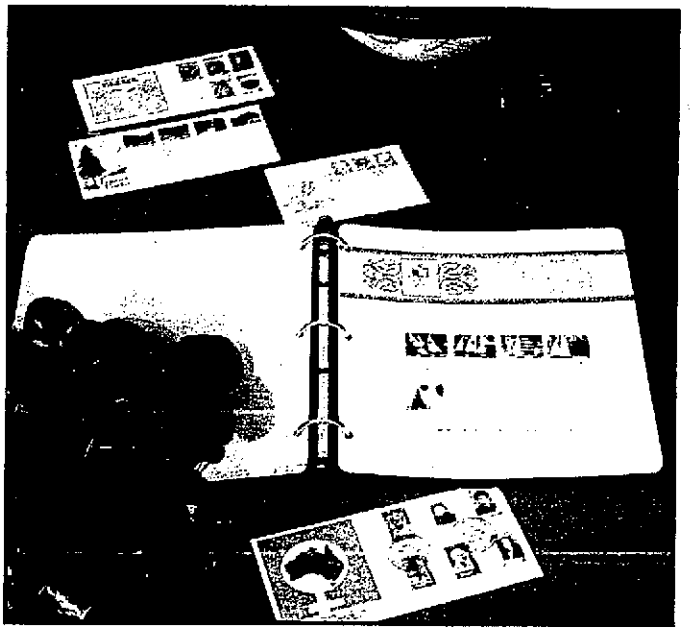

Authentic issues.

Each First Day Cover you receive will be authentic in every respect. Every one will be designed, printed, officially postmarked and issued according to each nation's established philatelic traditions. No two will be alike.

Knowledgeable collectors recognize that this rich diversity is the hallmark of authentic International First Day Covers. Those who enroll as members of the Society will experience first-hand these same qualities which have fascinated collectors of International First Day Covers for nearly a century.

The Benefits of Membership.

As a Member, you will receive each month three First Day Covers of the world's most important new stamps. The total price of $2.75 per cover ($8.25 per month) will be firmly guaranteed to you for a full eighteen months — a most unusual and significant guarantee. In addition, you may cancel your membership at any time upon thirty days' notice. However, those who do will forfeit the opportunity of building a complete collection from the beginning of 1977.

A handsomely-designed album to protect and display the collection will also be provided at no additional cost. And to enhance the educational value of the collection, an authoritative commentary will accompany each issue.

Memberships close December 31, 1976.

Never before has it been possible for the average person to so selectively acquire a collection of such breadth. As a Member you will be able to build an excellent, private collection of International First Day Covers. An authentic collection which you, your children, and their children will appreciate for generations to come.

Your application must be postmarked no later than December 31, 1976. After that date, applications will be accepted only once each year, only for a short period of time, and only at the prices then prevailing. To apply for membership, mail your application directly to Fleetwood, 1 Unicover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008, America's oldest purveyor of First Day Covers, under whose auspices the Society was established.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

SEX, NOT MONEY Sex, not money, has taken over as the major marital problem for couples seeking marriage guidance. That at least is the situation in Britain, according to a spokesman for the National Marriage Guidance Council.

Nicholas Tyndall of the organization says: "Couples are told all the time that they ought to be having a good, full and active sex life.

"They believe that, and if it doesn't happen to them, they want to know what to do about it. They say that they are not achieving a successful sexual performance and it is affecting the stability of their marriages."

Many times, Tyndall points out, more than half the couples who seek marital guidance complain about the personal defects of their partners, highlighting selfishness, anger, temper, irritability, jealousy and other such traits. But frequently the root cause is sexual incompatibility.

TRAINING SABOTEURS Intelligence sources report that the Soviet Union and other European Communist countries are training young Africans in military tactics and sabotage.

Having achieved success in Angola through the use of Cuban troops, the Soviets are apparently determined to achieve major influence throughout Africa via secret supporters and saboteurs.

Lajos Lederer, writing in London's Sunday Observer, estimates that Communist bloc countries, with the exception of Romania, are training more than 7000 Africans for espionage and sabotage.

'GONE WITH THE WIND' AUTHOR MARGARET MITCHELL (L) IN 1937; OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND TODAY AND AS MELANIE IN 1939 FILM.

FORTY YEARS LATER Forty summers ago, Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" burst upon the publishing world, transforming its small, shy, Southern author into an overnight celebrity.

This year Macmillan, the original publisher, is bringing out "Margaret Mitchell's 'Gone With the Wind' Letters 1936-1949," which reveals what success did to Peggy Marsh (as she was called in Atlanta).

To commemorate the 40th anniversary of "Wind" and the 76th birthday of the author, who died in 1949, Macmillan is also publishing a new edition of the novel with an introduction by author James Michener.

To date there have been 85 editions of "Gone With the Wind," the book never having gone out of print and averaging 25,000 hardcover and 250,000 paperback copies per year. "Gone With the Wind" was "discovered" by Harold Latham of Macmillan on a Southern scouting trip in 1935.

Margaret Mitchell's brother Stephens inherited the literary rights after the death of Miss Mitchell's husband, John Marsh. For years Mitchell, following his sister's instructions, declined to publish her letters. She was a stickler for privacy and, in fact, destroyed many of her letters and much of the "Gone With the Wind" manuscript.

Richard Harwell, a librarian at the University of Georgia and a good friend of the Marsh family, finally prevailed upon Stephens Mitchell to grant permission to publish the letters.

First editions of "Gone With the Wind"--those dated May, 1936--are now worth $2500. From that May day in 1936 until she was hit by a car in Atlanta and killed in 1949, Peggy Marsh was never again to enjoy a full week of quiet.

Of the leading film stars who acted in the 1939 film version of "Gone With the Wind," only Olivia De Havilland survives. Like the novel's author, Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, and Leslie Howard have all passed on.

PREGNANCY AID Pregnant women who are unable to find seats in the second-class compartments of West German trains are now permitted to ride first class at no extra charge.

READ AND WRITE If you've ever been "bumped" by any airline--refused a seat on a plane after you've paid for a confirmed ticket--you will want to read "Air Travelers' Fly-Rights."

It's a free booklet available from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 52, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet, put out by the Civil Aeronautics Board, explains payments for bumping as well as other travel concerns, such as lost baggage, flight delays, baggage damage, and cancellations.

In many cases of bumping, you're entitled to payment, the exact amount determined by how much your ticket cost. The airlines are required to tell you about this at the time you're denied boarding. So, if the passenger agent or ticket-seller doesn't mention it, you do.

ORIENT EXPRESS Good news for railroad buffs! The famed Orient Express, which used to run from Paris to Istanbul (the trip took eight days, and the sleeping cars were famed for luxury and fabled in fiction), was abandoned some time ago. But now it's started up again--only not from Paris. The train will be made up in Zurich by Swiss state railways and will run from Zurich to Istanbul in five days. The return trip will be by jet. Cost of the trip--one way by rail, return by jet--is approximately $700.

MAO'S WIDOW CHIANG CHING WITH CHINESE PROPAGANDA CHIEF CHANG CHUN-CHIAO

MAO'S WIDOW One of the most fascinating women in China today is Chairman Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, 63, who used to play in "B" films in Shanghai under the name of "Blue Apple" in the early 1930's.

Chiang has a strong, beguiling personality and is heartily disliked by a large number of Chinese politicians. She first learned about Communism when she fell in love with a Communist student at Tsingtao University. In 1939 she showed up in Yenan, where Mao became attracted to her and invited her to become his personal secretary. His desire to marry her irritated his colleagues, who felt that he was deserting his third wife, Ho Tzu-chen, one of the few original women on the Long March, who was abandoned while she was in the Soviet Union for medical treatment.

Mao promised his associates that Chiang Ching would play no role in party politics, but in 1963, after having borne Mao two daughters, Chiang moved to Shanghai and there, aided by propaganda chief Chang Chun-chiao (one of the powers in Red China), she became politically active, radicalizing the theater groups.

She and Lin Piao's wife played active roles in the cultural revolution, with Chiang maneuvering herself into a position of power, helping to plan propaganda campaigns against the late Chou En-lai and the now-disgraced Teng Hsiao-ping.

A small woman who wears spectacles, a typical Mao cap and pantsuit, Chiang represents the hard line of the Red Radical Left. Her source of power, of course, was her husband. Now that Mao Tse-tung is gone, will his widow's wings be clipped? The foreign colony in Peking waits and watches.

WARNING DOWN UNDER Australia will become a nation of 16 million addicts by the year 2000. So warns Dr. George Milner, director of the Victoria Health Department.

Dr. Milner claims that Australians are drinking more than 100 gallons of beer, or its equivalent in other drinks, per adult per year.

"This figure is rising by 5% per adult each year," he says, "in an uncontrolled deluge that threatens to swamp the nation."

If alcohol doesn't get the Australians, Dr. Milner offers, other drugs like marijuana and Valium will. "Prescription drugs," he explains, "are increasingly used, with modern panaceas like Valium being used excessively and often casually by doctors for demanding patients.

"If current trends continue," he says, "every man, woman, and child will be permanently on this drug by the end of the century." Happy Australia!

BABY TRADE Selling babies is a flourishing business in Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon). A report in Honey, a local paper, points out that local baby-traders are now buying babies from impoverished mothers at $8 each and reselling them to dealers in Scandinavia and elsewhere for $350.

The article says that foreign dealers usually buy six babies at a time, negotiating through hotel porters, maternity clinics and so-called "adoption agencies."

Apparently there are no laws in Sri Lanka which are applicable to the black market trade in babies.

JAPANESE STAR Hidemi Aoki is the star of "Seven Nights in Japan," in which she plays opposite English actor Michael York.

The plot of the picture deals with the romance between a royal prince who is serving as a British naval officer and a cute little Japanese bus guide whom he meets when his ship visits Yokohama.

The film has been well received in England and Paramount plans to release it in the United States. Hidemi hopes to try her luck in Hollywood.

The New Chevrolet

More Efficient
thanks to smaller engines, lower axle ratios, aerodynamic styling and the strategic elimination of excess weight.

More Head Room
by design, with new roof construction and formed headlining which allow a little more clearance for heads, hats and hairdos.

More Rear Leg Room.
An inch more in The Sedan (shown), nearly two inches more in The Coupe.

More Trunk Room
Grand Canyon on wheels, with a grand total of about 20 cubic feet of well-planned room for your bags, boxes, golf clubs, treasures or junk.

More Mileage
than '76 full-size Chevys. In California, EPA estimates: 19 mpg highway, 15 mpg city, with new standard Six and auto. trans. Actual mileage may vary depending on type of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition and available equipment.

More Manageable in City Traffic and parking. Turning diameter is reduced nearly 3 feet, curb to curb.

More Beauty
See photo below.

All comparisons relate to 1976 full-size Chevys.

A whole new car, a whole new ball game.

It was clear that cars had to become more efficient. Not just small cars. All cars.

It was equally clear that plenty of people still preferred cars of size and substance, and were not about to settle for less.

So we gave them more.

More economy and common sense on the one hand, more head room and rear leg room and trunk room on the other.

All in a crisp, clean, beautiful new package we call The New Chevrolet: A whole new kind of 6-passenger car that's more manageable in size, more responsible in its use of fuel and materials, yet retains "big car" room, ride, comfort and pride.

It's more than a new car.

It's a whole new ball game.

See for yourself at your Chevrolet dealer soon.

Chevrolet

Now that's more like it.

Froilan lives in the highlands of Guatemala in a one-room hut with dirt floors and no sanitary facilities. Labor there is so cheap that, for men like Froilan's father, hard work and long hours still mean a life of poverty. But now life is changing for Froilan.

Her name? We don't know. We found her wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will become of this little girl? No one knows. In her country, she's just one of thousands doomed to poverty.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care, like the family who sponsors Froilan.

It costs them $15 a month, and it gives Froilan so very much. Now he eats regularly. He gets medical care. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They share something very special.

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love.

For the love of a hungry child.

Happiness is— slow cooking

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

We like electric slow-cookers, especially those with an inner container that can be carried to the table. For dishes that require long, slow cooking they do away with pot-watching and free the homemaker for other pursuits.

Slow-cookers have many uses, but for a starter, try this delicious main dish. If you set the cooker for low heat, you don't need to think about it for six or seven hours. On high heat, it will free you for four hours.

Allow just enough time to cook the shell macaroni, then toss a green salad. Dinner is ready. A simple dessert prepared in the morning, or just fresh fruit and cheese, will end the meal as happily as it began.

SWEET-SOUR BEEF AND VEGETABLES FOR SLOW-COOKER

2 lbs. round or chuck steak, cut in 1-inch cubes
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
2 teaspoons chili powder
2 teaspoons paprika
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup vinegar
½ cup light molasses
2 cups carrots, sliced ¼-inch thick
2 cups small white onions, peeled
1 large green pepper, cut in 1-inch squares

Brown meat in hot oil in skillet; transfer to cooker. Add all remaining ingredients; mix well. Cook six to seven hours on low setting or four hours on high setting. Serve with shell macaroni sprinkled with fresh or freeze-dried chives. Makes six servings.

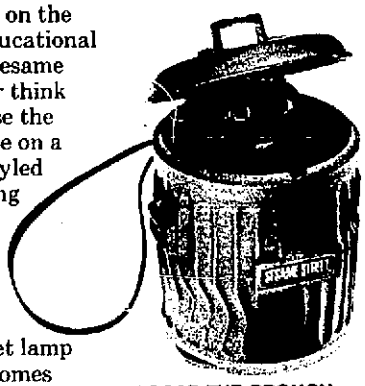

Note: This recipe may be prepared in a heavy utensil such as a Dutch oven and cooked over very low heat for several hours, but it will require constant watching and frequent stirring to prevent scorching, and may require additional liquid.

The Newtown Creek sewage plant in Brooklyn, N.Y., treats 310 million gallons of waste daily, dumps its sludge off Jersey coast.

The Sludge Nightmare

by Daniel Rapoport

The nation's newest environmental headache is sludge. Veritable mountains of the thick and gummy sewage residue are rising from one end of the country to the other while local officials desperately search for ways and places to dispose of it.

The federal government has ordered New York City and Philadelphia to begin phasing out their dumping of sludge into the Atlantic Ocean. The two cities have no idea where they're going to put it when the final deadline arrives in 1981. Alternatives, says New York Environmental Protection Administrator Robert Low, are either impractical or too costly, particularly for a financially beleaguered metropolis like New York.

'An economic nightmare'

"It's going to become an economic nightmare for New York," a sympathetic federal official agrees.

Chicago and its Cook County suburbs are spending more than $30 million a year barging their sludge as far as 200 miles away, where it is being tested as a fertilizer for corn and as a landfill to erase scars left by strip mining. But over the past year the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago has been battling suggestions from federal agencies that the fertilizing technique may carry potential health hazards.

One frustrated Chicago official throws up his hands and warns what will happen if the current method is rejected: "Some day the people of Chicago are going to flush their toilets and nothing is going to happen."

Los Angeles city and county have been pumping much of their sludge into the Pacific Ocean. While California beaches haven't experienced the same problems as those on the Atlantic, the state government is worried about the possible hazards to marine life and has decided that the practice must come to an end. The city of Los Angeles has been fighting that decision.

The most resounding proof of sludge's coming-of-age may be the debut this year of a Washington-based newsletter devoted exclusively to sludge management. Fittingly, it is called "Sludge."

SLUDGE CONTINUED

The target of all this concern is an unsightly and odorous glob composed of the solids that settle out of sewage during the treatment process. Because it is made up largely of human waste, sludge contains bacteria and viruses that can be harmful to people and animals. Sometimes it also includes such industrial discharges as heavy metals that have been linked to cancer. For these reasons, health and environmental authorities want to make sure that when sludge is deposited somewhere, it does not seep into drinking water supplies—or, if used as a fertilizer, that it does not contaminate crops.

Ironically, the country is facing a sludge crisis because it is on its way toward overcoming another crisis—the pollution of its waters. In 1972 Congress passed landmark legislation requiring municipalities to upgrade their sewage treatment facilities. With the aid of billions of dollars in federal funds, communities are responding. The result: cleaner lakes, rivers and streams. That is the good news. The bad news is that the better a city does in straining its sewage, the more sludge it is left with. One sanitation expert figures that elevating a sewage-handling operation from primary to secondary treatment can mean a 50 to 1000 percent increase in a facility's sludge output.

300 million tons a year

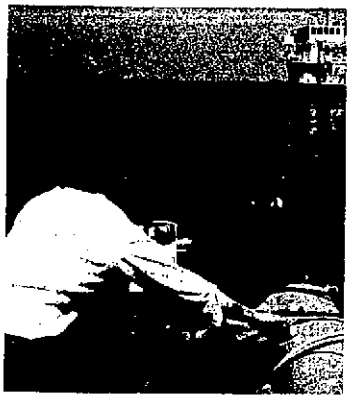

Dr. Edward Bryan of the National Science Foundation, which is supporting research into new methods of sludge disposal, calculates that the United States is currently generating about 300 million tons of wet sludge a year. The federal Environmental Protection Agency estimates that national sludge-disposal costs may be running more than $1 billion annually.

And the worst is yet to come.

Robert Bastian, an official with EPA, notes that many communities are not yet subjecting all their sewage to secondary treatment, a step they are mandated to achieve by 1977. When they do, sludge production will zoom even higher. "In essence," says Bastian, "we're talking about a future problem."

To New York City's Robert Low, the crisis became a reality last June, when a mixture of sludge and garbage washed ashore on Long Island, temporarily shutting down beaches normally enjoyed by millions of area residents. The sludge is believed to have come from the New York Bight, an ocean dumping site located about 12 miles off the New Jersey and Long Island coasts. New York and other communities have been dumping their sludge at the Bight for nearly 45 years. Now they must find somewhere else, and Low is not happy.

The federal government, he claims, encouraged the city to unload its sludge in the ocean. It even supplied New York with money to buy the vessels to haul it there. "Now they tell us to stop," he complains.

Government divers monitor quality of coastal waters. Sludge deposited in the ocean can pose problems for beaches.

A consultant hired by the city suggested two alternatives: burning the sludge through a process known as pyrolysis or turning it into compost. The first proposal, which is the technique used to produce charcoal, is costly and—for sludge—technologically unproven. The second proposal, he claims, requires relatively sizable tracts of land on which to dry and turn the sludge into compost. It also requires sufficient numbers of gardeners and farmers to use up the compost.

Excess land is not easy to find in New York, and "we don't have too many farmers in the city," adds Low drily.

Federal officials say they understand the problems faced by cities such as New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles. But they point out that they are charged by law with protecting the public against the health and environmental dangers that sludge poses through improper disposal. They also realize the alternatives are costly.

"Sewage treatment is not cheap," says EPA's Bastian. "If you're going to treat water, it's going to cost money."

One of the reasons sludge disposal costs so much is that options are constantly being closed off and what is left is expensive. There are only three places where sludge can be put: in the air (through burning), in the sea, or on the land. Experts generally agree that the ocean has been effectively ruled out because of the threat to beaches and the possible danger to marine life. The air is also on its way out.

Somerville, N.J., farmer with sludge stockpile. Dried and treated to prevent crop contamination, now it's compost.

"Earlier, everybody thought you could incinerate sludge and that would be the end of it. Then along came the 1973 oil embargo and burning became terribly expensive. There was also the problem of air pollution. In other words, everybody's avenue of escape has been cut off," says Daniel Houck, a sanitation engineer with Public Technology Inc., a nonprofit group in Washington that helps cities solve urban problems.

Seek sludge benefits

There is no shortage of ideas for new ways to dispose of sludge. The federal government is spending about $3 million this year on researching some of them. In many instances the approaches not only seek a disposal method but try to utilize the beneficial properties of sludge.

For example, EPA is pursuing pyrolysis, one of whose attractions is the possibility that gas generated by the process could be used as a fuel. The Agriculture Department is working on composting, mixing the sludge with wood chips and then turning it over in much the same way a gardener produces compost from yard matter. The National Science Foundation is supporting development of a soil injection technique that would permit a site to absorb much more sludge than if it is simply spread on the land. In a companion project, the foundation is financing a facility that renders the sludge safer for soil injection by first irradiating it, killing viruses.

Unfortunately, all of the new techniques contain environmental or economic drawbacks that must be overcome before they can be deemed feasible for many cities.

Federal effort weak

Some members of Congress are beginning to feel that the federal effort to combat sludge is not as aggressive as it ought to be. Rep. Robert F. Drinan (D., Mass.) has introduced legislation that would combine a tough regulatory program for disposal with all-out research to develop techniques that are safe and economically sensible.

Until then, sanitation engineers must contend with existing obstacles, including the complaints of citizens who do not want sludge dumped near them.

"It's like some big, unwanted relative who moves into your house," says a Maryland home owner leading a fight against picking a sludge disposal site in his neighborhood. "He's big and he's there. Did you want him? No. Is he going to go away? Can you get rid of him? Well, maybe."

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Parade Youth Poll

Last month, in a torrential downpour, President Gerald Ford, Class of '35, kicked off his Presidential campaign at his alma mater, the University of Michigan. He did so for sentimental reasons and because he thinks the youth vote is up for grabs.

Ford received a mixed reception at the packed Crisler Arena. It was decidedly more friendly than the one he got in May, 1974, when he attended the commencement exercises in Ann Arbor. That year, as Nixon's Vice President, he was almost heckled off the stage.

BOOS AND APPLAUSE

This time, while some students lustily booed many parts of Ford's speech, others roundly applauded. The major disturbance occurred when someone exploded a firecracker in the stands.

Ford, as always, was pleasant, affable, and cooperative. He met privately with 20 university students, answered questions on why he pardoned Nixon, the war in Indochina, and the rights of homosexuals.

In 1972, when Ford was still a Congressman, America's 18-year-olds were given their first opportunity to vote. They proved the political forecasters wrong. Instead of voting overwhelmingly liberal, as had been predicted, 48 percent voted for Richard Nixon, a President who was so fearful of collegiate youth that he would venture upon only the most conservative, right-wing campuses.

20-CAMPUS TALLY

How will the college vote go this year?

A PARADE poll of 1000 college students on 20 campuses across the country—taken prior to the first debate between Carter and Ford on Sept. 23—yielded the following results:

Jimmy Carter	40%
Gerald Ford	30%
Eugene McCarthy	9%
Undecided	11%
Non-voting	8%
Others	2%

Those students who support Gerald Ford for the Presidency tend to come from the nation's more affluent families. Of the students who reported annual parental incomes of $25,000 or higher, 59% voted for Ford and 33% for Jimmy Carter.

Ford's campus supporters differ from Carter's in other ways. They view inflation as the nation's No. 1 problem, followed by crime, the welfare mess, unemployment, and general poverty.

Carter's advocates regard unemployment as No. 1, followed by inflation, welfare, poverty, and corruption in government.

Asked to select a non-politician they would like as U.S. President, few students had answers, although many regarded the qualifications of the current candidates as generally inadequate.

Non-political public figures who received votes included Ralph Nader, Margaret Mead, William F. Buckley Jr., Kingman Brewster Jr. (president of Yale), Bob Woodward, Chevy Chase, Robert Redford and Cesar Chavez. A large number of students nominated themselves.

A majority of students polled said they most probably would vote as their parents did.

This year's college seniors entered school in the fall of 1973 at the height of the Watergate scandal. If they bear any of the scars of that period, they reflect relatively few. They are generally docile, industrious, job-minded, and non-activist.

Explained one Yale senior: "You have to understand that we're not any of us the students of the 1960's. I'm interested in getting the highest-paying job I can get. Jerry Ford is the candidate who I feel will make the lifestyle I want easier to obtain. I know Jerry Ford is no intellectual heavyweight, but our country needs a rest after Watergate and Vietnam—a breather."

A Duke University junior, supporting Jimmy Carter, explains her stand this way: "Carter has a genuine concern for the outcast, the little man. If we don't get our act together and make this country a better symbol for justice and equal opportunity, we're not going to be around as we are very long. I don't understand Carter's religious trip, but I do think he offers the nation an opportunity for leadership."

To see him exhorting his team from the sidelines, you'd never know that football coach Bo Schembechler survived two bouts with heart trouble. He's back in action, as vigorous as ever. The secret? "Most of the battle is mental."

A Pep Talk From Coach Bo Schembechler

by Joe Falls

ANN ARBOR, MICH.

You had a heart attack on New Year's Eve, 1969, and now, 6½ years later, the doctors say you must undergo open-heart surgery. What do you do?

If you are Bo Schembechler, coach of the powerful University of Michigan football team, you devise a game plan for yourself.

"You'd better have a plan," says the 47-year-old coach. His worked so well that right now, only five months after the operation, he's just as active as he ever was in midseason—raging along the sidelines, storming at the officials, screaming at his players. As he aims for the No. 1 ranking in the country, few are betting against him.

What was Bo Schembechler's game plan?

This is the way he explains it: "The first thing you've got to do is put yourself in a positive frame of mind. I believe that's half the battle—psyching yourself up that everything is going to be OK. Most of the battle is mental."

Then, he says, he consulted five of the leading heart-disease clinics in the country, asking from each a complete briefing on what the operation entailed.

"I told them, 'Listen, we go over our game films to get ready to play, and I want you to do the same for me.' I could read the X-rays better than they could," he says. "I could see every occlusion, every vein that was blocked. Once I knew what had to be done, I said, 'OK, now do it!' "

Schembechler's operation at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor last May 13 lasted 6½ hours. But he came through it in excellent condition and has remained that way—thanks to a continuation of the game plan he had devised for himself.

How to relax

The big factor that enabled him to resume his career where he left off, he says, is that he has learned to relax. While out on the field, he's the same old tiger. But day in and day out, he's learned to pace himself differently.

No longer does he remain on the job all hours of the night—sometimes until 1 or 2 a.m.—looking at game films, diagramming plays, fretting about might-have-beens.

Instead, 10 o'clock, and that's it. No matter what's going on, he gets up from the meeting with his coaches and goes home. Tomorrow is another day.

"He's been just beautiful about disciplining himself," says Schembechler's wife Millie.

She points out that under his plan he not only goes to bed early, but watches what he eats—and he doesn't get mad more than three times a day at practice. He also runs. In fact, he's devised his own exercise program that includes running and walking in almost equal parts. He started slowly by walking around the block, gradually built up his distance, and began jogging. Now he works out at the university's outdoor track, running on the straightaways as hard as he can and walking on the curves. He does 4½ miles a day. He also rests as much as possible, coming home at midday for about two hours, which he spends either napping or chatting with his wife.

On a typical day, his diet consists of a breakfast of dry cereal and skim milk with an occasional cup of black coffee, a sandwich or soup for lunch, and a dinner of salad and lean meat, chicken, or fish. Very occasionally, he sneaks in a chocolate sundae. As a result, his weight is a steady 190, about 30 pounds less than when he suffered his first heart attack nearly seven years ago, on the eve of the Rose Bowl game, the climax of his first season as Michigan coach.

His wife Millie wheels Schembechler in Pasadena hospital after his first attack.

2 a.m. chili

He blames bad eating habits for that first brush with death. "I'd come back from a trip or a banquet and I'd find some old, greasy restaurant in a gas station and there I'd be, eating a bowl of chili at 2 a.m., just wolfing it down. There was no sense to it," he says. The result was the classic symptoms of a myocardial infarction—a heart attack: a stab of pain in the chest, a burning sensation down the left arm, a gasping for air. Schembechler wound up spending nearly three weeks in the intensive care unit at St. Luke's Hospital in Pasadena, Cal.

After that he began a determined effort to lose weight and get back into shape. In a matter of months he got his weight down to 180.

But, unfortunately, he let himself slip. The pounds slowly came back. He felt a tightening in his chest again. Then the blocked arteries were discovered and the open-heart surgery prescribed. It meant that the doctors would stop his heart and his lungs and place them on machines while they performed four bypasses around his heart. Bo knew the risks, but after checking out his case with heart clinics in Ann Arbor, Houston, Cleveland, New York and Cincinnati, he was ready to go ahead.

With the open-heart surgery behind him, Bo is confident he can keep his weight down permanently this time and that his game plan is going to work. He's determined to show that even football coaches can lead sensible lives, and he's planning on embellishing his record—the best in the land over the last eight years. Entering this season, his Wolverines had won 66 games, lost nine, and tied three.

Raising a storm

"I really feel great," he says with a grin. "You should see me in our classroom sessions. I bang on that blackboard and I yell at them and I raise all kinds of a storm. I'm really enjoying myself."

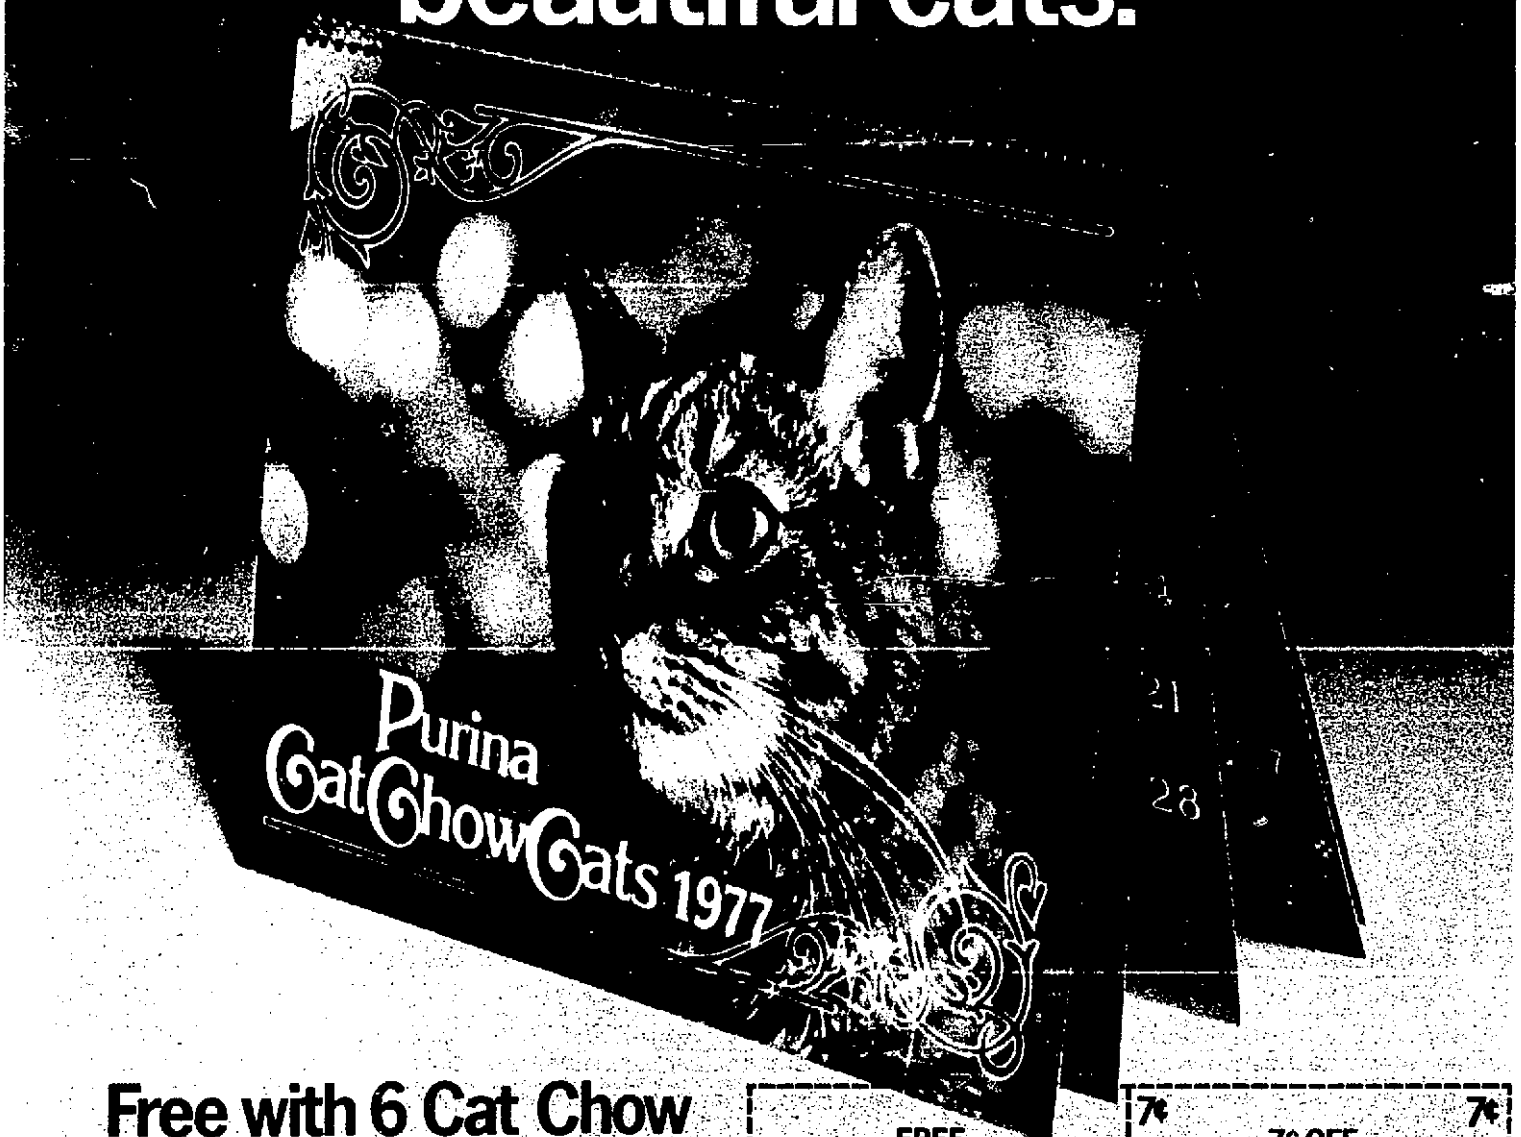

Schembechler now gets countless calls and cards and letters from people all over the United States who are facing similar surgery.

He answers them all—and this in itself is surprising.

Previously, he had little time for anything but football. Now he will patiently write back to worried patients or call them on the phone.

"I give it to them straight," he says. "I tell them it's not going to be easy. I tell them it's going to hurt—and it's going to hurt a lot. But I tell them they can beat it if they make up their minds to do it."

Early in the reign of England's Queen Victoria, Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" almost singlehandedly changed the world's attitude toward Christmas, portraying it not only as a solemn holiday but as a truly appropriate time for expressing good will toward all.

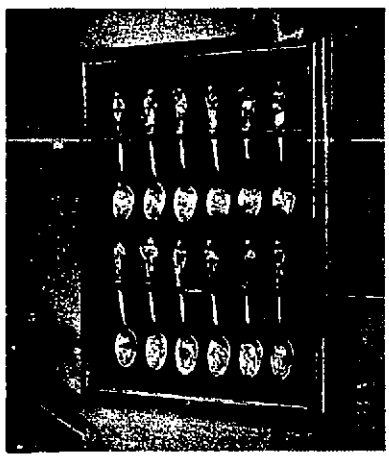

In that spirit, The Franklin Mint now presents a unique and imperishable work of art inspired by this great masterpiece: The Charles Dickens Christmas Carol Spoon Collection. The world's first collection of fine pewter Christmas spoons.

The collection will include twelve separate spoons, each bearing two finely sculptured works of art created in England, not far from where Dickens himself lived and worked, by the distinguished British sculptor Philip Nathan.

The handles will bear sculptures of the twelve most memorable characters from "A Christmas Carol": Scrooge . . . Bob Cratchit . . . Old Fezziwig . . . Tiny Tim. The bowls will portray the most important scenes, in remarkably vivid detail. And, together, they will recall this immortal tale, from beginning to end—as it has never been told before.

Read and Save Money

As a car owner, you know how much auto repairs cost these days. Jobs that seem simple have a way of adding up to a small fortune when you drive into your service station or garage.

Is there a way to beat the high cost of getting your car fixed? Yes, there is. It's a simple, sensible, easy-to-follow book called Basic Auto Repairs. Written by automotive expert Byron G. Wels and available to PARADE readers for only $1.50 plus 25¢ for postage and handling, it tells how you can save big money making your own car repairs.

Of course, you can't fix everything yourself, and this book is quick to tell you so. Some major repairs have to be left to trained experts.

But you'll be astounded at the number of things you can do yourself, once you've developed a little know-how, patience and confidence. Basic Auto Repairs will tell you how to find trouble spots, how to diagnose malfunctions, how to go about replacing parts. It is specific in telling you what not to do yourself—advising, for instance, against doing your own tire repairs. It also tells you where and how to shop for automotive equipment and tools you'll need to work with speed and safety.

Beyond its instructions for making repairs, Basic Auto Repairs provides a clear and comprehensive guide to your car and its operation. You'll learn what the various systems—electrical, cooling, engine—do, and how they work together. Through diagrams, charts, pictures and text, the book will give you an understanding of your car that you've probably never had before. Even when a major job has to be done by a mechanic, you'll be able to talk to him knowledgeably and confidently. And the tips you'll find on preventive maintenance alone will repay you the cost of the book many times.

Basic Auto Repairs belongs in every car's glove compartment. It will make you a better, safer, and more confident driver—and can save you a bundle at the same time.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "Basic Auto Repairs" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. S, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery. [GENERAL OFFICES: 1346 39TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11218.]

my favorite jokes

by TOMMY MOORE

EDITOR'S NOTE: "I get most of my comedy out of my own confusion—and I get confused a lot," says Philadelphia-born Tommy Moore. Philadelphia's also where he started his career, on the "New Faces TV Review." He has recently written and recorded two comedy albums—"Did I Say That?" and "I'm Telling You What They Told Me!" He says: "I hope these two albums sell better than the first one I ever made. It wasn't that the album was bad, it's just that the company that made the record forgot to put a hole in the middle. If there's ever a market for black Frisbees, I'm gonna make a fortune!"

Tommy performs at nightclubs, hotels and banquets.

Here are some of the things that confuse him:

Why is it a woman is willing to share her whole life with her husband—but not her closet space?

How come people who snore always fall asleep first?

Why is it, whenever you go fishing, people will always ask, "Did you catch those fish?" What do they think—they jumped in the boat and surrendered?

•

Why is it a businessman will go from his air-conditioned house to his air-conditioned office in his air-conditioned car, then go to a health club and pay $50 an hour to sweat?

Why is it they can fix a major malfunction in a Telstar satellite while it's a half-million miles in space—but if a tube burns out in your TV set, they gotta take it to the shop?

Why do humanitarians tell us that people from all nations should learn to get along like one big family? If they ever saw how my family gets along, they would never say that!

Why is it every time you start to make ends meet—somebody comes along and moves the ends?

•

Why is it every time they find a cure for a new disease, scientists take all the credit and white mice do all the work?

Why do people who believe in reincarnation always want to know who they were in a past life? What good can that do? I want to know who I'm going to be in my next life. This way, when I die, in my will I can leave everything to myself!

Why is it that a tourist will travel thousands of miles to get away from people—just so he can send cards saying, "Wish you were here"?

•

If the early bird catches the worm—why is the worm so dumb that it keeps getting up early?

Did you ever get the feeling that the principle behind the timing of a traffic light is to trick the pedestrian into the middle of the street?

Maybe people who are always on time aren't doing it to be courteous and polite. Maybe they're just mean, vicious people whose ambition is to make the rest of us feel guilty for being late.

•

If four out of five accidents happen at home—why do people live there?

"These are my peak spending years."
